31 Even such as he is able to get, the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, with the meat-offering: and the priest shall make an atonement for him that is to be cleansed, before the LORD.

32 This is the law of him in whom is the plague of leprosy, whose hand is not able to get <sup>b</sup> that which pertaineth to his cleansing.

33 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

34 <sup>c</sup> When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I give to you for a possession, and I put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession;

35 And he that owneth the house shall come and tell the priest, saying, It seemeth to me there is as it were <sup>d</sup> a plague in the house.

36 Then the priest shall command that they <sup>e</sup> empty the house, before the priest go into it to see the plague, that all that is in the house be not made unclean: and afterwards the priest shall go in to see the house:

37 And he shall look on the plague, and, behold, if the plague be in the walls of the house with hollow strakes, greenish or reddish, which in sight are lower than the wall;

38 Then the priest shall go out of the house to the door of the house, and shut up the house seven days:

39 And the priest shall come again the seventh day, and shall look: and, behold, if the plague be spread in the walls of the house;

40 Then the priest shall command that they take away the stones in which the plague is, and they shall cast them into an unclean place without the city:

41 And he shall cause the house to be scraped within, round about, and they shall pour out the dust that they scrape off, without the city, into an unclean place:

42 And they shall take other stones, and put them in the place of those stones; and he shall take other mortar and shall plaster the house.

43 And if the plague come again, and break out in the house, after that he hath taken away the stones, and after he hath scraped the house, and after it is plastered:

44 Then the priest shall come and look, and behold, if the plague be spread in the house, it is <sup>f</sup> a fretting leprosy in the house: it is unclean.

45 And he shall break down the house, the stones of it, and the timber thereof, and all the mortar of the house; and he shall carry them forth out of the city into an unclean place.

46 Moreover he that goeth into the house all the while that it is shut up, shall be unclean until the even.

47 And he that lieth in the house shall wash his clothes; and he that cateth in the house shall wash his clothes.

48 And if the priest <sup>g</sup> shall come in, and look upon it, and, behold, the plague hath not spread in the house, after the house was plastered; then the priest shall pronounce the house clean, because the plague is healed.

49 And <sup>h</sup> he shall take to cleanse the house two birds, and cedar-wood, and scarlet, and hyssop:

50 And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel, over running water:

51 And he shall take the cedar-wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times:

52 And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar-wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet:

53 But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and <sup>i</sup> make an atonement for the house: and it shall be clean.

54 This is the law for all manner of plague of leprosy, and <sup>j</sup> scall, 55 And for the <sup>k</sup> leprosy of a garment, <sup>l</sup> and of a house.

56 And <sup>m</sup> for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot:

57 To <sup>n</sup> teach <sup>o</sup> when it is unclean, and when it is clean: this is the law of leprosy.

There could be no cleansing without a sacrifice. On this ground the apostle has properly observed that all things under the law are purged with blood; and that without shedding of blood there is no remission. Even if the person be poor, he must provide one lamb; this could not be dispensed with:—so every soul to whom the word of divine revelation comes, must bring that Lamb of God which takes away the sin of the world. There is no redemption but in his blood.

Verse 34. When ye be come into the land—and I put the plague of leprosy] It was probably from this text that the leprosy has been generally considered to be a disease inflicted immediately by God himself; but it is well known that in scripture God is frequently represented as doing what, in the course of his providence he only permits or suffers to be done. It is supposed that the infection of the house, as well as of the person and the garments, proceeded from animalcula.

Verse 45. He shall break down the house] From all this may we not learn a lesson of instruction? If the means made use of by God and his ministers for the conversion of a sinner be, through his wilful obstinacy, rendered of no avail; if by his evil practices he trample under foot the blood of the covenant wherewith he might have been sanctified, and do despite to the Spirit of God; then God will pull down his house—dislodge his soul from its earthly tabernacle, consign the house, the body, to corruption, and the spirit to the perdition of ungodly men. Reader, see well how it stands with thy soul. God is not mocked: what a man soweth, that shall he reap.

Verse 53. He shall let go the living bird] This might as well be called the scape-bird, as the goat, in chap. xvi., is called the scape-goat. The rites are similar in both cases, and probably had nearly the same meaning.

1. The leprosy was a disease generally acknowledged to be incurable by any human means. What is directed to be done here was not in order to cure the leper, but to declare him cured and fit for society. In like manner the contagion of sin, its guilt and its power, can only be removed by the hand of God; all means, without his especial influence, can be of no avail.

2. The body must be sprinkled and washed, and a sacrifice offered for the sin of the soul, before the leper could be declared to be clean. To cleanse the spiritual leper, the Lamb of God must be slain, and the sprinkling of his blood be applied.

3. When the leper was cleansed, he was obliged to show himself to the priest, whose province it was to pronounce him clean, and declare him fit for intercourse with civil and religious society. When a sinner is converted from the error of his ways, it is the business, as it is the prerogative, of the ministers of Christ, after having duly acquainted themselves with every circumstance, to declare the person converted from sin to holiness, to unite him with the people of God, and admit him to all the ordinances which belong to the faithful.

4. When the leper was cleansed, he was obliged by the law to offer a gift unto the Lord for his healing, as a proof of his gratitude, and an evidence of his obedience. When a sinner is restored to the divine favour, he should offer continually the sacrifice of a grateful heart, and, in willing obedience, show forth the virtues of Him who has called him from darkness and wretchedness to marvellous light and happiness.

Reader, 1. Art thou a leper? Do the spots of this spiritual infection begin to appear on thee? 2. Art thou young, and only entering into the ways of the world and sin? Stop! bad habits are more easily conquered to-day than they will be to-morrow. 3. Art thou stricken in years, and rooted in transgression? How kind is thy Maker to have preserved thee alive so long! Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world! 4. Hast thou been cleansed, and hast not returned to give glory to God? How cutting is that word, Were there not TEN cleansed? but where are the NINE? Thou art probably one of them.

Laws concerning uncleanness of men, 1-12. Mode of cleansing, 13-15. Of uncleanness, accidental and casual, 16-18. Laws concerning the uncleanness of women, 19-27. Mode of cleansing, 28-30. Recapitulation of the ordinances relative to the preceding cases, 31-33.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and to Aaron, saying,

2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, <sup>a</sup> When any man hath a <sup>b</sup> running issue out of his flesh, because of his issue he is unclean.

3 And this shall be his uncleanness in his issue: whether his flesh run with his issue, or his flesh be stopped from his issue, it is his uncleanness.

4 Every bed, whereon he lieth that hath the issue, is unclean: and every <sup>c</sup> thing whereon he sitteth shall be unclean.

5 And whosoever toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, <sup>d</sup> and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

6 And he that sitteth on any thing whereon he sat that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

7 And he that toucheth the flesh of him that hath the issue shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

8 And if he that hath the issue spit upon him that is clean: then he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

9 And what saddle soever he rideth upon that hath the issue shall be unclean.

10 And whosoever toucheth any thing that was under him shall be unclean until the even: and he that beareth any of those things shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

11 And whosoever he toucheth that hath the issue, and hath not rinsed his hands in water, he shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

12 And the <sup>e</sup> vessel of earth, that he toucheth which hath the issue, shall be broken: and every vessel of wood shall be rinsed in water.

13 And when he that hath an issue is cleansed of his issue; then <sup>f</sup> he shall number to himself seven days for his cleansing, and wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in running water, and shall be clean.

14 And on the eighth day he shall take to him <sup>g</sup> two turtle-doves, or two young pigeons, and come before the LORD unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and give them unto the priest:

15 And the priest shall offer them, <sup>h</sup> the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering; <sup>i</sup> and the priest shall make an atonement for him before the LORD, for his issue.

16 And <sup>j</sup> if any man's seed of copulation go out from him, then he shall wash all his flesh in water, and be unclean until the even,

17 And every garment, and every skin, whereon is the seed of copulation, shall be washed with water, and be unclean until the even.

18 The woman also with whom man shall lie with seed of copulation, they shall both bathe themselves in water, and <sup>k</sup> be unclean until the even.

19 And <sup>l</sup> if a woman have an issue, and her issue in her flesh be blood, she shall be <sup>m</sup> put apart seven days: and whosoever toucheth her shall be unclean until the even.

20 And every thing that she lieth upon in her separation shall be unclean: every thing also that she sitteth upon shall be unclean.

21 And whosoever toucheth her bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

22 And whosoever toucheth any thing that she sat upon, shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

23 And if it be on her bed, or on any thing whereon she sitteth, when he touched it, he shall be unclean until the even.

Verse 2. When any man hath a running issue] The cases of natural uncleanness, both of men and women, mentioned in this chapter, taken in a theological point of view, are not of such importance to us as to render a particular description necessary, the letter of the text being, in general, plain enough.

Verse 11. And whosoever he toucheth] The term unclean, in this and the following cases, is generally understood in a mere legal sense, the rendering a person unfit for sacred ordinances. And as there was a mild kind of the disease that was brought on by excessive fatigue and the like, it may be that kind only which the law has in view in the above ordinances.

Verse 18. They shall both bathe themselves] What a wonderful tendency had these ordinances to prevent all excesses! The pains which such persons must take, the sepa-

25 And if <sup>b</sup>a woman have an issue of her blood many days, out of the time of her separation, or if it run beyond the time of her separation; all the days of the issue of her uncleanness shall be as the days of her separation: she shall be unclean.

26 Every bed whereon she lieth, all the days of her issue, shall be unto her as the bed of her separation: and whatsoever she sitteth upon shall be unclean, as the uncleanness of her separation.

27 And whosoever toucheth those things shall be unclean, and shall wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even.

28 But <sup>c</sup>if she be cleansed of her issue, then she shall number to herself seven days, and after that she shall be clean.

rations which they must observe, the privations which, in consequence, they must be exposed to in the way of commerce, traffic, &c., would prevent them from making an unlawful use of lawful things.

Verse 24. In chap. xx. 18 persons guilty of this are condemned to death; here only to a seven days' separation; because, in the former case, Moses speaks of the act when both the man and woman were acquainted with the situation; in the latter, he speaks of a case where the circumstance was not known till afterwards; at least, so it appears these two places should be understood, so as to be reconciled.

Verse 29. Two turtles, or two young pigeons] In all these cases moral pollution was ever considered as being less or more present, as even such infirmities sprang from the original deflection of man. On these accounts sacrifices must be offered; and in the case of the woman, one of the birds above mentioned must be sacrificed as a sin-offering, the other as a burnt-offering, ver. 30.

Verse 31. Thus shall ye separate the children of Israel from their uncleanness] By this separation the cause became less frequent, and the contagion, if it did exist, was prevented from spreading. So pest-houses and fever-wards are constructed for the purpose of separating the infected from the sound; and thus contagion is lessened, and its diffusion prevented.

That they die not] That life may be prolonged by these prudential cares; and that he who is morally and legally 30 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering; and the priest shall make an atonement for her before the LORD, for the issue of her uncleanness.

31 Thus shall ye <sup>d</sup>separate the children of Israel from their uncleanness; that they die not in their uncleanness, when they <sup>e</sup>defile my tabernacle that is among them.

32 <sup>f</sup>This is the law of him that hath an issue, <sup>g</sup>and of him whose seed goeth from him, and is defiled therewith;

33 <sup>h</sup>And of her that is sick of her flowers, and of him that hath an issue, of the man, <sup>i</sup>and of the woman; <sup>j</sup>and of him that lieth with her that is unclean.

unclean, may not presume to enter into the tabernacle of God till purified, lest he provoke Divine Justice to consume him, while attempting to worship with a polluted mind and impure hands.

1. Every word of God is pure in itself, and of great importance to us. He who cannot derive instruction from the chapter before him, and be led by a proper consideration of its contents to adore the wisdom and goodness of God, must have either a very stupid or a very vitiated mind.

2. In all these ordinances we may plainly see that God has purity of heart continually in view—that the soul may be holy, he cuts off the occasions of sin; and that men may be obliged to keep within due bounds, and possess their vessels in sanctification and honour, he hedges up their way with briars and thorns, and renders transgression painful, shameful, and expensive.

3. Preventing grace is not less necessary than that which saves and which preserves. These three chapters, avoided and neglected by most, contain lessons of instruction for all; and though many things contained in them belong exclusively to the Jewish people as to the letter, yet in their spirit and gracious design they form a part of those revealed things which are for us and for our children; and although they cannot be made the subjects of public oral instruction, yet they are highly necessary to be known, and hence the advantage of reading the scriptures in regular order in private.

CHAPTER XVI.

The solemn yearly expiation for the high-priest, who must not come at all times into the holy place, 1, 2. He must take a bullock for a sin-offering, and a ram for a burnt-offering, bathe himself, and be dressed in his sacerdotal robes, 3, 4. He shall take two goats, one of which is to be determined by lot to be a sacrifice; the other to be a scape-goat, 5-10. He shall offer a bullock for himself, and for his family, 11-14. And shall kill the goat as a sin-offering for the people, sprinkle its blood upon the mercy-seat, and hallow the altar of burnt-offerings, 15-19. The scape-goat shall be then brought, on the head of which he shall lay his hands, and confess the iniquities of the children of Israel; after which the goat shall be permitted to escape to the wilderness, 20-22. After this Aaron shall bathe himself, and make a burnt-offering for himself and for the people, 23-28. This is to be an everlasting statute, and the day on which the atonement is to be made shall be a sabbath or day of rest, through all their generations, 29-34.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses after <sup>a</sup>the death of the two sons of Aaron, when they offered before the LORD, and died:

Verse 1. After the death of the two sons of Aaron] It appears from this verse that the natural place of this chapter is immediately after the tenth, where probably it originally stood; but the transposition, if it did take place, must be very ancient, as all the Versions acknowledge this chapter in the place in which it now stands.

Verse 2. By the holy place we are to understand here what is ordimercy-seat, which is upon the ark; that he die not: for <sup>a</sup>I will appear in the cloud upon the mercy-seat.

3 Thus shall Aaron <sup>b</sup>come into the holy place: <sup>c</sup>with a young bullock for a sin-offering, and a ram for a burnt-offering.

4 He shall put on <sup>d</sup>the holy linen coat, and he shall have the linen breeches upon his flesh, and shall be girded with a linen girdle, and with the linen mitre shall he be attired: these are holy garments; therefore <sup>e</sup>shall he wash his flesh in water, and so put them on.

5 And he shall take of <sup>f</sup>the congregation of the children of Israel two kids of the goats for a sin-offering, and one ram for a burnt-offering.

6 And Aaron shall offer his bullock of the sin-offering, which is for himself, and <sup>g</sup>make an atonement for himself and for his house.

7 And then shall he take the two goats, and present them before the Lord at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

8 And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the Lord, and the other lot for the <sup>h</sup>scape-goat.

9 And Aaron shall bring the goat upon which the Lord's lot <sup>i</sup>fell, and offer him for a sin-offering.

10 But the goat, on which the lot fell to be the scape-goat, shall be presented alive before the Lord, to make an <sup>j</sup>atonement with him, and to let him go for a scape-goat into the wilderness.

11 And Aaron shall bring the bullock of the sin-offering, which is for himself, and shall make an atonement for himself and for his house, and shall kill the bullock of the sin-offering which is for himself.

12 And he shall take <sup>k</sup>a censer full of burning coals of fire, from off the altar before the Lord, and his hands full of <sup>l</sup>sweet incense beaten small, and bring it within the veil:

13 <sup>m</sup>And he shall put the incense upon the fire before the Lord, that the cloud of the incense may cover the <sup>n</sup>mercy-seat that is upon the testimony, that he die not:

14 And <sup>o</sup>he shall take of the blood of the bullock, and <sup>p</sup>sprinkle it with his finger upon the mercy-seat eastward; and before the mercy-seat shall he sprinkle of the blood with his finger seven times.

15 <sup>q</sup>Then shall he kill the goat of the sin-offering, that is for the people, and bring his blood <sup>r</sup>within the veil, and do with that blood as he did with the blood of the bullock, and sprinkle it upon the mercy-seat, and before the mercy-seat:

one of them was slain. One animal could not point out both the divine and human nature of Christ, nor show both his death and resurrection, for the goat that was killed could not be made alive. The divine and human natures in Christ were essential to the grand expiation: yet the human nature alone suffered, for the divine nature could not suffer; but its presence in the human nature, while agonizing unto death, stamped those agonies, and the consequent death, with infinite merit. The goat therefore that was slain prefigured his human nature and its death; the goat that escaped pointed out his resurrection. The one shows the atonement for sin, as the ground of justification; the other Christ's victory, and the total removal of sin in the sanctification of the soul.

According to Maimonides fifteen beasts were offered on this day.

Verse 8. Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats.] The Jews inform us that there were two lots, made either of wood, stone, or any kind of metal. On one was written LASHSEM for the NAME, i.e., JEHOVAH, which the Jews will neither write nor pronounce; on the other was written LAZAZEL for the SCAPE-GOAT: then they put the two lots into a vessel which was called kalepy, the goats standing with their faces towards the west. Then the priest came, and the goats stood before him, one on the right hand and the other on the left; the kalepy was then shaken, and the priest put in both his hands and brought out a lot in each; that which was in his right hand he laid on the goat that was on his right, and that in his left hand he laid on the goat that was on his left; and according to what was written on the lots, the scape-goat and the goat for sacrifice were ascertained.

The determining this solemn business by lot, the disposal of which is with the Lord, Prov. xvi. 33, shows that God alone was to select and point out the person by whom this great atonement was to be made; hence he says: Behold I lay in Zion a stone, elect (that is, chosen by himself) and precious—of infinite value.

Verse 10. To be the scape-goat.] Azazel, from az, a goat, and azal, to dismiss; the dismissed or sent away goat, to distinguish it from the goat that was to be offered in sacrifice. Most ancient nations had vicarious sacrifices, to which they transferred by certain rites and ceremonies the guilt of the community at large, in the same manner in which the scape-goat was used by the Jews. [Strangely enough, some of the most distinguished commentators suppose the Azazel to represent Satan!]

narly called the Holy of Holies, or most holy place; that place within the veil where the ark of the covenant, &c., were laid up; and where God manifested his presence between the cherubim. In ordinary cases the high-priest could enter this place only once in the year, that is, on the day of annual atonement; but in extraordinary cases he might enter more frequently, viz., while in the wilderness, in decamping and encamping, he must enter to take down or adjust the things; and on solemn pressing public occasions, he was obliged to enter in order to consult the Lord: but he never entered without the deepest reverence and due preparation.

That it may appear that the grand subject of this chapter, the ordinance of the scape-goat, typified the death and resurrection of Christ, and the atonement thereby made, I refer to Heb. ix. 7-12, and 24-26, which is a key to the whole of this chapter.

Verse 3. With a young bullock for a sin-offering.] The bullock was presented as a sin-offering for himself, his family, the whole priesthood, and probably the Levites. The ram was for a burnt-offering, to signify that he and his associates were wholly consecrated, and to be wholly employed in this work of the ministry. The ceremonies with which these two sacrifices were accompanied are detailed in the following verses.

Verse 4. He shall put on the holy linen coat.] He was not to dress in his pontifical garments, but in the simple sacerdotal vestments, or those of the Levites, because it was a day of humiliation; and as he was to offer sacrifices for his own sins, it was necessary that he should appear in habits suited to the occasion. Hence he has neither the robe, the ephod, the breast-plate, the mitre, &c.; these constituted his dress of dignity as the high-priest of God, ministering for others, and the representative of Christ; but now he appears before God as a sinner, offering an atonement for his transgressions, and his garments are those of humiliation.

Verse 7. And he shall take the two goats.] It is allowed on all hands that this ceremony, taken in all its parts, pointed out the Lord Jesus dying for our sins, and rising again for our justification; being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit. Two goats are brought, one to be slain as a sacrifice for sin, the other to have the transgressions of the people confessed over his head, and then to be sent away into the wilderness. The animal by this act was represented as bearing away or carrying off the sins of the people. The two goats made only one sacrifice, yet only 16 And he shall *make an atonement for the holy place, because of the uncleanness of the children of Israel, and because of their transgressions in all their sins: and so shall he do for the tabernacle of the congregation, that <sup>b</sup>remaineth among them in the midst of their uncleanness.

17 <sup>c</sup> And there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel.

18 And he shall go out unto the altar that is before the LORD, and <sup>d</sup>make an atonement for it; and shall take of the blood of the bullock, and of the blood of the goat, and put it upon the horns of the altar round about.

19 And he shall sprinkle of the blood upon it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and <sup>e</sup>hallow it from the uncleanness of the children of Israel.

20 And when he hath made an end of <sup>f</sup>reconciling the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the live goat:

21 And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, <sup>g</sup>putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of <sup>h</sup>a fit man into the wilderness:

22 And the goat shall <sup>i</sup>bear upon him all their iniquities, unto a land <sup>j</sup>not inhabited: and he shall let go the goat in the wilderness.

23 And Aaron shall come into the tabernacle of the congregation, <sup>k</sup>and shall put off the linen garments which he put on when he went into the holy place, and shall leave them there:

24 And he shall wash his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his garments, and come forth, <sup>l</sup>and offer his burnt-offering, and the burnt-offering of the people, and make an atonement for himself, and for the people.

25 And <sup>m</sup>the fat of the sin-offering shall he burn upon the altar.

26 And he that let go the goat for the scape-goat shall wash his clothes, <sup>n</sup>and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp.

27 <sup>o</sup> And the bullock for the sin-offering, and the goat for the sin-offering, whose blood was brought in to make atonement in the holy place, shall <sup>one</sup> carry forth without the camp; and they shall burn in the fire their skins, and their flesh, and their dung.

28 And he that burneth them shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp.

29 And <sup>p</sup>this shall be a statute for ever unto you: that <sup>q</sup>in the seventh month, on the tenth day of the month, ye shall afflict your souls, and do no work at all, <sup>r</sup>whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger that sojourneth among you:

30 For on that day shall the priest make an atonement for you, to <sup>s</sup>cleanse you, that ye may be clean from all your sins before the LORD.

31 <sup>t</sup> It shall be a sabbath of rest unto you, and ye shall afflict your souls, by a statute for ever.

32 <sup>u</sup> And the priest, whom he shall anoint, and whom he shall <sup>v</sup>consecrate <sup>w</sup>to minister in the priest's office in his father's stead, shall make the atonement, and <sup>x</sup>shall put on the linen clothes, <sup>even</sup> the holy garments:

33 And <sup>y</sup>he shall make an atonement for the holy sanctuary, and he shall make an atonement for the tabernacle of the congregation, and for the altar, and he shall make an atonement for the priests, and for all the people of the congregation.

34 <sup>z</sup> And this shall be an everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the children of Israel, for all their sins <sup>once</sup> a year. And he did as the LORD commanded Moses.

Verse 21. And confess over him all the iniquities—transgressions—sins.] The three terms used here, INIQUITIES, avonoth, from avah, to pervert, distort, or turn aside; TRANSGRESSIONS, peshaim, from pasha, to transgress, to rebel; and SINS, chattath, from chata, to miss the mark, are supposed by the Jews to comprise every thing that implies a breach of the divine law, or an offence against God. See the note on Gen. xii. 13. Maimonides gives us the confession in the following words:

"O Lord, thy people, the house of Israel, have sinned and done iniquity, and trespassed before thee. O Lord, make atonement now for the iniquities and transgressions and sins that thy people, the house of Israel, have sinned and transgressed against thee; as it is written in the law of Moses, thy servant, saying: 'Thiat <sup>z</sup>this day he shall make atonement for you to cleanse you from all your sins before the Lord, and ye shall be clean.'

When this confession was finished the goat was sent by a proper hand to the wilderness, and there let loose; and nothing further was ever heard of it. Did not all this signify that Christ has so carried and borne away our sins, that against them who receive him as the only true atoning sacrifice they should never more be brought to remembrance?

On the head of the scape-goat a piece of scarlet cloth was tied, and the tradition of the Jews states that if God accepted the sacrifice, the scarlet cloth turned white while the goat was led to the desert; but if God had not accepted this expiation, the redness continued, and the rest of the year was spent in mourning.

From the foundation of the church of God it was ever believed by his followers, that there were certain infallible tokens by which he discovered to genuine believers his acceptance of them and their services. This was sometimes done by a fire from heaven consuming the sacrifice; sometimes by an oracular communication to the priest or prophet; and at other times, according to the Jewish account, by changing the fillet or cloth on the head of the scape-goat from scarlet to white: but most commonly, and especially under the gospel dispensation, he gives this assurance to true believers by the testimony of his Spirit in their consciences, that he has forgiven their iniquities, transgressions, and sins, for his sake who has carried their griefs, and borne their sorrows.

Verse 26. He that let go the goat—shall wash, &c.] Not only the person who led him away, but the priest who consecrated him, was reputed unclean, because the goat himself was unclean, being considered as bearing the sins of the whole congregation. On this account both the priest and the person who led him to the wilderness were obliged to wash their clothes and bathe themselves, before they could come into the camp.

Verse 29. The seventh month, on the tenth day of the month.] The commandment of fasting, and sanctifying this tenth day, is again repeated chap. xxiii. 27-32; but in the last verse it is called the ninth day at even, because the Jewish day began with the evening. The sacrifices which the day of atonement should have more than other days, are mentioned Num. xix. 7-11; and the jubilee which was celebrated every 50th year was solemnly proclaimed by sound of trumpet on this tenth day, chap. xxv. 8, 9. A shadow of that acceptable year of the Lord, the year of freedom, which Christ has proclaimed by the trumpet of his gospel, Luke iv. 18-21, 2 Cor. vi. 2. This seventh month was Tisri, and answers to a part of our September and October. It was the seventh of the sacred and the first month of the civil year.

1. The great day of atonement, and the sacrifices, rites, and ceremonies prescribed for it, were commanded to be solemnized by the Jews through the whole of their dispensation, and as long as God should acknowledge them for his people: yet in the present day scarcely a shadow of these things remains; there is no longer a scape-goat, nor a goat for sacrifice, provided by them in any place. They are sinners, and they are without an atonement. How strange it is that they do not see that the essence of their religion is gone, and that consequently God has thrown them entirely out of covenant with himself! The true expiation, the Christ crucified, they refuse to receive, and are consequently without temple, altar, scape-goat, atonement, or any means of salvation! The state of the Gentile world is bad, but that of the Jews is doubly deplorable. Their total excision excepted, wrath is come upon them to the uttermost. What a proof is this of the truth of the predictions in their own law, and of those in the gospel of Christ! Who, with the Jews and the Bible before his eyes, can doubt the truth of that Bible as a divine revelation? How powerfully does the preservation of the Jews as a distinct people bear testimony at once to the truth of their own law which they acknowledge, and the gospel of Christ which they reject!

2. But while the Jews sit in thick darkness, because of the veil that is on their hearts, though the light of the glory of God is shining all around them, but not into them because of their unbelief: in what state are those who profess to see their unbelief and obstinacy, acknowledge the truth of the New Testament, and yet are living without an atonement applied to their souls for the removal of their iniquities, transgressions, and sins? These are also in the gall of bitterness, and bond of iniquity. An all-sufficient Saviour held out in the New Testament can do them no more good than a scape-goat and day of atonement described in the law can do the Jews. As well may a man imagine that the word bread can nourish his body, as that the name Christ can save his soul. Both must be received and applied in order that the man may live.

3. The Jews prepared themselves to get benefit from this most solemn ordinance by the deepest humiliations. According to their canons, they were obliged to abstain from all meat and drink—from the bath—from anointing themselves—to go barefoot—and to be in a state of perfect continency. He who is likely to get benefit for his soul through the redemption that is in Christ, must humble himself under the mighty hand of God, confess his iniquity, abstain from every appearance of evil, and believe on him who died for his offences, and rose again for his justification. The soul that seeks not shall not find, even under the gospel of Christ.

CHAPTER XVII.

The people are commanded to bring all the cattle they intend to kill to the door of the tabernacle, where they are to be made an offering to the Lord, and those who disobey are to be cut off, 1-5. The priest is to sprinkle the blood, 6. They are forbidden to offer sacrifices to devils, 7. The injunction to bring their offerings to the door of the tabernacle is repeated, 8, 9. The eating of blood is solemnly forbidden, 10. It is the life of the beast, and is given to make an atonement for their souls, 11, 12. If a bird or beast be taken in hunting, its blood must be poured out and covered with dust, for the reasons before assigned, 13, 14. None shall eat an animal that dies of itself, or is torn by beasts; if any act otherwise he must bathe his clothes and his flesh, or bear his iniquity, 15, 16.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto Aaron, and unto his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them; This is the thing which the Lord hath commanded, saying,

3 What man soever there be of the house of Israel, * that killeth an ox, or lamb, or goat, in the camp, or that killeth it out of the camp,

4 * And bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, to offer an offering unto the Lord before the tabernacle of the Lord, blood shall be imputed unto that man; he hath shed blood; and that man * shall be cut off from among his people:

5 To the end that the children of Israel may bring their sacrifices, * which they offer in the open field, even that they may bring them unto the Lord, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation unto the priest, and offer them for peace-offerings unto the Lord.

6 And the priest * shall sprinkle the blood upon the altar of the Lord at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and * burn the fat for a sweet savour unto the Lord.

* See Deut. xii. 5, 15, 21.—Deut. xii. 5, 6, 13, 14.—Rom. v. 13.—Gen. iv. 11.—Gen. xxi. 33, xxii. 2, xxxi. 54. Deut. xii. 2. 1 Kings xiv. 23. 2 Kings xvi. 4. xvii. 10. 2 Chron. xxviii. 4.

Verse 4. And bringeth it not unto the door] As sacrifice was ever deemed essential to the true religion, it was necessary that it should be performed in such a way as to secure the great purpose of its institution. God alone could show how this should be done so as to be pleasing in his sight, and therefore he has given the most plain and particular direction concerning it. The Israelites, from their long residence in Egypt, an idolatrous country, had doubtless adopted many of their usages; and many portions of the Pentateuch seem to have been written merely to correct and bring them back to the purity of the divine worship.

That no blood should be offered to idols, God commands every animal used for food or sacrifice to be slain at the door of the tabernacle. While every animal was slain in this sacrificial way, even the daily food of the people must put them in mind of the necessity of a sacrifice for sin.

Ezek. xx. 28. xxii. 9.—Ch. iii. 2.—Exod. xxix. 18. Ch. iii. 5, 11, 16. iv. 31. Num. xviii. 17.

While the Israelites were encamped in the wilderness, it was comparatively easy to prevent all abuses of this divine institution: and therefore they were all commanded to bring the oxen, sheep, and goats to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, that they might be slain there, and their blood sprinkled upon the altar of the Lord. But when they became settled in the promised land, and the distance, in many cases, rendered it impossible for them to bring the animals to be slain for domestic uses to the temple, they were permitted to pour out the blood in a sacrificial way unto God at their respective dwellings, and to cover it with the dust.

Blood shall be imputed unto that man] Having poured out the blood improperly, he shall be considered as guilty of murder, because that blood, had it been properly and sacrificially employed, might have made atonement for the life of a man.

7 And they shall no more offer their sacrifices * unto devils, after whom they <sup>b</sup> have gone a whoring. This shall be a statute for ever unto them throughout their generations.

8 And thou shalt say unto them, Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers which sojourn among you, <sup>c</sup> that offereth a burnt-offering or sacrifice.

9 And <sup>d</sup> bringeth it not unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation to offer it unto the LORD; even that man shall be cut off from among his people.

10 <sup>e</sup> And whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, that eateth any manner of blood; <sup>f</sup> I will even set my face against that soul that eateth blood, and will cut him off from among his people.

11 <sup>g</sup> For the life of the flesh is in the blood: and I have given it to you upon the altar, <sup>h</sup> to make an atonement for your souls: for <sup>i</sup> it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul.

Verse 7. They shall no more offer their sacrifices unto devils] They shall not sacrifice laseirim, to the hairy ones, to goats. The famous heathen god, Pan, was represented as having the posterior, horns, and ears of a goat; and the Mendesians, a people of Egypt, had a deity which they worshipped under this form. Herodotus says that all goats were worshipped in Egypt, but the he-goat particularly. It appears also that the different ape or monkey species were objects of superstitious worship; and from these sprang, not only Mendes and Jupiter Ammon, who was worshipped under the figure of a ram, but also Pan and the Sileni, with the innumerable herd of those imaginary beings, satyrs, dryads, hamadryads, &c., &c., all woodland gods, and held in veneration among the Egyptians, Greeks, and Romans.

After whom they have gone a whoring.] Though this term is frequently used to express idolatry, yet we are not to suppose that it is not to be taken in a literal sense in many places in scripture, even where it is used in connexion with idolatrous acts of worship. It is well known that Baal Peor and Ashtaroth were worshipped with unclean rites; and that public prostitution formed a grand part of the worship of many deities among the Egyptians, Moabites, Canaanites, Greeks, and Romans. The great god of the two latter nations, Jupiter, was represented as the general corrupter of women; and of Venus, Flora, Priapus, and others, it is needless to speak. That there was public prostitution in the patriarchal times, see the note on Gen. xxxviii. 21.

Verse 11. For the life of the flesh is in the blood] This sentence, which contains a most important truth, had existed in the Mosaic writings for 3600 years before the attention of any philosopher was drawn to the subject. This is the more surprising, as the nations in which philosophy flourished were those which especially enjoyed the divine oracles in their respective languages. That the blood actually possesses a living principle, and that the life of the whole body is derived from it, is a doctrine of divine revelation, and a doctrine which the observations and experiments of the most accurate anatomists have served strongly to confirm. The proper circulation of this important fluid through the whole human system was first taught by Solomon in figurative language, Eccles. xii. 6; and discovered, as it is called, and demonstrated by Dr. Harvey in 1628; though some Italian philosophers had the same notion a little before. This accurate anatomist was the first who fully revived the Mosaic notion of the vitality of the blood; which notion was afterwards adopted by the justly celebrated Dr. John Hunter, professor of anatomy in London, and fully established by him by a great variety of strong reasoning and accurate experiments.

12 Therefore I said unto the children of Israel, No soul of you shall eat blood, neither shall any stranger that sojourneth among you eat blood.

13 And whatsoever man there be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn among you, <sup>j</sup> which <sup>k</sup> hunteth and catcheth any beast or fowls that may be eaten; he shall even <sup>l</sup> pour out the blood thereof, and <sup>m</sup> cover it with dust.

14 <sup>n</sup> For it is the life of all flesh; the blood of it is for the life thereof: therefore I said unto the children of Israel, Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh: for the life of all flesh is the blood thereof: whosoever eateth it shall be cut off.

15 <sup>o</sup> And every soul that eateth <sup>p</sup> that which died of itself, or that which was torn with beasts, whether it be one of your own country, or a stranger, <sup>q</sup> he shall both wash his clothes, <sup>r</sup> and bathe himself in water, and be unclean until the even: then shall he be clean.

16 But if he wash them not, nor bathe his flesh; then <sup>s</sup> he shall bear his iniquity.

v. 9. Eph. i. 7. Col. i. 14, 20. Heb. xiii. 12. 1 Pet. i. 2. 1 John i. 7. Rev. i. 5.—<sup>j</sup> Heb. ix. 22.—<sup>k</sup> Heb. that hunteth any hunting.—<sup>l</sup> Ch. vii. 26.—<sup>m</sup> Deut. xii. 16, 21. xv. 23.—<sup>n</sup> Ezek. xxiv. 7.—<sup>o</sup> Ver. 11, 12. Ezek. iv. 14. xiv. 31.—<sup>q</sup> Heb. a carcase.—<sup>r</sup> Ch. xi. 25.—<sup>s</sup> Ch. xv. 8.—<sup>t</sup> Ch. v. 1. vii. 18. xix. 8. Num. xix. 20.

Two points relative to this subject are strongly asserted in divine revelation, one by MOSES, the other by St PAUL.

1. Moses says, The LIFE of the flesh is in the BLOOD, ver. 11. This has been proved by the most indisputable facts.

2. St. Paul says, God hath made of ONE BLOOD all nations of men, Acts xvii. 26. And this is demonstrated, not only from there being only one pair from whom all the nations of men have been derived, but also from the fact that every human being, from the first-born of Eve to the present hour, has been formed out of and supported by the mother's blood; and that from the agency of this fluid the human body, after being born into the world, has its increment and support. The reason given by God for the law against eating blood is perfectly conclusive: I will set my face against that soul that eateth blood—for the LIFE (nephesh) of the flesh is in the BLOOD, and I have given it to you upon the altar, to make an atonement for your souls (naphsotheychem, your LIVES): for it is the blood (because it is the LIFE, nephesh) that maketh an atonement for the soul (banephesh, for the life); for the word is the same in all these cases. By transgression a man forfeits his LIFE to divine justice, and he must die did not mercy provide him a substitute. The life of a beast is appointed and accepted by God as a substitute for the sinner's life (in reference to the life of Christ, which was to be given for the life of the world); but as this life is in the BLOOD, and as the blood is the grand principle of vitality, therefore the blood is to be poured out upon the altar; and thus the blood of the beast becomes a substitute for the life of the man.

And it is well worthy of being remarked, that Christ not only died for sinners, but our redemption is every where attributed to his BLOOD, and the shedding of that blood; and that on the altar of the cross this might make an atonement for the lives and souls of men, he not only bowed his head, and gave up the ghost, but his side was opened, the pericardium and the heart evidently pierced, that the vital fluid might be poured out from the very seat of life, and that thus the blood, which is the life, should be poured out to make an atonement for the life of the soul.

Verse 14. Ye shall eat the blood of no manner of flesh] Independently of the moral reasons given above, we may add, 1. That blood, being highly alkaline, especially in hot climates, is subject to putrefaction. 2. That it affords a gross nutriment, being very difficult of digestion, so much so, that bull's blood was used in ancient times as poison, "its extreme viscosity rendering it totally indigestible by the powers of the human stomach." 8. It is allowed that when blood was used in this country in great quantities, the scurvy was more frequent than at other times. 4. It appears from history that those nations who lived most on it were very fierce, savage, and barbarous, such as the Scythians, Tartars, Arabs of the desert, the Scandinavians, &c., &c., some of whom drank the blood of their enemies, making cups of their skulls!

Verse 15. That which died of itself, or that which was torn] Because, in both cases the blood was retained in the body: hence the council at Jerusalem forbade things strangled as well as blood, because in such beasts the blood was coagulated in the veins and arteries.

Every thing considered, surely there is as little propriety in eating of blood as there is necessity to do it. They who will do otherwise must bear their iniquity. If blood eating be no offence, then they have no sin to answer for.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The people are commanded to avoid the doings of the Egyptians and the Canaanites, 1-3. They are to do God's judgments, and to keep his ordinances, that they may live, 4, 5. Marriages with those who are near of kin are prohibited, 6. None to marry with his mother or step-mother, 7, 8; with his sister or step-sister, 9; with his granddaughter, 10; nor with the daughter of his step-mother, 11; nor with his aunt, by father or mother, 12, 13; nor with his uncle's wife, 14; nor with his daughter-in-law, 15; nor sister-in-law, 16; nor with a woman and her daughter, son's daughter, or daughter's daughter, 17; nor with two sisters at the same time, 18. Several abominations prohibited, 19-23, of which the Canaanites, &c., were guilty, and for which they were cast out of the land, 24, 25. The people are exhorted to avoid these abominations, lest they be treated as the ancient inhabitants of the land were treated, and so cast out, 26-28. Threatenings against the disobedient, 29, and promises to the obedient, 30.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

and say unto them, 'I am the LORD your God.

4 <sup>a</sup> Ye shall do my judgments, and keep mine ordinances, to walk therein: I am the LORD your God.

9 <sup>d</sup> The nakedness of thy sister, the daughter of thy father, or daughter of thy mother, whether she be born at home, or born abroad, even their nakedness thou shalt not uncover.

10 The nakedness of thy son's daughter, or of 11 The nakedness of thy father's wife's daughter, begotten of thy father, she is thy sister, thou shalt not uncover her nakedness.

12 <sup>a</sup> Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy father's sister: she is thy father's near kinswoman.

13 Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy mother's sister: for she is thy mother's near kinswoman.

16 <sup>a</sup> Thou shalt not uncover the nakedness of thy brother's wife: it is thy brother's nakedness.

18 Neither shalt thou take <sup>a</sup> a wife to her sister, <sup>a</sup> to vex her, to uncover her nakedness, beside the other in her life time.

This must have been the case in the family of Adam. In these first instances, necessity required this; when this necessity no longer existed, the thing became inexpedient and improper for two reasons: 1. That the duties owing by nature to relatives might not be confounded with those of a social or political kind; for could a man be a brother and a husband, a son and a husband, at the same time, and fulfil the duties of both? Impossible. 2. That by intermarrying with other families, the bonds of social compact might be strengthened and extended, so that the love of our neighbour, &c., might at once be felt to be, not only a maxim of sound policy, but also a very practicable and easy duty; and thus feuds, divisions, and wars be prevented.

Verse 16. Thy brother's wife] This was an illegal marriage, unless the brother died childless. In that case it was not only lawful for her to marry her brother-in-law, but he was obliged by the law, Deut. xxv. 5, to take her to wife.

Verse 18. A wife to her sister] Thou shalt not marry two sisters at the same time, as Jacob did Rachel and Leah;

19 * Also thou shalt not approach unto a woman to uncover her nakedness, as long as she is put apart for her uncleanness.

20 Moreover <sup>b</sup> thou shalt not lie carnally with thy neighbour's wife, to defile thyself with her.

22 'Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind : it ~~is~~ abomination.

23 * Neither shalt thou lie with any beast to defile thyself therewith : neither shall any woman stand before a beast to lie down thereto : it ~~is~~ <sup>h</sup> confusion.

24 <sup>i</sup> Defile not ye yourselves in any of these things : <sup>j</sup> for in all these the nations are defiled which I cast out before you :

but there is nothing in this law that rendered it illegal to marry a sister-in-law when her sister was dead ; therefore the text says, Thou shalt not take her in her life time, to ver her, alluding probably to the case of the jealousies and vexations which subsisted between Leah and Rachel, and by which the family peace was so often disturbed. Some think that the text may be so understood as also to forbid polygamy.

Verse 21. Pass through the fire to Molech] The name of this idol is mentioned for the first time in this place. As the word molech or melech signifies king or governor, it is very likely that this idol represented the sun ; and more particularly as the fire appears to have been so much employed in his worship. There are several opinions concerning the meaning of passing through the fire to Molech. 1. Some think that the semen humanum was offered on the fire to this idol. 2. Others think that the children were actually made a burnt-offering to him. 3. But others suppose the children were not burnt, but only passed through the fire, or between two fires, by way of consecration to him. That some were actually burnt alive to this idol, several scriptures, according to the opinion of commentators, seem strongly to intimate : see among others, Ps. cvi. 38, Jer. vii. 31, and Ezek. xxiii. 37-39. That others were only consecrated to his service by passing between two fires the rabbins strongly assert ; and if Ahaz had but one son, Hezekiah (though it is probable he had others, see 2 Chron. xxviii. 8), he is said to have passed through the fire to Molech, 2 Kings xvi. 3, yet he succeeded his father in the kingdom, chap. xviii. 1, therefore this could only be a consecration, his idolatrous father intending thereby to initiate him early into the service of this demon.

Verse 22. With mankind] This abominable crime, frequent among the Greeks and Romans as well as the Canaanites, may be punished with death in this country.

Verse 23. With any beast] This abomination is also punishable with death by the laws of this country.

Any woman stand before a beast] That this was often done in Egypt there can be no doubt ; Herodotus records

26 * Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of those abominations : neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you :

27 (For all these abominations have the men of the land done, which were before you, and the land is defiled :)

28 That * the land spue not you out also, when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you.

29 For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be cut off from among their people.

that a fact of this kind actually took place while he was in Egypt.

Verse 25. The land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants.] This is a very nervous prosopopoeia or personification ; the land is represented as an intelligent being, with a deep and refined sense of moral good and evil : information concerning the abominations of the people is brought to this personified land, with which it is so deeply affected that a nausea is produced, and it vomits out its abominable and accursed inhabitants.

Verse 30. Shall ye keep mine ordinance] The only way to be preserved from all false worship is seriously to consider and devoutly to observe the ordinances of the true religion. He who in the things of God goes no further than he can say, Thus it is written, and thus it behoves me to do, is never likely to receive a false creed, nor perform a superstitious act of worship.

1. How true is that word, The law of the Lord is PERFECT ! In a small compass, and in a most minute detail, it comprises every thing that is calculated to instruct, direct, convince, correct, and fortify the mind of man. Whatever has a tendency to corrupt or injure man, that it forbids ; whatever is calculated to comfort him, promote and secure his best interests, that it commands. It takes him in all possible states, views him in all connections, and provides for his present and eternal happiness.

2. As the human soul is polluted and leads to pollution, the great doctrine of the law is holiness to the Lord : this it keeps invariably in view in all its commands, precepts, ordinances, rites, and ceremonies. And how forcibly in all these does it say, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength ; and thy neighbour as thyself ! This is the prominent doctrine of the preceding chapter, and this shall be fulfilled in all them who believe, for Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to them that believe. Reader, magnify God for his law, for by it is the knowledge of sin ; and magnify him for his gospel, for by this is the cure of sin.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto all the congregation of the children of Israel, and say unto them, am holy.

3 <sup>b</sup> Ye shall fear every man his mother, and his father, and <sup>c</sup> keep my sabbaths: I am the LORD your God.

4 <sup>d</sup> Turn ye not unto idols, <sup>e</sup> nor make to yourselves molten gods: I am the LORD your God.

5 And <sup>f</sup> if ye offer a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, ye shall offer it at your own will.

6 It shall be eaten the same day ye offer it, and on the morrow: and if ought remain until the third day, it shall be burnt in the fire.

7 And if it be eaten at all on the third day, it is abominable; it shall not be accepted.

8 Therefore every one that catcheth it shall bear his iniquity, because he hath profaned the hallowed thing of the LORD: and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

9 And <sup>g</sup> when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not wholly reap the corners of thy field, neither shalt thou gather the gleanings of thy harvest.

10 And thou shalt not glean thy vineyard, neither shalt thou gather every grape of thy vineyard; thou

11 <sup>h</sup> Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, <sup>i</sup> neither lie one to another.

12 And ye shall not <sup>j</sup> swear by my name falsely, <sup>k</sup> neither shalt thou profane the name of thy God: I am the LORD.

14 Thou shalt not curse the deaf, <sup>n</sup> nor put a stumbling-block before the blind, but shalt <sup>o</sup> fear thy God: I am the LORD.

17 <sup>t</sup> Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart; <sup>u</sup> thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbour, <sup>v</sup> and not suffer sin upon him.

18 <sup>w</sup> Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, <sup>x</sup> but thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: I am the LORD.

Verse 8. Ye shall fear every man his mother, &c. Ye shall have the profoundest reverence and respect for them.

Verse 4. Turn ye not unto idols Literally nothing; and to this St. Paul seems to allude, 1 Cor. viii. 4, where he says, We know that an idol is nothing in the world.

Verse 9. When ye reap the harvest Liberty for the poor to glean both the corn-fields and vineyards was a divine institution among the Jews; for the whole of the Mosaic dispensation, like the Christian, breathed love to God and benevolence to man. The poor in Judea were to live by gleanings from the corn-fields and vineyards.

Verse 13. The wages—shall not abide with thee all night For this plain reason, it is the support of the man's life and family, and they need to expend it as fast as it is earned.

Verse 14. Thou shalt not curse the deaf Or speake evil of him, because he cannot hear, and so cannot vindicate his own character.

Nor put a stumbling-block before the blind The spirit and design of these precepts are, that no man shall in any case take advantage of the ignorance, simplicity, or inexperience, of his neighbour, but in all things do to his neighbour as he would, on a change of circumstances, that his neighbour should do to him.

Verse 16. Thou shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer Rachil signifies a trader, a pedlar, and is here applied to the person who travels about dealing in scandal and calumny, getting the secrets of every person and family, and retailing them wherever he goes. A more despicable character exists not; such a person is a pest to society, and should be exiled from the habitations of men.

Neither shalt thou stand against the blood, &c. Thou shalt not be a false witness, because by such testimony the blood—the life, of an innocent man may be endangered.

Verse 17. Thou shalt not hate thy brother Thou shalt not only not do him any kind of evil, but thou shalt harbour no hatred in thy heart towards him. On the contrary, thou shalt love him as thyself, ver. 18. Many persons suppose, from misunderstanding our Lord's words, John xiii. 34, A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another, &c., that loving our neighbour as ourselves was first instituted under the gospel. This verse shows the opinion to be unfounded: but to love another as Christ has loved us, i.e. to lay down our lives for each other, is certainly a new commandment; we have it simply on the authority of Jesus Christ alone.

21 And <sup>g</sup> he shall bring his trespass-offering unto the LORD, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, <sup>h</sup> even a ram for a trespass-offering.

22 And the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass-offering before the LORD, for his sin which he hath done; and the sin which he hath done shall be forgiven him.

And not suffer sin upon him.] If thou see him sin, or know him to be addicted to any thing by which the safety of his soul is endangered, thou shalt mildly and affectionately reprove him, and by no means permit him to go on without counsel and advice in a way that is leading him to perdition. In a multitude of cases timely reproof has been the means of saving the soul. Speak to him privately if possible; if not, write to him in such a way that himself alone shall see it.

Verse 19. Gender with a diverse kind] Those precepts taken literally seem to imply that they should not permit the horse and the she-ass, nor the he-ass and the cow (as they do in the East), to couple together; nor sow different kinds of seeds in the same field or garden; nor have garments of silk and woollen, cotton and silk, linen and wool, &c. And if all these were forbidden, there must have been some moral reason for the prohibitions, because domestic economy required several of these mixtures, especially those which relate to seeds and clothing. With respect to heterogeneous mixtures among cattle, there is something very unnatural in it, and it was probably forbidden to prevent excitements to such unnatural lusts as those condemned in the preceding chapter, ver. 22, 23. As to seeds, in many cases it would be very improper to sow different kinds in the same plot of ground. It would be imprudent to sow oats and wheat together: the latter would be injured, the former ruined. The turnip and carrot would not succeed conjointly, where either of them separately would prosper and yield a good crop; so we may say of many other kinds of seeds; and if this be all that is intended, the counsels are prudential agricultural maxims. As to different kinds of garments, such as the linsey woolsey, the prohibition here might be intended as much against pride and vanity as any thing else; for it is certain that both these articles may be so manufactured in conjunction as to minister to pride, though in general the linsey woolsey or drugget is the clothing of the poor. But we really do not know what the original word shaatnez, which we translate linen and woollen, means: it is true that in Deut. xxii. 11, where it is again used, it seems to be explained by the words immediately following, Thou shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts, as of linen and woollen together; but this may as well refer to a garment made up of a sort of patch-work, differently coloured and arranged for pride and for show.

Something of this kind seems to have existed in the patriarchal times; witness the coat of many colours made by Jacob for his son Joseph.

Verse 20. A woman that is a bondmaid] Had she been free, the law required that she should be put to death (see Deut. xxii. 24); but as she was a slave, she is supposed to have less self-command, and therefore less guilt: but as it is taken for granted she did not make resistance, or did consent, she is to be scourged, and the man is to bring a ram for a trespass-offering.

Verse 23. Three years shall it be as uncircumcised] I see 23 And when ye shall come into the land, and shall have planted all manner of trees for food, then ye shall count the fruit thereof as uncircumcised: three years shall it be as uncircumcised unto you; it shall not be eaten of:

24 But in the fourth year all the fruit thereof shall be <sup>a</sup> holy, <sup>b</sup> to praise the LORD withal.

25 And in the fifth year shall ye eat of the fruit thereof, that it may yield unto you the increase thereof: I am the LORD your God.

26 <sup>c</sup> Ye shall not eat any thing with blood; <sup>d</sup> neither shall ye use enchantment, nor observe times.

27 <sup>e</sup> Ye shall not round the corners of your heads, neither shalt thou mar the corners of thy beard.

—<sup>a</sup> Deut. xviii. 10, 11, 14. 1 Sam. xv. 23. 2 Kings xvii. 17. xxi. 6. 2 Chron. xxxiii. 6. Mal. iii. 5.—<sup>b</sup> Ch. xxi. 5. Jer. ix. 26. xlviii. 37. Isa. xv. 2.—<sup>c</sup> Ch. xxi. 5. Deut. xiv. 1. Jer. xvi. 6. xlviii. 37.

no great reason to seek for mystical meanings in this prohibition. The fruit of a young tree cannot be good; for not having arrived at a state of maturity, the juices cannot be sufficiently elaborated to produce fruit excellent in its kind. The Israelites are commanded not to eat of the fruit of a tree till the fifth year after its planting: in the three first years the fruit is unwholesome; in the fourth year the fruit is holy, it belongs to God, and should be consecrated to him, ver. 24; and in the fifth year and afterwards the fruit may be employed for common use, ver. 25.

Verse 26. Neither shall ye use enchantment] Conjecture itself can do little towards a proper explanation of the terms used in this verse. Possibly the superstition here prohibited may be what the Greeks call Ophiomanteia, or divination by serpents.

Nor observe times.] Ye shall not divine by clouds, which was also a superstition much in practice among the heathens, as well as divination by the flight of birds. What these prohibitions may particularly refer to, we know not.

Verse 27. Ye shall not round the corners of your heads] This and the following verse evidently refer to customs which must have existed among the Egyptians when the Israelites sojourned in Egypt; and what they were it is now difficult, even with any probability, to conjecture.

The hair was much used in divination among the ancients, and for purposes of religious superstition among the Greeks; and particularly about the time of the giving of this law, as this is supposed to have been the era of the Trojan war. We learn from Homer that it was customary for parents to dedicate the hair of their children to some god; which, when they came to manhood, they cut off and consecrated to the deity. If the hair was rounded, and dedicated for purposes of this kind, it will at once account for the prohibition in this verse.

The corners of thy beard.] Probably meaning the hair of the cheek that connects the hair of the head with the beard. This was no doubt cut in some peculiar manner for the superstitious purposes mentioned above. From the images and paintings which remain of the ancient Egyptians, we find that they were accustomed to shave the whole hair off their face, except merely that upon the chin, which last they cut off only in times of mourning.

Verse 28. Any cuttings in your flesh for the dead] That the ancients were very violent in their grief, tearing the hair and face, beating the breast, &c., is well known.

Nor print any marks upon you.] It was a very ancient and very general custom to carry marks on the body in honour of the object of their worship. All the castos of the Hindoos bear on their foreheads or elsewhere what are called the sectarian marks, which distinguish them, not only in a civil, but also in a religious point of view, from each other.

Most of the barbarous nations lately discovered, have their faces, arms, breasts, &c., curiously carved or tattooed, probably for superstitious purposes. Ancient writers abound with accounts of marks made on the face, arms, &c., in honour of different idols; and to this the inspired penman alludes, Rev. xiii. 16, 17, xiv. 9, 11, xv. 2, xvi. 2, xix. 20, xx. 4, where false worshippers are represented as receiving in their hands and in their forehead the marks of the beast. These were called stigmata among the Greeks, and to these St. Paul refers when he says, I bear about in my body the MARKS (stigmata) of the Lord Jesus; Gal. vi. 17.

Verse 29. Do not prostitute thy daughter] This was a very frequent custom, and with examples of it writers of antiquity abound. The Cyprian women, according to Justin, gained that portion which their husbands received with them at marriage, by previous public prostitution. And the Phœnicians, according to Augustine, made a gift to Venus of the gain acquired by the public prostitution of their daughters, previously to their marriage.

Verse 31. Regard not them that have familiar spirits] The Hebrew word oboth probably signifies a kind of ventriloquists, or such as the Pythones mentioned Acts xvi. 16, 18; persons who while under the influence of their demon, became greatly inflated, as the Hebrew word implies, and gave answers in a sort of phrensy.

Neither seek after wizards] Yiddemim, the wise or knowing ones, from yada, to know or understand; called wizard in Scotland, wise or cunning man in England; and hence also the wise woman, the white witch. Not only all real dealers with familiar spirits, or necromantic or magical superstitions, are here forbidden, but also all pretenders to the knowledge of futurity, fortune-tellers, astrologers, &c., &c. To attempt to know what God has not thought proper to reveal, is a sin against his wisdom, providence, and goodness. In mercy, great mercy, God has hidden the knowledge of futurity from man, and given him hope—the expectation of future good, in its place.

Verse 33. If a stranger sojourn] This law to protect and comfort the stranger was at once humane and politic. None is so desolate as the stranger, and none needs the offices of benevolence and charity more; and we may add that he who is not affected by the desolate state of the stranger has neither benevolence nor charity. It was politic to encourage strangers, as in consequence many came, not only to sojourn, but to settle among the Jews, and thus their political strength became increased; and many of these settlers became at least proselytes of the gate if not proselytes of the covenant, and thus got their souls saved. The apostle makes use of a strong argument to induce men to hospitality towards strangers: Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares, Heb. xiii. 2.

Verse 35. Ye shall do no unrighteousness] Ye shall not act contrary to the strictest justice in any case, and especially in the four following, which properly understood, comprise all that can occur between a man and his fellow-

1. Many difficulties occur in this very important chapter, but they are such only to us; for there can be no doubt of their having been perfectly well known to the Israelites, to whom the precepts contained in this chapter were given. Considerable pains however have been taken to make them plain, and no serious mind can read them without profit.

2. The precepts against injustice, fraud, slander, enmity, &c., &c., are well worth the notice of every Christian; and those against superstitious usages are not less so; and by these last we learn, that having recourse to astrologers, fortune-tellers, &c., to get intelligence of lost or stolen goods, or to know the future events of our own lives, or those of others, is highly criminal in the sight of God. Those who have recourse to such persons renounce their baptism, and in effect renounce the providence as well as the word of God.

3. The precepts of humanity and mercy relative to the poor, the hireling, and the stranger, are worthy of our most serious regard. Nor are those which concern weights and measures, traffic, and the whole system of commutative justice, less necessary to be observed for the benefit and comfort of the individual, and the safety and prosperity of the state.

CHAPTER XX.

Of giving seed to Molech, and the punishment of this crime, 1-5. Of consulting wizards, &c., 6-8. Of disrespect to parents, 9. Of adultery, 10. Of incestuous mixtures, 11, 12. Bestiality, 13-16. Different cases of incest and uncleanness, 17-21. Exhortations and promises, 22-24. The difference between clean and unclean animals to be carefully observed, 25. The Israelites are separated from other nations, that they may be holy, 26. A repetition of the law against wizards and them that have familiar spirits, 27.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 * Again thou shalt say to the children of Israel, <sup>b</sup> Whosoever he be of the children of Israel, or of the strangers that sojourn in Israel, that giveth any of his seed unto Molech; he shall surely be put to death: the people of the land shall stone him with stones.

3 And * I will set my face against that man, and will cut him off from among his people; because he hath given of his seed unto Molech, to <sup>d</sup> defile my sanctuary, and * to profane my holy name.

4 And if the people of the land do any ways hide their eyes from the man, when he giveth of his seed unto Molech, and <sup>e</sup> kill him not;

5 Then * I will set my face against that man, and <sup>b</sup> against his family, and will cut him off, and all that <sup>f</sup> go a whoring after him, to commit whoredom with Molech, from among their people.

6 And <sup>g</sup> the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set my face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people.

7 * Sanctify yourselves therefore, and be ye holy: for I am the LORD your God.

8 <sup>h</sup> And ye shall keep my statutes, and do them; <sup>i</sup> I am the LORD which sanctify you.

9 * For every one that curseth his father or his mother shall be surely put to death: he hath cursed his father or his mother; <sup>j</sup> his blood shall be upon him.

10 And <sup>k</sup> the man that committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour's wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.

11 * And the man that lieth with his father's wife, hath uncovered his father's nakedness: both of them shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

12 * And if a man lie with his daughter in law,

Verse 2. That giveth any of his seed unto Molech] To what has been said in the note on chap. xviii. 21, we may add that the rabbins describe this idol, who was probably a representative or emblematical personification of the solar influence, as made of brass, in the form of a man, with the head of an ox; that a fire was kindled in the inside, and the child to be sacrificed to him was put in his arms and roasted to death. Others say that the idol, which was hollow, was divided into seven compartments within; in one of which they put flour, in the second turtle-doves, in the third a ewe, in the fourth a ram, in the fifth a calf, in the sixth an ox, and in the seventh a child, which, by heating the statue on the outside, were all burnt alive together. I question the whole truth of these statements, whether from Jewish or Christian rabbins. There is no evidence of all this in the sacred writings. And there is but presumptive proof, and that not very strong, that human sacrifices were at all offered to Molech by the Jews. The passing through the fire, so frequently spoken of, might mean no more than a simple rite of consecration to the service of this idol. Probably a kind of ordeal was meant, the persons passing suddenly through the flame of a large fire, by which, though they might be burnt or scorched, yet they were neither killed nor consumed. Or they might have passed between two large fires as a sort of purification.

Verse 9. Curseth his father or his mother] He who conscientiously keeps the fifth commandment can be in no both of them shall surely be put to death: <sup>q</sup> they have wrought confusion; their blood shall be upon them.

13 * If a man also lie with mankind, as he lieth with a woman, both of them have committed an abomination: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

14 * And if a man take a wife and her mother, it is wickedness: they shall be burnt with fire, both he and they; that there be no wickedness among you.

15 * And if a man lie with a beast, he shall surely be put to death: and ye shall slay the beast.

16 And if a woman approach unto any beast, and lie down thereto, thou shalt kill the woman and the beast: they shall surely be put to death; their blood shall be upon them.

17 * And if a man shall take his sister, his father's daughter, or his mother's daughter, and see her nakedness, and she see his nakedness, it is a wicked thing; and they shall be cut off in the sight of their people: he hath uncovered his sister's nakedness; he shall bear his iniquity.

18 * And if a man lie with a woman having her sickness, and shall uncover her nakedness; he hath <sup>r</sup> discovered her fountain, and she hath uncovered the fountain of her blood: and both of them shall be cut off from among their people.

danger of this judgment. The term yekallel signifies, not only to curse, but to speak of a person contemptuously and disrespectfully, to make light of; so that all speeches which have a tendency to lessen our parents in the eyes of others, or to render their judgment, piety, &c., suspected and contemptible, may be here included; though the act of cursing, or of treating the parent with injurious and opprobrious language, is that which is particularly intended.

Verse 14. They shall be burnt with fire] As there are worse crimes mentioned here (see verses 11 and 17), where the delinquent is ordered simply to be put to death or to be cut off, it is very likely that the crime mentioned in this verse was not punished by burning alive, but by some kind of branding, by which they were ever after rendered infamous. I need not add that the original may, without violence to its grammatical meaning, be understood as above, though in other places it is certainly used to signify a consuming by fire. But the case in question requires some explanation; it is this: a man marries a wife, and afterwards takes his mother-in-law or wife's mother to wife also; now for this offence the text says all three shall be burnt with fire, and this is understood as signifying that they shall be burnt alive. Now, the first wife we may safely presume was completely innocent, and was legally married; for a man may take to wife the daughter if single, or the mother if a widow, and in neither of these cases can any blame attach to the man or the party he marries; the crime therefore lies in taking both. Either, therefore, they were all branded as infamous persons, and this certainly was severe enough in the case of the first wife; or the man and the woman taken last were burnt: but the text says, both he and they, therefore we should seek for another interpretation of they shall be burnt with fire, than that which is commonly given. Branding with a hot iron would certainly accomplish every desirable end both for punishment and prevention of the crime; and because the Mosaic laws are so generally distinguished by humanity, it seems to be necessary to limit the meaning of the words as above. [The burning with fire was in no case a burning alive; it is clear from Joshua vii. 15 and 25, that the corpse was burnt after death.]

Verse 22. The land, whither I bring you to dwell therein, spue you not out. From this we learn that the cup of the iniquities of the Canaanitish nations was full; and that, conclean beasts and unclean, and between unclean fowls and clean: * and ye shall not make your souls abominable by beast, or by fowl, or by any manner of living thing that <sup>b</sup> creepeth on the ground, which I have separated from you as unclean.

sistently with divine justice, they could be no longer spared. Verse 27. A familiar spirit] A spirit or demon which, by magical rites, is supposed to be bound to appear at the call of his employer.

From the accounts we have of the abominations both of Egypt and Canaan, we may blush for human nature; for wherever it is without cultivation, and without the revelation of God, it is every thing that is vile in principle and detestable in practice. Nor would any part of the habitable globe materially differ from Egypt and Canaan, had they not that rule of righteousness, the revealed law of God, and had not life and immortality been brought to light by the GOSPEL among them. From these accounts, for which we could easily find parallels in ancient Greece and Italy, we may see the absolute need of a divine revelation, without which man, even in his best estate, differs little from the brute.

CHAPTER XXI.

The priests shall not mourn for the dead, except for near relatives, such as mother, father, son, daughter, and sister if a virgin, 1-4. They shall not shave their heads nor beards, nor make any cuttings in the flesh, because they are holy unto God, 5, 6. A priest shall not marry a woman who is a whore, profane, or divorced from her husband, 7, 8. Of the priest's daughter who profanes herself, 9. The high-priest shall not uncover his head, or rend his clothes, 10; nor go in unto a dead body, 11; nor go out of the sanctuary, 12. Of his marriage and offspring, 13-15. No person shall be made a priest that has any blemish, nor shall any person with any of the blemishes mentioned here be permitted to officiate in the worship of God, 16-24.

AND the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto the priests the sons of Aaron, and say unto them, *There shall none be defiled for the dead among his people:

2 But for his kin, that is near unto him, that is, for his mother, and for his father, and for his son, and for his daughter, and for his brother,

3 And for his sister a virgin, that is nigh unto him, which hath had no husband; for her may he be defiled.

* Ch. x. 6 7. Ezek. xlv. 25. 1 Thess. iv. 13, 14, 15.—<sup>b</sup> Or, being an husband among his people, he shall not defile himself for his wife, Verse 1. There shall none be defiled for the dead] No priest shall assist in laying out a dead body, or preparing it for interment. Any contact with the dead was supposed to be of a defiling nature, probably because putrefaction had then taken place; and animal putrefaction was ever held in detestation by all men.

Verse 4. A chief man among his people] The word baal signifies a master, chief, husband, &c., and is as variously translated here. 1. He being a chief among the people, it would be improper to see him in such a state of humiliation as mourning for the dead naturally implies. 2. Though a husband he shall not defile himself even for the death of a wife, because the anointing of his God is upon him. But the 5 <sup>c</sup> They shall not make baldness upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corner of their beard, nor make any cuttings in their flesh.

6 They shall be holy unto their God, and <sup>d</sup> not profane the name of their God: for the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and <sup>e</sup> the bread of their God, they do offer; therefore they shall be holy.

7 <sup>f</sup> They shall not take a wife that is a whore, or first sense appears to be the best. [This obscure passage can only be understood by taking the seventh verse as its interpretation.]

Verse 5. They shall not make baldness] It is supposed that these things were particularly prohibited, because used superstitiously by the Egyptian priests, who, according to Herodotus, shaved the whole body every third day, that there might be no uncleanness about them when they ministered in their temples. Every person knows the tonsure of the Catholic priests. Should not this be avoided as an approach to a heathenish custom?

Verse 7. That is a whore] A prostitute, though even reclaimed.

profane; neither shall they take a woman <sup>a</sup>put away from her husband: for he is holy unto his God.

8 Thou shalt sanctify him therefore; for he offereth the bread of thy God: he shall be holy unto thee: <sup>b</sup>for I the LORD, which sanctify you, am holy.

9 <sup>c</sup>And the daughter of any priest, if she profane herself by playing the whore, she profaneth her father: she shall be burnt with fire.

10 <sup>d</sup>And he that is the high-priest among his brethren, upon whose head the anointing oil was poured, and <sup>e</sup>that is consecrated to put on the garments, shall not uncover his head, nor rend his clothes;

11 Neither shall he <sup>f</sup>go in to any dead body, nor defile himself for his father, or for his mother;

12 <sup>g</sup>Neither shall he go out of the sanctuary, nor profane the sanctuary of his God: for <sup>h</sup>the crown of the anointing oil of his God is upon him: I am the LORD.

13 And <sup>i</sup>he shall take a wife in her virginity.

14 A widow, or a divorced woman, or profane, or an harlot, these shall he not take: but he shall take a virgin of his own people to wife.

15 Neither shall he profane his seed among his people: for <sup>j</sup>I the LORD do sanctify him.

Profane] A heathen, or one who is not a cordial believer in the true God.

Put away from her husband] Because this very circumstance might lead to suspicion that the priest and the divorced woman might have been improperly connected before.

Verse 9. She shall be burnt with fire.] Probably not burnt alive, but strangled first, and then burnt afterwards. Though it is barely possible that some kind of branding may be intended.

Verse 10. He that is the high-priest] This is the first place where this title is introduced; the title is very emphatic, hacohen haggadol, that priest, the great one. For the meaning of cohen, see the note on Gen. xiv. 18. As the chief or high-priest was a representative of our blessed Lord, therefore he was required to be especially holy: and he is represented as God's king among the people.

Verse 12. The crown of the anointing oil—is upon him] By his office the priest represented Christ in his sacrificial character; by his anointing, the prophetic influence; and by the crown, the regal dignity of our Lord.

Verse 13. He shall take a wife in her virginity.] This is a full proof that bethulah is the proper Hebrew term for a virgin; from the emphatic root bathal, to separate; because such a person was in her separate state, and had never been in any way united to man.

Verse 17. Whosoever—hath any blemish, let him not approach to offer the bread of his God.] Never was a wiser, a more rational, and a more expedient law enacted relative to sacred matters. The man who ministers in holy things should have nothing in his person nor in his manner which cannot contribute to render him respectable in the eyes of those to whom he ministers. If, on the contrary, he has any personal defect, any thing that may render him contemptible or despicable, his usefulness will be greatly injured, if not entirely prevented. If, however, a man have received any damage in the work of God, by persecution or otherwise, his scars are honourable, and will add to his respectability. Let no man say this is a part of the Mosaic law, and we are not bound by it. It is an eternal law, founded on reason, propriety, common sense, and absolute necessity. The priest, the prophet, the Christian minister, is the representative of Jesus Christ; let nothing in his person, carriage, or doctrine be unworthy of the personage he represents. A deformed person, though consummate in diplomatic wisdom, would never be employed as an ambas-

Verse 19. Broken-footed, or broken-handed] Club-footed, bandy-legged, &c.; or having the ankle, wrist, or fingers dislocated.

Verse 20. Crook-backed] Hunch-backed or gibbous. A dwarf, dak, a person too short or too thin, so as to be either particularly observable, or ridiculous in his appearance.

A blemish in his eye] A protuberance on the eye, observable spots or suffusions.

Scurvy, or scabbed] A bad habit of body, evidenced by scorbutic or scrofulous affections.

Stones broken] Is ruptured; an infirmity which would render him incapable of fulfilling the duties of his office, which might be often very fatiguing.

The blemishes here enumerated have been considered by some in an allegorical point of view, as if only referring to the necessity of moral purity; but although holiness of heart and righteousness of life be essentially necessary in a minister of God, yet an absence of the defects mentioned above is, I fully believe, what God intends here, and for the reasons too which have been already advanced. It must however be granted, that there have been some eminent divines who have been deformed; and some with certain blemishes have been employed in the Christian ministry, and have been useful. The Mosaic rule, however, will admit of but few exceptions, when even examined according to the more extended interpretation of the Christian system.

Verse 23. He shall not go in unto the veil] The priest with a blemish was not permitted to enter into the holy of holies, nor to burn incense, nor to offer the shew-bread, nor to light the golden candlestick, &c. In short, he was not permitted to perform any essential function of the priesthood.

1. The great perfection required in the Jewish high-priest was intended principally to point out the perfection of that priesthood of which the Jewish was only the type. And yet, as the apostle assures us, that law made nothing perfect, but pointed out that most perfect priesthood and sacrifice by which we draw near to God.

2. As none who had a blemish could enter into the holy of holies, and this holy of holies was a type of the kingdom of God, so nothing that is defiled can enter into heaven; for he gave himself for his church that he might purify it to himself, and present it at last before the presence of the divine glory, having neither spot nor wrinkle, nor any

2 Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, that they <sup>a</sup> separate themselves from the holy things of the children of Israel, and that they <sup>b</sup> profane not my holy name in those things which they <sup>c</sup> hallow unto me: I am the LORD.

3 Say unto them, Whosoever <sup>d</sup> he be of all your seed, among your generations, that goeth unto the holy things which the children of Israel hallow unto the LORD, <sup>e</sup> having his uncleanness upon him, that soul shall be cut off from my presence: I am the LORD.

4 What man soever of the seed of Aaron <sup>f</sup> is a leper, or hath <sup>g</sup> a running issue; he shall not eat of the holy things <sup>h</sup> until he be clean. And <sup>i</sup> whoso toucheth any thing <sup>j</sup> that is unclean by the dead, or <sup>k</sup> a man whose seed goeth from him.

5 Or <sup>l</sup> whosoever toucheth any creeping thing, whereby he may be made unclean, or <sup>m</sup> a man of whom he may take uncleanness, whatsoever uncleanness he hath;

6 The soul which hath touched any such shall be unclean until even, and shall not eat of the holy things, unless he <sup>n</sup> wash his flesh with water.

7 And when the sun is down, he shall be clean, and shall afterward eat of the holy things; because <sup>o</sup> it is his food.

Verse 2. Speak unto Aaron and to his sons, that they separate themselves [In the service of God, according to the law, neither an imperfect offering nor an imperfect offerer could be admitted. What need then of a mediator between a holy God and sinful men! And can we expect that any of our services, however sincere and well-intentioned, can be accepted, unless offered on that living Altar that sanctifies the gift?]

Verse 10. There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing [The Jews suppose that stranger here means one who has had his ear pierced (see the note on Exod. xxi. 6), and that sojourner means a servant who is to go free on the sabbatical year. Neither of these was permitted to eat of the holy things, because they were not properly members of the priest's family, and might go out and defile themselves even with the abominations of the heathen; but the servant or slave that was bought with money, ver. 10, might eat of these things, because he was the property of the master for ever.

he shall not eat to defile himself therewith: I am the LORD.

9 They shall therefore keep mine ordinance, <sup>q</sup> lest they bear sin for it, and die therefore, if they profane it: I the LORD do sanctify them.

10 <sup>r</sup> There shall no stranger eat of the holy thing: a sojourner of the priest, or an hired servant, shall not eat of the holy thing.

11 But if the priest buy <sup>s</sup> any soul <sup>t</sup> with his money, he shall eat of it, and he that is born in his house; <sup>u</sup> they shall eat of his meat.

12 If the priest's daughter also be <sup>v</sup> married unto <sup>w</sup> a stranger, she may not eat of an offering of the holy things.

13 But if the priest's daughter be a widow, or divorced, and have no child, and is <sup>x</sup> returned unto her father's house, <sup>y</sup> as in her youth, she shall eat of her father's meat: but there shall no stranger eat thereof.

14 <sup>z</sup> And if a man eat of the holy thing unwittingly, then he shall put the fifth part thereof unto it, and shall give it unto the priest with the holy thing.

15 And <sup>aa</sup> they shall not profane the holy things of the children of Israel, which they offer unto the LORD;

We see that it was lawful, under the Mosaic economy, to have slaves under certain restrictions; but these were taken from among the heathen, and instructed in the true religion: hence we find, as in the above case, that they were reckoned as a part of the priest's own family, and treated as such. They certainly had privileges which did not extend either to sojourners or to hired servants; therefore their situation was incomparably better than the situation of the slaves under different European governments, of whose souls their pitiless possessors in general take no care, while they themselves venture to profess the Christian religion, and quote the Mosaic law in vindication of their system of slavery. How preposterous is such conduct! and how intolerable!

Verse 13. But if the priest's daughter be a widow—and is returned unto her father's house [A widow in Bengal not unfrequently returns to her father's house on the death of her husband: the union betwixt her and her own family is never so dissolved as among European nations. Thousands

17 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
 18 Speak unto Aaron, and to his sons, and unto all the children of Israel, and say unto them, * Whatsoever he be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers in Israel, that will offer his oblation for all his vows, and for all his free will-offerings, which they will offer unto the LORD for a burnt-offering;
 19 <sup>b</sup> Ye shall offer, at your own will, a male without blemish, of the beeves, of the sheep, or of the goats.
 20 <sup>c</sup> But whatsoever hath a blemish, that shall ye not offer: for it shall not be acceptable for you.
 21 And <sup>d</sup> whosoever offereth a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD <sup>e</sup> to accomplish his vow, or a free-will offering in beeves or sheep, it shall be perfect to be accepted; there shall be no blemish therein.
 22 <sup>f</sup> Blind, or broken, or maimed, or having a wen, or scurvy, or scabbed, ye shall not offer those unto the LORD, nor make <sup>h</sup> an offering by fire of them upon the altar unto the LORD.
 23 Either a bullock or a lamb that hath any thing <sup>i</sup> superfluous or lacking in his parts, that mayest thou offer for a free will-offering; but for a vow it shall not be accepted.
 24 Ye shall not offer unto the LORD that which is bruised, or crushed, or broken, or cut, neither shall ye make any offering thereof in your land.

 25 Neither <sup>k</sup> from a stranger's hand shall ye offer <sup>l</sup> the bread of your God of any of these; because their <sup>m</sup> corruption is in them, and blemishes be in them; they shall not be accepted for you.
 26 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
 27 <sup>n</sup> When a bullock, or a sheep, or a goat, is brought forth, then it shall be seven days under the dam; and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for an offering made by fire unto the LORD.
 28 And whether it be cow or <sup>o</sup> ewe, ye shall not kill it <sup>p</sup> and her young both in one day.
 29 And when ye will <sup>q</sup> offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving unto the LORD, offer it at your own will.
 30 On the same day it shall be eaten up; ye shall leave <sup>r</sup> none of it until to-morrow: I am the LORD.
 31 <sup>s</sup> Therefore shall ye keep my commandments, and do them: I am the LORD.
 32 <sup>t</sup> Neither shall ye profane my holy name; but <sup>u</sup> I will be hallowed among the children of Israel: I am the LORD which <sup>v</sup> hallow you, of widows in Bengal, whose husbands die before the consummation of marriage, never leave their parents.

Verse 14. Then shall he put the fifth part thereof unto it] The holy thing of which he has unknowingly eaten shall be fairly valued, and to this value he shall add one fifth more, and give the whole to the priest.

Verse 20. Whatsoever hath a blemish] The same perfection is required in the sacrifice that was required in the priest.

Verse 23. That hath any thing superfluous or lacking] The term surua signifies any thing extended beyond the usual size, and the term kalut signifies any thing unusually contracted; and both mean any monstrosity, whether in redundancy or defect. Such things, it seems, might be offered for a free-will-offering, because that was not prescribed by the law; God left it to a man's piety and gratitude to offer such additional gifts as he could: what the law required was indispensably necessary, because it pointed out the gospel economy; but he that made a vow to offer such a sacrifice as the law had not required, could of course bring an imperfect offering. Some contend that the last clause of this verse should be thus read: If thou offer it either for a free-will-offering, or for a vow, it shall not be accepted. It was the opinion of the Jews, and it appears to be correct, that none of these imperfect animals were ever offered on the altar; but the person who made the free-will-offering of such things as he had, sold the animal, and gave its price for the support of the sanctuary.

Verse 24. Bruised, or crushed, or broken, or cut] That is, no bullock or lamb that is injured in any of the above ways, shall be offered unto the Lord.

Verse 27. When a bullock—is brought forth] The former clause of this verse should be translated thus: When a CALF, or a LAMB, or a KID is brought forth, instead of When a bullock, a sheep, or a goat is brought forth, the absurdity of which is glaring.

Seven days under the dam] In vindication of the propriety of this precept it may be justly asserted, that the flesh of very young animals is comparatively innutritive, and that animal food is not sufficiently nourishing and wholesome till the animal has arrived at a certain growth, or acquired the perfection of its nature. There is something brutish in eating the young of beast or fowl before the hair and hoofs are perfect in the one, and the feathers and claws in the other.

Verse 28. Ye shall not kill it and her young—in one day.] This precept was certainly intended to inculcate mercy and tenderness of heart; and so the Jews understood it.

Verse 32. Neither shall ye profane my holy name] He profanes God's holy name who does not implicitly believe and conscientiously obey all his words and all his precepts.

I will be hallowed among the children of Israel] The words children of Israel, which so frequently occur, should be translated either the descendants or posterity of Israel, or, the people of Israel. The word children has a tendency to beget a false notion, especially in the minds of young people, and lead them to think that children, in the proper sense of the word, i.e. little ones, are meant.

Verse 33. Brought you out of the land of Egypt] By such a series of miraculous interferences, to be your God—to save you from all idolatry, false and superstitious worship, teach you the right way, lead and support you in it, and preserve you to my eternal kingdom and glory.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The feasts of the Lord, 1, 2. The sabbath, 3. The passover and unleavened bread, 4-8. The feast of first-fruits, 9-14. The feast of pentecost, 15-21. Gleanings to be left for the poor, 22. The feast of trumpets, 23-25. The great day of atonement, 26-32. The feast of tabernacles, 33-44.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, Concerning <sup>a</sup> the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall <sup>b</sup> proclaim to be holy convocations, even these are my feasts.

3 <sup>c</sup> Six days shall work be done: but the seventh day is the sabbath of rest, an holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein: it is the sabbath of the LORD in all your dwellings.

4 <sup>d</sup> These are the feasts of the LORD, even holy convocations, which ye shall proclaim in their seasons.

5 <sup>e</sup> In the fourteenth day of the first month at even is the LORD's passover.

6 And on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread unto the LORD: seven days ye must eat unleavened bread.

7 <sup>f</sup> In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

8 But ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD seven days: in the seventh day is an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

9 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, <sup>g</sup> When ye be come into the land which I give unto you, and shall reap the harvest thereof, then ye shall bring a <sup>h</sup> sheaf <sup>i</sup> of <sup>j</sup> the first-fruits of your harvest unto the priest:

11 And he shall <sup>k</sup> wave the sheaf before the LORD, to be accepted for you: on the morrow after the sabbath the priest shall wave it.

12 And ye shall offer that day, when ye wave the sheaf, a he-lamb without blemish, of the first year, for a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

13 <sup>l</sup> And the meat-offering thereof shall be two tenth deals of fine flour mingled with oil, an offering made by fire unto the LORD for a sweet savour: and the drink-offering thereof shall be of wine, the fourth part of an hin.

14 And ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears, until the selfsame day that ye have brought an offering unto your God: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, in all your dwellings.

15 And <sup>m</sup> ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave-offering; seven sabbaths shall be complete:

16 Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye number <sup>n</sup> fifty days; and ye shall offer <sup>o</sup> a new meat-offering unto the LORD.

17 Ye shall bring out of your habitations two wave loaves of two tenth deals: they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baked with leaven; they are <sup>p</sup> the first-fruits unto the LORD.

18 And ye shall offer with the bread seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock, and two rams: they shall be for a burnt-offering unto the LORD, with their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings, even an offering made by fire, of sweet savour unto the LORD.

19 Then ye shall sacrifice <sup>q</sup> one kid of the goats for a sin-offering, and two lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of <sup>r</sup> peace-offerings.

20 And the priest shall wave them with the bread of the first-fruits, for a wave-offering before the LORD, with the two lambs: <sup>s</sup> they shall be holy to the LORD for the priest.

21 And ye shall proclaim on the selfsame day, that it may be an holy convocation unto you: ye shall do no servile work therein: it shall be a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations.

22 And <sup>t</sup> when ye reap the harvest of your land, thou shalt not make clean riddance of the corners of thy field when thou reapest, <sup>u</sup> neither shalt thou gather any gleanings of thy harvest: thou shalt leave them unto the poor, and to the stranger: I am the LORD your God.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, In the <sup>v</sup> seventh month, in the first day of the month, shall ye have a sabbath, <sup>w</sup> a memorial of blowing of trumpets, an holy convocation.

25 Ye shall do no servile work therein: but ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

26 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

27 <sup>x</sup> Also on the tenth day of this seventh month
there shall be a day of atonement: it shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall afflict your souls, and offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD.

28 And ye shall do no work in that same day:
for it is a day of atonement, to make an atonement for you before the LORD your God.

29 For whatsoever soul it be that shall not be

Verse 2. These are my feasts.] The original word moad is properly applied to any solemn anniversary, by which great and important ecclesiastical, political, or providential facts were recorded. Anniversaries of this kind were observed in all nations; and some of them, in consequence of scrupulously regular observation, became chronological epochs of the greatest importance in history: the Olympiads, for example.

Verse 3. The seventh day is the sabbath.] This, because the first and greatest solemnity, is first mentioned. He who kept not this, in the most religious manner, was not capable of keeping any of the others. The religious observance of the sabbath stands at the very threshold of all religion.

Verse 11. He shall wave the sheaf.] He shall move it to and fro before the people, and thereby call their attention to the work of Divine Providence, and excite their gratitude to God for preserving to them the kindly fruits of the earth.

Verse 14. Ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears.] It is right that God, the dispenser of every blessing, should be acknowledged as such, and the first fruits of the field, &c., dedicated to him. Parched ears of corn and green ears, fried, still constitute a part, and not a disagreeable one, of the food of the Arabs now resident in the Holy Land.

Verse 15. Ye shall count unto you—seven sabbaths.] That is, from the sixteenth of the first month to the sixth of the third month. These seven weeks, called here sabbaths, were to be complete, i.e., the forty-nine days must be finished, and the next day, the fiftieth, is what, from the Septuagint, we call pentecost.

Verse 24. A memorial of blowing of trumpets.] This is generally called the feast of trumpets; and as it took place on the first day of the seventh month, Tisri, which answers to September, which month was the commencement of what was called the civil year, the feast probably had no other design afflicted in that same day, * he shall be cut off from among his people.

30 And whatever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day, <sup>b</sup> the same soul will I destroy from among his people.

31 Ye shall do no manner of work: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, in all your dwellings.

32 It shall be unto you a sabbath of rest, and ye shall afflict your souls; in the ninth day of the month at even, from even unto even, shall ye <sup>c</sup> celebrate your sabbath.

33 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

34 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, <sup>d</sup> The fifteenth day of this seventh month shall be the feast of tabernacles, for seven days unto the LORD.

35 On the first day shall be an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein.

36 Seven days ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: <sup>e</sup> on the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you; and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is <sup>f</sup> a solemn assembly; <sup>g</sup> and ye shall do no servile work therein.

37 <sup>h</sup> These are the feasts of the LORD, which ye shall proclaim to be holy convocations, to offer an offering made by fire unto the LORD, a burnt-offering, and a meat-offering, a sacrifice, and drink-offerings, every thing upon his day:

38 <sup>i</sup> Beside the sabbaths of the LOAN, and beside your gifts, and beside all your vows, and beside all your freewill-offerings, which ye give unto the LORD.

39 Also in the fifteenth day of the seventh month, when ye have <sup>j</sup> gathered in the fruit of the land, ye shall keep a feast unto the LORD seven days: on the first day shall be a sabbath, and on the eighth day shall be a sabbath.

40 And <sup>k</sup> ye shall take you on the first day the <sup>l</sup> boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm-trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; <sup>m</sup> and ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God seven days.

41 <sup>n</sup> And ye shall keep it a feast unto the LORD seven days in the year. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations: ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month.

42 <sup>o</sup> Ye shall dwell in booths seven days; all that are Israelites born shall dwell in booths:

43 <sup>p</sup> That your generations may know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths, when I brought them out of the land of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

than to celebrate the commencement of that year, if indeed such a distinction obtained among the ancient Jews. Some think creation began at this time.

Verse 34. The feast of tabernacles] In this solemnity the people left their houses, and dwelt in booths or tents made of the branches of goodly trees and thick trees (of what kind the text does not specify), together with palm-trees and willows of the brook, ver. 40. And in these they dwelt seven days, in commemoration of their forty years' sojourning and dwelling in tents in the wilderness while destitute of any fixed habitations. In imitation of this feast among the people of God, the Gentiles had their feast of tents.

Verse 40. Boughs of goodly trees] The Jews and many critics imagine the citron-tree to be intended, and by boughs of thick trees, the myrtle.

Verse 43. That your generations may know, &c.] By the institution of this feast God had two great objects in view: 1. To perpetuate the wonderful display of his providence and grace in bringing them out of Egypt, and in preserving them in the wilderness. 2. To excite and maintain in them a spirit of gratitude and obedience by leading them to consider deeply the greatness of the favours which they had received from his most merciful hands.

Signal displays of the mercy, kindness, and providential care of God should be particularly remembered. When we recollect that we deserve nothing at his hands, and that the debt of gratitude is all the debt we can pay, in it we should be cheerful, fervent, and frequent. An ungrateful heart is an unfeeling, unloving, unbelieving, and disobedient heart.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Pure olive oil must be provided for the lamps, 1, 2. Aaron is to take care that the lamps be lighted from evening to morning continually, 3, 4. How the shew-bread is to be made and ordered, 5-8. Aaron and his sons shall eat this bread in the holy place, 9. Of the son of Shelomith, an Israelitish woman, who blasphemed the name, 10, 11. He is imprisoned till the mind of the Lord should be known, 12. He is commanded to be stoned to death, 13, 14. The ordinance concerning cursing and blaspheming the Lord, 15, 16. <sup>c</sup> Exod. xxxi. 8. xxxix. 37.

5 And thou shalt take fine flour, and bake twelve cakes thereof: two tenth deals shall be in one cake.

6 And thou shalt set them in two rows, six on a row, upon the pure table before the Lord.

7 And thou shalt put pure frankincense upon each row, that it may be on the bread for a memorial, even an offering made by fire unto the Lord.

8 Every sabbath he shall set it in order before the Lord continually, being taken from the children of Israel by an everlasting covenant.

9 And it shall be Aaron's and his sons'; and they shall eat it in the holy place: for it is most holy unto him, of the offerings of the Lord made by fire by a perpetual statute.

10 And the son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, went out among the children of Israel: and this son of the Israelitish woman and a man of Israel strove together in the camp.

11 And the Israelitish woman's son blasphemed the name of the Lord, and cursed. And they brought him unto Moses: (and his mother's name was Shelomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the tribe of Dan:)

12 And they put him in ward, that the mind of the Lord might be shewed them.

13 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

14 Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp; and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation stone him.

verse 10 The son of an Israelitish woman, whose father was an Egyptian, &c. This is a very obscure account, and is encumbered with many difficulties. 1. It seems strange that a person proceeding from such an illegal mixture should have been incorporated with the Israelites. 2. What the cause of the strife between this mongrel person and the Israelitish man was is not even hinted at. 3. The sacred text does not tell us what name he blasphemed: it is simply said vayikkob eth hashshem, he pierced through, distinguished, explained, or expressed the name. As the Jews hold it impious to pronounce the name Yehovah, they always put either Adonai, Lord, or hashshem, THE NAME, in the place of it; but in this sense hashshem was never used prior to the days of rabbinical superstition, and therefore it cannot be put here for the word Jehovah. 4. Blaspheming the name of the Lord is mentioned in ver. 16, and there the proper Hebrew term is used shem Yehovah, and not the rabbinical hashshem, as in ver. 11. 5. Of all the manuscripts collated both by Kennicott and De Rossi, not one, either of the Hebrew or Samaritan, has the word Jehovah in this place. 6. Not one of the ancient VERSIONS, Targum of Onkelos, Hebrew-Samaritan, Samaritan Version, Syriac, Arabic, Septuagint, or Vulgate Latin, has even attempted to supply the sacred name. 7. Houbigant supposes that the Egyptio-Israelitish man did not use the name of the true God at all, but had been swearing by one of his country gods; and if this was the case the mention of the name of a strange god in the camp of Israel would constitute a very high crime, and certainly expose to the punishment mentioned in ver. 14. 8. Probably the word hashshem was the proper name of some Egyptian deity. 9. The fifteenth verse seems to countenance the supposition that the god whose name was produced on this occasion was not the true God, for it is there said, whosoever curseth his god, elohaim, shall bear his sin—shall have the punishment due to him as idolater; but he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord, shem Yehovah, shall surely be put to death—when he blasphemeth the name (shem) he shall die, ver. 16. 10. The verb nakab, which we translate blaspheme, signifies to pierce, bore, make hollow; also to EXPRESS or DISTINGUISH 15 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, whosoever curseth his God shall bear his sin.

16 And he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the Lord, shall be put to death.

17 And he that killeth any man shall surely be put to death.

18 And he that killeth a beast shall make it good: beast for beast.

19 And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour, as he hath done, so shall it be done to him;

20 Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again.

21 And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it: and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death.

22 Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger as for one of your own country: for I am the Lord your God.

23 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should bring forth him that had cursed out of the camp, and stone him with stones. And the children of Israel did as the Lord commanded Moses.

by NAME; see Isa. lxii. 2, Num. i. 17, 1 Chron. xii. 31, xvi. 41, xxviii. 15. Hence all that we term blasphemy here may only signify the particularizing some false god, i.e. naming him by his name, or imploring his aid as a helper: and when spoken of the true God it may signify using that sacred name as the idolaters did the names of their idols. [That the man actually blasphemed the name is clear from that which follows: "and cursed." And there can be little doubt that the name was that of Jehovah.]

In whatever point of view we consider the relation which has been the subject of this long note, one thing is sufficiently plain, that he who speaks irreverently of God, of his works, his perfections, his providence, &c., is destitute of every moral feeling and of every religious principle, and consequently so dangerous to society, that it would be criminal to suffer him to be at large, though the long-suffering of God may lead him to repentance, and therefore it may be consistent with mercy to preserve his life.

Verse 14. Lay their hands upon his head] It was by this ceremony that the people who heard him curse bore their public testimony in order to his being fully convicted, for without this his punishment would not have been lawful. By this ceremony also they in effect said to the man, Thy blood be upon thy own head.

Verse 15. Whosoever curseth his God] He who makes light of him, who does not treat him and sacred things with due reverence, shall bear his sin—shall have the guilt of this transgression imputed to him, and may expect the punishment.

Verse 16. Blasphemeth the name of the Lord] See the note on the tenth verse. This being the name by which especially the Divine Essence was pointed out, it should be held peculiarly sacred.

Verse 17. He that killeth any man] Blasphemy against God, i.e. speaking injuriously of his name, his attributes, his government, and his revelation, together with murder, is to be punished with death: he that blasphemeth God is a curse in society, and he who takes away, wilfully and by malicious intent, the life of any man, should certainly be put to death. In this respect God has absolutely required that life shall go for life.

Verse 20. Breach for breach] This is a repetition of the lex talionis, which we explained, Exod. xxi. 24.

Verse 22. Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger as for one of your own country] Equal laws, where each individual receives the same protection and the same privileges, are the boast only of a sound political constitution. He who respects and obeys the laws has a right to protection and support, and his person and property are as sacred in the sight of justice as the person and property of the prince. He who does not obey the laws of his country forfeits all right and title to protection and privilege; his own actions condemn him, and justice takes him up on the evidence of his own transgressions. He who does what is right need not fear the power of the civil magistrate, for he holds the sword only to punish transgressors. Universal obedience to the laws is the duty of every citizen; none can do more, none should do less; therefore each individual in a well regulated state must have equal rights and privileges in every thing that relates to the safety of his person, and the security of his property.

Verse 23. And stone him with stones.] We are not to suppose that the culprit was exposed to the unbridled fury of the thousands of Israel; this would be brutality, not justice, for the very worst of tempers and passions might be produced and fostered by such a procedure. The Jews themselves tell us that their manner of stoning was this: they brought the condemned person without the camp, because his crime had rendered him unclean, and whatever was unclean must be put without the camp. When they came within four cubits of the place of execution they stripped the criminal, if a man, leaving him nothing but a cloth about the waist. The place on which he was to be executed was elevated, and the witnesses went up with him to it, and laid their hands upon him for the purposes mentioned, ver. 14. Then one of the witnesses struck him with a stone upon the loins; if he was not killed with that blow, then the witnesses took up a great stone, as much as two men could lift, and threw it upon his breast. This was the coup de grace, and finished the tragedy. When a man was stoned by the mob, then brutal rage armed every man, justice was set aside, and the will and fury of the people were law, judge, jury, and executioner. Such disgraceful stonings as these were, no doubt, frequent among the Jews.

What the crime of Shelomith's son was, we cannot distinctly say; doubtless it was some species of blasphemy: however, we find it was a new and unprecedented case; and as there was no law by which the quantum of guilt could be ascertained, nor consequently the degree of punishment, it was necessary to consult the great Lawgiver on the occasion; the man was therefore secured till the mind of the Lord should be known. Moses, no doubt, had recourse to the tabernacle, and received the directions afterwards mentioned from Him who dwelt between the cherubim. In what way the answer of the Lord was communicated we know not (probably by Urim and Thummim), but it came in such a manner as to preclude all doubt upon the subject. However sinful the Jews might have been at this time, we have reason to believe they did not take the name of the Lord in vain, and blasphemy was not known among them. But what shall we say of Christians so called, whose mouths are full of cursing and bitterness? Were every blasphemer among us to be stoned to death, how many of the people would fall in every corner of the land!

CHAPTER XXV.

The law concerning the sabbatical or seventh year repeated, 1-7. The law relative to the jubilee, or fiftieth year, and the hallowing of the fiftieth, 8-12. In the year of jubilee every one to return unto his possessions, 13. None to oppress another in buying and selling, 14. Purchases to be rated from jubilee to jubilee, according to the number of years unexpired, 15-17. Promises to obedience, 18, 19. Promises relative to the sabbatical year, 20-22. No inheritance must be finally alienated, 23, 24. No advantage to be taken of a man's poverty in buying his land, 25-28. Ordinances relative to the selling of a house in a walled city, 29, 30; in a village, 31. Houses of the Levites may be redeemed at any time, 32, 33. The fields of the Levites in the suburbs must not be sold, 34. No usury to be taken from a poor brother, 35-38. If an Israelite be sold to an Israelite, he must not be obliged to serve as a slave, 39, but be as a hired servant or as a sojourner till the year of jubilee, 40, when he and his family shall have liberty to depart, 41; because God claims all Israelites as his servants, having redeemed them from bondage in Egypt, 42, 43. The Israelites are permitted to have bond-men and bond-women of the heathens, who, being bought with their money, shall be considered as their property, 44-46. If an Israelite, grown poor, be sold to a sojourner who has waxed rich, he may be redeemed by one of his relatives, an uncle or uncle's son, 47-49. In the interim, between the jubilees, he may be redeemed; but if not redeemed, he shall go free in the jubilee, 50-54. Obedience enforced by God's right over them as his servants, 55.

Verse 2. The land keep a sabbath] It may be asked here: If it required all the annual produce of the field to support the inhabitants, how could the people be nourished the seventh year, when no produce was received from the fields? To this it may be answered, that God sent his blessing in an especial manner on the sixth year (see verses 21, 22) and it brought forth fruit for three years. How astonishing and convincing was this miracle! Could there possibly be any deception here? NO! The miracle speaks for itself, proves the divine authenticity of the law, and takes every prop and stay from the system that wishes to convict the Mosaic ordinances of imposture. It is evident from this that the Mosaic law must have had a divine origin, as no man in his senses, without God's authority, could have made such an ordinance as this; for the sixth year, from its promulgation, would have amply refuted his pretensions to a divine mission.

5 *That which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest, thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes <sup>b</sup> of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.

6 And the sabbath of the land shall be meat for you; for thee, and for thy servant, and for thy maid, and for thy hired servant, and for thy stranger that sojourneth with thee.

7 And for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land, shall all the increase thereof be meat.

8 And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years: and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

9 Then shalt thou cause the trumpet <sup>c</sup> of the jubilee to sound, on the tenth day of the seventh month, <sup>d</sup> in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.

10 And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and <sup>e</sup> proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof: it shall be a jubilee unto you; <sup>f</sup> and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.

11 A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be unto you: <sup>g</sup> ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

12 For it is the jubilee; it shall be holy unto you: <sup>h</sup> ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

13 <sup>i</sup> In the year of this jubilee ye shall return every man unto his possession.

14 And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, <sup>j</sup> ye shall not oppress one another:

15 <sup>k</sup> According to the number of years after the jubilee, thou shalt buy of thy neighbour; and according unto the number of years of the fruits, he shall sell unto thee:

16 According to the multitude of years, thou shalt increase the price thereof; and according to the fewness of years, thou shalt diminish the price of it: for according to the number of the years of the fruits, doth he sell unto thee.

17 <sup>l</sup> Ye shall not therefore oppress one another; <sup>m</sup> but thou shalt fear thy God: for I am the Lord your God.

18 <sup>n</sup> Wherefore ye shall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; <sup>o</sup> and ye shall dwell in the land in safety.

19 And the land shall yield her fruit, and <sup>p</sup> ye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety.

20 And if ye shall say, <sup>q</sup> What shall we eat the seventh year? behold, <sup>r</sup> we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase:

21 Then I will <sup>s</sup> command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years.

22 <sup>t</sup> And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of <sup>u</sup> old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store.

23 The land shall not be sold <sup>v</sup> for <sup>w</sup> ever, for <sup>x</sup> the land is mine; for ye are <sup>y</sup> strangers and sojourners with me.

24 And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a redemption for the land.

Verse 8. Thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years] Probably in this verse Moses either includes the preceding jubilee and thus with the forty-ninth makes up the number fifty; or he speaks of proclaiming the jubilee on the forty-ninth, and celebrated it on the fiftieth year current. Some think it was celebrated on the forty-ninth year, as is stated in ver. 8; and this prevented the sabbatical year, or seventh year of rest, from being confounded with the jubilee, which it must otherwise have been, had the celebration of this great solemnity taken place on the fiftieth year; but it is most likely that the fiftieth was the real jubilee.

Verse 11. A jubilee shall that fiftieth year be] The literal meaning of the word jubilee, yobel in Hebrew, and yubil in the Samaritan, has not been well ascertained. Josephus and the rabbins have caused many to err; the former says the word signifies liberty; but the word liberty signifies rather the intention of the institution, that the meaning of the Hebrew term. The rabbins say it signifies a ram's horn, because the trumpets which were used in proclaiming this solemnity were made out of ram's horns. This meaning is adopted in a few places in our translation, but none of the ancient Versions acknowledge this sense of the term, the Chaldee excepted. Some derive it from yabal, to bring, carry away, because the Israelites at this time carried away the right of repossessing their inheritances which had been forfeited or alienated. The most natural derivation is from hobil, to cause to bring back, or recall, because estates, &c., which had been alienated, were then brought back to their primitive owners. This was a wise and excellent institution, but appears to have been little regarded by the Jews after the Babylonish captivity. Indeed, it is not mentioned under the second temple, and the observance must have ceased among the Jews when they were brought under a foreign yoke. [The word jubilee is derived from a Hebrew word signifying the blast of a trumpet.]

The jubilee seems to have been typical, 1. Of the great time of release, the gospel dispensation, when all who believe in Christ Jesus are redeemed from the bondage of sin—repossess the favour and image of God, the only inheritance of the human soul, having all debts cancelled, and the right of inheritance restored. 2. Of the general resurrection.

It is worthy of remark that the jubilee was not proclaimed till the tenth day of the seventh month, on the very day when the great annual atonement was made for the sins of the people; and does not this prove that the great liberty or redemption from thralldom, published under the gospel, could not take place till the great Atonement—the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus, had been offered up?

Verse 14. Ye shall not oppress one another] Ye shall take no advantage of each other's ignorance either in buying or selling; for he that buys an article at less than it is worth, or sells one for more than it is worth, taking advantage in both cases of the ignorance of the vender or buyer, is no better than a thief.

Verse 15. According to the number of years] This was something like buying the unexpired term of a lease among us; the purchase is always regulated by the number of years between the time of purchase and the expiration of the term.

Verse 20. What shall we eat the seventh year?] A very natural question, which could only be laid at rest by the sovereign promise in the next verse.

Verse 23. The land shall not be sold for ever—the land is mine] This one circumstance was peculiarly favourable to their advancement in religion, in righteousness, and true holiness; for feeling that they had nothing which they could call their own upon earth, they must frequently, by this, be put in mind of the necessity of having a permanent dwelling in the heavenly inheritance, and of that preparation without which it could not be possessed.

25 *If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if <sup>b</sup> any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.

26 And if the man have none to redeem it, and <sup>c</sup> himself be able to redeem it;

27 Then <sup>d</sup> let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession.

28 But if ye be not able to restore <sup>e</sup> it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it, until the year of jubilee: <sup>f</sup> and in the jubilee it shall go out, and he shall return unto his possession.

29 And if a man sell a dwelling house in a walled city, then he may redeem it within a whole year after it is sold; <sup>g</sup> within a full year may he redeem it.

30 And if it be not redeemed within the space of a full year, then the house that <sup>h</sup> is in the walled city shall be established for ever to him that bought it, throughout his generations: it shall not go out in the jubilee.

31 But the houses of the villages, which have no walls round about them, shall be counted as the fields of the country: <sup>i</sup> they may be redeemed, and they shall go out in the jubilee.

32 Notwithstanding <sup>j</sup> the cities of the Levites, and the houses of the cities of their possession, may the Levites redeem at any time.

33 And if <sup>k</sup> a man purchase of the Levites, then the house that was sold, and the city of his possession, Verse 25. Any of his kin come to redeem it] The land that was sold might be redeemed in the interim between jubilee and jubilee, by the former owner or by one of his kinsmen or relatives. This kinsman is called in the text goel or redeemer; and was not this a lively emblem of the redemption of man by Christ Jesus? That he might have a right to redeem man he took upon him human nature, and thus became a kinsman of the great family of the human race, and thereby possessed the right of redeeming that fallen nature of which he took part, and of buying back to man that inheritance which had been forfeited by transgression.

Verse 29. Sell a dwelling house in a walled city] A very proper difference is put between houses in a city and houses in the country. If a man sold his house in the city, he might redeem it any time in the course of a year; but if it were not redeemed within that time, it could no more be redeemed, nor did it go out even in the jubilee. It was not so with a house in the country; such a house might be redeemed during any part of the interim; and if not redeemed, must go out at the jubilee. The reason in both cases is sufficiently evident: the house in the city might be built for purposes of trade or traffic merely, the house in the country was built on or attached to the inheritance which God had divided to the respective families, and it was therefore absolutely necessary that the same law should apply to the house as to the inheritance. But the same necessity did not hold good with respect to the house in the city: and as we may presume the house in the city was merely for the purpose of trade, when a man bought such a house, and got his business established there, it would have been very inconvenient for him to have removed; but as it was possible that the former owner might have sold the house rashly, or through the pressure of some very urgent necessity, a year was allowed him, that during that time he might have leisure to reconsider his rash act, or so to get through his pressing necessity as to be able to get back his dwelling. Again, as

34 But <sup>m</sup> the field of the suburbs of their cities may not be sold; for it is their perpetual possession.

35 And if thy brother be waxen poor, and <sup>n</sup> fallen in decay with thee; then thou shalt <sup>o</sup> relieve him: <sup>p</sup> yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee.

36 *Take thou no usury of him, or increase: but <sup>q</sup> fear thy God: that thy brother may live with thee.

37 Thou shalt not give him thy money upon usury, nor lend him thy victuals for increase.

38 <sup>r</sup> I am the Lord your God, which brought you forth out of the land of Egypt, to give you the land of Canaan, and to be your God.

40 But as an hired servant, and as a sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the year of jubilee:

the purchaser, having bought the house merely for the purpose of trade, manufacture, &c., must have been at great pains and expense to fit the place for his work, and establish his business, in which himself, his children, and his children's children, were to labour and get their bread; hence it was necessary that he should have some certainty of permanent possession, without which, we may naturally conjecture, no such purchases ever would be made. This seems to be the simple reason of the law in both cases.

Verse 32. The cities of the Levites] The law in this and the following verses was also a very wise one. A Levite could not ultimately sell his house: if sold, he could redeem it at any time in the interim between the two jubilees; but if not redeemed, it must go out at the following jubilee. And why? "Because Moses framed his laws so much in favour of the priesthood, that they had peculiar privileges," &c. Just the reverse; they were so far from being peculiarly favoured that they had no inheritance in Israel, only their cities to dwell in: and because their houses in these cities were the whole that they could call their own, therefore these houses could not be ultimately alienated. All that they had to live on besides was from that most precarious source of support, the freewill-offerings of the people, which depended on the prevalence of pure religion in the land.

Verse 36. Take thou no usury of him] Usury, at present, signifies unlawful interest for money. Properly, it means the reward or compensation given for the use of a thing, but is principally spoken of money.

Verse 42. For they are my servants] It was in being his servants, and devoted to his work, that both their religious and political service consisted. And although their political liberty might be lost, they knew that their spiritual liberty never could be forfeited except by an utter alienation from God. God therefore claims the same right to their persons which he does to their lands; see the note on ver. 23.

Verse 43. Thou shalt not rule over him with rigour] What thou shalt have, shall be of the heathen that are round about you; of them shall ye buy bondmen and bondmaids.

45 Moreover of <sup>a</sup> the children of the strangers that do sojourn among you, of them shall ye buy, and of their families that are with you, which they begat in your land: and they shall be your possession.

46 And <sup>b</sup> ye shall take them as an inheritance for your children after you, to inherit them for a possession; <sup>c</sup> they shall be your bondmen for ever: but over your brethren the children of Israel, <sup>d</sup> ye shall not rule one over another with rigour.

47 And if a sojourner or stranger <sup>e</sup> wax rich by thee, and <sup>f</sup> thy brother that dwelleth by him wax poor, and sell himself unto the stranger or sojourner by thee, or to the stock of the stranger's family;

48 After that he is sold he may be redeemed again: one of his brethren may <sup>g</sup> redeem him:

49 Either his uncle, or his uncle's son, may redeem him, or any that is nigh of kin unto him, of his family, may redeem him, or if <sup>h</sup> he be able, he may redeem himself.

is rigorous service? "Service which is not determined, and service whereof there is no need." This is the definition given by the Jews; but much more is implied in this command than is expressed here. Labour beyond the person's strength, or labour too long continued, or in unhealthy or uncomfortable places and circumstances, or without sufficient food, &c., is labour exacted with rigour, and consequently inhuman; and this law is made, not for the Mosaic dispensation and the Jewish people, but for every dispensation and for every people under heaven.

Verso 50. The price of his sale shall be, &c.] This was a very equitable law, both for the sojourner to whom the man was sold, and the Israelite who had been thus sold. The Israelite might redeem himself, or one of his kindred might redeem him; but this must not be done to the prejudice of his master, the sojourner. They were therefore to reckon the years he must have served from that time till the jubilee; and then, taking the current wages of a servant per year at that time, multiply the remaining years by that sum, and the aggregate was the sum to be given to his master for his redemption. The Jews hold that the kindred of such a person were bound, if in their power, to redeem him, lest he should be swallowed up among the heathen; see Neh. v. 8.

Verso 55. For unto me the children of Israel are servants] The Israelites were a typical people; they represented those 50 And he shall reckon with him that bought him, from the year that he was sold to him unto the year of jubilee: and the price of his sale shall be according unto the number of years, <sup>i</sup> according to the time of an hired servant shall it be with him.

51 If there be yet many years behind, according unto them he shall give again the price of his redemption, out of the money that he was bought for.

52 And if there remain but few years unto the year of jubilee, then shall he count with him, and according unto his years shall he give him again the price of his redemption.

53 And as a yearly hired servant shall he be with him: and the other shall not rule with rigour over him in thy sight.

54 And if he be not redeemed <sup>j</sup> in these years, then <sup>k</sup> he shall go out in the year of jubilee, both he, and his children with him.

55 For <sup>l</sup> unto me the children of Israel are servants; they are my servants whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt: I am the Lord your God.

under the gospel dispensation who are children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. But these last have a peculiarity of blessing: they are not merely servants, but they are sons; though they also serve God, yet it is in the newness of the spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter. And to this difference of state the apostle seems evidently to allude, Gal. iv. 6, &c.

The jubilee was a wonderful institution, and was of very great service to the religion, freedom, and independence of the Jewish people. But it especially pointed out the redemption of man by Christ Jesus: 1. Through him, he who was in debt to God's justice had his debt discharged, and his sin forgiven. 2. He who sold himself for nought, who was a bond-slave of sin and Satan, regains his liberty and becomes a son of God, through faith in his blood. 3. He who by transgression had forfeited all right and title to the kingdom of God, becomes an heir of God, and a joint-heir with Christ. Heaven, his forfeited inheritance is restored, for the kingdom of heaven is opened to all believers; and thus, redeemed from his debt, restored to his liberty, united to the heavenly family, and re-entitled to his inheritance, he goes on his way rejoicing, till he enters the paradise of his Maker, and is for ever with the Lord. Reader, hast thou applied for this redemption?

CHAPTER XXVI.

Idolatry forbidden, 1. The sabbath to be sanctified, 2, 3. Promises to obedience, of fruitful fields, plentiful harvests, and vintage, 4, 5. Of peace and security, 6. Discomfiture of their enemies, 7-9. Of abundance, 10. Of the divine presence, 11-13. Threatenings against the disobedient, 14, 15. Of terror and dismay, 16. Their enemies shall prevail against them, 17, 18. Of barrenness, 19, 20. Of desolation by wild beasts, 21, 22. And if not humbled and reformed, worse evils shall be inflicted upon them, 23, 24. Their enemies shall prevail, and they shall be wasted by the pestilence, 25, 26. If they should still continue refractory, they shall be yet more sorely punished, 27, 28. The famine shall so increase that they shall be obliged to eat their own children, 29. Their carcases shall be cast upon the carcases of their idols, 30. Their cities shall be wasted, and the sanctuary desolated, 31; the land destroyed, 32, themselves scattered among their enemies, and pursued with utter confusion and distress, 33-39. If under these judgments they confess their sin, and return to God, he will remember them in mercy, 40-43; visit them even in the land of their enemies, 44; and remember his covenant with their fathers, 45. The conclusion, stating these to be the judgments and laws which the Lord made between himself and the children of Israel in Mount Sinai, 46.

Ye shall make you <sup>a</sup> no idols, nor graven image, neither rear ye up a <sup>b</sup> standing image, neither shall ye set up <sup>c</sup> any image <sup>d</sup> of stone in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the LORD your God.

2 <sup>e</sup> Ye shall keep my sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the LORD.

3 <sup>f</sup> If ye walk in my statutes, and keep my commandments, and do them;

4 <sup>g</sup> Then I will give you rain in due season, <sup>h</sup> and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit.

5 And <sup>i</sup> your threshing shall reach unto the vintage, and the vintage shall reach unto the sowing time: and <sup>j</sup> ye shall eat your bread to full, and <sup>k</sup> dwell in your land safely.

6 And <sup>l</sup> I will give peace in the land, and <sup>m</sup> ye shall lie down, and none shall make you afraid: and I will <sup>n</sup> rid <sup>o</sup> evil beasts out of the land, neither shall <sup>p</sup> the sword go through your land.

7 And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

has determined that men shall pursue, by which their whole conduct shall be regulated, making the proper distinction between virtue and vice; in a word, between what is proper to be done, and what is proper to be left undone.

3. COMMANDMENTS: mitsvot, from tsavah, to command, ordain, and appoint, as a legislator. This term is properly applied to those parts of the law which contain the obligation the people are under to act according to the statutes, judgments, &c., already established, and which prohibit them by penal sanctions from acting contrary to the laws.

4. COVENANT: berith, from bar, to clear, cleanse, or purify; because the covenant, the whole system of revelation given to the Jews, was intended to separate them from all the people of the earth, and to make them holy. Berith also signifies the covenant-sacrifice, which prefigured the atonement made by Christ for the sin of the world, by which he purifies believers unto himself, and makes them a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Besides those four we may add the following from other places of scripture.

5. TESTIMONIES: edoth, from ad, beyond, further, besides; because the whole ritual law referred to something further on or beyond the Jewish dispensation, even to that sacrifice which in the fulness of time was to be offered for the sins of men. Thus all the sacrifices, &c., of the Mosaic law referred to Christ, and bore testimony to him who was to come.

6. ORDINANCES: mishmaroth, from shamar, to guard, keep safe, watch over; those parts of divine revelation which exhorted men to watch their ways, keep their hearts, and promised them in consequence the continual protection and blessing of God their Maker.

7. PRECEPTS: pikkudim, from pakad, to overlook, take care or notice of, to visit; a very expressive character of the divine testimonies, the overseers of a man's conduct, those who stand by and look on to see whether he acts according to the commands of his Master; also the visitors, because God's precepts are suited to all the circumstances of human life.

8. TRUTH: emeth, from am, to support, sustain, confirm; because God is immutable who has promised, threatened, commanded, and therefore all his promises, threatenings, commandments, &c., are unalterable and eternal. Error and falsity promise to direct and sustain, but they fail.

9. RIGHTEOUSNESS: tsedakah, which seems to convey, from its use as a noun, the idea of giving just weight or good measure, see chap. xix. 36. This is one of the characters which is attributed to the revelation God makes of himself (see Ps. cxix.); and by this the impartiality of the divine testi-

Verses 1. Ye shall make you no idols] Not only idolatry in general is forbidden here, but also the superstitious use of innocent and lawful things. Probably the stones or pillars which were first set up, and anointed by holy men in commemoration of signal interpositions of God in their behalf, were afterwards abused to idolatrous and superstitious purposes, and therefore prohibited. This we know was the case with the brazen serpent, 2 Kings xviii. 4.

Verses 4. Rain in due season] What in scripture is called the early and the latter rain. The first fell in Palestine at the commencement of spring, and the latter in autumn.

Verses 5. Your threshing shall reach unto the vintage] According to Pliny, the Egyptians reaped their barley six months, and their oats seven months, after seed-time; for they sowed all their grain about the end of summer, when the overflowings of the Nile had ceased. It was nearly the same in Judea: they sowed their corn and barley towards the end of autumn, and about the month of October; and they began their barley-harvest after the passover, about the middle of March; and in one month or six weeks after, about pentecost, they began that of their wheat. After their wheat-harvest their vintage commenced. Moses here leads the Hebrews to hope, if they continued faithful to God, that between their harvest and vintage, and between their vintage and seed-time there should be no interval, so great should the abundance be; and these promises would appear to them the more impressive, as they had just now come out of a country where the inhabitants were obliged to remain for nearly three months shut up within their cities, because the Nile had then inundated the whole country.

Verses 11. I will set my tabernacle among you] This and the following verse contain the grand promise of the gospel dispensation, viz., the presence, manifestation, and indwelling of God in human nature, and his constant indwelling in the souls of his followers.

Verses 15. If ye shall despise my statutes—abhor my judgments] As these words and others of a similar import, which point out different properties of the revelation of God, are frequently occurring, I judge it best to take a general view of them, once for all, in this place, and show how they differ among themselves, and what property of the divine law each points out.

1. STATUTES: chukoth, from chak, to mark out, define, &c. This term seems to signify the things which God has defined, marked, and traced out, that men might have a perfect copy of pure conduct always before their eyes.

2. JUDGMENTS: shephatim, from shaphat, to distinguish, regulate, and determine; meaning those things which God

16 I will also do this unto you; I will even appoint <sup>a</sup> over you <sup>b</sup> terror, <sup>c</sup> consumption, and the burning ague, that shall <sup>d</sup> consume the eyes, and cause sorrow of heart; and <sup>e</sup> ye shall sow your seed in vain, for your enemies shall eat it.

17 And <sup>f</sup> I will set my face against you, and <sup>g</sup> ye shall be slain before your enemies: <sup>h</sup> they that hate you shall reign over you; and <sup>i</sup> ye shall flee when none pursueth you.

18 And if ye will not yet for all this hearken unto me, then I will punish you <sup>j</sup> seven times more for your sins.

19 And I will <sup>k</sup> break the pride of your power; and I <sup>l</sup> will make your heaven as iron, and your earth as brass:

monies, is pointed out. God gives to all their due, and his word distributes to every man according to his state, circumstances, talents, graces, &c.; to none too much, to none too little, to all enough.

10. WORD OF JEHOVAH: debar Yehovah, from dabar, to drive, lead, bring forward, hence to bring forward or utter one's sentiments; so the word of God is what God has brought forth to man from his own mind and counsel; it is a perfect similitude of his own righteousness, holiness, goodness, and truth. This divine law is sometimes expressed by

11. Imrah, speech or word, variously modified from amar, to branch out, because of the interesting details into which the word of God enters in order to instruct man and make him wise unto salvation, or, as the apostle expresses it, "God, who at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake unto the fathers by the prophets," in many distinct parcels, and by various tropes or figures; a curious and elegant description of divine revelation.

12. All these collectively are termed the LAW, torah, or torath Yehovah, the law of the Lord, from yarah, to direct, set straight and true, as stones in a building, to teach and instruct, because this whole system of divine revelation is calculated to direct men to the attainment of present and eternal felicity, to set them right in their notions concerning the supreme God, to order and adjust them in the several departments of civil and religious society, and thus to teach and instruct them in the knowledge of themselves, and in the true knowledge of God.

sonified and appointed to be the governors of a disobedient people. Terror is to be one of their keepers. How awful a state! to be continually under the influence of dismay, feeling indescribable evils, and fearing worse! Consumption, shachepheth, generally allowed to be some kind of atrophy or marasmus, by which the flesh was consumed, and the whole body dried up by raging fever through lack of sustenance.

Verse 22. I will also send wild beasts among you] God fulfilled these threatenings at different times. He sent fiery serpents among them, Num. xxi. 6; LIONS, 2 Kings xvii. 25; BEARS, 2 Kings ii. 24, and threatened them with total desolation, so that their land should be overrun with wild beasts, &c., see Ezek. v. 17.

Verse 26. Ten women shall bake your bread in one oven] Though in general every family in the East bakes its own bread, yet there are some public bakehouses where the bread of several families is baked at a certain price. Moses here foretells that the desolation should be so great and the want so pressing that there should be many idle hands to be employed, many mouths to be fed, and very little for each: Ten women shall bake your bread in one oven, &c.

Verse 29. Ye shall eat the flesh of your sons, &c.] This was literally fulfilled at the siege of Jerusalem. Josephus gives us a particular instance in dreadful detail of a woman named Mary, who, in the extremity of the famine during the siege, killed her sucking child, roasted, and had eaten part of it, when discovered by the soldiers!

the Babylonish captivity are numbered about four hundred and ninety years, during which period there were seventy sabbaths of years; for 7, multiplied by 70, make 490. Now the Babylonish captivity lasted seventy years, and during that time the land of Israel rested. Therefore the land rested just as many years in the Babylonish captivity, as it should have rested sabbaths if the Jews had observed the law relative to the sabbaths of the land." This is a most remarkable fact, and deserves to be particularly noticed, as a most literal fulfilment of the prophetic declaration of this verse.

May it not be argued from this that the law concerning the sabbatical year was observed till Saul's time, as it is only after this period the land enjoyed its rest in the seventy years' captivity? And if that breach of the law was thus punished, may it not be presumed it had been fulfilled till then, or else the captivity would have lasted longer, i.e. till the land had enjoyed all its rests, of which it had ever been thus deprived?

Verse 38. The land of your enemies shall eat you up. Does this refer to the total loss of the ten tribes? These are so completely swallowed up in some enemies' land, that nothing concerning their existence or place of residence remains but mere conjecture.

Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember; and I will <sup>b</sup>remember the land.

43 The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her sabbaths, while she lieth desolate without them: and they shall accept of the punishment of their iniquity: because, even because they <sup>d</sup>despised my judgments, and because their soul abhorred my statutes.

44 And yet for all that, when they be in the land of their enemies, <sup>k</sup>I will not cast them away, neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly, and to break my covenant with them: for I am the Lord their God.

45 But I will <sup>l</sup>for their sakes remember the covenant of their ancestors, <sup>m</sup>whom I brought forth out of the land of Egypt, in the sight of <sup>n</sup>the heathen, that I might be their God: I am the Lord.

46 *These are the statutes, and judgments, and laws, which the Lord made between him and the children of Israel <sup>p</sup>in Mount Sinai, by the hand of Moses.

Verse 44. Neither will I abhor them, to destroy them utterly Though God has literally fulfilled all his threatenings upon this people; yet he has, in his providence, strangely preserved them as a distinct people, and in very considerable numbers also. He still remembers the covenant of their ancestors, and in his providence and grace he has some very important design in their favour. All Israel shall yet be saved, and, with the Gentiles, they shall all be restored to his favour; and under Christ Jesus, the great Shepherd, become, with them, one grand everlasting fold.

Verse 46. These are the statutes, and judgments, &c. This verse appears to be the proper concluding verse of the whole book; and I rather think that the 27th chapter originally followed the 25th. As the law was anciently written upon skins of parchment, sheep or goat skins, pasted or stitched together, and all rolled up in one roll, the matter being written in columns, one of these columns might have been very easily displaced, and thus whole chapters might have been readily interchanged. It is likely that this might have been the case in the present instance. Others endeavour to solve this difficulty, by supposing that the 27th chapter was added after the book had been finished; and therefore there is apparently a double conclusion, one at the end of the 26th and the other at the end of the 27th chapter.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Laws concerning vows, 1, 2. Of males and females from twenty to sixty years of age, and their valuation, 3, 4. Of the same from five to twenty years, 5. Of the same from a month to five years of age, 6. Of males and females from sixty years old and upwards, and their valuation, 7. The priest shall value the poor according to his ability, 8. Concerning beasts that are vowed, and their valuation, 9-13. Concerning the sanctification of a house, 14, 15. Concerning the field that is sanctified or consecrated to the Lord, to the year of jubilee, 16-24. Every estimation shall be made in shekels, according to the shekel of the sanctuary, 25. The firstlings of clean beasts, being already the Lord's, cannot be vowed, 26. That of an unclean beast may be redeemed, 27. Every thing devoted to God shall be unalienable and unredeemable, and continue the Lord's property till death, 28, 29. All the tithe of the land is the Lord's, 30; but it may be redeemed by adding a fifth part, 31. The tithe of the herd and the flock is also his, 32. The tenth that passes under the rod shall not be changed, 33. The conclusion of the book, 34

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying.
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, 'When a man shall make a singular vow, the persons shall be for the LORD, by thy estimation.

3 And thy estimation shall be of the male, from twenty years old even unto sixty years old, even thy estimation shall be fifty shekels of silver, 'after the shekel of the sanctuary.

4 And if it be a female, then thy estimation shall be thirty shekels.

5 And if it be from five years old even unto twenty years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male twenty shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

6 And if it be from a month old even unto five years old, then thy estimation shall be of the male five shekels of silver, and for the female thy estimation shall be three shekels of silver.

7 And if it be from sixty years old and above; if it be a male, then thy estimation shall be fifteen shekels, and for the female ten shekels.

8 But if he be poorer than thy estimation, then he shall present himself before the priest, and the priest shall value him; according to his ability that vowed shall the priest value him.

9 And if it be a beast, whereof men bring an offering unto the LORD, all that any man giveth of such unto the LORD, shall be holy.

10 He shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good: and if he shall at all change beast for beast, then it and the exchange thereof shall be holy.

11 And if it be any unclean beast, of which they do not offer a sacrifice unto the LORD, then he shall present the beast before the priest:

* Num. vi. 2. See Judg. xi. 30, 31, 39. 1 Sam. i. 11, 28. Gen. xxviii. 20-22. Deut. xxiii. 21-23.—Num. xviii. 16.—Exod. xxx. 13.—James i. 8.—Heb. according to thy estimation, O priest.—

Verse 2. When a man shall make a singular vow] The verse is short and obscure, and may be translated thus: A man who shall have separated a vow, according to thy estimation, of souls unto the Lord; which may be paraphrased thus: He who shall have vowed or consecrated a soul, i.e. a living creature, whether man or beast, if he wish to redeem what he has thus vowed or consecrated, shall ransom or redeem it according to the priest's estimation, and the money shall be put into his hands for the service of the sanctuary. Vows were either of abstinence, such as are spoken of Num. xxx., and the vow of the Nazarite, Num. vi.; or they were to give something to the Lord, as sacrifices, Lev. vii. 16, or the value of persons, beasts, houses, or lands, concerning which the law is here given. A man might vow or devote himself, his children (ver. 5, 6), his domestics, his cattle, his goods, &c. And in this chapter rules are laid down for the redemption of all these things. But if, after consecrating these things, he refused to redeem them, then they became the Lord's property for ever. The persons continued all their lives devoted to the service of the sanctuary; the goods were sold for the profit of the temple or the priests; the animals, if clean, were offered in sacrifice: if not proper for sacrifice, were sold, and the price devoted to sacred uses.

Verse 3. From twenty years old even unto sixty—fifty shekels] A man from twenty to sixty years of age, if consecrated to the Lord by a vow, might be redeemed for fifty shekels, which, at 8s. each, amounted to £7 10s. sterling.

Verse 4. And if it be a female] The woman, at the same age, vowed unto the Lord, might be redeemed for thirty shekels, £4 10s. sterling, a little more than one half of the value of the man; for this obvious reason, that a woman, if employed, could not be of so much use in the service of the sanctuary as the man, and was therefore of much less value.

Verse 5. From five years old] The boy that was vowed might be redeemed for twenty shekels, £3 sterling; the girl, for ten shekels, just one half, £1 10s.

12 And the priest shall value it, whether it be good or bad: 'as thou valuest it, who art the priest, so shall it be.

13 'But if he will at all redeem it, then he shall add a fifth part thereof unto thy estimation.

14 And when a man shall sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD, then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand.

15 'And if he that sanctified it will redeem his house, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be his.

16 And if a man shall sanctify unto the LORD some part of a field of his possession, then thy estimation shall be according to the seed thereof: 'an homer of barley shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.

17 If he sanctify his field from the year of jubilee, according to thy estimation it shall stand.

18 But if he sanctify his field after the jubilee, then the priest shall 'reckon unto him the money according to the years that remain, even unto the year of the jubilee, and it shall be abated from thy estimation.

19 'And if he that sanctified the field will in any wise redeem it, then he shall add the fifth part of the money of thy estimation unto it, and it shall be assured to him.

20 And if he will not redeem the field, or if he have sold the field to another man, it shall not be redeemed any more.

21 But the field, 'when it goeth out in the jubilee, shall be holy unto the LORD, as a field 'devoted; 'the possession thereof shall be the priest's.

22 And if a man sanctify unto the LORD a field

' Ver. 15, 19.—' Ver. 13.—<sup>h</sup> Or, the land of an homer, &c.—' Ch. xxv. 15, 16.—' Ver. 13.—<sup>k</sup> Ch. xxv. 10, 28, 31.—' Ver. 28.—' Num. xviii. 14. Ezek. xlv. 29.

Verse 6. A month old] The male child, five shekels, 15s., the female, three shekels, 9s. Being both in comparative infancy, they were nearly of an equal value. None were vowed under a month old: the first-born being always considered as the Lord's property, could not be vowed, see ver. 26.

Verse 7. Sixty years old] The old man and the old woman, being nearly past labour, were nearly of an equal value; hence the one was estimated at fifteen shekels, £2 5s., the other at ten shekels, £1 10s. This was about the same ratio as that of the children, ver. 5, and for the same reason.

Verse 10. He shall not alter it, nor change it, a good for a bad, &c.] Whatever was consecrated to God by a vow, or purpose of heart, was considered from that moment as the Lord's property; to change which was impiety; to withhold it, sacrilege.

Verse 13. Shall add a fifth part] This was probably intended to prevent rash vows and covetous redemptions. The priest alone was to value the thing; and to whatever his valuation was, a fifth part must be added by him who wished to redeem the consecrated thing.

Verse 14. Shall sanctify his house] The yearly rent of which, when thus consecrated, went towards the repairs of the tabernacle, which was the house of the Lord.

Verse 16. Some part of a field] Though the preceding words are not in the text, yet it is generally allowed they should be supplied here, as it was not lawful for a man to vow his whole estate, and thus make his family beggars, in order to enrich the Lord's sanctuary: this God would not permit. The rabbins teach that the land or field, whether good or bad, was valued at forty-eight shekels, for all the years of the jubilee, provided the field was large enough to sow a homer of barley. The homer was different from the omer: the latter held about three quarts, the former, seventy-five gallons three pints. Some suppose that the land was rated, not at fifty shekels for the whole of the years of the jubilee, for this which he hath bought, which is not of the fields of his possession;

23 <sup>b</sup> Then the priest shall reckon unto him the worth of thy estimation, even unto the year of the jubilee; and he shall give thine estimation in that day, as a holy thing unto the LORD.

24 <sup>c</sup> In the year of the jubilee the field shall return unto him of whom it was bought, even to him to whom the possession of the land did belong.

25 And all thy estimations shall be according to the shekel of the sanctuary: <sup>d</sup> twenty gerahs shall be the shekel.

26 Only the <sup>e</sup> firstling<sup>f</sup> of the beasts, which should be the LORD's firstling, no man shall sanctify it; whether it be ox, or sheep: it is the LORD's.

27 And if it be of an unclean beast, then he shall redeem it according to thine estimation, <sup>g</sup> and shall add a fifth part of it thereto: or if it be not redeemed, then it shall be sold according to thy estimation.

28 <sup>h</sup> Notwithstanding no devoted thing, that a man shall devote unto the LORD of all that he hath, would be but about 3s. per annum; but that it was rated according to its produce, fifty shekels for every homer of barley it produced.

Verse 21. As a field devoted] It is cherem, a thing so devoted to God as never more to be capable of being redeemed.

Verse 25. Shekel of the sanctuary] A standard shekel; the standard being kept in the sanctuary to try and regulate all the weights in the land by.

Verse 28. No devoted thing—shall be sold or redeemed] This is the cherem, which always meant an absolute undecemable grant to God.

Verse 29. Which shall be devoted of men] Every man who is devoted shall surely be put to death: or, as some understand it, be the Lord's property, or be employed in his service till death. The law mentioned in these two verses has been appealed to by the enemies of divine revelation as a proof, that under the Mosaic dispensation human sacrifices were offered to God; but this can never be conceded. Had there been such a law, it certainly would have been more explicitly revealed, and not left in the compass of a few words only, where the meaning is very difficult to be ascertained; and the words themselves differently translated by most interpreters. That there were persons devoted to destruction under the Mosaic dispensation, is sufficiently evident, for the whole Canaanitish nations were thus devoted by the Supreme Being himself, because the cup of their iniquity was full; but that they were not sacrificed to God, the whole history sufficiently declares.

It may be necessary just further to note that two kinds of vows are mentioned in this chapter: 1. The neder (see on chap. vii.), which comprehends all those things which, when once devoted, might be redeemed at a certain price, according to the valuation of the priest. 2. The cherem, those things vowed to God of which there remained no power of redemption; they were most holy, i.e., so absolutely devoted to God that they could neither be changed, alienated, nor redeemed: probably because no mental reservation had been made, as in the above case may be supposed. On this ground the word both of man and beast, and of the field of his possession, shall be sold or redeemed: every devoted thing is most holy unto the LORD.

29 <sup>i</sup> None devoted, which shall be devoted of men, shall be redeemed; but shall surely be put to death.

30 And <sup>j</sup> all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD's: it is holy unto the LORD.

31 <sup>k</sup> And if a man will at all redeem ought of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof.

32 And concerning the tithe of the herd or of the flock, even of whatsoever <sup>l</sup> passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the LORD.

33 He shall not search whether it be good or bad, <sup>m</sup> neither shall he change it; and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed.

was afterwards applied to the most solemn and awful kind of excommunication, meaning a person so entirely devoted to the stroke of vindictive justice, as never to be capable of receiving pardon; and hence the word may be well applied in this sense to the Canaanites, the cup of whose iniquity was full, and who were consigned, without reprieve, to final extermination.

Verse 30. All the tithe of the land] This God claims as his own; and it is spoken of here as being a point perfectly settled, and concerning which there was neither doubt nor difficulty.

Verse 32. Whatsoever passeth under the rod] The signification of this verse is well given by the rabbins: "When a man was to give the tithe of his sheep or calves to God, he was to shut up the whole flock in one fold, in which there was one narrow door capable of letting out one at a time. The owner, about to give the tenth to the Lord, stood by the door with a rod in his hand, the end of which was dipped in vermilion or red ochre. The mothers of those lambs or calves stood without: the door being opened, the young ones ran out to join themselves to their dams; and as they passed out the owner stood with his rod over them, and counted 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, &c., and when the tenth came, he touched it with the coloured rod, by which it was distinguished to be the tithe calf, sheep, &c., and whether poor or lean, perfect or blemished, that was received as the legitimate tithe." It seems to be in reference to this custom that the prophet Ezekiel, speaking to Israel, says: I will cause you to pass under the rod, and will bring you into the bond of the covenant—you shall be once more claimed as the Lord's property, and be in all things devoted to his service, being marked or ascertained, by especial providence and manifestations of his kindness, to be his peculiar people.

Verse 34. These are the commandments] This conclusion is very similar to that at the end of the preceding chapter. I have already supposed that this chapter should have followed the 25th, and that the 26th originally terminated the book.

PREFACE TO THE BOOK

N U M B E R S .

THIS, which is the fourth book in order of the Pentateuch, has been called NUMBERS, from its containing an account of the numbering and marshalling of the Israelites in their journey through the wilderness to the promised land. Its ENGLISH name is derived from the title it bears in the VULGATE Latin, Numeri, which is a literal translation of its title in the SEPTUAGINT. This title, however, does not properly apply to more than the three first chapters, and the xxvith. This book, like the preceding, takes its name among the HEBREWS from a distinguishing word in the commencement. It comprehends the history of between thirty-eight and thirty-nine years, and contains a distinct account of the several stages of the Israelites' journey in the wilderness, the various occurrences on the way; their trials, rebellions, punishments, deliverances, conquests, &c., with several laws and ordinances not mentioned in the preceding books, together with a repetition and explanation of some others which had been previously delivered; the whole forming a most interesting history of the Justice, Mercy, and Providence of God.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF MOSES,

CHAPTER I.

On the first day of the second month of the second year after Israel came out of Egypt, God commands Moses to number all the males of the people from twenty years and upwards, who were effective men and able to go to war, 1-3. A chief of each tribe is associated with Moses and Aaron in this business, 4; the names of whom are given, 5-16. Moses assembles the people, who declare their pedigrees according to their families, 17-19. The descendants of REUBEN are numbered, and amount to 46,500, ver. 20, 21. Those of SIMEON, 59,300, ver. 22, 28. Those of GAD, 45,650, ver. 24, 25. Those of JUDAH, 74,600, ver. 26, 27. Those of ISSACHAR, 54,400, ver. 28, 29. Those of ZEBULUN, 57,400, ver. 30, 31. Those of EPHRAIM, 40,500, ver. 32, 33. Those of MANASSEH, 32,200, ver. 34, 35. Those of BENJAMIN, 35,400, ver. 36, 37. Those of DAN, 62,700 ver. 38, 39. Those of ASHER, 41,500, ver. 40, 41. Those of NAPHTALI, 53,400, ver. 42, 43. The amount of all the effective men in Israel, from twenty years old and upwards, was 603,550, ver. 44-46. The LEVITES are not numbered with the tribes, because they were dedicated to the service of God. Their particular work is specified, 47-54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses <sup>a</sup>in the wilderness of Sinai, <sup>b</sup>in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their poll.

3 From <sup>c</sup>twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their <sup>d</sup>armies.

4 And with you there shall be a man of every tribe; every one head of the house of his fathers.

5 And these are the names of the men that shall stand with you: of the tribe of Reuben; Elizur the son of Shedeur.

6 Of Simeon; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

7 Of Judah; Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

8 Of Issachar; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.

9 Of Zebulun; Eliab the son of Helon.

10 Of the children of Joseph: of Ephraim; Elishama the son of Ammihud: of Manasseh; Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

11 Of Benjamin; Abidan the son of Gideoni.

12 Of Dan; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

13 Of Asher; Pagiel the son of Ocran.

Verse 1. The Lord spake unto Moses—on the first day of the second month] As the tabernacle was erected upon the first day of the first month, in the second year after their coming out of Egypt, Exod. xl. 17; and this muster of the people was made on the first day of the second month, in the same year; it is evident that the transactions related in the preceding book must all have taken place in the space of one month, and during the time the Israelites were encamped at Mount Sinai, before they had begun their journey to the promised land.

Verse 2. Take ye the sum, &c.] 1. That they might see he had not forgotten his promise to Abraham, but was multiplying his posterity. 2. That they might observe due order in their march towards the promised land. 3. That the tribes and families might be properly distinguished; that all litigations concerning property, inheritance, &c., might, in all future times, be prevented. 4. That the promise concerning the Messiah might be known to have its due accomplishment when in the fulness of time God should send him from the seed of Abraham through the house of David. And 5. That they might know their strength for war; for although they should ever consider God as their protector and defence, yet it was necessary that they should be assured of their own fitness, naturally speaking, to cope with any ordinary enemy, or to surmount any common difficulties.

Verse 3. From twenty years old and upward] In this census no women were reckoned, nor children nor strangers, nor the Levites, nor old men, which, collectively, must have formed an immense multitude; the Levites alone amounted to 22,300. True-born Israelites only are reckoned; such as were able to carry arms, and were expert for war.

Verse 14. Eliasaph, the son of Deuel] This person is called Reuel, chap. ii. 14.

An ancient Jewish rabbin pretends to solve every difficulty

15 Of Naphtali; Ahira the son of Enan.

16 *These were the renowned of the congregation, princes of the tribes of their fathers, <sup>b</sup> heads of thousands in Israel.

17 And Moses and Aaron took these men which are expressed by their names :

18 And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.

19 As the Lord commanded Moses, so he numbered them in the wilderness of Sinai.

20 And the children of Reuben, Israel's eldest son, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of their names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

21 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of * Reuben, were forty and six thousand and five hundred.

22 Of the children of <sup>a</sup> Simeon, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, those that were numbered of them, according to the number of the names, by their polls, every male from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

23 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Simeon, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

24 Of the children of * Gad, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

25 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Gad, were forty and five thousand six hundred and fifty.

26 Of the children of * Judah, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

27 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Judah, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

28 Of the children of * Issachar, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

29 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Issachar, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

30 Of the children of <sup>b</sup> Zebulun, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

31 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Zebulun, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

32 Of the children of <sup>c</sup> Joseph, namely, of the children of <sup>d</sup> Ephraim, by their generations, after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, all that were able to go forth to war ;

33 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Ephraim, were forty thousand and five hundred.

43 Those that were numbered of them, even of the tribe of Naphtali, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

44 * These are those that were numbered, which Moses and Aaron numbered, and the princes of Israel, being twelve men : each one was for the house of his fathers.

by saying that "Eliasaph was a proselyte; that before he embraced the true faith he was called the son of Reuel, but that after his conversion he was called the son of Deuel." As Reuel may be translated the breach of God, and Deuel the knowledge of God, I suppose the rabbin grounded his supposition on the different meanings of the two words.

his infinite wisdom embraces all occurrences, and it is his province alone to determine what is right, and to predict what himself has purposed to accomplish.

Verse 46. All they that were numbered were six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty. What an astonishing increase from seventy souls that went down into Egypt, Gen. xvi. 27, about 215 years before, where latterly they had endured the greatest hardships! But God's promise cannot fail, (Gen. xvi. 5); and who can resist his will, and bring to nought his counsel? That a comparative view may be easily taken of the state of the tribes, I shall produce them here from the first census mentioned in the first chapter of this book, in their decreasing proportion, beginning with the greatest and proceeding to the least; and in the second census, mentioned chap. xxvi., where the increase of some and the decrease of others may be seen in one point of view. It may be just remarked, that except in the case of Gad in this chapter, and Reuben in chap. xxvi., all the numbers are what may be called whole or round numbers, beginning with thousands, and ending with hundreds, Gad and Reuben alone ending with tens; but the scripture generally uses round numbers, units and fractions being almost constantly disregarded.

12. Manasseh . . .	32,200	52,700

Total 603,550 Total 601,730

Thus we find Judah the most populous tribe, and Manasseh the least so; the difference between them being so great as 42,400, for which no very satisfactory reason can be assigned.

In the second census, mentioned chap. xxvi. 34, Judah still has the pre-eminency; and Simeon, the third in number before, is become the least. Now we see also that the little tribe of Manasseh occupies the seventh place for number. Seven of the tribes had an increase; five a decrease. Manasseh had an increase of 20,500; Judah, 1,900; Issachur, 9,900; Zebulun, 3,100; Benjamin, 10,200; Dan, 1,700; Asher, 11,900.

On the contrary there was a decrease in Reuben of 2,770; in Simeon, 37,100; Gad, 5,150; Ephraim, 8,000; Naphtali, 8,000. Decrease in the whole, 61,020 effective men. See on chap. xxvi.; but balanced with the increase, the decrease was upon the whole only 1,820.

But the Levites are not included, 33. The people do as the Lord commands, 34.*

4 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and fourteen thousand and six hundred.

5 And those that do pitch next unto him shall be the tribe of Issachar: and Nethaneel the son of Zuar shall be captain of the children of Issachar.

6 And his host, and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and four thousand and four hundred.

7 Then the tribe of Zebulun: and Eliab the son of Helon shall be captain of the children of Zebulun.

8 And his host and those that were numbered thereof, were fifty and seven thousand and four hundred.

9 All that were numbered in the camp of Judah were an hundred thousand and fourscore thousand and six thousand and four hundred, throughout their armies. <sup>b</sup> These shall first set forth.

10 On the south side shall be the standard of the camp of Reuben according to their armies; and the captain of the children of Reuben shall be Elizur the son of Shedeur.

13 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and nine thousand and three hundred.

14 Then the tribe of Gad: and the captain of the sons of Gad shall be Eliasaph the son of <sup>c</sup> Reuel.

15 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty and five thousand and six hundred and fifty.

16 All that were numbered in the camp of Reuben were an hundred thousand and fifty and one thousand and four hundred and fifty, throughout their armies. <sup>d</sup> And they shall set forth in the second rank.

17 <sup>e</sup> Then the tabernacle of the congregation shall set forward with the camp of the Levites in the midst of the camp: as they encamp, so shall they set forward, every man in his place by their standards. <sup>f</sup>

18 On the west side shall be the standard of the camp of Ephraim, according to their armies: and the captain of the sons of Ephraim shall be Elishama the son of Ammihud.

19 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were forty thousand and five hundred.

20 And by him shall be the tribe of Manasseh: and the captain of the children of Manasseh shall be Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

21 And his host and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and two thousand and two hundred.

22 Then the tribe of Benjamin: and the captain of the sons of Benjamin shall be Abidan the son of Gideon.

23 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were thirty and five thousand and four hundred.

24 All that were numbered of the camp of Ephraim were an hundred thousand and eight thousand and an hundred, throughout their armies. <sup>g</sup> And they shall go forward in the third rank.

25 The standard of the camp of Dan shall be on the north side by their armies: and the captain of the children of Dan shall be Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were threescore and two thousand and seven hundred.

27 And those that encamp by him shall be the tribe of Asher: and the captain of the children of Asher shall be Pagiel the son of Ocran.

28 And his host and those that were numbered of them, were forty and one thousand and five hundred.

29 Then the tribe of Naphtali: and the captain of the children of Naphtali shall be Ahira the son of Enan.

30 And his host, and those that were numbered of them, were fifty and three thousand and four hundred.

31 All they that were numbered in the camp of Dan were an hundred thousand and fifty and seven thousand and six hundred. <sup>h</sup> They shall go hindmost with their standards.

32 These are those which were numbered of the children of Israel by the house of their fathers: <sup>i</sup> all those that were numbered of the camps throughout their hosts were six hundred thousand and three thousand and five hundred and fifty.

33 But <sup>j</sup> the Levites were not numbered among the children of Israel; as the Lord commanded Moses.

34 And the children of Israel did according to all that the Lord commanded Moses: <sup>k</sup> so they pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers.

CHAPTER III.

The generations of Aaron and Moses, 1-4. The tribe of Levi to minister to the Lord under Aaron and his sons, 5-10. They are taken in place of the first-born, 11-13. Moses is commanded to number them, 14-16. Gershon, Kohath, and Merari, the names of the three heads of families of the Levites, 17. Of Gershon and his family, 18-21. Their number 7,500, ver. 22. Their place, behind the tabernacle, westward, 23. Their chief, Eliasaph, 24. Their charge, 25, 26. Of Kohath and his family, 27. Their number 8,600, ver. 28. Their place, beside the tabernacle, southward, 29. Their chief Elizaphan, 30. Their charge, 31. The chief of the Levites, Eleazar, son of Aaron, 32. Of Merari and his family, 33. Their number, 6,200, ver. 34. Their chief Zuriel, they shall pitch beside the tabernacle, northward, 35. Their charge, 36, 37. MOSES and AARON to encamp before the tabernacle, eastward, 38. The amount of all the males among the Levites from a month old and upwards, 22,000, ver. 39. Moses is commanded to number the first-born, 40; and to take the Levites and their cattle, instead of the first-born of man and beast among the Israelites, 41. Moses numbers the first-born, who amount to 22,273, ver. 42, 43. As the first-born were 273 more than the Levites, Moses is commanded to take from the people five shekels apiece for them, 44-47, which is to be given to Aaron and his sons, 48. Moses does accordingly, and finds the amount of the money to be 1,365 shekels, 49, 50, which is given to Aaron and to his sons, 51.

THESE also are the generations of Aaron and Moses in the day that the LORD spake with Moses in Mount Sinai.

2 And these are the names of the sons of Aaron: Nadab the first-born, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

3 These are the names of the sons of Aaron, the priests which were anointed, whom he consecrated to minister in the priest's office.

4 And Nadab and Abihu died before the LORD, when they offered strange fire before the LORD, in the wilderness of Sinai, and they had no children: and Eleazar and Ithamar ministered in the priest's office, in the sight of Aaron their father.

5 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Bring the tribe of Levi near, and present them before Aaron the priest, that they may minister unto him.

7 And they shall keep his charge, and the charge of the whole congregation before the tabernacle of the congregation, to do the service of the tabernacle.

8 And they shall keep all the instruments of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the children of Israel, to do the service of the tabernacle.

9 And thou shalt give the Levites unto Aaron and to his sons: they are wholly given unto him out of the children of Israel.

10 And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they shall wait on their priest's office: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

11 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 And I, behold, I have taken the Levites from among the children of Israel instead of all the first-born that openeth the matrix among the children of Israel: therefore the Levites shall be mine:

13 Because all the first-born are mine: for on the day that I smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt, I hallowed unto me all the first-born in Israel, both man and beast: mine shall they be: I am the LORD.

14 And the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, saying, 15 Number the children of Levi after the house of their fathers, by their families: every male, from a month old and upward, shalt thou number them.

Verse 1. The generations of Aaron and Moses] Though Aaron and Moses are both mentioned here, yet the family of Aaron alone appears in the list; hence some have thought that the word Moses was not originally in the text. Others think that the words veelleh toledoth, these are the generations, should be rendered these are the acts, or transactions, or the history of the lives, as the same phrase may be understood in Gen. ii. 4, vi. 9. However this may be, it is evident that in this genealogy the family of Aaron are alone mentioned, probably because these belonged to the priesthood. Moses passes by his own family, or immediate descendants: he gave no rank or privilege to them during his life, and left nothing to them at his death. What a strong proof is this of the celestial origin of his religion! Had it been of man, it must have had the gratification of some impure passion for its object; lust, ambition, or avarice: but none of these ever appear during the whole of his administration amongst the Israelites, though he had it constantly in his power to have gratified each. What an essential difference between the religion of the Pentateuch and that of the Koran! The former is God's workmanship; the latter is a motley mixture of all bad crafts, with here and there a portion of heavenly fire, stolen from the divine altar in the Old and New Testaments, to give some vitality to the otherwise inert mass.

Verse 6. Bring the tribe of Levi near] The original word hakreb is properly a sacrificial word, and signifies the presenting of a sacrifice or offering to the Lord. As an offering, the tribe of Levi was given up entirely to the service of the sanctuary, to be no longer their own, but the Lord's property.

Verse 7. The charge of the whole congregation] They shall work for the whole congregation; and instead of the first-born.

Verse 8. All the instruments] The tabernacle itself and all its contents: see all described, ver. 25, 26, 31, 36, 37. The Levites were to perform the most common and laborious offices. It was their business to take down, put up, and carry the tabernacle and its utensils; for it was the object of their peculiar care. In a word, they were the servants of the priests.

Verse 10. Aaron and his sons—shall wait on their priest's office] It was the business of the priests to offer the different sacrifices to God; to consecrate the shew-bread, pour out the libation, burn the incense, sprinkle the blood of the victims, and bless the people. In a word, they were the servants of God alone.

Verse 12. I have taken the Levites—instead of all the first-born] The first-born were dedicated to God in commemoration of his slaying the first-born of the Egyptians, and preserving those of the Israelites. Even the cattle of the Levites were taken in place of the first-born of the cattle of the rest of the tribes.

Several reasons have been assigned why God should give this honour to the tribe of Levi in preference to all the others, but they do not seem to me to be conclusive. Their zeal in destroying those who had corrupted the worship of God in the business of the golden calf, Exod. xxxii. 28, has been thought a sufficient reason. A better reason is, that this was the smallest tribe, and they were quite enough for the service. To have had a more numerous tribe at this time would have been very inconvenient.

Verse 15. A month old and upward] The males of all the other tribes were numbered from twenty years and upwards; had the Levites been numbered in this way, they would not have been nearly equal in number to the first-born of the twelve tribes. Add to this, that as there must have been first-born of all ages in the other tribes, it was necessary that the Levites, who were to be their substitutes, should be also of all ages; and it appears to have been on this ground, at least partly, that the Levites were numbered from four weeks old and upwards.

16 And Moses numbered them according to the word of the LORD, as he was commanded.

17 <sup>b</sup> And these were the sons of Levi by their names; Gershon, and Kohath, and Merari.

18 And these are the names of the sons of Gershon by their families; <sup>c</sup> Libni, and Shimei.

19 And the sons of Kohath by their families; <sup>d</sup> Amram, and Izchar, Hebron, and Uzziel.

20 <sup>e</sup> And the sons of Merari by their families; Mahli, and Mushi. These are the families of the Levites, according to the house of their fathers.

21 Of Gershon was the family of the Libnites, and the family of the Shimites: these are the families of the Gershonites.

22 Those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, even those that were numbered of them were seven thousand and five hundred.

23 <sup>f</sup> The families of the Gershonites shall pitch behind the tabernacle westward.

24 And the chief of the house of the father of the Gershonites shall be Eliasaph the son of Lael.

26 And <sup>l</sup> the hangings of the court, and <sup>m</sup> the curtain for the door of the court, which is by the tabernacle, and by the altar round about, and <sup>n</sup> the cords of it for all the service thereof.

27 <sup>o</sup> And of Kohath was the family of the Amramites, and the family of the Izehorites, and the family of the Hebronites, and the family of the Uzzielites: these are the families of the Kohathites.

28 In the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were eight thousand and six hundred, keeping the charge of the sanctuary.

29 <sup>p</sup> The families of the sons of Kohath shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle southward.

30 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of the Kohathites shall be Elizaphan the son of Uzziel.

ter, and <sup>v</sup> the hanging, and all the service thereof.

32 And Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest shall be chief over the chief of the Levites, and have the oversight of them that keep the charge of the sanctuary.

33 Of Merari was the family of the Mahalites, and the family of the Mushites: these are the families of Merari.

34 And those that were numbered of them, according to the number of all the males, from a month old and upward, were six thousand and two hundred.

35 And the chief of the house of the father of the families of Merari, was Zuriel the son of Abihail: <sup>w</sup> these shall pitch on the side of the tabernacle northward.

36 And <sup>x</sup> under <sup>y</sup> the custody and charge of the sons of Merari shall be the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and the sockets thereof, and all the vessels thereof, and all that serveth thereto, 37 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords.

38 <sup>z</sup> But those that encamp before the tabernacle toward the east, even before the tabernacle of the congregation eastward, shall be Moses, and Aaron and his sons, <sup>aa</sup> keeping the charge of the sanctuary <sup>bb</sup> for the charge of the children of Israel; and <sup>cc</sup> the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

39 <sup>dd</sup> All that were numbered of the Levites, which Moses and Aaron numbered at the commandment of the LORD, throughout their families, all the males from a month old and upward, were twenty and two thousand.

40 And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>ee</sup> Number all the first-born of the males of the children of Israel, from a month old and upward, and take the number of their names.

41 <sup>ff</sup> And thou shalt take the Levites for me (I am the LORD) instead of all the first-born among the children of Israel; and the cattle of the Levites instead of all the firstlings among the cattle of the children of Israel.

42 And Moses numbered, as the LORD commanded him, all the first-born among the children of Israel.

Verse 16. Moses numbered them] Though Moses and Aaron conjointly numbered the twelve tribes, yet Moses alone numbered the Levites; "for as the money with which the first-born of Israel who exceeded the number of Levites, were redeemed, was to be paid to Aaron and his sons, ver. 48, it was decent that he, whose advantage it was that the number of the first-born of Israel should exceed, should not be authorized to take that number himself."

Verse 22. Seven thousand and five hundred.] Perhaps originally resh, 200, instead of caph, 500; see the following note.

Verse 39. Which Moses and Aaron numbered] The word veaharon, "and Aaron," has a point over each of its letters, probably designed as a mark of spuriousness. The word is wanting in the Samaritan, Syriac, and Coptic; it is wanting also in eight of Dr. Kennicott's MSS., and in four of De Rossi's. Moses alone, as Houbigant observes, is commanded to take the number of the Levites; see ver. 5, 11, 40, 44, and 51. [But if we compare chap. iv. 1, 34, 37, 41, 45, and 46, we must conclude that Aaron took part in the mustering of the whole of the Levites.]

All the males—were twenty and two thousand.] This total does not agree with the particulars: for the Gershonites were 7,500, the Kohathites 8,600, the Merarites 6,200, total 22,300. Several methods of solving this difficulty have been proposed by learned men; Dr. Kennicott's is the most simple. Formerly the numbers in the Hebrew Bible were expressed by letters, and not by words at full length; and if two nearly similar letters were mistaken for each other, many errors in the numbers must be the consequence. Now it is probable that an error has crept into the number of the Gershonites, ver. 22, where, instead of 7500, we should read 7200, as caph, 500, might have been easily mistaken for resh, 200, especially if the down stroke of the caph had been a little shorter than ordinary, which is often the case in MSS.

Verse 43. All the first-born males—were twenty and two thousand two hundred and three score and thirteen.] Thus we find there were 278 first-born, beyond the number of the Levites. These are ordered, ver. 46, to be redeemed; and the redemption price is to be five shekels each, ver. 47, about 15s. And this money, amounting to 1365 shekels, equal to £204 15s. English, he took of the first-born of Israel, ver. 50.

names, from a month old and upward, of those that were numbered of them, were twenty and two thousand two hundred and threescore and thirteen.

44 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

45 * Take the Levites instead of all the first-born among the children of Israel, and the cattle of the Levites instead of their cattle; and the Levites shall be mine: I am the LORD.

46 And for those that are to be <sup>b</sup> redeemed of the two hundred and threescore and thirteen of the first-born of the children of Israel, <sup>c</sup> which are more than the Levites :

This species of redeeming men is referred to by St. Peter, 1 Epist. i. 18, 19: "Ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious (valuable) blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot," &c. And it is not the first-born only which are thus redeemed, for he, by the grace of God, tasted death for EVERY man; Heb. ii. 9.

48 And thou shalt give the money, wherewith the odd number of them is to be redeemed, unto Aaron and to his sons.

49 And Moses took the redemption money of them that were over and above them that were redeemed by the Levites :

50 Of the first-born of the children of Israel took he the money; <sup>a</sup> a thousand three hundred and threescore and five shekels after the shekel of the sanctuary :

51 And Moses <sup>a</sup> gave the money of them that were redeemed unto Aaron and to his sons, according to the word of the LORD, as the LORD commanded Moses.

Reader, give glory to God that such a ransom has been paid for thy soul, and see that, redeemed from thy vain conversation, thy empty, fruitless, and graceless observances, on which thou has built thy hopes of salvation, thou walk in newness of life, giving thy whole soul with thankfulness unto the Father who hath translated thee from darkness, and placed thee in the kingdom of his beloved Son. To Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever! Amen.

CHAPTER IV.

Moses is commanded to take the sum of the sons of Kohath from thirty years old and upward, 1-4. The service which they had to perform, 5-15. The office of Eleazar, 16. The family of Kohath to be continued among the Levites, 17-19. They are not to go into the holy of holies, 20. The sum of the sons of Gershon, 21-23. The service they had to perform, 24-27. They are to be under Ithamar, 28. The sum of the sons of Merari, 29, 30. The service they had to perform, 31-33. The sum of all the families of Kohath, 2,750, ver. 34-37. The sum of the families of Gershon, 2,630, ver. 38-41. The sum of the families of Merari, 3,200, ver. 42-45. The sum total of the families of Gershon, Kohath, and Merari, 8,580, ver. 46-49.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 Take the sum of the sons of Kohath from among the sons of Levi, after their families, by the house of their fathers,

3 * From thirty years old and upward even until fifty years old, all that enter into the host, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 And upon the <sup>g</sup> table of shew-bread they shall spread a cloth of blue, and put thereon the dishes, and the spoons, and the bowls, and covers to <sup>h</sup> cover withal : and the continual bread shall be thereon :

8 And they shall spread upon them a cloth of scarlet, and cover the same with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put in the staves thereof.

9 And they shall take a cloth of blue, and cover

Verse 3. From thirty years old] In chap. viii. 24 the Levites are ordered to enter on the service of the tabernacle at the age of twenty-five years; and in 1 Chron. xxiii. 24 they were ordered to commence that work at twenty years of age. How can these different times be reconciled? 1. At the time of which Moses speaks here, the Levitical service was exceedingly severe, and consequently required men full grown, strong, and stout, to perform it; the age therefore of thirty years was appointed as the period for commencing this service, the weightier part of which is probably here intended. 2. In chap. viii. 14, Moses seems to speak of the service in a general way; the severe work, which was to be performed by the full-grown Levites, and the less laborious work which younger men might assist in; hence the age of twenty-five is fixed. 3. In David's time and afterwards, in the fixed tabernacle and temple, the laboriousness of the service no longer existed, and hence twenty years was the age fixed on for all Levites to enter into the work of the sanctuary. The rabbins say that the Levites began to learn to do the service at twenty-five, and that having been instructed five years, they began the public service at thirty, and thus they reconcile the two periods referred to above. We may well suppose that the sons of the prophets continued a considerable time under instructions before they were called fully to exercise themselves in the prophetic office.

Until fifty years old] This was allowing twenty years for public severe service: a very considerate and merciful ordinance. A preacher who devotes his whole time and strength to the service of the church of God from twenty till fifty or sixty years of age, should be then excused from his severer labour, and maintained at the charge of the sanctuary.

the candlestick of the light, and his lamps, and his tongs, and his snuffdishes, and all the oil vessels thereof, wherewith they minister unto it :

10 And they shall put it and all the vessels thereof, within a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put it upon a bar.

11 And upon the golden altar they shall spread a cloth of blue, and cover it with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put to the staves thereof.

12 And they shall take all the instruments of ministry, wherewith they minister in the sanctuary, and put them in a cloth of blue, and cover them with a covering of badgers' skins, and shall put them on a bar :

13 And they shall take away the ashes from the altar, and spread a purple cloth thereon :

14 And they shall put upon it all the vessels thereof, wherewith they minister about it, even the censers, the fleshhooks, and the shovels, and the basons, all the vessels of the altar ; and they shall spread upon it a covering of badgers' skins, and put to the staves of it.

15 And when Aaron and his sons have made an end of covering the sanctuary, and all the vessels of the sanctuary, as the camp is to set forward ; after that, the sons of Kohath shall come to bear it : but they shall not touch any holy thing, lest they die. These things are the burden of the sons of Kohath in the tabernacle of the congregation.

16 And to the office of Elcazar the son of Aaron the priest, pertaineth the oil for the light, and the sweet incense, and the daily meat-offering, and the anointing oil, and the oversight of all the tabernacle, and of all that therein is, in the sanctuary, and in the vessels thereof.

17 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

18 Cut ye not off the tribe of the families of the Kohathites from among the Levites :

19 But thus do unto them, that they may live, and not die, when they approach unto the most holy things : Aaron and his sons shall go in, and appoint them every one to his service and to his burden ;

20 But they shall not go in to see when the holy things are covered, lest they die,

21 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

22 Take also the sum of the sons of Gershon, throughout the houses of their fathers, by their families ;

23 From thirty years old and upward until fifty years old shalt thou number them ; all that enter in to perform service, to do the work in the tabernacle of the congregation.

24 This is the service of the families of the Gershonites, to serve, and for burdens :

25 And they shall bear the curtains of the tabernacle, and the tabernacle of the congregation, his covering, and the covering of the badgers' skins that is above upon it, and the hanging for the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

26 And the hangings of the court, and the hanging for the door of the gate of the court, which is by the tabernacle and by the altar round about, and their cords, and all the instruments of their service, and all that is made for them : so shall they serve.

27 At the appointment of Aaron and his sons shall be all the service of the sons of the Gershonites, in all their burdens, and in all their service : and ye shall appoint unto them in charge all their burdens.

28 This is the service of the families of the sons of Gershon in the tabernacle of the congregation : and their charge shall be under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

29 As for the sons of Merari, thou shalt number them after their families, by the house of their fathers :

30 From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old shalt thou number them, every one that entereth into the service, to do the work of the tabernacle of the congregation.

31 And this is the charge of their burden, according to all their service in the tabernacle of the congregation ; the boards of the tabernacle, and the bars thereof, and the pillars thereof, and sockets thereof,

32 And the pillars of the court round about, and their sockets, and their pins, and their cords, with all their instruments, and with all their service : and by name ye shall reckon the instruments of the charge of their burden.

33 This is the service of the families of the sons of Merari, according to all their service, in the tabernacle of the congregation, under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

34 And Moses and Aaron and the chief of the congregation numbered the sons of the Kohathites after their families, and after the house of their fathers.

35 From thirty years old and upward, even unto fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation :

Verse 20. When the holy things are covered] Literally, keballa, when they are swallowed down ; which shows the promptitude with which every thing belonging to the holy of holies was put out of sight, for these mysteries must ever be treated with the deepest reverence ; and indeed without this they could not have been to them the representatives of heavenly realities. [The original expression may be proverbial, meaning "in an instant." The Septuagint convey this sense.]

Verse 36. Those that were numbered] In chap. iii. 27, &c., we have an account of the whole number of the Levites, and here of those only who were able to serve the Lord in the sanctuary. By comparing the two places we find the numbers to stand thus :

KOHATHITES	{ Able men	2750
	{ Unable	5850
	Total	8600
GERSHONITES	{ Able men	2630
	{ Unable	4870
	Total	7500
MERARITES	{ Able men	3200
	{ Unable	8000
	Total	6200

their families were two thousand seven hundred and fifty.

37 These were they that were numbered of the families of the Kohathites, all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, which Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

38 And those that were numbered of the sons of Gershon throughout their families, and by the house of their fathers,

39 From thirty years old and upward even until fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation,

40 Even those that were numbered of them, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers, were two thousand and six hundred and thirty.

41 *These are they that were numbered of the families of the sons of Gershon, of all that might do service in the tabernacle of the congregation, whom Moses and Aaron did number according to the commandment of the Lord.

42 And those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, throughout their families, by the house of their fathers,

Thus we find that the whole number of the Levites amounted to 22,300, of whom 8,580 were fit for service, and 13,720 unfit, being either too old or too young. What an astonishing number of men, all properly ecclesiastics; all performing some service by which God was glorified, and the congregation at large benefited!

From this and the preceding chapter we see the very severe labour which the Levites were obliged to perform while the journeyings of the Israelites lasted. When we consider that almost ten tons and fourteen hundred pounds' weight of metal were employed in the tabernacle, besides the immense weight of the skins, hangings, cords, boards, and posts, we shall find it was no very easy matter to transport this moveable temple from place to place.

The Gershonites, who were 7,500 men in the service, had

43 From thirty years old and upward even until fifty years old, every one that entereth into the service, for the work in the tabernacle of the congregation,

44 Even those that were numbered of them after their families, were three thousand and two hundred.

45 These be those that were numbered of the families of the sons of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron numbered <sup>b</sup> according to the word of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

46 All those that were numbered of the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron and the chief of Israel numbered, after their families, and after the house of their fathers,

47 <sup>c</sup> From thirty years old and upward even unto fifty years old, every one that came to do the service of the ministry, and the service of the burden in the tabernacle of the congregation,

48 Even those that were numbered of them, were eight thousand and five hundred and fourscore.

49 According to the commandment of the Lord they were numbered by the hand of Moses, <sup>d</sup> every one according to his service, and according to his burden: thus were they numbered of him, <sup>e</sup> as the Lord commanded Moses.

The Kohathites, who were 8,600 men, had to carry the ark, table, candlestick, altars, and instruments of the sanctuary, chap. iii. 31.

The Merarites, who were 6,200 men, had to carry the boards, bars, pillars, sockets, and all matters connected with these belonging to the tabernacle, with the pillars of the court, their sockets, pins, and cords, chap. iii. 36, 37.

The tabernacle was an epitome of the temple: the temple and tabernacle were representatives of the church of the living God, and of the humanity of our blessed Lord. As God dwelt in the tabernacle and temple, so his fulness dwelt in the man Christ Jesus. These again were types of the Christian church, which is termed the body of Christ, Eph. i. 23, where he dwells in the plenitude of the graces of his Spirit.

CHAPTER V.

The Israelites are commanded to purify the camp by excluding all lepers, and all diseased and unclean persons, 1-3. They do so, 4. Law concerning him who has defrauded another—he shall confess his sin, restore the principal, and add besides one fifth of its value, 5-7. If he have no kinsman to whom the recompense can be made, it shall be given unto the Lord, 8. All the holy things offered to the Lord shall be the priest's portion, 9, 10. The law concerning jealousy, 11-14. The suspected woman's offering, 15. She is to be brought before the Lord, 16. The priest shall take holy water, and put it in dust from the floor of the tabernacle, 17. Shall put the offering in her hand, and adjure her, 18-20. The form of the oath, 21, 22; which is to be written on a book, blotted out in the bitter waters, and these the suspected person shall be obliged to drink, 23, 24. The jealousy-offering shall be waved before the Lord, 25, 26. The effect which shall be produced if the suspected person be guilty, 27. The effect if not guilty, 28. Recapitulation, with the purpose and design of the law, 29, 30.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

Put out of the camp every leper] It is evident that each camp had a space behind it, and on one side, whither the infected might be removed, and where probably convenient places were erected for the accommodation of the infected; for we cannot suppose that they were driven out into the naked wilderness. here was founded, 1. On a purely physical reason, viz., the diseases were contagious, and therefore there was a necessity of putting those afflicted by them apart, that the infection might not be communicated. 2. There was also a spiritual reason; the camp was the habitation of God, and nothing impure should be permitted to remain where he dwelt.

the camp shall ye put them; that they defile not their camps, *in the midst whereof I dwell.

4 And the children of Israel did so, and put them out without the camp: as the LORD spake unto Moses, so did the children of Israel.

5 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Speak unto the children of Israel, <sup>b</sup>When a man or woman shall commit any sin that men commit, to do a trespass against the LORD, and that person be guilty.

7 <sup>c</sup>Then they shall confess their sin which they have done: and he shall recompense his trespass <sup>d</sup>with the principal thereof, and add unto it the fifth <sup>e</sup>part thereof, and give it unto him against whom he hath trespassed.

8 But if the man have no kinsman to recompense the trespass unto, let the trespass be recompensed unto the LORD, <sup>e</sup>even to the priest; beside <sup>e</sup>the ram of the atonement, whereby an atonement shall be made for him.

9 And every <sup>f</sup>offering <sup>g</sup>of all the holy things of the children of Israel, which they bring unto the priest, shall be his,

10 And every man's hallowed things shall be his; whatsoever any man giveth the priest, it shall be <sup>h</sup>his.

11 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

12 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man's wife go aside, and commit a trespass against him,

13 And a man <sup>i</sup>lie with her carnally, and it be hid from the eyes of her husband, and be kept close, and she be defiled, and <sup>j</sup>there be no witness against her, neither she be taken <sup>j</sup>with the manner;

14 And the spirit of jealousy come upon him, and he be jealous of his wife, and she be defiled: or if

3. The camp was an emblem of the church, where nothing that is defiled should enter, and in which nothing that is unholy should be tolerated. All lepers—all persevering impenitent sinners, should be driven from the sacred pale, nor should any such ever be permitted to enter.

Verse 4. And the children of Israel—put them out] Though no mention be made of the situation, circumstances, &c., of these expelled persons, we may certainly infer that they were treated with that humanity which their distressed state required. Though sinners must be separated from the church of God, yet they should be treated with affectionate regard, because they may be reclaimed. It is too often the case when a man backslides from the way of truth, he is abandoned by all; finding his case desperate, he plunges yet deeper into the mire of sin, and the man who, with tender treatment, might have been reclaimed, becomes incurably hardened. One class says, he cannot finally fall, and shall in due time be restored; another class says, he may finally fall and utterly perish. If the unfortunate person be restored, his recovery is taken as a proof of the first doctrine; if he be not, his wretched end is considered a proof of the second. In the first case the person himself may presume on his restoration as a point infallibly determined in the divine counsel; or in the second, he may consider his case hopeless, and so abandon himself to profligacy and desperation. Who is he that properly estimates the worth of one immortal spirit? He who does will at once feel that, in a state of probation, any man may fall through sin, and any sinner may be renewed again unto repentance, through the infinitely meritorious sacrifice, and all powerfully efficacious grace, of Christ. This truth properly felt equally precludes both presumption and despair, and will induce the followers of God to be active in preserving those who have escaped from the corruption that is in the world, and make them diligent to recover those who have turned back to earth and sin.

15 Then shall the man bring his wife unto the priest, and he shall bring her offering for her, the tenth <sup>k</sup>part of an ephah of barley meal; he shall pour no oil upon it, nor put frankincense thereon; for it is an offering of jealousy, an offering of memorial, <sup>l</sup>bringing iniquity to remembrance.

16 And the priest shall bring her near, and set her before the LORD:

17 And the priest shall take holy water in an earthen vessel; and of the dust that is in the floor of the tabernacle the priest shall take, and put it into the water:

18 And the priest shall set the woman before the LORD, and uncover the woman's head, and put the offering of the memorial in her hands, which is the jealousy-offering: and the priest shall have in his hand the bitter water that causeth the curse:

19 And the priest shall charge her by an oath, and say unto the woman, If no man hath lain with thee, and if thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness <sup>m</sup>with another <sup>n</sup>instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse:

23 But if thou hast gone aside to another instead of thy husband, and if thou be defiled, and some man have lain with thee beside thine husband:

Neh. x. 29.—<sup>q</sup> Jer. xxix. 22.—<sup>r</sup> Heb. fall.—<sup>s</sup> Ps. cix. 18.—<sup>t</sup> Deut. xxvii. 15.

Verse 7. Shall confess their sin] Without confession or acknowledgment of sin, there was no hope of mercy held out.

He shall recompense] For without restitution, in every possible case, God will not forgive the iniquity of a man's sin. Now can any person in a case of defraud, with his neighbour's property in his possession, expect to receive mercy from the hand of a just and holy God?

Verse 8. If the man have no kinsman] The Jews think that this law respects the stranger and the sojourner only, because every Israelite is in a state of affinity to all the rest; but there might be a stranger in the camp who had no relative in any of the tribes of Israel.

Verse 14. The spirit of jealousy] Either a supernatural diabolic influence, exciting him to jealousy, or the passion or affection of jealousy, for so the words may be understood.

Verse 17. Holy water] Water out of the laver called holy, because consecrated to sacred uses. This is the most ancient case of the trial by ordeal.

In an earthen vessel] Supposed by the Jews to be such as had never been previously used.

Dust that is in the floor] Probably intended to point out the baseness of the crime of which she was accused.

Verse 18. Uncover the woman's head] To take off a woman's veil, and expose her to the sight of men, would be considered a very great degradation in the East. To this St. Paul appears to allude, 1 Cor. xi. 5, 6, 10.

Verse 21. The Lord make thee a curse and an oath] Let thy name and punishment be remembered and mentioned as an example and terror to all others.

Verse 22. Thy belly to swell, and thy thigh to rot] What is meant by these expressions cannot be easily ascertained. Lanpel yarech signifies literally thy thigh to fall; which according to the usage of the Hebrew language must mean something similar to the prolapsus uteri, or falling down of 23 And the priest shall write these curses in a book, and he shall blot them out with bitter water:

24 And he shall cause the woman to drink the bitter water that causeth the curse; and the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter.

25 Then the priest shall take the jealousy-offering out of the woman's hand, and shall * wave the offering before the LORD, and offer it upon the altar:

26 <sup>b</sup> And the priest shall take an handful of the offering, even the memorial thereof, and burn it upon the altar, and afterward cause the woman to drink the water.

27 And when he hath made her to drink the water, then it shall come to pass, that if she be defiled, and the womb, which might be a natural effect of the preternatural distention of the abdomen. [Some think the disease was ovarian dropsy.]

And the woman shall say, Amen, amen.] This is the first place where this word occurs in the common form of a concluding wish in prayer. The root aman signifies to be steady, true, permanent. And in prayer it signifies, let it be so—make it steady—let it be ratified. Some have supposed that it is composed of the initial letters of Adonai melech neeman, My Lord the faithful King, but this derivation is both far-fetched and unnecessary.

Verse 23. The priest shall write these curses—and he shall blot them out] It appears that the curses which were written down with a kind of ink prepared for the purpose, as some of the rabbins think, without any calx of iron or other material that could make a permanent dye, were washed off the parchment into the water which the woman was obliged to drink, so that she drank the very words of the execration. The ink used in the East is almost all of this kind—a wet sponge will completely efface the finest of their writings. The rabbins say that the trial by the waters of jealousy was omitted after the Babylonish captivity, because adulteries were so frequent amongst them that they were afraid of having the name of the Lord profaned by being so frequently appealed to!

Verse 24. The bitter water that causeth the curse] Though the rabbins think that the priest put some bitter substance in the water, yet, as nothing of the kind is intimated by Moses, we may consider the word as used here metaphorically for affliction, death, &c. These waters were afflicting and deadly to her who drank them, being guilty. In this have done trespass against her husband, that the water that causeth the curse shall enter into her, and become bitter, and her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot: and the woman * shall be a curse among her people.

28 And if the woman be not defiled, but be clean; then she shall be free, and shall conceive seed.

29 This is the law of jealousies, when a wife goeth aside to another <sup>d</sup> instead of her husband, and is defiled.

30 Or when the spirit of jealousy cometh upon him, and he be jealous over his wife, and shall set the woman before the LORD, and the priest shall execute upon her all this law.

31 Then shall the man be guiltless from iniquity, and this woman <sup>e</sup> shall bear her iniquity.

sense afflictions are said to be bitter, Isa. xxxviii. 17; so also is death, 1 Sam. xv. 32, Eccles. vii. 26.

Verse 29. This is the law of jealousies] And this is the most singular law in the whole Pentateuch: a law that seems to have been copied by almost all the nations of the earth, whether civilized or barbarian, as we find that similar modes of trial for suspected offences were used when complete evidence was wanting to convict; and where it was expected that the object of their worship would interfere for the sake of justice, in order that the guilty should be brought to punishment, and the innocent be cleared.

Verse 31. This woman shall bear her iniquity] That is, her belly shall swell, and her thigh shall rot; see on ver. 22. But if not guilty after such a trial, she had great honour; and, according to the rabbins, became strong, healthy, and fruitful; for if she was before barren, she now began to bear children; if before she had only daughters, she now began to have sons; if before she had hard travail, she now had easy; in a word, she was blessed in her body, her soul, and her substance: so shall it be done unto the holy and faithful woman, for such the Lord delighteth to honour; see 1 Tim. ii. 15.

There is no instance in the scriptures of this kind of ordeal having ever been resorted to; and probably it never was during the purer times of the Hebrew republic. God had rendered himself so terrible by his judgments, that no person would dare to appeal to this mode of trial who was conscious of her guilt; and in case of simple adultery, where the matter was either detected or confessed, the parties were ordered by the law to be put to death.

The vow of the Nazarite, 1-2. In what it consisted, 3-8. When accidentally defiled, how he is to be purified, 9-12. The sacrifices he is to bring, and the rites he is to perform, when the vow of his separation is fulfilled, 13-21. The manner in which the priests are to bless the people, 22-26. The name of the LORD is to be put on the children of Israel, whom He promises to bless, 27.

Verse 2. When either man or woman shall separate, &c.] The word nazir, from nazar, to separate, signifies merely a separated person, i.e., one peculiarly devoted to the service of God by being separated from all servile employments. From the Nazarites sprang the Rechabites, from the Rechabites the Essenes, from the Essenes the Anchorites or Hermits, and in imitation of those, the different monastic orders.

Acts xxi. 23. Rom. i. 1.—<sup>c</sup> Amos ii. 12. Luke i. 15.

Some contend strongly that the Nazarite was a type of our Lord; but neither analogy nor proof can be produced. Our blessed Lord both drank wine and touched the dead, which no Nazarite would do: as to his either shaving his hair or letting it grow, we know nothing. His being called a Nazarene, Mat. ii. 23, is nothing to the purpose, as it can mean no more than either that he was an inhabitant of Nazareth, which was a drink; and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried.

4 All the days of his <sup>a</sup>separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the <sup>b</sup>vine-tree, from the kernels even to the husk.

5 All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no <sup>c</sup>razor come upon his head; until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow.

6 All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD, <sup>d</sup>he shall come at no dead body.

7 <sup>e</sup>He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die; because the <sup>f</sup>consecration of his God <sup>g</sup>is upon his head.

8 All the days of his separation he <sup>h</sup>is holy unto the LORD.

9 And if any man die very suddenly by him, and he hath defiled the head of his consecration; then he shall <sup>i</sup>shave his head in the day of his cleansing, on the seventh day shall he shave it.

10 And <sup>j</sup>on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation:

11 And the priest shall offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, and make an atonement for him, for that he sinned by the dead, and shall hallow his head that same day.

12 And he shall consecrate unto the LORD the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year <sup>k</sup>for a trespass-offering: but the days that were before shall <sup>l</sup>be lost, because his separation was defiled.

13 And this <sup>m</sup>is the law of the Nazarite, <sup>n</sup>when the days of his separation are fulfilled: he shall be brought unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation;

14 And he shall offer his offering unto the LORD, one he-lamb of the first year without blemish for a burnt-offering, and one ewe-lamb of the first year without blemish <sup>o</sup>for a sin-offering, and one ram without blemish <sup>p</sup>for peace-offerings;

15 And a basket of unleavened bread, <sup>q</sup>cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread <sup>r</sup>anointed with oil, and their meat-offering and their <sup>s</sup>drink-offerings.

16 And the priest shall bring them before the LORD, and shall offer his sin-offering, and his burnt-offering:

17 And he shall offer the ram <sup>t</sup>for a sacrifice of peace-offerings unto the LORD, with the basket of unleavened bread: the priest shall offer also his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

18 <sup>u</sup>And the Nazarite shall shave the head of his separation at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and shall take the hair of the head of his separation, and put it in the fire which <sup>v</sup>is under the sacrifice of the peace-offerings.

19 And the priest shall take the <sup>w</sup>sodden shoulder of the ram, and one unleavened cake out of the basket, and one unleavened wafer, and <sup>x</sup>shall put them upon the hands of the Nazarite, after the <sup>y</sup>hair of his separation is shaven:

20 And the priest shall wave them for a wave-offering before the LORD: <sup>z</sup>this <sup>aa</sup>is holy for the priest, with the wave-breast and heave-shoulder: and after that the Nazarite may drink wine.

21 This <sup>ab</sup>is the law of the Nazarite who hath vowed, and of his offering unto the LORD for his separation, beside <sup>ac</sup>that that his hand shall get: according to the vow which he vowed, so he must do after the law of his separation.

22 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

23 Speak unto Aaron and unto his sons, saying, On this wise <sup>ad</sup>ye shall bless the children of Israel, saying unto them,

24 The LORD bless thee, and <sup>ae</sup>keep thee:

25 The LORD <sup>af</sup>make his face shine upon thee, and <sup>ag</sup>be gracious unto thee:

place of no credit, and therefore used as a term of reproach; or that he was in a general sense consecrated to the service of God—so were Samson, Samuel, Jeremiah, and John Baptist; or rather, that he was the netser or BRANCH, Isa. xi. 1, and tsemach, Zech. iii. 8, vi. 12, which is quite a different word: but this title is expressly applied to our blessed Lord by the above prophets; but in no place do they or any other prophets call him a Nazarite, in the sense in which nazir is used. Indeed, it could not in truth be applied to him, as the distinguishing marks of a Nazarite never belonged to him. He was, it is true, the netser or branch out of the root of Jesse, the genuine heir to the throne of David, whose dominion should extend over the universe, who should be King of kings and Lord of lords; but the word used Mat. ii. 23, signifies merely a Nazorean, or inhabitant of Nazareth.

Verse 8. No vinegar of wine, &c.] Chomets signifies fermented wine, and is probably used here to signify wine of a strong body, or any highly intoxicating liquor.

Verse 5. There shall no razor come upon his head] The vow of the Nazarite consisted in the following particulars: 1. He consecrated himself in a very especial and extraordinary manner to God. 2. This was to continue for a certain season, probably never less than a whole year, that he might have a full growth of hair to burn in the fire which is under the sacrifice of the peace-offering, ver. 18. 3. During the time of his separation, or Nazarate, he drank no wine nor strong drink; nor used any vinegar formed from any inebriating liquor, nor ate flesh or dried grapes, nor tasted even the kernels or husks of any thing that had grown upon the vine. 4. He never shaved his head, but let his hair grow, as the proof of his being in this separated state, and under vows of peculiar austerity. 5. He never touched any dead body, nor did any of the last offices, even to his nearest kin; but was considered as the priests, who were wholly taken up with the service of God, and regarded nothing else. 6. During the whole time he was to be incessantly employed in religious acts.

Verse 7. The consecration of his God is upon his head.] Literally, The separation of his God is upon his head; meaning his hair, which was the proof and emblem of his separation. Now, as the hair of the Nazarite was a token of his subjection to God through all the peculiarities of his nazarate, a woman who is married is considered as a Nazarite for life, i.e. separated from all others, and joined to one husband, who is her lord; hence St. Paul, probably alluding to this circumstance, says, 1 Cor. xi. 10: The woman ought to have power upon her head, i.e. wear her hair and veil; for this hair is a proof of her nazarate, and of her being in subjection to her husband, as the Nazarite was under subjection to the LORD by the rule of his order.

Verse 10. Two turtles, or two young pigeons] The same kind of offering made by him who had an issue, Lev. xv. 14, &c.

Verse 18. Shall take the hair—and put it in the fire] The hair was permitted to grow for this purpose; and as the Nazarite was a kind of sacrifice, offered to God through the whole term of his nazarate or separation, and no human flesh or blood could be offered on the altar of the Lord, he offered his hair at the conclusion of his separation, as a sacrifice—that hair which was the token of his complete subjection to the Lord, and which was now considered as the Lord's property.

Verse 21. This is the law of the Nazarite] We learn from Maimonides, in his Treatise of the Nazarite, that a man might become a Nazarite in behalf of another; that is, might assist him in bearing the expenses of the sacrifices, &c. See Acts xxi. 23-26.

Verse 23. On this wise ye shall bless the children of Israel] The prayer which God makes for his followers, and puts into their mouth, we are sure must be right; and to it, when sincerely, faithfully, and fervently offered, we may confidently expect an answer. If he condescended to give us a form of blessings or a form of prayer, we may rest assured that he will accept what he himself has made. This consideration may produce great confidence in them who come with either prayer or praise to the throne of grace, both of which should be, as far as circumstances will admit, in the very words of scripture; for we can readily attach a consequence to the words of God, which we shall find difficult to attach to the best ordered words of men.

Verse 24. The Lord bless thee] There are three forms of blessing here, any or all of which the priests might use on any occasion. The following is a verbal translation:

1. May Jehovah bless thee and preserve thee!

2. May Jehovah cause his faces to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee!

3. May Jehovah lift up his faces upon thee, and may he put prosperity unto thee!

This is a very comprehensive and excellent prayer, and may be paraphrased thus:

1. May God speak good unto thee by giving thee his excellent promises! May he preserve thee in the possession of all the good thou hast, and from all the evil with which thou art threatened!

2. May the Holy Trinity illuminate thy heart, giving thee the true knowledge of thyself and of thy Maker; and may he show thee his graciousness in pardoning thy sins, and supporting thy soul!

3. May God give thee communion with the Father, Son, and Spirit, with a constant sense of his approbation; and grant thee prosperity in thy soul, and in all thy secular affairs!

This I suppose to be the spirit and design of this form of benediction. Others will doubtless interpret it after their manner. Several wise and learned men believe that the mystery of the Holy Trinity is not obscurely hinted at in it. God the FATHER blesses and keeps his followers. God the SON is gracious unto sinners in remitting their offences, which he died to blot out. God the HOLY SPIRIT takes of the things which are Christ's, and shows them unto genuine Christians, and diffuses the peace of God in their hearts. In a word, Christ, the gift of the Father by the energy of the Holy Spirit, came to bless every one of us by turning us away from our iniquities.

1. Every genuine Christian is a true Nazarite. He is separated from the world, and dedicated solely to the service of God. 2. His life is a life of self-denial; he mortifies and keeps the flesh in obedience to the spirit. 3. All this enters into the spirit of his baptismal vow; for in that he promises to renounce the devil and all his works, the pomps and vanities of this wicked world, and all the sinful lusts of the flesh—to keep God's holy word and commandments, and to walk in the same all the days of his life. 4. The person who is faithful has the blessing of God entailed upon him.

CHAPTER VII.

When the tabernacle was fully set up, it appeared that the princes of the twelve tribes had prepared six covered waggon, drawn by two oxen each, one waygon for two tribes, for the service of the tabernacle, 1-3. Moses is commanded to receive this offering, and distribute the whole to the Levites according to their service, 4, 5. Moses does so, and gives two waggon and four oxen to the sons of Gershon, 6, 7; and four waggon and eight oxen to the sons of Merari, 8. The sons of Kohath have none, because they were to bear the ark, &c., on their shoulders, 9. Each prince is to take a day for presenting his offering, 10, 11. On the first day Nahshon, of the tribe of JUDAH, offers a silver charger, a silver bowl, a golden spoon, a young bullock, a ram, a lamb, and a kid, for a SIN-OFFERING; two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, and five lambs, for a PEACE-OFFERING, 12-17. On the second day Nethaneel, of the tribe of ISSACHAR, offers the like, 18-23. On the third day Eliab, of the tribe of ZEBULUN, offers the like, 24-29. On the fourth day Elizur, of the tribe of REUBEN, offers the like, 30-35. On the fifth day Shelumiel, of the tribe of SIMEON, made a similar offering, 36-41. On the sixth day Eliasaph, of the tribe of GAD, made his offering, 42-47. On the seventh day Elishama, of the tribe of EPHRAIM, made his offering, 48-53. On the eighth day Gamaliel, of the tribe of MANASSEH, made his offering, 54-59. On the ninth day Abidan, of the tribe of BENJAMIN, made his offering, 60-65. On the tenth day Ahiczer, of the tribe of DAN, made his offering, 66-71. On the eleventh day, Pagiel, of the tribe of ASHER, made his offering, 72-77. On the twelfth day Ahira, of the tribe of NAPHTHALI, made the same kind of offering, 78-83. The sum total of all vessels and cattle which were offered was twelve silver chargers, and twelve silver bowls; twelve golden spoons; twelve bullocks, twelve rams, and twelve kids; twenty-four bullocks, sixty rams, sixty he-goats, and sixty lambs, 84-88. The offerings being ended, Moses goes into the tabernacle, and hears the voice of the Lord from the mercy-seat, 89.

AND it came to pass on the day that Moses had fully set up the tabernacle, and had anointed it, and sanctified it, and all the instruments thereof, both the altar and all the vessels thereof, and had anointed them, and sanctified them;

Verse 1. On the day that Moses had fully set up the tabernacle] The transactions mentioned in this chapter took place on the second day of the second month of the second year after their departure from Egypt; and the proper place of this account is immediately after the tenth chapter of Leviticus.

*and were over them that were numbered, offered:

3 And they brought their offering before the LORD, six covered waggons, and twelve oxen; a waggon for two of the princes, and for each one an ox: and they brought them before the tabernacle.

4 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

5 <sup>b</sup>Take it of them, that they may be to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation; and thou shalt give them unto the Levites, to every man according to his service.

6 And Moses took the waggons and the oxen, and gave them unto the Levites.

7 Two waggons and four oxen <sup>c</sup>he gave unto the sons of Gershon, according to their service:

8 <sup>d</sup>And four waggons and eight oxen he gave unto the sons of Merari according unto their service, <sup>e</sup>under the hand of Ithamar the son of Aaron the priest.

9 But unto the sons of Kohath he gave none; because <sup>f</sup>the service of the sanctuary belonging unto them <sup>g</sup>was that they should bear upon their shoulders.

10 And the princes offered for <sup>h</sup>dedicating of the altar in the day that it was anointed, even the princes offered their offering before the altar.

11 And the LORD said unto Moses, They shall offer their offering, each prince on his day, for the dedicating of the altar.

12 And he that offered his offering the first day was <sup>i</sup>Nahshon, the son of Amminadab, of the tribe of Judah:

13 And his offering <sup>j</sup>was one silver charger, the weight whereof <sup>k</sup>was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after <sup>l</sup>the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them <sup>m</sup>were full of fine flour mingled with oil for a <sup>n</sup>meat-offering:

14 One spoon of ten shekels of gold, full of <sup>o</sup>incense:

15 <sup>p</sup>One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering:

16 One kid of the goats for a <sup>q</sup>sin-offering:

17 And for <sup>r</sup>a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year: this <sup>s</sup>was the offering of Nahshon, the son of Amminadab.

Verse 3. Six covered waggons] Covered or tilted is probably the meaning of the original. The waggons were given for the more convenient exporting of the heavier parts of the tabernacle, which could not be conveniently carried on men's shoulders.

Verse 5. According to his service.] That is, distribute them among the Levites as they may need them, giving most to those who have the heaviest burdens to bear.

Verse 7. Two waggons—unto the sons of Gershon.] The Gershonites carried only the curtains, coverings, and hangings, chap. iv. 25. And although this was a cumbersome carriage, and they needed the waggons, yet it was not a heavy one.

Verse 8. Four waggons—unto the sons of Merari.] Because they had the boards, bars, pillars, and sockets of the tabernacle to carry, chap. iv. 31, 32, therefore they had as many more waggons as the Gershonites.

Verse 9. Unto the sons of Kohath he gave none.] Because they had the charge of the ark, table, candlestick, altars, &c., chap. iv. 5-15, which were to be carried upon their shoulders; for those sacred things must not be drawn by beasts.

Verse 10. And the princes offered.] Every prince or chief 18 On the second day Nethaneel, the son of Zuar, prince of Issachar, did offer:

19 He offered for his offering one silver charger, the weight whereof <sup>j</sup>was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat-offering:

24 On the third day <sup>i</sup>Eliab, the son of Helon, prince of the children of Zebulun, did offer:

25 His offering <sup>j</sup>was one silver charger, the weight whereof <sup>k</sup>was an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary: both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat-offering:

30 On the fourth day <sup>i</sup>Elizur, the son of Shedeur, prince of the children of Reuben, did offer:

31 His offering <sup>j</sup>was one silver charger of the weight of an hundred and thirty shekels, one silver bowl of seventy shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat offering:

offered in the behalf, and doubtless at the expense, of his whole tribe.

Verse 13. One silver charger] A dish, or deep bowl, in which they kneaded the paste.

One silver bowl] A basin, to receive the blood of the sacrifice in.

Verse 14. One spoon] A censer, on which they put the incense.

It is worthy of remark that the different tribes are represented here as bringing their offerings precisely in the same order in which they encamped about the tabernacle. See chap. ii. and chap. x.

It is worthy of remark also, that every tribe offers the same kind of offering, and in the same quantity, to show, that as every tribe was equally indebted to God for its support, so each should testify an equal sense of obligation. Besides, the vessels were all sacrificial vessels, and the animals were all clean animals, such as were proper for sacrifices; and therefore every thing was intended to point out that the people were to be a holy people, fully dedicated to God, and that God was to dwell among them; hence there was fine flour and oil, for a meat-offering, ver. 13. 15, 16. Five oxen, five rams, five he-goats, and five lambs, for a peace-offering, ver. 17. Thus, as the priests, altar, &c., were anointed, and the tabernacle dedicated, so the people, by this offering, became consecrated to God. Therefore every act here was a religious act.

Verse 48. On the seventh day] Both Jewish and Christian writers have been surprised that this work of offering went forward on the seventh day, which they suppose to have been a sabbath, as well as on the other days. But, 1. There is no absolute proof that this seventh day of offering was a sabbath. 2. Were it even so, could the people be better employed than in thus consecrating themselves and their services to the Lord? We have already seen that every act was a religious act ; and we may rest assured that no day was too holy for the performance of such acts as are recorded here.

Verse 72. On the eleventh day] The Hebrew form of expression here, and in the 78th verse, has something curious in it. In the day, the first and tenth day ; In the day, two and tenth day. But this is the idiom of the language, and to an original Hebrew our almost anomalous words eleventh and twelfth, by which we translate the original, would appear as strange as his, literally translated, would appear to us. In reckoning after twelve, it is easy to find out the composition of the words thirteen, as three and ten, fourteen, four and ten, and so on ; but eleven and twelve bear scarcely sanctuary; both of them full of fine flour mingled with oil for a meat-offering:

80 One golden spoon of ten shekels, full of incense:

81 One young bullock, one ram, one lamb of the first year, for a burnt-offering;

82 One kid of the goats for a sin-offering;

83 And for a sacrifice of peace-offerings, two oxen, five rams, five he-goats, five lambs of the first year: this was the offering of Ahira, the son of Enan.

84 This was the dedication of the altar, in the day when it was anointed, by the princes of Israel: twelve chargers of silver, twelve silver bowls, twelve spoons of gold:

85 Each charger of silver weighing an hundred and thirty shekels, each bowl seventy: all the silver vessels weighed two thousand and four hundred shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary:

86 The golden spoons were twelve, full of incense, any analogy to ten and one, and ten and two, which nevertheless they intend. But this is a subject of philology rather than of Biblical criticism.

Verse 84. This was the dedication of the altar, in the day, &c. Meaning here the time in which it was dedicated; for as each tribe had a whole day for its representative or prince to present the offerings it had provided, consequently the dedication in which each had his day must have lasted twelve days: the words, therefore, in this text, refer to the last day or twelfth, in which this dedication was completed.

Verse 88. After that it was anointed. By the anointing the altar was consecrated to God; by this dedication it was solemnly appointed to that service for which it had been erected.

Verse 89. To speak with him. To confer with God, and to receive farther discoveries of his will.

He heard the voice of one speaking unto him. Though Moses saw no similitude, but only heard a voice, yet he had the fullest proof of the presence as well as of the being of the Almighty. In this way God chose to manifest himself during that dispensation, till the fulness of the time came, in which the word was made flesh, and DWELT AMONG US. No man hath seen God at any time; the only-begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

weighing ten shekels apiece, after the shekel of the sanctuary: all the gold of the spoons was an hundred and twenty shekels.

87 All the oxen for the burnt-offering were twelve bullocks, the rams twelve, the lambs of the first year twelve, with their meat-offering: and the kids of the goats for sin-offering twelve.

88 And all the oxen for the sacrifice of the peace-offerings were twenty and four bullocks, the rams sixty, the he-goats sixty, the lambs of the first year sixty. This was the dedication of the altar, after that it was anointed.

89 And when Moses was gone into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with him, then he heard the voice of one speaking unto him from off the mercy-seat, that was upon the ark of testimony, from between the two cherubims: and he spake unto him.

The mercy-seat. As God gave oracular answers from this place, and spoke to Moses as it were face to face, hence the place was called the ORACLE, debir, or speaking place, from dabar, he spoke, 1 Kings vi. 23. And as this mercy-seat represented our blessed Redeemer, so the apostle says that God, who had at sundry times, and in divers manners, spoken in time past to the fathers by the prophets, hath, in these last days, spoken unto us by his Son, Heb. i. 1, 2. Hence the incarnated Christ is the true debir or oracle, in and by whom God speaks unto man.

On this occasion we find there were offered of silver vessels 2,400 shekels; and of golden vessels 120 shekels. The total value was £627 ls. 11d. Besides the above there were offered 240 clean beasts for sacrifice; by which we may at once see that though the place in which they now sojourned was a wilderness, as to cities, villages, and regular inhabitants, yet there was plenty of pasturage, else the Israelites could not have furnished these cattle, with all the sacrifices necessary for different occasions, and especially for the passover, which was celebrated during their sojourning in the desert, and which itself must have required an immense number of lambs (see chap. ix.), when each family of the 600,000 males was obliged to provide one for itself.

CHAPTER VIII.

Directions how the lamps are to be lighted, 1-3. How the candlestick was formed, 4. The Levites to be consecrated to their service by being cleansed, sprinkled, shaved, purified, and their clothes washed, 5-7. To offer a meat-offering and a sin-offering, 8. The people to put their hands upon them, 9-10. Aaron is to offer them before the Lord, 11. The Levites to lay their hands on the heads of the bullocks, &c., 12. The Levites are taken to assist Aaron and his sons in the place of all the first-born of Israel, 13-19. Moses and Aaron do as they are commanded, the Levites are presented, purified, and commence their service, 20-22. They are to begin their service at twenty-five years of age, and leave off at fifty, 23-25. After this they shall have the general inspection of the service, 26.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto Aaron, and say unto him, When thou lightest the lamps, the seven lamps shall give light over against the candlestick.

* Exod. xxv. 37. xl. 25.

Verse 2. The seven lamps shall give light. The whole seven shall be lighted at one time, that seven may be ever burning.

those gifts and graces in action among men. See Rev. i. 12, 20. The seven lights in the candlesticks point out the seven Spirits of God, the Holy Ghost being thus termed, Rev. iii. 1, from the variety and abundance of his gifts and influences; seven being used among the Hebrews to denote any thing full, complete, and perfect. A candle-was <sup>a</sup> beaten work : <sup>b</sup> according unto the pattern which the LORD had shewed Moses, so he made the candlestick.

5 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

6 Take the Levites from among the children of Israel, and cleanse them.

7 And thou shalt thou do unto them, to cleanse them : Sprinkle <sup>c</sup> water of purifying upon them, and <sup>d</sup> let <sup>e</sup> them shave all their flesh, and let them wash their clothes, and so make themselves clean.

8 Then let them take a young bullock with <sup>f</sup> his meat-offering, even fine flour mingled with oil, and another young bullock shalt thou take for a sin-offering.

9 <sup>g</sup> And thou shalt bring the Levites before the tabernacle of the congregation : <sup>h</sup> and thou shalt gather the whole assembly of the children of Israel together :

10 And thou shalt bring the Levites before the LORD : and the children of Israel <sup>i</sup> shall put their hands upon the Levites :

11 And Aaron shall <sup>j</sup> offer the Levites before the LORD for an <sup>k</sup> offering of the children of Israel, that <sup>l</sup> they may execute the service of the LORD.

12 <sup>m</sup> And the Levites shall lay their hands upon the heads of the bullocks : and thou shalt offer the one for a sin-offering, and the other for a burnt-offering, unto the LORD, to make an atonement for the Levites.

13 And thou shalt set the Levites before Aaron, and before his sons, and offer them for an offering unto the LORD.

14 Thus shalt thou separate the Levites from among the children of Israel, and the Levites shall be <sup>n</sup> mine.

15 And after that shall the Levites go in to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation : and thou shalt cleanse them, and <sup>o</sup> offer them for an offering.

16 For they are wholly given unto me from among the children of Israel ; <sup>p</sup> instead of such as open every womb, even instead of the first-born of all the children of Israel, have I taken them unto me.

17 <sup>q</sup> For all the first-born of the children of Israel are mine, both man and beast : on the day that I smote every first-born in the land of Egypt I sanctified them for myself.

18 And I have taken the Levites for all the first-born of the children of Israel.

19 And <sup>r</sup> I have given the Levites as <sup>s</sup> a gift to Aaron and to his sons from among the children of Israel, to do the service of the children of Israel in the tabernacle of the congregation, and to make an atonement for the children of Israel : <sup>t</sup> that there be no plague among the children of Israel, when the children of Israel come nigh unto the sanctuary.

20 And Moses, and Aaron, and all the congregation of the children of Israel, did to the Levites according unto all that the LORD commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did the children of Israel unto them.

21 <sup>u</sup> And the Levites were purified, and they washed their clothes ; <sup>v</sup> and Aaron offered them as an offering before the LORD ; and Aaron made an atonement for them to cleanse them.

22 <sup>w</sup> And after that went the Levites in to do their service in the tabernacle of the congregation before Aaron and before his sons : <sup>x</sup> as the LORD had commanded Moses concerning the Levites, so did they unto them.

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 This <sup>y</sup> is it that belongeth unto the Levites : <sup>z</sup> from twenty and five years old and upward, they shall go in <sup>aa</sup> to wait upon the service of the tabernacle of the congregation :

25 And from the age of fifty years they shall <sup>ab</sup> cease waiting upon the service thereof, and shall serve no more :

stick or lamp without oil is of no use ; oil not burning is of no use. So churches without the influence of the Holy Ghost are dead, while they have a name to live ; and if they have a measure of this light, and do not let it shine by purity of living and holy zeal before men, their religion is neither useful to themselves nor to others. Reader, it is possible to be in the church of God and not be of that church ; it is possible to have a measure of the Spirit, and neither profit nor be profited. Feel this dreadful possibility, and pray to God that thou be not a proof of it.

Verse 7. Sprinkle water of purifying] As this purifying water was made by the ashes of the red heifer, cedar-wood, hyssop, and scarlet ; and the heifer herself was sacrificed, and her blood sprinkled seven times before the tabernacle, Num. xix. 3-6 ; she may be considered as a proper sacrifice for sin, and consequently the water thus prepared be termed the water of the sin-offering. As the ashes were kept ready at hand for purifying from all legal pollutions, the preparation might be considered as a concentration of the essential properties of the sin-offering, and might be resorted to at all times with comparatively little expense or trouble, and no loss of time. As there were so many things by which legal pollution might be contracted, it was necessary to have always at hand, in all their dwellings, a mode of purifying at once convenient and inexpensive. As the water by which the Levites were here purified must have been the water prepared from the ashes of the red heifer, this ordinance was undoubtedly instituted before this time, though not described till chap. xix. 1-10 of this book ; but that chapter might be in connexion with any of the preceding ordinances, as well as where it is now found. We see from Heb. ix. 13, 14, that these ashes mingled with water, and sprinkled on the unclean, and which sanctified to the purification of the flesh, were intended to typify the blood of Christ, which purges the conscience from dead works to serve the living God, ver. 15 ; for as without this sprinkling with the water of the sin-offering the Levites were not fit to serve God in the wilderness, so without this sprinkling of the blood of Christ no conscience can be purged from dead works to serve the living God. [There seems little ground for supposing that the water prepared, as in Num. xix. 1-10, was used for the cleansing of the Levites. Perhaps the water in the laver of the sanctuary was used.]

Verse 10. Shall put their hands upon the Levites] It has been argued from this that the congregation had a part in the appointment of their own ministers, and that this was done by the imposition of hands. However that may be, it appears that what was done on this occasion meant no more than that the people gave up this whole tribe to God in place of their first-born ; and that by this act they bound themselves to provide for them who, because of their sacred service, could follow no secular work.

Verse 17. For all the first-born—are mine] See the manner of redeeming the first-born, chap. xviii. 6.

Verse 21. And Aaron made an atonement for them] Though the Levites had been most solemnly consecrated to the Lord's service, and though all legal washings and purifications were duly performed on the occasion, yet they could not approach God till an atonement had been made for them. How strange is it, after all these significations, of the will and purpose of God relative to man, that any priest or any people will attempt to draw nigh to God without an atonement! As sure as God hath spoken it, there is no entrance into the holiest but through the blood of Jesus, Heb. x. 19, 20.

Verse 24. From twenty and five years old] See the note on chap. iv. 47, where the two terms of twenty-five and thirty years are reconciled.

Verse 26. To keep the charge, and shall do no service.] They shall no longer be obliged to perform any laborious service, but act as general directors and counsellors; therefore they were to be near the camp, sing praises to God, and see that no stranger or unclean person was permitted to enter. So the Jews and many other persons have understood this place.

1. If it required so much legal purity to fit the Levites for their work in the tabernacle, can we suppose that it requires less spiritual purity to fit ministers of the gospel to proclaim the righteousness of the Most High, and administer the sacred ordinances of Christianity to the flock of Christ? If these must be without spot, as the priests before without blemish, and these were only typical men, we may rest assured that a Christian minister requires no ordinary measures of holiness to prepare him for an acceptable and profitable discharge of his office.

2. If the Christian ministry be established to prepare men for the kingdom of God, of the holiness of which the purity of the camp was but a faint emblem, how can any man expect to enter that place of blessedness, who has not his heart sprinkled from an evil conscience, and his body washed with pure water; his life and conversation agreeable to the sacred precepts laid down in the gospel of Christ? Without holiness none shall see the Lord; and from this decision of the divine justice there shall never be any appeal.

CHAPTER IX.

The Israelites are reminded of the law that required them to keep the passover at its proper time, and with all its rites, 1-3. They kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month, 4, 5. The case of the men who, being unclean through touching a dead body, could not keep the passover, 6, 7. Moses inquires at the Lord concerning them, 8; and the Lord appoints the fourteenth day of the second month for all those who through any accidental uncleanness, or by being absent on a journey, could not keep it at the usual time, 9-12. Those who neglect to keep this solemn feast to be cut off from among his people, 13. The stranger who wishes to keep the passover is at liberty to do it, 14. The cloud covers the tabernacle both by day and night, from the time of its dedication, 15, 16. This cloud regulates all the encampments and marchings of the Israelites through the wilderness, 17-22. Their journeyings and restings were all directed by the commandment of the Lord, 23.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the first month of the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

2 Let the children of Israel also keep <sup>a</sup> the passover at his appointed season.

3 In the fourteenth day of this month, <sup>b</sup> at even, ye shall keep it in his appointed season: according to all the rites of it, and according to all the ceremonies thereof, shall ye keep it.

4 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, that they should keep the passover.

5 And <sup>c</sup> they kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the first month at even in the wilderness of Sinai; according to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so did the children of Israel.

Verse 1. The Lord spake unto Moses] The fourteen first verses of this chapter certainly refer to transactions that took place at the time of those mentioned in the commencement of this book, before the numbering of the people, and several learned men are of opinion that these fourteen verses should be referred back to that place. We have already met with instances where transpositions have very probably taken place, and it is not difficult to account for them. As in very early times writing was generally on leaves of the Egyptian flag papyrus, or on thin laminae of different substances, facts and transactions thus entered were very liable to be deranged; so that when afterwards a series was made up into a book, many transactions might be inserted in wrong places, and thus the exact chronology of the facts be greatly disturbed.

Verse 3. According to all the rites of it] See all those rites and ceremonies largely explained in the notes on Exod. xii.

Verse 7. We are defiled by the dead body of a man] It is probable that the defilement mentioned here was occasioned

6 And there were certain men who were <sup>d</sup> defiled by the dead body of a man, that they could not keep the passover on that day: <sup>e</sup> and they came before Moses and before Aaron on that day:

7 And those men said unto him, We are defiled by the dead body of a man: wherefore are we kept back, that we may not offer an offering of the LORD in his appointed season, among the children of Israel?

8 And Moses said unto them, Stand still, and 'I will hear what the LORD will command concerning you.

9 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If any man of you or of your posterity shall be unclean by reason of a dead body, or be in a journey afar off, yet he shall keep the passover unto the LORD.

by assisting at the burial of some person—a work both of necessity and mercy. This circumstance however gave rise to the ordinance delivered in verses 10-14, so that on particular occasions the passover might be twice celebrated: 1. At its regular time, the 14th of the first month; 2. An extra time, the 14th of the second month. But the man who had no legal hindrance, and did not celebrate it on one or other of those times, was to be cut off from the people of God; and the reason given for this cutting off is, that he brought not the offering of God in his appointed season, therefore that man shall bear his sin, ver. 13. We have already seen, from the authority of St. Paul, that Christ our passover is sacrificed for us, and that it was his sacrifice that was pointed out by the paschal lamb; on this therefore we may observe, that those who do not sooner or later eat the true passover, and get the salvation procured by the sprinkling of his blood, shall be cut off from among those that shall enter into the rest prepared for the people of God, and for the same reason too, They bring not the offering of God in its appointed season, and therefore they shall bear their sin.

11 *The fourteenth day of the second month at even they shall keep it, and <sup>b</sup>eat it with unleavened bread and bitter herbs.

12 *They shall leave none of it unto the morning, <sup>a</sup>nor break any bone of it: *according to all the ordinances of the passover they shall keep it.

13 But the man that is clean, and is not in a journey, and forbeareth to keep the passover, even the same soul <sup>c</sup>shall be cut off from among his people: because he <sup>e</sup>brought not the offering of the Lord in his appointed season, that man shall <sup>b</sup>bear his sin.

14 And if a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover unto the Lord; according to the ordinance of the passover, and according to the manner thereof, so shall he do: <sup>d</sup>'ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger, and for him that was born in the land.

15 And <sup>j</sup>on the day that the tabernacle was reared the cloud covered the tabernacle, namely, the tent of the testimony: and <sup>k</sup>at even there was upon the tabernacle as it were the appearance of fire, until the morning.

16 So it was alway: the cloud covered it by day, and the appearance of fire by night.

17 And when the cloud <sup>l</sup>was taken up from the tabernacle, then after that the children of Israel journeyed: and in the place where the cloud abode there the children of Israel pitched their tents.

18 At the commandment of the Lord the children of Israel journeyed, and at the commandment of the Lord they pitched: <sup>m</sup>as long as the cloud abode upon the tabernacle they rested in their tents.

19 And when the cloud <sup>n</sup>tarried long upon the tabernacle many days, then the children of Israel <sup>o</sup>kept the charge of the Lord, and journeyed not.

20 And so it was, when the cloud was a few days upon the tabernacle; according to the commandment of the Lord they abode in their tents, and according to the commandment of the Lord they journeyed.

21 And so it was, when the cloud <sup>p</sup>abode from even unto the morning, and that the cloud was taken up in the morning, then they journeyed: whether it was by day or by night that the cloud was taken up, they journeyed.

22 Or whether it were two days, or a month, or a year, that the cloud tarried upon the tabernacle, remaining thereon, the children of Israel <sup>q</sup>abode in their tents, and journeyed not: but when it was taken up, they journeyed.

23 At the commandment of the Lord they rested in their tents, and at the commandment of the Lord they journeyed: they <sup>r</sup>kept the charge of the Lord, at the commandment of the Lord by the hand of Moses.

Verse 15. The cloud covered the tabernacle] Calmet observes that the 15th verse, beginning a new subject, should begin a new chapter, as it has no connexion with what goes before; and he thinks this chapter, begun with the 15th verse, should end with the 28th verse of the following.

Verse 21. Whether—by day or by night] As the heat of the day is very severe in that same desert, the night-season is sometimes chosen for the performance of a journey; though it is very likely that in the case of the Israelites this was seldom resorted to.

Verse 22. Two days—a month—a year] It was by the divine counsel alone that they were directed in all their peregrinations; and from the above words we see that their times of tarrying at different stations were very unequal.

Verse 23. Kept the charge of the Lord] When we consider the strong disposition which this people ever testified to follow their own will in all things, we may be well surprised to find them, in these journeyings, so implicitly following the direction of God. There could be no trick or imposture here. Moses, had he been the most cunning of men, never could have imitated the appearances referred to in this chapter. The cloud, and every thing in its motion, was so evidently supernatural, that the people had no doubt of its being the symbol of the divine presence.

God chose to keep this people so dependent upon himself, and so submissive to the decision of his own will, that he would not even give them regular times of marching or resting; they were to do both when and where God saw best. Thus they were ever kept ready for their march, though perfectly ignorant of the time when they should commence it. But this was all well; they had the presence of God with them; the cloud by day and the fire by night demonstrated that God was amongst them. Reader, thou art here a tenant at will to God Almighty. How soon, in what place, or in what circumstances, he may call thee to march into the eternal world, thou knowest not. But this uncertainty cannot perplex thee, if thou be properly subject to the will of God, ever willing to lose thy own in it. But thou canst not be thus subject, unless thou have the testimony of the presence and approbation of God. How awful to be obliged to walk into the valley of the shadow of death without this! Reader, prepare to meet thy God.

CHAPTER X.

Moses is commanded to make two silver trumpets for calling the assembly, 1, 2. On what occasions these trumpets should be sounded. First, for calling the assembly to the door of the tabernacle, 3. Secondly, to summon the princes and captains of the thousands of Israel, 4. Thirdly, to make the eastern camps strike their tents, 5. Fourthly, to make those on the south do the like, 6. No alarm to be sounded when the congregation only is to be assembled, 7. The sons of Aaron alone shall sound these trumpets, it shall be a perpetual ordinance, 8. Fifthly, the trumpets are to be sounded in the time of war, 9. Sixthly, on festival occasions, 10. On the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, the Israelites began their journey from the wilderness of Sinai, and came to the wilderness of Paran, 11, 12. By the commandment of God to Moses the first division, at the head of which was the standard of JUDAH, marched first, 13, 14. Under him followed the tribe of ISSACHAR, 15; and after them the tribe of ZEBULUN, 16. Then the Gershonites and Merarites followed with the tabernacle, 17. At the head of the second division was the standard and camp of REUBEN, 18; and under him were that of SIMEON, 19; and that of GAD, 20. Next followed the Kohathites, bearing the sanctuary, 21. Then followed the third division, at the head of which was the standard of the camp of EPHRAIM, 22; and under him MANASSEH, 23; and BENJAMIN, 24. At the head of the fourth division was the standard of the camp of DAN, 25; and under him ASHEH, 26; and NAPHTALI, 27. This was their ordinary method of marching in the wilderness, 28. Moses entreats Hobab the Midianite to accompany them through the wilderness, 29. He refuses, 30. Moses continues and strengthens his entreaties with reasonings and promises, 31, 32. They depart from Sinai three days' journey, 33. The cloud accompanies them by day and night, 34. The words used by Moses when the ark set forward, 35, and when it rested, 36.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Make thee two trumpets of silver; of a whole piece shalt thou make them: that thou mayest use them for the "calling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps.

3 And when <sup>b</sup> they shall blow with them, all the assembly shall assemble themselves to thee at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

4 And if they blow <sup>c</sup> but with one trumpet, then the princes, which are <sup>c</sup> heads of the thousands of Israel, shall gather themselves unto thee.

5 When ye blow an alarm, then <sup>d</sup> the camps that lie on the east parts shall go forward.

6 When ye blow an alarm the second time, then the camps that lie on <sup>e</sup> the south side shall take their journey: they shall blow an alarm for their journeys.

7 But when the congregation is to be gathered together, <sup>f</sup> ye shall blow, but ye shall not <sup>f</sup> sound an alarm.

8 <sup>h</sup> And the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets; and they shall be to you for an ordinance for ever throughout your generations.

9 And <sup>i</sup> if ye go to war in your land against the enemy that <sup>i</sup> oppresseth you, then ye shall blow an alarm with the trumpets: and ye shall be <sup>k</sup> remembered before the LORD your God, and ye shall be saved from your enemies.

Verse 2. Make thee two trumpets of silver] The necessity of such instruments will at once appear, when the amazing extent of this numerous army is considered; and how even the sound of two trumpets could reach them all is difficult to conceive: but we may suppose that, when they were sounded, the motion of those that were within reach of that sound taught the others in succession what they should do.

As the trumpets were to be blown by the priests only, the sons of Aaron, there were only two, because there were only two such persons to use them at this time, Eleazar and Ithamar. In the time of Joshua there were seven trumpets used by the priests, but these were made, according to our text, of rams' horns, Josh. vi. 4. In the time of Solomon, when the priests had greatly increased, there were 120 priests sounding with trumpets, 2 Chron. v. 12.

Josephus intimates, that one of those trumpets was always used to call the nobles together, the other to assemble the people; see ver. 4. It is possible that these trumpets were made of different lengths and wideness, and consequently they would emit different tones. Thus the sound itself would at once show which was the summons for the congregation, and which for the princes only. These trumpets were allowed to be emblematical of the sound of the gospel, and in this reference they appear to be frequently used.

Verse 5. When ye blow an alarm] Probably meaning short, broken, sharp tones, terminating with long ones, blown with both the trumpets at once.

Verse 6. When ye blow an alarm the second time] A single alarm, as above stated, was a signal for the eastward division to march; two such alarms the signal for the south division; and probably three for the west division, and four for the north. It is more likely that this was the case than that a single alarm served for each, with a small interval between them.

10 Also <sup>l</sup> in the day of your gladness, and in your solemn days, and in the beginnings of your months, ye shall blow with the trumpets over your burnt-offerings, and over the sacrifices of your peace-offerings; that they may be to you <sup>m</sup> for a memorial before your God: I am the LORD your God.

11 And it came to pass, on the twentieth day of the second month, in the second year, that the cloud <sup>n</sup> was taken up from off the tabernacle of the testimony.

12 And the children of Israel took <sup>o</sup> their journeys out of the <sup>p</sup> wilderness of Sinai; and the cloud rested in the <sup>q</sup> wilderness of Paran.

13 And they first took their journey <sup>r</sup> according to the commandment of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

14 <sup>s</sup> In the first place went the standard of the camp of the children of Judah, according to their armies: and over his host was <sup>t</sup> Nahshon the son of Amminadab.

15 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Issachar was Nethanel the son of Zuar.

16 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Zebulun was Eliab the son of Helon.

17 And <sup>u</sup> the tabernacle was taken down; and the sons of Gershon, and the sons of Merari, set forward, <sup>v</sup> bearing the tabernacle.

18 And <sup>w</sup> the standard of the camp of Reuben set

The camps, or grand division of this great army, always lay to the east, south, west, and north; and here the east and the south camps alone are mentioned; the first containing Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun; the second, Reuben, Simeon, and Gad. The west and north divisions are not named, and yet we are sure they marched in consequence of express orders or signals, as well as the other two. There appears therefore a deficiency here in the Hebrew text.

Verse 9. If ye go to war] These trumpets shall be sounded for the purpose of collecting the people together, to deliberate about the war, and to implore the protection of God against their enemies.

Ye shall be remembered before the Lord] When ye decamp, encamp, make war, and hold religious festivals, according to his appointment, which appointment shall be signified to you by the priest, who at the command of God, for such purposes, shall blow the trumpets, then ye may expect both the presence and blessing of Jehovah in all that ye undertake.

Verse 10. In the day of your gladness] On every festival the people shall be collected by the same means.

Verse 11. The twentieth day of the second month] The Israelites had lain encamped in the wilderness of Sinai about eleven months and twenty days; compare Exod. xix. 1 with this verse. They now received the order of God to decamp, and proceed towards the promised land.

Verse 12. The cloud rested in the wilderness of Paran] This was three days' journey from the wilderness of Sinai (see ver. 33), and the people had three stations; the first at Kibroth-hattaavah, the second at Hazereth, chap. xi. 85, and the third in the wilderness of Paran, see chap. xii. 16. But it is extremely difficult to determine these journeyings with any degree of exactness; and we are often at a loss to know whether the place in question was in a direct or retrograde position from the place previously mentioned.

forward, according to their armies: and over his host was Elizur the son of Shedeur.

19 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Simeon was Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.

20 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Gad was Eliasaph the son of Deuel.

21 And the Kohathites set forward, bearing the sanctuary: and the other did set up the tabernacle against they came.

22 And the standard of the camp of the children of Ephraim set forward, according to their armies: and over his host was Elishama the son of Ammihud.

23 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Manasseh was Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.

24 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Benjamin was Abidan the son of Gideon.

25 And the standard of the camp of the children of Dan set forward, which was the rearward of all the camps throughout their hosts; and over his host was Ahiczer the son of Ammishaddai.

26 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Asher was Pagiel the son of Ocran.

27 And over the host of the tribe of the children of Naphtali was Ahira the son of Enan.

28 Thus were the journeyings of the children of Israel, according to their armies, when they set forward.

Verse 29. Moses said unto Hobab] For a circumstantial account of this person see the notes on Exod. ii. 15, 16, 18, iii. 1, iv. 20, 24; and for the transaction recorded here, and which is probably out of its place, see Exod. xviii. 5, where the subject is discussed at large.

We are journeying] Those who wish to enjoy the heavenly inheritance must walk in the way towards it, and associate with the people who are going in that way. True religion is ever benevolent. They who know most of the goodness of God, are the most forward to invite others to partake of that goodness. That religion which excludes all others from salvation, unless they believe a particular creed, and worship in a particular way, is not of God. Even Hobab, the Arab, according to the opinion of Moses, might receive the same blessings which God had promised to Israel, provided he accompanied them in the same way.

The Lord hath spoken good concerning Israel.] The name Israel is taken in a general sense to signify the followers of God, and to them all the promises in the Bible are made. God has spoken good of them, and he has spoken good to them; and not one word that he hath spoken shall fail. Reader, hast thou left thy unhallowed connexions in life? Hast thou got into the camp of the Most High? Then continue to follow God with Israel, and thou shalt be incorporated in the heavenly family, and share in Israel's benedictions.

Verse 30. I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred.] From the strong expostulations in verses 31 and 32, and from Judg. i. 16, iv. 11, and 1 Sam. xv. 6, it is likely that Hobab changed his mind; or that if he did go back to Midian, he returned again to Israel, as the above scriptures show that his posterity dwelt among the Israelites in Canaan. Reader, after having been almost persuaded to become a Christian, to take Christ, his cross, his reproach, and his crown, for thy portion, art thou again purposing to go back to thy own land, and to thy kindred? Knowest thou not that this land is the place of destruction—that the children of this world, who are not taking God for their portion, are going to perdition?

Verse 31. Thou mayest be to us instead of eyes.] But what need had they of Hobab, when they had the pillar and fire continually to point out the way? Answer: The cloud directed their general journeys, but not their particular excursions. Parties took several journeys while the grand army lay still. They therefore needed such a person as Hobab, who 29 And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Raguel, the Midianite, Moses' father-in-law, We are journeying unto the place of which the LORD said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the LORD hath spoken good concerning Israel.

30 And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred.

31 And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us instead of eyes.

32 And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the LORD shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.

33 And they departed from the mount of the LORD three days' journey: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD went before them in the three days' journey, to search out a resting place for them.

34 And the cloud of the LORD was upon them by day, when they went out of the camp.

35 And it came to pass, when the ark set forward, that Moses said, Rise up, LORD, and let thine enemies be scattered; and let them that hate thee flee before thee.

36 And when it rested, he said, Return, O LORD, unto the many thousands of Israel.

was well acquainted with the desert, to direct those particular excursions; to point them out watering places, and places where they might meet with fuel, &c., &c. What man cannot, under the direction of God's providence, do for himself, God will do in the way of especial mercy. He could have directed them to the fountains and to the places of fuel, but Hobab can do this, therefore let Hobab be employed; and let Hobab know for his encouragement that, while he is serving others in the way of God's providence, he is securing his own best interests. On these grounds Hobab should be invited, and for this reason Hobab should go. Man cannot do God's work; and God will not do the work which he has qualified and commanded man to perform.

Verse 33. The ark—went before them] We find from ver. 21 that the ark was carried by the Kohathites in the centre of the army; but as the army never moved till the cloud was taken up, it is said to go before them, i.e. to be the first to move, as without this motion the Israelites continued in their encampments. [Probably, though no special directions are recorded, the ark was carried in front of the whole army on these occasions.]

Verse 35. Rise up, Lord, and let thine enemies be scattered] If God did not arise in this way and scatter his enemies, there could be no hope that Israel could get safely through the wilderness. God must go first, if Israel would wish to follow in safety.

Verse 36. Return, O Lord, unto the many thousands of Israel.] These were the words spoken by Moses at the moment the divisions halted in order to pitch their tents. In reference to this subject, and the history with which it is connected, the 68th Psalm seems to have been composed, though applied by David to the bringing the ark from Kirjath-jearim to Jerusalem. Many thousands, literally the ten thousand thousands. Unless the ark went with them, and the cloud of the divine glory with it, they could have neither direction nor safety; unless the ark rested with them and the cloud of glory with it, they could have neither rest nor comfort. How necessary are the word of God and the Spirit of God for the direction, comfort, and defence of every genuine follower of Christ! Reader, pray to God that thou mayest have both with thee through all the wilderness, through all the changes and chances of this mortal life: if thou be guided by his counsel, thou shalt be at last received into his glory.

CHAPTER XI.

The people complain, the Lord is displeased, and many of them are consumed by fire, 1. Moses intercedes for them, and the fire is quenched, 2. The place is called Taberah, 3. The mixed multitude long for flesh, and murmur, 4-6. The manna described, 7-9. The people weep in their tents, and the Lord is displeased, 10. Moses deplores his lot in being obliged to hear and bear with all their murmurings, 11-15. He is commanded to bring seventy of the elders to God, that he may endue them with the same spirit, and cause them to divide the burden with him, 16, 17. He is also commanded to inform the people that they shall have flesh for a whole month, 18-20. Moses expresses his doubt of the possibility of this, 21, 22. The Lord confirms his promise, 23. The seventy men are brought to the tabernacle, 24; and the spirit of prophecy rests upon them, 25. Eldad and Medad stay in the camp and prophesy, 26, 27. Joshua beseeches Moses to forbid them, 28. Moses refuses, 29, 30. A wind from the Lord brings quails to the camp, 31, 32. While feeding on the flesh, a plague from the Lord falls upon them, and many of them die, 33. The place is called Kibroth-hattaavah, or the graves of lust, 34. They journey to Hazeroth, 35.

AND <sup>a</sup>when the people <sup>b</sup>complained, <sup>c</sup>it displeased the Lord: and the Lord heard it; <sup>d</sup>and his anger was kindled; and the <sup>e</sup>fire of the Lord burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the uttermost parts of the camp.

2 And the people cried unto Moses; and when Moses <sup>f</sup>prayed unto the Lord, the fire <sup>g</sup>was quenched.

3 And he called the name of the place <sup>h</sup>Taberah: because the fire of the Lord burnt among them.

4 And the <sup>i</sup>mixt multitude that was among them <sup>j</sup>fell a lusting: and the children of Israel also <sup>k</sup>went again, and said, <sup>l</sup>Who shall give us flesh to eat?

5 <sup>m</sup>We remember the fish, which we did eat in Egypt freely; the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick:

6 But now <sup>n</sup>our soul is dried away: there is nothing at all, beside this manna, before our eyes.

7 And <sup>o</sup>the manna was as coriander seed, and the <sup>p</sup>colour thereof as the colour of <sup>q</sup>bdellium.

8 And the people went about, and gathered it, and ground it in mills, or beat it in a mortar, and baked it in pans, and made cakes of it: and <sup>r</sup>the taste of it was as the taste of fresh oil.

9 And <sup>s</sup>when the dew fell upon the camp in the night, the manna fell upon it.

Verse 1. And when the people complained] What the cause of this complaining was, we know not. The conjecture of St. Jerome is probable; they complained because of the length of the way. But surely no people had ever less cause for murmuring; they had God among them, and miracles of goodness were continually wrought in their behalf.

It displeased the Lord] For his extraordinary kindness was lost on such an ungrateful and rebellious people. And his anger was kindled—Divine Justice was necessarily incensed against such inexcusable conduct.

And the fire of the Lord burnt among them] Either a supernatural fire was sent for this occasion, or the lightning was commissioned against them, or God smote them with one of those hot suffocating winds which are very common in those countries.

And consumed—in the uttermost parts of the camp.] It pervaded the whole camp, from the centre to the circumference, carrying death with it to all the murmurers; for we are not to suppose that it was confined to the uttermost parts of the camp, unless we could imagine that there were none culpable any where else. If this were the same with the case mentioned ver. 4, then, as it is possible that the mixed multitude occupied the outermost parts of the camp, con-

10 Then Moses heard the people weep throughout their families, every man in the door of his tent; and the anger of the Lord was kindled greatly; Moses also was displeased.

11 <sup>a</sup>And Moses said unto the Lord, Wherefore hast thou afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favour in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?

12 Have I conceived all this people? have I begotten them, that thou shouldest say unto me, <sup>b</sup>Carry them in thy bosom, as a <sup>c</sup>nursing father beareth the sucking child, unto the land which thou <sup>d</sup>swarest unto their fathers?

13 <sup>e</sup>Whence should I have flesh to give all this people? for they weep unto me, saying, Give us flesh, that we may eat.

14 <sup>f</sup>I am not able to bear all this people alone, because it is too heavy for me.

15 And if thou deal thus with me, <sup>g</sup>kill me, I pray thee, out of hand, if I have found favour in thy sight; and let me not <sup>h</sup>see my wretchedness.

16 And the Lord said unto Moses, Gather unto me <sup>i</sup>seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and <sup>j</sup>officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee.

sequently the burning might have been confined to them. [The original however favours the idea that the fire was limited to "the end of the camp."]

Verse 2. The fire was quenched.] Was sunk, or swallowed up, as in the margin. The plague, of whatever sort, ceased to act, and the people had respite.

Verse 4. The mixt multitude] Such as came out of Egypt with the Israelites; and are mentioned Exod. xii. 38. This mongrel people, who had comparatively little of the knowledge of God, feeling the difficulties and fatigues of the journey, were the first to complain; and then we find the children of Israel joined them in their complaints, and made a common cause with these demi-infidels.

Verse 5. We remember, &c.] The choice aliments which those murmurers complained of having lost by their leaving Egypt, were the following: fish, cucumbers, melons, leeks, onions, and garlick. An European may smile at such delicacies; but delicacies they were in that country. Their fish is excellent; their cucumbers and water melons highly salubrious and refreshing; and their onions, garlick, &c., exquisitely flavoured, differing as much from vegetables of the same species in these northern climes as a bad turnip does from a good apple. In short, this enumeration takes in 17 And I will <sup>a</sup>come down and talk with thee there: and <sup>b</sup>I will take of the spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they shall bear the burden of the people with thee, that thou bear it not thyself alone.

18 And say thou unto the people, <sup>c</sup>Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow, and ye shall eat flesh: for ye have wept <sup>d</sup>in the ears of the LORD, saying, Who shall give us flesh to eat? <sup>e</sup>for it was well with us in Egypt: therefore the LORD will give you flesh, and ye shall eat.

19 Ye shall not eat one day, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days;

20 <sup>f</sup>But even a <sup>g</sup>whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you: because that ye have despised the LORD which is among you, and have wept before him, saying, <sup>h</sup>Why came we forth out of Egypt?

21 And Moses said, <sup>i</sup>The people, among whom I am, are six hundred thousand footmen; and thou hast said, I will give them flesh, that they may eat a whole month.

22 <sup>j</sup>Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them to suffice them?

almost all the commonly attainable delicacies in those countries. [And they were all very cheap in Egypt.]

Verse 7. The manna was as coriander seed. Probably this short description is added to show the iniquity of the people in murmuring, while they had so adequate a provision. But the baseness of their minds appears in every part of their conduct.

About the bdellium of the ancients the learned are not agreed; and I shall not trouble the reader with conjectures.

Verses 11-15. The complaint and remonstrance of Moses in these verses serve at once to show the deeply distressed state of his mind, and the degradation of the minds of the people. We have already seen that the slavery they had so long endured had served to debase their minds, and to render them incapable of every high and dignified sentiment, and of every generous act.

Verse 17. I will take of the spirit which is upon thee. To convince Moses that God had sufficiently qualified him for the work which he had given him to do, he tells him that of the gifts and graces which he has given him he will qualify seventy persons to bear the charge with him. This was probably intended as a gracious reproof. Query, Did not Moses lose a measure of his gifts in this business? And is it not right that he whom God has called to and qualified for some particular office, should lose those gifts which he either undervalues or refuses to employ for God in the way appointed? [The remark of Theodoret is more to the point: "Just as a person who kindles a thousand flames from one does not lessen the first, so God did not diminish the grace imparted to Moses by the fact that he communicated it to the seventy."]

The gracious God never called a man to perform a work without furnishing him with adequate strength; and to refuse to do it on the pretence of inability is little short of rebellion against God.

This institution of the seventy persons to help Moses the rabbins consider as the origin of their grand council called the Sanhedrin. But we find that a council of seventy men, elders of Israel, had existed among the people a year before this time. See Exod. xxiv. 9; see the advice given by Jethro to Moses, Exod. xviii. 17, &c.

Verse 22. Shall the flocks and the herds be slain? There 24 And Moses went out, and told the people the words of the LORD, and <sup>m</sup>gathered the seventy men of the elders of the people, and set them round about the tabernacle.

25 And the LORD <sup>n</sup>came down in a cloud, and spake unto him, and took of the spirit that was upon him, and gave it unto the seventy elders: and it came to pass, that, <sup>o</sup>when the spirit rested upon them, <sup>p</sup>they prophesied, and did not cease.

26 But there remained two of the men in the camp, the name of the one was Eldad, and the name of the other Medad: and the spirit rested upon them: and they were of them that were written, but <sup>q</sup>went not out unto the tabernacle: and they prophesied in the camp.

27 And there ran a young man, and told Moses, and said, Eldad and Medad do prophesy in the camp.

28 And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of Moses, one of his young men, answered and said, My lord Moses, <sup>r</sup>forbid them.

29 And Moses said unto him, Enviest thou for my sake? <sup>s</sup>would God that all the LORD's people were prophets, and the LORD would put his spirit upon them!

30 And Moses gat him into the camp, he and the elders of Israel.

31 And there went forth a <sup>t</sup>wind from the LORD, is certainly a considerable measure of weakness and unbelief manifested in the complaints and questions of Moses on this occasion; but his conduct appears at the same time so very simple, honest, and affectionate, that we cannot but admire it, while we wonder that he had not stronger confidence in that God whose miracles he had so often witnessed in Egypt.

Verse 23. Is the Lord's hand waxed short? Hast thou forgotten the miracles which I have already performed? or thinkest thou that my power has decreased? The power that is unlimited can never be diminished.

Verse 25. When the spirit rested upon them, they prophesied. By prophesying here we are to understand their performing those civil and sacred functions for which they were qualified; exhorting the people to quiet and peaceable submission, to trust and confidence in the goodness and providence of God, would make no small part of the duties of their new office. The ideal meaning of the word naba is to pray, entreat, &c. The prophet is called nabi, because he prays, supplicates, in reference to God; exhorts, entreats, in reference to man.

Verse 27. Eldad and Medad do prophesy. These, it seems, made two of the seventy elders; they were written, though they went not out to the tabernacle; they were enrolled as of the elders, but went not to meet God at the tabernacle, probably at that time prevented from some legal hindrance, but they continued in the camp using their new function in exhorting the people.

Verse 28. My lord Moses, forbid them. Joshua was afraid that the authority and influence of his master Moses might be lessened by the part Eldad and Medad were taking in the government of the people, which might ultimately excite sedition or insurrection among them.

Verse 29. Enviest thou for my sake? Art thou jealous of their influence only on my account? I am not alarmed; on the contrary, I would to God that all his people were endued with the same influence, and actuated by the same motives.

Persons may be under the especial direction of grace and providence while apparently performing a work out of regular order. And if the act be good and the effects good, we have no right to question the motive nor to forbid the work. What are order and regularity in the sight of man may be disorder and confusion in the sight of God, and vice versa.

and brought quails from the sea, and let them fall by the camp, *as it were a day's journey on this side, and as it were a day's journey on the other side, round about the camp; and as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth.

32 And the people stood up all that day, and all that night, and all the next day, and they gathered the quails: he that gathered least gathered ten homers; and they spread them all abroad for themselves round about the camp.

John wished to prevent a man from casting out demons in the name of Jesus, because he did not follow Christ in company with the disciples.

Verse 31. A wind from the Lord] An extraordinary one, not the effect of a natural cause. And brought quails, a bird which in great companies visits Egypt about the time of the year, March or April, at which the circumstance marked here took place.

Two cubits high upon the face of the earth.] We may consider the quails as flying within two cubits of the ground; so that the Israelites could easily take as many of them as they wished, while flying within the reach of their hands or their clubs. The common notion is, that the quails were brought round about the camp, and fell there in such multitudes as to lie two feet thick upon the ground; but the Hebrew will not bear this version. The Vulgate has expressed the sense, Volabantque in aere duobus cubitis altitudine super terram. "And they flew in the air, two cubits high above the ground." [The common notion is probably the correct one, see Psalm lxxviii. 27, 28.]

Verse 32. The people stood up, &c.] While these immense flocks were flying at this short distance from the ground, fatigued with the strong wind and the distance they had come, they were easily taken by the people; and as various flocks continued to succeed each other for two days and a night, enough for a month's provision might be collected in that time. If the quails had fallen about the tents, there was no need to have stood up two days and a night in gathering them; but if they were on the wing, as the text seems to suppose, it was necessary for them to use dispatch, and avail themselves of the passing of these birds whilst it continued. [There is nothing in the original to warrant the conclusion that the flocks continued to succeed each other for two days and a night.]

And they spread them all abroad] Maillet observes that birds of all kinds come to Egypt for refuge from the cold of a northern winter; and that the people catch them, pluck, and bury them in the burning sand for a few minutes, and 33 And while the flesh was yet between their teeth, ere it was chewed, the wrath of the LORD was kindled against the people, and the LORD smote the people with a very great plague.

34 And he called the name of that place Kibroth-hattaavah: because there they buried the people that lusted.

35 And the people journeyed from Kibroth-hattaavah unto Hazeroth: and abode at Hazeroth.

thus prepare them for use. This is probably what is meant by spreading them all abroad round the camp.

Some authors think that the word salvim, rendered quails in our translation, should be rendered locusts. There is no need of this conjecture; all difficulties are easily resolved without it.

Verse 33. The wrath of the Lord was kindled] In what way, and with what effects, we cannot precisely determine. Some heavy judgment fell upon these murmurers and complainers, but of what kind the sacred writer says nothing.

Verse 34. Kibroth-hattaavah] The graves of lust; and thus their scandalous crime was perpetuated by the name of the place.

1. How careful should we be in all our prayers to ask nothing but what is perfectly consistent with the will of God! Many times our prayers and desires are such that, were they answered, our ruin would be inevitable. "Thy will be done!" is the greatest of all prayers; and he who would pray safely and successfully, must at least have the spirit of those words in all his petitions. The Israelites asked flesh when they should not have asked for it: God yields to their murmuring, and the death of multitudes of these murmurers was the consequence! We hear of such punishments, and yet walk in the same way, presuming on God's mercy, while we continue to provoke his justice. Let us settle it in our minds as an indisputable truth, that God is better acquainted with our wants than we are ourselves; that he knows infinitely better what we need; and that he is ever more ready to hear than we are to pray, and is wont to give more than we can desire or deserve.

2. In no case has God at any time withheld from his meanest followers any of the spiritual or temporal mercies they needed. Were he to call us to travel through a wilderness, he would send us bread from heaven, or cause the wilderness to smile and blossom as the rose. How strange is it that we will neither believe that God has worked, or will work, unless we see him working!

*Miriam and Aaron raise a sedition against Moses because of the Ethiopian woman he had married, 1, and through jealousy of his increasing power and authority, 2. The character of Moses, 3. Moses, Aaron, and Miriam are suddenly called to the tabernacle, 4. The Lord appears in the pillar of the cloud, and converses with them, 5. Declares his purpose to communicate his will to Moses only, 6-8. His anger is kindled against Miriam, and she is smitten with leprosy, 9-10. Aaron deprecates his transgression, and entreats for Miriam, 11, 12. Moses intercedes for her, 13. The Lord requires that she be shut out of the camp for seven days, 14. Deut. xxiv. 10.—<sup>i</sup> 1 Cor. xiii. 12.—<sup>j</sup> Exod. xxxiii. 19.

Verse 2. Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? It is certain that both Aaron and Miriam had received a portion of the prophetic spirit (see Exod. iv. 15, and xv. 20), and therefore they thought they might have a share in the government; for though there was no kind of gain attached to this government, and no honour but such as came from God, yet the love of power is natural to the human mind; and in many instances men will sacrifice even honour, pleasure, and profit to the lust of power.

Verse 3. Now the man Moses was very meek. How could Moses, who certainly was as humble and modest as he was meek, write this encomium upon himself? I think the word is not rightly understood; anav, which we translate meek, comes from anah, to act upon, to humble, depress, afflict, and is translated so in many places in the Old Testament; and in this sense it should be understood here: "Now this man Moses was depressed or afflicted more than any man, haadamah, of that land." [Dr Clarke's rendering of anav is not correct. Keil thinks that the statement of Moses was necessary to a full interpretation of the circumstances. The observation of Calmet is just: "As he praises himself here without pride, so will he blame himself elsewhere with humility."]

Verse 4. And the Lord spake suddenly. The sudden interference of God in this business shows at once the importance of the case and his displeasure.

Verse 6. If there be a prophet. To Moses God had communicated himself in a different way—he spoke to him face to face, apparently, showing him his glory: not in dark or enigmatical speeches; this could not be admitted in the case in which Moses was engaged, for he was to receive laws by divine inspiration, the precepts and expressions of which must all be within the reach of the meanest capacity. As Moses, therefore, was chosen of God to be the lawgiver, so was he chosen to see these laws duly enforced for the benefit of the people among whom he presided.

Verse 7. Moses—is faithful. Neeman, a prefect or superintendent. So Samuel is termed, 1 Sam. ii. 35; iii. 20, David is so called, 1 Sam. xviii. 27, Neeman, and son-in-law of the king. Job xii. 20, speaks of the Neemanim as a name of dignity. It seems also to have been a title of respect given to ambassadors, Prov. xiii. 17; xxv. 13. Calmet well observes that the word fidelity is often used for an employ, office, or dignity, and refers to 1 Chron. ix. 22, 26, 81; 2 Chron. xxxi. 12, 15; xxxiv. 12, &c.

Verse 10. Miriam became leprous. It is likely Miriam and, <sup>1</sup> behold, Miriam became <sup>2</sup> leprous, white as snow: and Aaron looked upon Miriam, and, behold, she was leprous.

11 And Aaron said unto Moses, Alas, my lord, I beseech thee, <sup>3</sup> lay not the sin upon us, wherein we have done foolishly, and wherein we have sinned.

12 Let her not be <sup>4</sup> as one dead, of whom the flesh is half consumed when he cometh out of his mother's womb.

13 And Moses cried unto the LORD, saying, Heal her now, O God, I beseech thee.

14 And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>5</sup> If her father had but spit in her face, should she not be ashamed seven days? let her be <sup>6</sup> shut out from the camp seven days, and after that let her be received in again.

15 * And Miriam was shut out from the camp seven days: and the people journeyed not till Miriam was brought in again.

was chief in this mutiny; and it is probable that it was on this ground she is mentioned first (see ver. 1), and punished here, while Aaron is spared. Had he been smitten with the leprosy, his sacred character must have greatly suffered, and perhaps the priesthood itself have fallen into contempt. Nothing tends to discredit the work of God so much as the transgressions and miscarriages of those who minister in holy things.

Verse 14. If her father had but spit in her face. This appears to have been done only in cases of great provocation on the part of the child, and strong irritation on the side of the parent. Spitting in the face was a sign of the deepest contempt. See Job xxx. 10, Isa. i. 6, Mark xiv. 65. In a case where a parent was obliged by the disobedient conduct of his child to treat him in this way, it appears he was banished from the father's presence for seven days. If then this was an allowed and judged case in matters of high provocation on the part of a child, should not the punishment be equally severe where the creature has rebelled against the Creator? Therefore Miriam was shut out of the camp for seven days, and thus debarred from coming into the presence of God her father, who is represented as dwelling among the people. To a soul who knows the value and inexpressible blessedness of communion with God, how intolerable must seven days of spiritual darkness be! But how indescribably wretched must their case be who are cast out into outer darkness, where the light of God no more shines, and where his approbation can no more be felt for ever! Reader, God save thee from so great a curse!

Verse 16. The wilderness of Paran. This could not be the same Paran with that mentioned, Deut. i. 1, for that was on the borders of the promised land; they were long near the borders of Canaan, and might have speedily entered into it, had it not been for their provocations and iniquities. They spent thirty-eight years in a journey which might have been accomplished in a few weeks! How many through their unfaithfulness have been many years in gaining that for which, in the ordinary procedure of divine grace, a few days had been sufficient! How much ground many a man loses in the divine life by one act of unfaithfulness or transgression! Israel wandered in the wilderness because Israel despised the pleasant land, and did not give credence to the word of the Lord. They would have a golden calf, and they had nothing but tribulation and woe in return.

CHAPTER XIII.

Twelve men, one out of every tribe, are sent to examine the nature and state of the land of Canaan, 1-3. Their names, 4-16. Moses gives them particular directions, 17-20. They proceed on their journey, 21, 22. Come to Eshcol, and cut down a branch with a cluster of grapes, which they bear between two of them upon a staff, 23, 25. After forty days they return to Paran, from searching the land, and shew to Moses and the people the fruit they had brought with them, 25, 26. Their report—they acknowledge that the land is good, but that the inhabitants are such as Israel cannot hope to conquer, 27-29. Caleb endeavours to do away the bad impression made, by the report of his fellows, upon the minds of the people, 30. But the others persist in their former statement, 31; and greatly amplify the difficulties of conquest, 32, 33.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 * Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I give unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ruler among them.

3 And Moses by the commandment of the LORD sent them <sup>b</sup> from the wilderness of Paran: all those men were heads of the children of Israel.

4 And these were their names: of the tribe of Reuben, Shammua the son of Zaccur.

5 Of the tribe of Simeon, Shaphat the son of Hori.
6 * Of the tribe of Judah, <sup>d</sup> Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

7 Of the tribe of Issachar, Igal the son of Joseph.

8 Of the tribe of Ephraim, <sup>c</sup> Oshea the son of Nun.

9 Of the tribe of Benjamin, Palti the son of Raphu.

10 Of the tribe of Zebulun, Gaddiel the son of Sodi.

11 Of the tribe of Joseph, namely, of the tribe of Manasseh, Gaddi the son of Susi.

12 Of the tribe of Dan, Ammiel the son of Gemalli.

13 Of the tribe of Asher, Sethur the son of Michael.

14 Of the tribe of Naphtali, Nahbi the son of Vophsi.

15 Of the tribe of Gad, Geuel the son of Machi.

16 These are the names of the men which Moses sent to spy out the land. And Moses called <sup>e</sup> Oshea the son of Nun, Jehoshua.

17 And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way <sup>a</sup> southward, and go up into <sup>b</sup> the mountain:

18 And see the land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many;

19 And what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents or in strong holds;

20 And what the land is, whether it be <sup>f</sup> fat or lean, whether there be wood therein or not. And <sup>g</sup> be ye of good courage, and bring of the fruit of the land. (Now the time was the time of the first ripe grapes.)

21 So they went up, and searched the land <sup>h</sup> from the wilderness of Zin unto <sup>i</sup> Rehob, as men come to Hamath.

23 <sup>q</sup> And they came unto the <sup>r</sup> brook of Eshcol, and cut down from thence a branch with one cluster of grapes, and they bare it between two upon a staff;

Tanis of the heathen historians, which was the capital of lower Egypt. Some think it was to humble the pride of the Egyptians, who boasted the highest antiquity, that this note concerning the higher antiquity of Hebron was introduced by Moses. Some have supposed that it is more likely to have been originally a marginal note, which in process of time crept into the text; but all the Versions, and all the MSS. that have as yet been collated, acknowledge it.

Verse 23. They bare it between two upon a staff] It would be very easy to produce a great number of witnesses to prove that grapes in the promised land, and indeed in various other hot countries, grow to a prodigious size. Pliny mentions bunches of grapes in Africa, each of which was larger than an infant. Radzivil saw at Rhodes bunches of grapes three quarters of an ell in length, each grape as large as a plum. Dandini saw grapes of this size at Mount Libanus; and Paul Lucas mentions some bunches which he saw at Damascus that weighed above forty-five pounds. From the most authentic accounts the Egyptian grape is very small, and this being the only one with which the Israelites were acquainted, the great size of the grapes of Hebron would appear still more extraordinary. [Hebron is still celebrated for its grapes.]

From what is mentioned, ver. 20, Now the time was the time of the first-ripe grapes, it is very probable that the spies received their orders about the beginning of August, and returned about the middle of September, as in those countries grapes, pomegranates, and figs are ripe about this time.

Verse 2. Send thou men, that they may search] It appears from Deut. i. 19-24 that this was done in consequence of the request of the people.

Every one a ruler] Not any of the princes of the people (see chap i.), for these names are different from those; but those now sent were men of consideration and importance in their respective tribes.

Verse 16. And Moses called Oshea—Jehoshua.] This was not the first time in which he had the name of Joshua; see Exod. xvii. 9, and the note there. Some suppose he had this change of name in consequence of the victory over Amalek; see Exod. xvii. 18, 14.

Verse 18. See the land what it is] What sort of a country it is; how situated; its natural advantages or disadvantages.

And the people—whether they be strong or weak] Healthy, robust, hardy men; or little, weak, and pusillanimous.

Verse 20. The land—whether it be fat or lean] Whether the soil be rich or poor; which might be known by its being well wooded, and by the fruits it produced; and therefore they were desired to examine it as to the trees, &c., and to bring some of the fruits with them.

Verse 21. From the wilderness of Zin] The place called Tzin here, is different from that called Sin or Seen, Exod. xvi. 1; the latter was nigh to Egypt, but the former was near Kadesh Barnea, not far from the borders of the promised land.

The spies' carrying the bunch of grapes on a staff between two men was probably not rendered necessary by the size of the bunch or cluster; but to preserve it from being bruised, that the Israelites might have a fair specimen of the fruit. As Joshua and Caleb were the only persons who gave a favourable account of the land, it is most likely that they were the persons who had gathered these fruits, and who brought them to the Israelitish camp. And it is likely they were gathered as short a time as possible before their return, that they might not be injured by the length of time they had been separated from their respective trees.

Verse 27. We came unto the land, &c. It is astonishing that men so dastardly as these should have had courage enough to risk their persons in searching the land. But probably though destitute of valour they had a sufficiency of cunning, and this carried them through. The report they brought was exceedingly discouraging, and naturally tended to produce the effect mentioned in the next chapter. The conduct of Joshua and Caleb was alone magnanimous, and worthy of the cause in which they were embarked.

Verse 32. Men of a great stature. Ansley middoth, men of measures—two men's height; i.e. exceedingly tall men.

Verse 33. There we saw the giants It is evident that they had seen a robust, sturdy, warlike race of men, and of great stature; for the asserted fact is not denied by Joshua or Caleb.

Tales of gigantic men are frequent in all countries, but they are generally of such as have lived in times very remote from those in which such tales are told. That there have been giants at different times, in various parts of the earth, there can be no doubt; but that there ever was a nation of men twelve or fourteen feet high, we cannot, should not believe. Goliath appears to have been at least nine feet high: this was very extraordinary. The Anakim might appear to the Israelites as a very tall, robust nation; and in 31 "But the men that went up with him said, We be not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we.

32 And they "brought up an evil report of the land which they had searched unto the children of Israel, saying, The land through which we have gone to search it is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof: and "all the people that we saw in it are "men of a great stature.

33 And there we saw the giants, "the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight as "grasshoppers, and so we were "in their sight.

comparison of the latter it is very probable that they were so, as it is very likely that the growth of the Israelites had been greatly cramped with their long and severe servitude in Egypt. And this may in some measure account for their alarm.

Canaan was a type of the kingdom of God; the wilderness through which the Israelites passed, of the difficulties and trials to be met with in the present world. The promise of the kingdom of God is given to every believer; but how many are discouraged by the difficulties in the way! A slothful heart sees dangers, lions, and giants, everywhere; and therefore refuses to proceed in the heavenly path. Many of the spies contribute to this by the bad reports they bring of the heavenly country. Certain preachers allow "that the land is good, that it flows with milk and honey," and go so far as to show some of its fruits; but they discourage the people by stating the impossibility of overcoming their enemies. "Sin," say they, "cannot be destroyed in this life—it will always dwell in you—the Anakim cannot be conquered—we are but as grasshoppers against the Anakim," &c., &c. Here and there a Joshua and a Caleb, trusting alone in the power of God, armed with faith in the infinite efficacy of that blood which cleanses from all unrighteousness, boldly stand forth and say: "Their defence is departed from them, and the Lord is with us; let us go up at once and possess the land, for we are well able to overcome." We can do all things through Christ strengthening us: he will purify us unto himself, and give us that rest from sin here which his death has procured and his word has promised. Reader, canst thou not take God at his word? He has never yet failed thee, Surely then thou hast no reason to doubt. Thou hast never yet tried him to the uttermost. Thou knowest not how far and how fully he can save. Do not be dispirited: the sons of Anak shall fall before thee, if thou meet them in the name of the LORD of hosts.

CHAPTER XIV.

The whole congregation weep at the account brought by the spies, 1. They murmur, 2, 3; and purpose to make themselves a captain, and go back to Egypt, 4. Moses and Aaron are greatly affected, 5. Joshua and Caleb endeavour to appease and encourage the people, 6-9. The congregation are about to stone them, 10. The glory of the Lord appears, and he is about to smite the rebels with the pestilence, 11, 12. Moses makes a long and pathetic intercession in their behalf, 13-19. The Lord hears and forbears to punish, 20; but purposes that not one of that generation shall enter into the promised land, save Joshua and Caleb, 21-24. Moses is commanded to turn and get into the wilderness by way of the Red Sea, 25. The Lord repeats his purpose that none of that generation shall enter into the promised land—that their carcases shall fall in the wilderness, and that their children alone, with Joshua and Caleb, shall possess the land of the Canaanites, &c., 26-32. As many days as they have searched the land shall they wander years in the desert, until they shall be utterly consumed, 33-35. All the spies, save Joshua and Caleb, die by a plague, 36-38. Moses declares God's purpose to the people, at which they are greatly affected, 39. They acknowledge their sin, and purpose to go up at once and possess the land, 40. Moses cautions them against resisting the purpose of God, 41-43. They, notwithstanding, presume to go, but Moses and the ark abide in the camp, 44. The Amalekites and Canaanites come down from the mountains, and defeat them, 45.

AND all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried; and the people wept that night.

2<sup>b</sup> And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron: and the whole congregation said unto them, Would God that we had died in the land of Egypt! or would God we had died in this wilderness!

3 And wherefore hath the Lord brought us unto this land, to fall by the sword, that our wives and our children should be a prey? were it not better for us to return into Egypt?

4 And they said one to another, Let us make a captain, and let us return into Egypt.

5 Then Moses and Aaron fell on their faces before all the assembly of the congregation of the children of Israel.

6 And Joshua the son of Nun, and Caleb the son of Jephunneh, which were of them that searched the land, rent their clothes:

7 And they spake unto all the company of the children of Israel, saying, The land, which we passed through to search it, is an exceeding good land.

8 If the Lord delight in us, then he will bring us into the land, and give it us; a land which floweth with milk and honey.

9 Only rebel not ye against the Lord, neither fear ye the people of the land: for they are bread for us; their defence is departed from them, and the Lord is with us: fear them not.

10 But all the congregation bade stone them with stones. And the glory of the Lord appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation, before all the children of Israel.

11 And the Lord said unto Moses, How long will this people provoke me? and how long will it be ere they believe me, for all the signs which I have shewed among them?

12 I will smite them with the pestilence, and disinherit them, and will make of thee a greater nation and mightier than they.

13 And Moses said unto the Lord, Then the Egyptians shall hear it, (for thou broughtest up this people in thy might from among them;)

14 And they will tell it to the inhabitants of this land: for they have heard that thou Lord art among this people, that thou Lord art seen face to face, and that thy cloud standeth over them, and that thou goest before them, by day-time in a pillar of a cloud, and in a pillar of fire by night.

15 Now if thou shalt kill all this people as one man, then the nations which have heard the fame of thee will speak, saying,

16 Because the Lord was not able to bring this people into the land which he swore unto them, therefore he hath slain them in the wilderness.

17 And now, I beseech thee, let the power of my Lord be great, according as thou hast spoken, saying,

18 The Lord is longsuffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.

Verse 1. Cried; and—wept that night. In almost every case this people gave deplorable evidence of the degraded state of their minds. With scarcely any mental firmness, and with almost no religion, they could bear no reverses, and were ever at their wit's end. They were headstrong, presumptuous, pusillanimous, indecisive, and fickle. And because they were such, therefore the power and wisdom of God appeared the more conspicuously in the whole of their history.

Verse 4. Let us make a captain] Here was a formal renunciation of the authority of Moses, and flat rebellion against God. And it seems from Neh. ix. 17, that they had actually appointed another leader, under whose direction they were about to return to Egypt. Their lives were made bitter, because of the rigour with which they were made to serve in the land of Egypt: and yet they are willing, yea eager, to get back into the same circumstances again! Great evils, when once some time past, affect the mind less than present ills, though much inferior. They had partly forgot their Egyptian bondage, and now smart under a little discouragement, having totally lost sight of their high calling, and of the power and goodness of God.

Verse 9. Their defence] Their shadow, a metaphor highly expressive of protection and support in the sultry eastern countries. The protection of God is so called; see Ps. xci. 1, cxxi. 5; see also Isa. li. 16, xlix. 2, xxx. 2.

Verse 10. The glory of the Lord appeared] This timely appearance of the divine glory prevented those faithful servants of God from being stoned to death by this base and treacherous multitude. "Every man is immortal till his work is done," while in simplicity of heart he is following his God.

Verse 14. That thy cloud standeth over them] This cloud, the symbol of the divine glory, and proof of the divine presence, appears to have assumed three different forms for three important purposes.

1. It appeared by day in the form of a pillar of a sufficient height to be seen by all the camp, and thus went before them to point out their way in the desert; Exod. xi. 38.

2. It appeared by night as a pillar of fire to give them light while travelling by night, which they probably sometimes did (see chap. ix. 21); or to illuminate their tents in their encampments; Exod. xiii. 21, 22.

3. It stood at certain times above the whole congregation, overshadowing them from the scorching rays of the sun; and probably at other times condensed the vapours, and precipitated rain or dew for the refreshment of the people. He spread a cloud for their covering; and fire to give light in the night; Ps. cv. 39. It was probably from this circumstance that the shadow of the Lord was used to signify the divine protection, not only by the Jews, but also by other Asiatic nations.

19 *Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people<sup>b</sup> according unto the greatness of thy mercy, and<sup>c</sup> as thou hast forgiven this people, from Egypt even<sup>d</sup> until now.

20 And the LORD said, I have pardoned<sup>e</sup> according to thy word.

21 But as truly as I live, 'all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD.

22 *Because all those men which have seen my glory, and my miracles, which I did in Egypt and in the wilderness, have tempted me now<sup>h</sup> these ten times, and have not hearkened to my voice:

23 'Surely<sup>i</sup> they shall not see the land which I sware unto their fathers, neither shall any of them that provoked me see it:

24 But my servant<sup>k</sup> Caleb, because he had another spirit with him, and<sup>l</sup> hath followed me fully, him will I bring into the land wherinto he went; and his seed shall possess it.

25 (Now the Amalekites and the Canaanites dwell in the valley.) To-morrow turn you,<sup>m</sup> and get you into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea.

26 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

27 *How long shall I bear with this evil congregation, which murmur against me? *I have heard the murmurings of the children of Israel, which they murmur against me.

28 Say unto them, **As truly as I live*, saith the LORD, 'as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you:

29 Your carcases shall fall in this wilderness; and<sup>n</sup> all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me, 30 Doubtless ye shall not come into the land, concerning which I<sup>o</sup> sware to make you dwell therein, 'save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun.

31 *But your little ones, which ye said should be a prey, them will I bring in, and they shall know the land which<sup>p</sup> ye have despised.

32 But as for you,<sup>q</sup> your carcases, they shall fall in this wilderness.

35 "I the LORD have said, I will surely do it unto all<sup>ff</sup> this evil congregation, that are gathered together against me: in this wilderness they shall be consumed, and there they shall die.

36 <sup>hh</sup>And the men, which Moses sent to search the land, who returned, and made all the congregation to murmur against him, by bringing up a slander upon the land, 37 Even those men that did bring up the evil report upon the land, <sup>ii</sup>died by the plague before the LORD.

Verse 19. Pardon, I beseech thee, the iniquity of this people] From ver. 18 to ver. 19 inclusive we have the words of Moses's intercession; they need no explanation, they are full of simplicity and energy; his arguments with God (for he did reason and argue with his Maker) are pointed, cogent, and respectful; and while they show a heart full of humanity, they evidence the deepest concern for the glory of God. The argumentum ad hominem is here used in the most unexceptionable manner, and with the fullest effect.

Verse 20. I have pardoned] That is, They shall not be cut off as they deserve, because thou hast interceded for their lives.

Verse 21. All the earth shall be filled, &c.] All this land, i.e. the land of Canaan; which was only fulfilled to the letter when the preaching of Christ and his apostles was heard through all the cities and villages of Judah. It does not appear that the whole of the terraqueous globe is meant by this expression in any of the places where it occurs connected with this promise of the diffusion of the divine light.

Verse 24. But my servant Caleb, &c.] Caleb had another spirit—not only a bold, generous, courageous, noble, and heroic spirit; but the Spirit and influence of the God of heaven thus raised him above human inquietudes and earthly fears, therefore he followed God fully; literally, he filled after me: [or rather he fulfilled to walk behind me.] God showed him the way he was to take, and the line of conduct he was to pursue, and he filled up this line, and in all things followed the will of his Maker. He therefore shall see the promised land, and his seed shall possess it. A dastardly spirit in the things of God is a heavy curse. How many fall short of the blessings of the gospel, though magnifying the number and strength of their adversaries, their own weakness and the difficulties of the way, and their distrust of the power, faithfulness, and goodness of God! And how many are prevented from receiving the higher degrees of salvation by foolishly attributing insurmountable power, either to their inward corruptions or outward enemies! Only such men as Joshua and Caleb, who take God at his word, are likely to follow God fully and receive the heights, lengths, breadths, and depths of the salvation of God.

Verse 34. After the number of the days] The spies were forty days in searching the land, and the people who rebelled on their evil report are condemned to wander forty years in the wilderness! Now let them make them a captain and go back to Egypt if they can. God had so hedged them about with his power and providence that they could neither go back to Egypt nor get forward to the promised land! God has provided innumerable spiritual blessings for mankind, but in the pursuit of earthly good they lose them, and often lose the others also! If ye be willing and obedient, ye shall eat the fruit of the land, but not otherwise; unless for your farther punishment God give you your portion in this life, and ye get none in the life to come. From so great a curse may God save thee, thou money-loving, honour-hunting, pleasure-taking, thoughtless, godless man!

And ye shall know my breach of promise.] This is certainly a most harsh expression; and most learned men agree that the words should be translated my vengeance, which is followed by almost all our ancient English translations. The meaning, however, appears to be this: As God had promised to bring them into the good land, provided they kept his statutes, ordinances, &c., and they had now broken their engagements, he was no longer held by his covenant; and therefore by excluding them from the promised land, he showed them at once his annulling of the covenant which they had broken, and his vengeance because they had broken it. [The original may be rendered "my turning away."]

Verse 37. Those men that did bring up the evil report—died] Thus ten of the twelve that searched out the land were struck dead, by the justice of God, on the spot! Caleb, children of Israel: "and the people mourned greatly.

40 And they rose up early in the morning, and gat them up into the top of the mountain, saying, Lo, <sup>b</sup> we be here, and will go up unto the place which the LORD hath promised: for we have sinned.

41 And Moses said, Wherefore now do ye transgress "the commandment of the LORD? but it shall not prosper.

42 <sup>d</sup> Go not up, for the LORD is not among you; that ye be not smitten before your enemies.

of the tribe of Judah, and Joshua, of the tribe of Ephraim, alone escaped, because they had followed God fully. Let preachers of God's word take heed how they straiten the way of salvation, or render, by unjust description, that way perplexed and difficult, which God has made plain and easy.

Verse 40. We—will go up unto the place, &c.] How vain is the counsel of man against the wisdom of God! Nature, poor fallen human nature, is ever running into extremes. This miserable people, a short time ago, thought that 43 For the Amalekites and the Canaanites are there before you, and ye shall fall by the sword: "because ye are turned away from the LORD, therefore the LORD will not be with you.

44 "But they presumed to go up unto the hill top: nevertheless the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and Moses, departed not out of the camp.

45 "Then the Amalekites came down, and the Canaanites which dwelt in that hill, and smote them, and discomfited them, even unto <sup>b</sup> Hormah.

though they had Omnipotence with them they could not conquer and possess the land! Now they imagine that though God himself go not with them, yet they shall be sufficient to drive out the inhabitants, and take possession of their country! Man is ever supposing he can either do all things or do nothing; he is therefore sometimes presumptuous, and at other times in despair. Who but an apostle, or one under the influence of the same Spirit, can say, I can do ALL THINGS THROUGH CHRIST who strengtheneth me?

Directions concerning the different offerings they should bring unto the Lord when they should come to the land of Canaan, 1-3. Directions relative to the meat-offering, 4; to the drink-offering, 5. Of the burnt-offering, vow-offering, peace-offering, drink-offering, &c., 6-12. All born in the country must perform these rites, 13, and the strangers also, 14-16. They shall offer unto the Lord a heave-offering of the first-fruits of the land, 17-21. Concerning omissions through ignorance, and the sacrifices to be offered on such occasions, 22-29. They put him in confinement, till the mind of the Lord should be known on the case, 34. The Lord commands him to be stoned, 35. He is stoned to death, 36. The Israelites are commanded to make fringes to the borders of their garments, 37, 38. The end for which these fringes were to be made, that they might remember the commandments of the Lord, that they might be holy, 39-41.

Verse 2. When ye be come into the land] Some learned men are of opinion that several offerings prescribed by the law were not intended to be made in the wilderness, but in the promised land; the former not affording those conveniences which were necessary to the complete observance of the divine worship in this and several other respects.

Verse 5. The fourth part of an hin] The quantity of Verse 14. If a stranger sojourn] When the case of the Jewish people is fairly considered, and their situation with respect to the surrounding idolatrous nations, we shall see the absolute necessity of having but one form of worship in the land. That alone was genuine which was prescribed by the Almighty, and no others could be tolerated, because they were idolatrous. All strangers—all that came to sojourn in the land, were required to conform to it; and it was right that those who did conform to it should have equal rights and privileges with the Hebrews themselves, which we find was the case. But under the Christian dispensation, as no particular form of worship is prescribed, the types and ceremonies of the Mosaic institution being all fulfilled, unlimited toleration should be allowed; and while the sacred writings are made the basis of the worship offered to God, every man should be allowed to worship according to his own conscience, for in this respect every one is he shall bring a she-goat of the first year for a sin-offering.

28 * And the priest shall make an atonement for the soul that sinneth ignorantly, when he sinneth by ignorance before the LORD, to make an atonement for him; and it shall be forgiven him.

29 * Ye shall have one law for him that <sup>p</sup> sinneth through ignorance, both for him that is born among the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them.

30 * But the soul that doeth ought <sup>q</sup> presumptuously, whether he be born in the land, or a stranger, the same reproacheth the LORD; and that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

32 And while the children of Israel were in the wilderness, <sup>t</sup> they found a man that gathered sticks upon the sabbath day.

33 And they that found him gathering sticks brought him unto Moses and Aaron, and unto all the congregation.

34 And they put him <sup>u</sup> in ward, because it was not declared what should be done to him.

35 And the LORD said unto Moses, * The man shall be surely put to death: all the congregation shall <sup>v</sup> stone him with stones without the camp.

36 And all the congregation brought him without the camp, and stoned him with stones, and he died; as the LORD commanded Moses.

37 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

38 Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid <sup>w</sup> them that they make their fringes in the border of their garments throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribbon of blue:

39 And it shall be unto you for a fringe, that ye may look upon it, and remember all the commandments of the LORD, and do them; and that ye <sup>x</sup> seek not after your own heart and your own eyes, after which ye use <sup>y</sup> to go a whoring:

40 That ye may remember, and do all my commandments, and be <sup>z</sup> holy unto your God.

"Lord of himself, accountable to none,
But to his conscience and his God alone."

Verse 24. If ought be committed by ignorance] See the notes on Lev. ii. 2, and v. 17. The case here probably refers to the whole congregation; the cases above, to the sin of an individual.

Verse 25. The priest shall make an atonement] Even sins committed through ignorance required an atonement; and God in his mercy has provided one for them.

Verse 30. But the soul that doeth ought presumptuously] Bold daring acts of transgression against the fullest evidence, and in despite of the divine authority, admitted of no atonement; the person was to be cut off—to be excluded from God's people, and from all their privileges and blessings.

Probably the presumption mentioned here implied an utter contempt of the word and authority of God, springing from an idolatrous or atheistical mind. In such a case all repentance was precluded, because of the denial of the word and being of God. It is probably a case similar to that mentioned Heb. vi. 4-5, x. 26-31.

Verse 32. They found a man that gathered sticks upon the sabbath] This was in all likelihood a case of that kind supposed above: the man despised the word of the Lord, and therefore broke his commandment; see ver. 31. On this ground he was punished with the utmost rigour of the law.

Verse 38. Bid them—make them fringes] We learn from ver. 39 that these fringes were emblematical of the various commands of God. That there was any analogy between a fringe and a precept, it would be bold to assert; but when a thing is appointed to represent another, no matter how different, that first object becomes the regular representative or sign of the other. So the fringes, being appointed by God to represent and bring to mind the commandments of God, ver. 39, the mention or sight of them conveyed the intelligence intended. All the Jews wore these, and so probably did our Lord; see Mat. ix. 20, where the word craspedon is rather to be understood of the fringe than of the hem of his garment.

CHAPTER XVI.

The rebellion of Korah and his company against Moses, 1-3. He directs them how to try, in the course of the next day, whom God had called to the priesthood, 4-11. Dathan and Abiram use the most seditious speeches, 12-14. Moses is wroth, 15; and orders Korah and his company to be ready on the morrow with their censers and incense, 16-18. Korah gathers his company together, 19. The glory of the Lord appears, and he threatens to consume them, 20, 21. Moses and Aaron intercede for them, 22. The people are commanded to leave the tents of the rebels, 23-26. They obey, and Korah and his company come out and stand before the door of their tents, 27. Moses in a solemn address puts the contention to issue, 28-30. As soon as he had done speaking, the earth clave and swallowed them, and all that appertained to them, 31-34; and the 250 men who offered incense are consumed by fire, 35. The Lord commands Eleazar to preserve the censers, because they were hallowed, 36-38. Eleazar makes of them a covering for the altar, 39, 40. The next day the people murmur anew, the glory of the Lord appears, and Moses and Aaron go to the tabernacle, 41-43. They are commanded to separate themselves from the congregation, 44, 45. Moses, perceiving that God had sent a plague among them, directs Aaron to hasten and make an atonement, 46. Aaron does so, and the plague is stayed, 47, 48. The number of those who died by the plague, 14,700 men, 49, 50.

2 And they rose up before Moses, with certain of the children of Israel, two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, <sup>b</sup>famous in the congregation, men of renown:

3 And <sup>c</sup>they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron, and said unto them, <sup>d</sup>Ye take too much upon you, seeing <sup>e</sup>all the congregation are holy, every one of them; and the Lord is among them: wherefore lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the Lord?

Verse 1. Now Korah—took men] Had not these been the most brutish of men, could they have possibly so soon forgotten the signal displeasure of God manifested against them so lately for their rebellion? The word men is not in the original; and the verb he took is not in the plural, but the singular, hence it cannot be applied to the act of all these chiefs. In every part of the scripture where this rebellion is referred to it is attributed to Korah (see chap. xxvi. 8, and Jude, ver. 11), therefore the verb here belongs to him, and the whole verse should be translated thus: Now Korah, son of Yiszar, son of Kohath, son of Levi, he took even Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and On, son of Peleth, son of Reuben; and they rose up, &c. This makes a very regular and consistent sense.

Verse 8. Ye take too much upon you] The original is simply too much for you. The spirit of this saying appears to me to be the following: "Holy offices are not equally distributed: you arrogate to yourselves the most important ones, as if your superior holiness entitled you alone to them; whereas all the congregation are holy, and have an equal right with you to be employed in the most holy services." Moses retorts this saying, ver. 7; Ye take too much upon you; Ye have too much already, ye sons of Levi; i.e. by your present spirit and disposition you prove yourselves to be wholly unworthy of any spiritual employment.

Verse 5. The Lord will shew who are his] It is supposed that St. Paul refers to this place, 2 Tim. ii. 19: The foundation of God—the whole sacrificial system, referring to Christ Jesus, the foundation of the salvation of men; standeth sure, notwithstanding the rebellions, intrusions, and false doctrines of men; having this seal—this stamp of its divine authenticity, The Lord knoweth them that are his; a literal all thy brethren the sons of Levi with thee: and seek ye the priesthood also?

11 For which cause both thou and all thy company are gathered together against the LORD: "and what is Aaron, that ye murmur against him?

12 And Moses sent to call Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab: which said, We will not come up:

13 Is it a small thing that thou hast brought us up out of a land that floweth with milk and honey, to kill us in the wilderness, except thou "make thyself altogether a prince over us?

14 Moreover thou hast not brought us into "a land that floweth with milk and honey, or given us inheritance of fields and vineyards: wilt thou "put out the eyes of these men? we will not come up.

15 And Moses was very wroth, and said unto the LORD, "Respect not thou their offering: "I have not taken one ass from them, neither have I hurt one of them.

16 And Moses said unto Korah, <sup>b</sup>Be thou and all thy company "before the LORD, thou, and they, and Aaron, to-morrow:

17 And take every man his censer, and put incense in them, and bring ye before the LORD every man his censer, two hundred and fifty censers; thou also, and Aaron, each of you his censer.

18 And they took every man his censer, and put fire in them, and laid incense thereon, and stood in the door of the tabernacle of the congregation with Moses and Aaron.

19 And Korah gathered all the congregation against them unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and "the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the congregation.

20 And the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

21 <sup>b</sup>Separate yourselves from among this congregation, that I may "consume them in a moment.

22 And they "fell upon their faces, and said, O God, "the God of the spirits of all flesh, shall one man sin, and wilt thou be wroth with all the congregation?

23 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

24 Speak unto the congregation, saying, Get you up from about the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram.

25 And Moses rose up and went unto Dathan and Abiram; and the elders of Israel followed him.

26 And he spake unto the congregation, saying, "Depart, I pray you, from the tents of these wicked men, and touch nothing of theirs, lest ye be consumed in all their sins.

27 So they gat up from the tabernacle of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, on every side: and Dathan and Abiram came out, and stood in the door of their tents, and their wives, and their sons, and their little children.

28 And Moses said, "Hereby ye shall know that the LORD hath sent me to do all these works; for I have not done them "of mine own mind.

29 If these men die "the common death of all men, or if they be "visited after the visitation of all men; then the LORD hath not sent me.

30 But if the LORD "make "a new thing, and the earth open her mouth, and swallow them up, with all that appertain unto them, and they "go down quick into the pit; then ye shall understand that these men have provoked the LORD.

31 "And it came to pass, as he had made an end of speaking all these words, that the ground clave asunder that was under them:

33 They, and all that appertained to them, went down alive into the pit, and the earth closed upon them: and they perished from among the congregation.

34 And all Israel, that were round about them fled at the cry of them: for they said, Lest the earth swallow us up also.

35 And there "came out a fire from the LORD, and consumed "the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense.

36 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

37 Speak unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, that he take up the censers out of the burning, and scatter thou the fire yonder; for "they are hallowed.

38 The censers of these "sinners against their own souls, let them make them broad plates for a covering of the altar: for they offered them before the LORD, therefore they are hallowed: "and they shall be a sign unto the children of Israel.

[Verse 15. Respect not thou their offering] There was no danger of this: they wished to set up a priesthood and a sacrificial system of their own; and God never has blessed, and never can bless, any scheme of salvation, which is not of his own appointment. Man is ever supposing that he can mend his Maker's work, or that he can make one of his own that will do in its place.

proofs that the Old Testament teaches that there is an immortal spirit in man? "But does not ruach signify wind or breath?" Sometimes it does, but certainly not here; for how absurd would it be to say, O God, the God of the breaths of all flesh!

supernatural earthquake; while the fire from the Lord consumed the 250 men that bare censers. Thus there were two distinct punishments, the pit and the fire, for the two divisions of these rebels.

Verse 37. The censers—are hallowed.] Are consecrated, i.e. to the service of God, though in this instance improperly employed.

Verse 41. On the morrow all the congregation—murmured] It is very likely that the people persuaded themselves that Moses and Aaron had used some cunning in this business, and that the earthquake and fire were artificial; else, had they discerned the hand of God in this punishment, could they have dared the anger of the Lord in the very face of justice? [This is scarcely likely. They regarded Moses and Aaron as responsible for the catastrophe.]

Verse 46. The plague is begun.] God now punished them by a secret blast, so as to put the matter beyond all dispute; his hand, and his alone, was seen, not only in the plague, but in the manner in which the mortality was arrested. It was necessary that this should be done in this way, that the whole congregation might see that those men who had perished were not the people of the Lord; and that GOD, not Moses and Aaron, had destroyed them.

Verse 48. He stood between the dead and the living; and the plague, &c.] What the plague was we know not, but it 45 * Got you up from among this congregation, that I may consume them as in a moment. And <sup>f</sup> they fell upon their faces.

46 And Moses said unto Aaron, Take a censer, and put fire therein from off the altar, and put on incense, and go quickly unto the congregation, and make an atonement for them: <sup>g</sup> for there is wrath gone out from the LORD; the plague is begun.

47 And Aaron took as Moses commanded, and ran into the midst of the congregation: and, behold, the plague was begun among the people: and he put on incense, and made an atonement for the people.

48 And he stood between the dead and the living; and the plague was stayed.

49 Now they that died in the plague were fourteen thousand and seven hundred, beside them that died about the matter of Korah.

50 And Aaron returned unto Moses unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation: and the plague was stayed.

Ch. xx. 6.—<sup>g</sup> Lev. x. 6. Ch. i. 53. viii. 19. xi. 33. xviii. 5. 1 Chron. xxvii. 24. Ps. cvi. 29.

seems to have begun at one part of the camp, and to have proceeded regularly onward; and Aaron went to the quarter where it was then prevailing, and stood with his atonement where it was now making its ravages, and the plague was stayed; but not before 14,700 had fallen victims to it, ver. 49.

If Aaron the high-priest, with his censer and incense, could disarm the wrath of an insulted angry Deity, so that a guilty people who deserved nothing but destruction should be spared; how much more effectual may we expect the great atonement to be which was made by the Lord Jesus Christ, of whom Aaron was only the type!

By the awful transaction recorded in this chapter, we may see how jealous God is of the sole right of appointing the way and means of salvation. Had any priesthood, and any kind of service, no matter how solemn and sincere, been equally available in the sight of divine justice and mercy, God would not have resented in so awful a manner the attempts of Korah and his company in their new service. The way of God's own appointment, the agony and death of Christ is the only way in which souls can be saved. His is the priesthood, and his is the only available sacrifice. All other modes and schemes of salvation are the inventions of men or devils, and will in the end prove ruinous to all those who trust in them. Reader, forget not the Lord who bought thee.

CHAPTER XVII.

The twelve chiefs of the tribes are commanded to take their rods, and to write the name of each tribe upon the rod that belonged to its representative; but the name of Aaron is to be written on the rod of the tribe of Levi, 1-3. The rods are to be laid up before the Lord, who promises that the man's rod whom he shall choose for priest shall blossom, 4, 5. The rods are produced, and laid up before the tabernacle, 6, 7. Aaron's rod alone buds, blossoms, and bears fruit, 8, 9. It is laid up before the testimony as a token of the manner in which God had disposed of the priesthood, 10, 11. The people are greatly terrified, and are apprehensive of being destroyed, 12, 13.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Speak unto the children of Israel, and take of every one of them a rod according

Verse 2. And take of every one of them a rod] Matteh, the staff or sceptre, which the prince or chief of each tribe bore, and which was the sign of office or royalty among almost all the people of the earth.

3 And thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi; for one rod shall be for the head of the house of their fathers.

4 And thou shalt lay them up in the tabernacle of the congregation before the testimony, * where I will meet with you.

5 And it shall come to pass, that the man's rod, <sup>b</sup> whom I shall choose, shall blossom: and I will make to cease from me the murmurings of the children of Israel, <sup>c</sup> whereby they murmur against you.

6 And Moses spake unto the children of Israel, and every one of the princes gave him <sup>d</sup> a rod a piece, for each prince one, according to their fathers' house; even twelve rods: and the rod of Aaron was among their rods.

7 And Moses laid up the rods before the LORD in <sup>e</sup> the tabernacle of witness.

8 And it came to pass, that on the morrow Moses

Verse 5. The man's rod, whom I shall choose, shall blossom. It was necessary that something farther should be done to quiet the minds of the people, and for ever to settle the dispute, in what tribe the priesthood should be fixed. God therefore took the method described in the text, and it had the desired effect; the Aaronical priesthood was never after disputed.

Verse 8. The rod of Aaron—was budded, &c.] That is, on the same rod or staff were found buds, blossoms, and ripe fruit. This fact was so unquestionably miraculous as to decide the business for ever; and probably this was intended to show that in the priesthood, represented by that of Aaron, the beginning, middle, and end of every good work must be found. The buds of good desires, the blossoms of holy resolutions and promising professions, and the ripe fruit of faith, love, and obedience, all spring from the priesthood of the Lord Jesus. It has been thought by some that Aaron's staff (and perhaps the staves of all the tribes) was made out of the common almond tree. In a favourable soil and climate it grows to twenty feet in height, is one of the most noble flourishing trees in nature; its flowers are of a delicate red, and it puts them forth early in March, having begun to bud in January. It has its name shaked from shakad, to awake, because it buds and flowers sooner than most other trees. And it is very likely that the staves of office, borne by the chiefs of all the tribes, were made of this tree, merely to signify that watchfulness and assiduous care which the chiefs should take of the persons committed, in the course of the divine providence, to their keeping.

Every thing in this miracle is so far beyond the power of nature, that no doubt could remain on the minds of the people, or the envious chiefs, of the divine appointment of went into the tabernacle of witness shall be reckoned the rod of Aaron for the house of Levi: the thresh- and brought forth buds, and bloomed blossoms, yielded almonds.

9 And Moses brought out all the rods from before <sup>up to</sup> the LORD unto all the children of Israel: and they looked, and took every man his rod.

10 And the LORD said unto Moses, Bring 'Aaron's rod again before the testimony, to be kept <sup>a</sup> for a token against the <sup>b</sup> rebels; <sup>c</sup> and thou shalt quite take away their murmurings from me, that they die not.

11 And Moses did so: as the LORD commanded him, so did he.

12 And the children of Israel spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.

13 <sup>d</sup> Whosoever cometh any thing near unto the tabernacle of the LORD shall die: shall we be consumed with dying?

Aaron, and of the especial interference of God in this case. To see a piece of wood, long cut off from the parent stock, without bark or moisture remaining, laid up in a dry place for a single night, with others in the same circumstances,—to see such a piece of wood resume and evince the perfection of vegetative life, budding, blossoming, and bringing forth ripe fruit at the same time, must be such a demonstration of the peculiar interference of God, as to silence every doubt and satisfy every scruple. It is worthy of remark that a sceptre, or staff of office, resuming its vegetative life, was considered an absolute impossibility among the ancients; and as they were accustomed to swear by their sceptres, this circumstance was added to establish and confirm the oath.

When the circumstance of the rod or sceptre being used anciently in this way, and the absolute impossibility of its revivescence so strongly appealed to, is considered, it appears to have been a very proper instrument for the present occasion, for the change that passed on it must be acknowledged as an immediate and incontestable miracle.

Verse 12. Behold, we die, we perish, we all perish.] Garaenu signifies not so much to die simply, as to feel an extreme difficulty of breathing, which, producing suffocation, ends at last in death. See the folly of this sinful people. At first, every person might come near to God, for all, they thought, were sufficiently holy, and every way qualified to minister in holy things. Now, no one, in their apprehension, can come near to the tabernacle without being consumed, ver. 13. In both cases they were wrong; some there were who might approach, others there were who might not. God had put the difference. His decision should have been final with them; but sinners are ever running into extremes.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The priests are to bear the iniquity of the sanctuary, 1. The Levites, to minister to the priests, and have charge of the tabernacle, 2-4. The priests alone to have charge of the sanctuary, &c., no stranger to come nigh on pain of death, 5-7. The portion allowed for their maintenance, 8. They shall have every meat-offering; and they shall eat them in the holy place, 9, 10. The wave-offerings, 11. The first-fruits of the oil, wine, and wheat, and whatever is first ripe, and every devoted thing, 12-14; also, all the first-born of men and beasts, 15-18; and heave-offerings, 19. The priests shall have no inheritance, 20. The Levites shall have no inheritance, but shall have the tenth of the produce in Israel, 21-24, of which they are to give a tenth to the priests, taken from the best parts, 25-30.

AND the LORD said unto Aaron, "Thou and thy sons, and thy father's house with thee, shall <sup>b</sup> bear the iniquity of the sanctuary: and thou and thy sons with thee shall bear the iniquity of your priesthood.

2 And thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi, the tribe of thy father, bring thou with thee, that they may be <sup>c</sup> joined unto thee, and <sup>d</sup> minister unto thee: but <sup>e</sup> thou and thy sons with thee shall minister before the tabernacle of witness.

3 And they shall keep thy charge, and <sup>f</sup> the charge of all the tabernacle: <sup>g</sup> only they shall not come nigh the vessels of the sanctuary and the altar, <sup>h</sup> that neither they, nor ye also, die.

4 And they shall be joined unto thee, and keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, for all the service of the tabernacle: <sup>i</sup> and a stranger shall not come nigh unto you.

5 And ye shall keep <sup>j</sup> the charge of the sanctuary, and the charge of the altar: <sup>k</sup> that there be no wrath any more upon the children of Israel.

6 And I, behold, I have <sup>l</sup> taken your brethren the Levites from among the children of Israel: <sup>m</sup> to you they are given as a gift for the LORD, to do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

7 Therefore <sup>n</sup> thou and thy sons with thee shall keep your priest's office for every thing of the altar, and <sup>o</sup> within the veil; and ye shall serve: I have given your priest's office <sup>p</sup> unto you as a service of gift: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

8 And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Behold, <sup>q</sup> I also have given thee the charge of mine heave-offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel; unto thee have I given them <sup>r</sup> by reason of the anointing, and to thy sons, by an ordinance for ever.

Verse 1. Thou and thy sons—shall bear the iniquity of the sanctuary, &c. That is, They must be answerable for its legal pollutions, and must make the necessary atonements and expiations. By this, they must feel that, though they had got a high and important office confirmed to them by a miraculous interference, yet it was a place of the highest responsibility; and that they must not be high-minded, but fear.

Verse 2. Thy brethren also of the tribe of Levi—may be joined unto thee [There is a fine paronomasia, or play upon words, in the original. Levi comes from the root lavah, to join to, couple, associate: hence Moses says, the Levites, yilavvu, shall be joined or associated with the priests; they shall conjointly perform the whole of the sacred office, but the priests shall be principal, the Levites only their associates or assistants.

Verse 15. The first-born of man—and the firstling of unclean beasts] Thus vain man is ranked with the beasts that perish; and with the worst kinds of them too, those deemed unclean.

Verse 16. Shalt thou redeem—for the money of five shekels] Redemption of the first-born is one of the rites which is still practised among the Jews.

10 "In the most holy place shalt thou eat it; every male shall eat it: it shall be holy unto thee.

12 <sup>d</sup> All the <sup>e</sup> best of the oil, and all the best of the wine, and of the wheat, <sup>f</sup> the first-fruits of them which they shall offer unto the LORD, them have I given thee.

13 And whatsoever is first ripe in the land, <sup>g</sup> which they shall bring unto the LORD, shall be thine; <sup>h</sup> every one that is clean in thine house shall eat of it.

14 <sup>i</sup> Every thing devoted in Israel shall be thine.

15 Every thing that openeth <sup>j</sup> the matrix in all flesh, which they bring unto the LORD, whether it be of men or beasts, shall be thine; nevertheless <sup>k</sup> the first-born of man shalt thou surely redeem, and the firstling of unclean beasts shalt thou redeem.

16 And those that are to be redeemed from a month old shalt thou redeem, <sup>l</sup> according to thine estimation, for the money of five shekels, after the shekel of the sanctuary, <sup>m</sup> which is twenty gerahs.

17 <sup>n</sup> But the firstling of a cow, or the firstling of a sheep, or the firstling of a goat, thou shalt not redeem; they are holy: <sup>o</sup> thou shalt sprinkle their blood upon the altar, and shalt burn their fat for an offering made by fire, for a sweet savour unto the LORD.

18 And the flesh of them shall be thine, as the <sup>p</sup> wave-breast, and as the right shoulder are thine.

19 <sup>q</sup> All the heave-offerings of the holy things, which the children of Israel offer unto the LORD, have I given thee and thy sons and thy daughters with thee, by a statute for ever: <sup>r</sup> it is a covenant of salt for ever before the LORD, unto thee and to thy seed with thee.

20 And the LORD spake unto Aaron, Thou shalt have no inheritance in their land, neither shalt thou have any part among them: <sup>s</sup> I am thy part and thine inheritance among the children of Israel.

Verse 19. It is a covenant of salt] That is, an incorruptible everlasting covenant. As salt was added to different kinds of viands, not only to give them a relish, but to preserve them from putrefaction and decay, it became the emblem of incorruptibility and permanence. Among the Asiatics, eating together was deemed a bond of perpetual friendship: and as salt was a common article in all their repasts, it may be in reference to this circumstance that a perpetual covenant is termed a covenant of salt; because the parties ate together of the sacrifice offered on the occasion, and the whole transaction was considered as a league of endless friendship.

Verse 20. I am thy part and thine inheritance] The principal part of what was offered to God was the portion of the priests, therefore they had no inheritance of land in Israel; independently of that they had a very ample provision for their support. The rabbins say twenty-four gifts were given to the priests, and they are all expressed in the law. Eight of those gifts the priests ate nowhere but in the sanctuary: these eight are the following:

1. The flesh of the SIN-OFFERING, whether of beasts or fowls, Lev. vi. 25, 26.

2. The flesh of the TRESPASS-OFFERING, Lev. vii. 1, 6.

21 And, behold, * I have given the children of Levi all the tenth in Israel for an inheritance, for their service which they serve, even <sup>b</sup> the service of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 * Neither must the children of Israel henceforth come nigh the tabernacle of the congregation, <sup>c</sup> lest they bear sin, <sup>e</sup> and die.

23 * But the Levites shall do the service of the tabernacle of the congregation, and they shall bear their iniquity: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, that among the children of Israel they have no inheritance.

24 * But the tithes of the children of Israel, which they offer <sup>as</sup> an heave-offering unto the Lord, I have given to the Levites to inherit: therefore I have said unto them, <sup>b</sup> Among the children of Israel they shall have no inheritance.

25 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Thus speak unto the Levites, and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave-offering of it for the Lord, even <sup>a</sup> a tenth part of the tithe.

4. The remainder of the OMER or SHEAF, Lev. xxiii. 10, &c.

5. The remnants of the MEAT-OFFERINGS of the Israelites, Lev. vi. 16.

6. The two LOAVES, Lev. xxiii. 17.

7. The SHEW-BREAD, Lev. xxiv. 9.

8. The LOG of OIL offered by the leper, Lev. xiv. 10, &c.

FIVE of those gifts they ate only in Jerusalem:

1. The breast and shoulder of the PEACE-OFFERINGS, Lev. vii. 31, 34.

2. The HEAVE-OFFERING of the sacrifice of confession, Lev. vii. 12, 14.

3. The HEAVE-OFFERING of the Nazarite's ram, Lev. vi. 17, 20.

4. The FIRSTLING of the clean beast, Num. xviii. 15, Deut. xv. 19, 20.

5. The FIRST-FRUIT, Num. xviii. 13.

FIVE gifts were not due unto them by the Law, but in the land of Israel only:

1. The heave-offering or FIRST-FRUIT, Num. xviii. 12.

2. The heave-offering of the TITHE, Num. xviii. 28.

3. The CAKE, Num. xv. 20. These three were holy.

4. The first-fruits of the FLEECE, Deut. xviii. 4.

5. The FIELD of POSSESSION, Num. xxxv. These two were common.

FIVE gifts were due unto them both within and without the land:

1. The gifts of the BEASTS SLAIN, Deut. xviii. 3.

2. The redemption of the FIRST-BORN SON, Num. xviii. 15.

3. The LAMB for the firstling of an ass, Exod. iv. 20; Num. xviii.

4. The restitution of that taken by violence from a stranger, Num. v. 8.

5. All DEVOTED things, Num. xviii. 14.

ONE gift was due unto them from the sanctuary:

1. The skins of the burnt-offering, and all the skins of the other most holy things, Lev. vii. 8. In all 24.

27 * And this your heave-offering shall be reckoned unto you, as though it were the corn of the threshing-floor, and as the fulness of the wine-press.

28 Thus ye also shall offer an heave-offering unto the Lord of all your tithes, which ye receive of the children of Israel; and ye shall give thereof the Lord's heave-offering to Aaron the priest.

29 Out of all your gifts ye shall offer every heave-offering of the Lord, of all the <sup>a</sup> best thereof, even the hallowed part thereof out of it.

30 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, When ye have heaved the best thereof from it, <sup>a</sup> then it shall be counted unto the Levites as the increase of the threshing-floor, and as the increase of the wine-press.

31 And ye shall eat it in every place, ye and your households: for it is <sup>m</sup> your reward for your service in the tabernacle of the congregation.

32 And ye shall <sup>a</sup> bear no sin by reason of it, when ye have heaved from it the best of it: neither shall ye <sup>a</sup> pollute the holy things of the children of Israel, lest ye die.

The gifts which the females of the priests' families had a part in were these:

1. The heave-offering, or first-fruits. 2. The heave-offering of the tithe. 3. The cake. 4. The gifts of the beast, Deut. xviii. 3. 5. The first of the fleece.

Besides all this the priests had the tribute money mentioned Num. xxxi. 28, 29.

Verse 21. Behold, I have given the children of Levi all the tenth First, the Levites had the tenth of all the productions of the land.

2. They had forty-eight cities, each forming a square of 4,000 cubits.

3. They had 2,000 cubits of ground round each city.

Total of the land they possessed, 53,000 acres.

4. They had the first-fruits and certain parts of all the animals killed in the land.

Canaan contained about 11,264,000 acres; therefore the portion possessed by the Levites was rather less than as one to two hundred and twelve; for 11,264,000 divided by 53,000, quotes only 212 $\frac{2}{3}$ .—But though this was a very small proportion for a whole tribe that had consented to annihilate its political existence, that it might wait upon the service of God, and labour for the people's souls; yet what they possessed was the best of the land: and while it was a slender remuneration for their services, yet their portion was such as rendered them independent, so that they could wait on the Lord's work without distraction. This is a proper pattern for the maintenance of the ministers of God: let them have a sufficiency for themselves and families, that there may be no distracting cares; and let them not be encumbered with riches or worldly possessions, that they may not be prevented from taking care of souls.

Verse 28. Thus ye also shall offer an heave-offering As the Levites had the tithe of the whole land, they themselves were obliged to give the tithe of this tithe to the priests, so that this considerably lessened their revenue. And this tithe or tenth they were obliged to select from the best part of the substance they had received, ver. 29, &c. A portion of all must be given to God, as an evidence of his goodness, and their dependence on him.

CHAPTER XIX.

The ordinance of the red heifer, 1, 2. She shall be slain by Eleazar without the camp, and her blood sprinkled before the tabernacle, 3, 4. Her whole body and appurtenance shall be reduced to ashes, and while burning, cedar wood, scarlet, and hyssop shall be thrown into the fire, 5, 6. The priest, and he that burns her, to bathe themselves and be reputed unclean till the evening, 7, 8. Her ashes to be laid up for a water of purification, 9. How, and in what cases, it is to be applied, 10-13. The law concerning him who dies in a tent, or who is killed in the open field, 14-16. How the persons, tent, and vessels are to be purified by the application of these ashes, 17-19. The unclean person, who does not apply them, to be cut off from the congregation, 20. This is to be a perpetual statute, 21, 22.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses and unto Aaron, saying,

2 This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD hath commanded, saying, Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee a red heifer without spot, wherein is no blemish, * and upon which never came yoke :

3 And ye shall give her unto Eleazar the priest, that he may bring her <sup>b</sup> forth without the camp, and one shall slay her before his face :

5 And one shall burn the heifer in his sight : <sup>d</sup> her skin, and her flesh, and her blood, with her dung, shall he burn :

6 And the priest shall take <sup>e</sup> cedar wood, and hyssop, and scarlet, and cast it into the midst of the burning of the heifer.

7 <sup>f</sup> Then the priest shall wash his clothes, and he shall bathe his flesh in water, and afterward he shall come into the camp, and the priest shall be unclean until the even.

8 And he that burneth her shall wash his clothes in water, and bathe his flesh in water, and shall be unclean until the even.

9 And a man that is clean shall gather up <sup>g</sup> the ashes of the heifer, and lay them up without the camp in a clean place, and it shall be kept for the congregation of the children of Israel <sup>h</sup> for a water of separation : it is a purification for sin.

10 And he that gathereth the ashes of the heifer shall wash his clothes, and be unclean until the even : and it shall be unto the children of Israel, and unto the stranger that sojourneth among them for a statute for ever.

11 <sup>i</sup> He that toucheth the dead body of any <sup>j</sup> man shall be unclean seven days.

12 <sup>k</sup> He shall purify himself with it on the third day, and on the seventh day he shall be clean ; but if he purify not himself the third day, then the seventh day he shall not be clean.

13 Whosoever toucheth the dead body of any man that is dead, and purifieth not himself, <sup>l</sup> defileth the tabernacle of the LORD ; and that soul shall be cut off from Israel : because <sup>m</sup> the water of separation was not sprinkled upon him, he shall be unclean ; <sup>n</sup> his uncleanness is yet upon him.

14 This is the law, when a man dieth in a tent : all that come into the tent, and all that is in the tent, shall be unclean seven days.

15 And every <sup>o</sup> open vessel, which hath no covering bound upon it, is unclean.

16 And <sup>p</sup> whosoever toucheth one that is slain with a sword in the open fields, or a dead body, or a bone of a man, or a grave, shall be unclean seven days.

17 And for an unclean person they shall take of the <sup>q</sup> ashes <sup>r</sup> of the burnt heifer of purification for sin, and <sup>s</sup> running water shall be put thereto in a vessel :

18 And a clean person shall take <sup>t</sup> hyssop, and dip it in the water, and sprinkle it upon the tent, and upon all the vessels, and upon the persons that were there, and upon him that touched a bone, or one slain, or one dead, or a grave :

19 And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day : <sup>u</sup> and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.

20 But the man that shall be unclean, and shall not purify himself, that soul shall be cut off from among the congregation, because he hath <sup>v</sup> defiled the sanctuary of the LORD ; the water of separation hath not been sprinkled upon him ; he is unclean.

21 And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them, that he that sprinkleth the water of separation shall wash his clothes ; and he that toucheth the water of separation shall be unclean until even.

22 And <sup>w</sup> whatsoever the unclean person toucheth shall be unclean ; and <sup>x</sup> the soul that toucheth it shall be unclean until even.

Verse 2. Speak unto the children of Israel, that they bring thee, &c.] The ordinance of the red heifer was a sacrifice of general application. All the people were to have an interest in it, and therefore the people at large are to provide the sacrifice. This Jewish rite certainly had a reference to things done under the gospel, as the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews has remarked : Heb. ix. 13, 14. As the principal stress of the allusion here is to the ordinance of the red heifer, we may certainly conclude that it was designed to typify the sacrifice of our blessed Lord.

We may remark several curious particulars in this ordinance.

1. A heifer was appointed for a sacrifice, probably in opposition to the Egyptian superstition which held these sacred, and actually worshipped their great goddess Isis under this form ; and this appears the more likely because males in general were preferred for sacrifice, yet here the female is chosen.

2. It was to be a red heifer, because red bulls were sacrificed to appease the evil demon Typhon, worshipped among the Egyptians.

3. The heifer was to be without spot—having no mixture of any other colour. Plutarch remarks, that if there was a single hair in the animal either white or black, it marred the sacrifice.

4. Without blemish—having no kind of imperfection in her body: the other probably applying to the hair or colour.

5. On which never came yoke, because any animal which had been used for any common purpose was deemed improper to be offered in sacrifice to God. The heathens, who appear to have borrowed much from the Hebrews, were very scrupulous in this particular. Neither the Greeks nor Romans, nor indeed the Egyptians, would offer an animal in sacrifice that had been employed for agricultural purposes.

It is very likely that the Gentiles learnt their first sacrificial rites from the patriarchs; and on this account we need not wonder to find so many coincidences in the sacrificial system of the patriarchs and Jews, and all the neighbouring nations.

Verse 9. For a water of separation] That is, the ashes were to be kept, in order to be mixed with water, ver. 17, and sprinkled on those who had contracted any legal defilement.

Verse 11. He that toucheth the dead body of any man shall be unclean seven days.] How low does this lay man! He who touched a dead beast was only unclean for one day, Lev. xi. 24, 27, 39; but he who touches a dead man is unclean for seven days. This was certainly designed to mark the peculiar impurity of man, and to show his sinfulness—seven times worse than the vilest animal! O thou son of the morning, how art thou fallen!

Verse 12. He shall purify himself with it] Literally, he shall sin himself with it. This Hebrew form of speech is common enough among us in other matters. Thus, to fleece, to bark, and to skin, do not signify to add a fleece, another bark, or a skin, but to take one away; therefore, to sin himself, in the Hebrew idiom, is not to add sin, but to take it away, to purify. The verb chata signifies to miss the mark, to sin, to purify from sin, and to make a sin-offering.

CHAPTER XX.

The Israelites come to Zin, and Miriam dies, 1. They murmur for want of water, 2-5. Moses and Aaron make supplication at the tabernacle, and the glory of the Lord appears, 6. He commands Moses to take his rod, gather the congregation together, and bring water out of the rock, 7, 8. Moses takes the rod, gathers the Israelites together, chides with them, and smites the rock twice, and the waters flow out plentifully, 9-11. The Lord is offended with Moses and Aaron because they did not sanctify him in the sight of the children of Israel, 12. The place is called Meribah, 13. Moses sends a friendly message to the king of Edom, begging liberty to pass through his territories, 14-17. The Edomites refuse, 18. The Israelites expostulate, 19. The Edomites still refuse, and prepare to attack them, 20-21. The Israelites go to Mount Hor, 22. Aaron is commanded to prepare for his death, 23-24. Aaron is stripped on Mount Hor, and his vestments put on Eleazar his son;—Aaron dies, 25-28. The people mourn for him thirty days, 29.

THEN <sup>a</sup>came the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, into the desert of Zin, in the first month: and the place abode in Kadesh; and <sup>b</sup>Miriam died there, and was buried there.

2 <sup>c</sup> And there was no water for the congregation: <sup>d</sup>and they gathered themselves together against Moses and against Aaron.

3 And the people <sup>e</sup>chode with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died <sup>f</sup>when our brethren died before the LORD!

4 And <sup>g</sup>why have ye brought up the congregation of the LORD into this wilderness, that we and our cattle should die there?

5 And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink.

Verse 1. Then came the children of Israel, &c.] This was the first month of the fortieth year after their departure from Egypt. The transactions of thirty-seven years Moses passes by, because he writes not as an historian but as a legislator; and gives us particularly an account of the laws, ordinances, and other occurrences of the first and last years of their peregrinations. The year now spoken of was the last of their journeyings; for from the going out of the spies, chap. xiii., unto this time, was about thirty-eight years, Deut. i. 22, 23, ii. 14.

Desert of Zin] Calmet contends that this is not the same desert mentioned Exod. xvi. 1, where Israel had their eighth encampment; that in Exodus being called in the original sin, this here tsin: but this is no positive proof, as letters of the same organ are frequently interchanged in all languages, and particularly in Hebrew.

And Miriam died there] Miriam was certainly older than Moses. When he was an infant, exposed on the river Nile, she was intrusted by her parents to watch the conduct of

6 And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, and <sup>a</sup>they fell upon their faces: and <sup>b</sup>the glory of the LORD appeared unto them.

7 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

8 <sup>c</sup>Take the rod, and gather thou the assembly together, thou and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes; and it shall give forth his water, and <sup>d</sup>thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: so thou shalt give the congregation and their beasts drink.

9 And Moses took the rod <sup>e</sup>from before the LORD, as he commanded him.

10 And Moses and Aaron gathered the congregation together before the rock, and he said unto them, <sup>f</sup>Hear now, ye rebels; must we fetch you water out of this rock?

11 And Moses lifted up his hand, and with his

Pharaoh's daughter, and to manage a most delicate business, that required much address and prudence. It is supposed that she was at the time of her death one hundred and thirty years of age, having been at least ten years old at her brother's birth. The Catholic writers represent her as a type of the Virgin Mary; as having preserved a perpetual virginity; as being legislatrix over the Israelitish women, as Moses was over the men: and as having a large portion of the spirit of prophecy. Eusebius says that her tomb was to be seen at Kadesh, near the city of Petra, in his time. She appears to have died about four months before her brother Aaron, chap. xxxiii. 38, and eleven before her brother Moses; so that these three, the most eminent of human beings, died in the space of one year!

Verse 2. And there was no water for the congregation] The same occurrence took place to the children of Israel at Kadesh, as did formerly to their fathers at Rephidim, see Exod. xvii. 1; and as the fathers murmured, so also did the children.

rod he smote the rock twice: and * the water came out abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their beasts also.

12 And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron, Because <sup>b</sup>ye believed me not, to <sup>c</sup>sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this congregation into the land which I have given them.

13 <sup>a</sup>This is the water of * Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the Lord, and he was sanctified in them.

14 And Moses sent messengers from Kadesh unto the king of Edom, <sup>e</sup>Thus saith thy brother Israel, Thou knowest all the travel that hath <sup>b</sup>be-fallen us!

15 <sup>i</sup>How our fathers went down into Egypt, <sup>j</sup>and we have dwelt in Egypt a long time; <sup>k</sup>and the Egyptians vexed us, and our fathers:

16 And <sup>l</sup>when we cried unto the Lord, he heard our voice, and <sup>m</sup>sent an angel, and hath brought us forth out of Egypt: and, behold, we are in Kadesh, a city in the uttermost of thy border:

17 <sup>n</sup>Let us pass, I pray thee, through thy country: we will not pass through thy fields, or through the vineyards, neither will we drink of the water of the wells: we will go by the king's high-way, we will not turn to the right hand nor to the left, until we have passed thy borders.

18 And Edom said unto him, Thou shalt not pass by me, lest I come out against thee with the sword.

19 And the children of Israel said unto him, We will go by the high-way: and if I and my cattle drink of thy water, <sup>o</sup>then I will pay for it: I will only, without doing any thing else, go through on my feet.

20 And he said, <sup>p</sup>Thou shalt not go through. And Edom came out against him with much people, and with a strong hand.

21 Thus Edom <sup>q</sup>refused to give Israel passage through his border: wherefore Israel <sup>r</sup>turned away from him.

22 And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, journeyed from <sup>s</sup>Kadesh, <sup>t</sup>and came unto Mount Hor.

23 And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron in Mount Hor, by the coast of the land in Edom, saying, 24 Aaron shall be <sup>u</sup>gathered unto his people: for he shall not enter into the land which I have given unto the children of Israel, because <sup>v</sup>ye rebelled against my <sup>w</sup>word at the water of Meribah.

25 <sup>x</sup>Take Aaron and Eleazar his son, and bring them up unto Mount Hor:

26 And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son: and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there.

27 And Moses did as the Lord commanded: and they went up unto Mount Hor, in the sight of all the congregation.

28 <sup>y</sup>And Moses stripped Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eleazar his son; and <sup>z</sup>Aaron died there in the top of the mount: and Moses and Eleazar came down from the mount.

29 And when all the congregation saw that Aaron was dead, they mourned for Aaron <sup>aa</sup>thirty days, even all the house of Israel.

Verse 12. Because ye believed me not] What was the offence for which Moses was excluded from the promised land? It appears to have consisted in some or all of the following particulars: 1. God had commanded him (ver. 8) to take the rod in his hand, and go and speak to the rock, and it should give forth water. It seems Moses did not think speaking would be sufficient, therefore he smote the rock without any command so to do. 2. He did this twice, which certainly in this case indicated a great perturbation of spirit, and want of attention to the presence of God. 3. He permitted his spirit to be carried away by a sense of the people's disobedience, and thus, being provoked, he was led to speak unadvisedly with his lips: Hear now, ye REBELS, ver. 10. 4. He did not acknowledge GOD in the miracle which was about to be wrought, but took the honour to himself and Aaron: "Must we fetch you water out of this rock?" Thus it plainly appears that they did not properly believe in God, and did not honour him in the sight of the people: for in their presence they seem to express a doubt whether the thing could possibly be done. As Aaron appears to have been consenting in the above particulars, therefore he also is excluded from the promised land. [The real sin of Moses appears to have been the want of a full, unwavering confidence in God—a sin which his official position heightened.]

Verse 14. Sent messengers—unto the king of Edom] Archbishop Usher supposes that the king now reigning in Edom was Hadar, mentioned Gen. xxxvi. 39.

Thus saith thy brother Israel] The Edomites were the descendants of Edom or Esau, the brother of Jacob or Israel, from whom the Israelites were descended.

Verse 17. We will go by the king's high-way] This is the first time this phrase occurs; it appears to have been a public road made by the king's authority at the expense of the state.

Verse 21. Thus Edom refused to give Israel passage through his border] Though every king has a right to refuse passage through his territories to any strangers; yet in a case like this, and in a time also in which emigrations were frequent and universally allowed, it was both cruelty and oppression in Edom to refuse a passage to a comparatively unarmed and inoffensive multitude, who were all their own near kinsmen. It appears, however, that it was only the Edomites of Kadesh that were thus unfriendly and cruel; for from Deut. ii. 29 we learn that the Edomites who dwelt in Mount Seir treated them in a hospitable manner. This cruelty in the Edomites of Kadesh is strongly reprehended and threatened by the prophet Obadiah, ver. 10, &c.

Verse 26. Strip Aaron of his garments] This was, in effect, depriving him of his office; and putting the clothes on his son Eleazar implied a transfer of that office to him. A transfer of office, from this circumstance of putting the clothes of the late possessor on the person intended to succeed him, was called investing or investment (clothing); as removing a person from an office was termed divesting or unclothing. Among the Catholics, and in the Church of England, this same method is used in degrading ecclesiastics. Hence such a degradation is termed by the common people stripping a man of his gown.

Verse 28. And Aaron died there] Hence, as Dr. Lightfoot has justly observed, we have an "indisputable proof that the earthly Canaan was not the utmost felicity at which God's promises to the Israelites aimed, since the best men among them were excluded from it."

The remark of some of the Fathers here is worthy of attention: "Neither Moses, the representative of the law, nor Miriam, the representative of the prophets, nor Aaron, the representative of the priesthood and its sacrificial rites, could bring the Israelites into the possession of the promised land. This was reserved for Joshua, who was in name and conduct the lively type of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." He alone can bring those who believe in his name into that rest which remains for the people of God.

CHAPTER XXI.

Arad, a king of the Canaanites, attacks Israel, and makes some prisoners, 1. They devote him and his people to destruction, 2; which they afterwards accomplished, 3. They journey from Hor, and are greatly discouraged, 4. They murmur against God and Moses, and loathe the manna, 5. The Lord sends fiery serpents among them, 6. They repent, and beg Moses to intercede for them, 7. The Lord directs him to make a brazen serpent, and set it on a pole, that the people might look on it and be healed, 8. Moses does so, and the people who beheld the brazen serpent lived, 9. They journey to Oboth, Ijc-abarim, Zared, and Arnon, 10-13. A quotation from the book of the wars of the Lord, 14, 15. From Arnon they come to Beer, 16. Their song of triumph, 17-20. Moses sends messengers to the Amorites for permission to pass through their land, 21, 22. Sihon their king refuses, attacks Israel, is defeated, and all his cities destroyed, 23-26. The poetic proverbs made on the occasion, 27-30. Israel possesses the land of the Amorites, 31, 32. They are attacked by Og king of Bashan, 33. They defeat him, destroy his troops and family, and possess his land, 34, 35.

AND when <sup>a</sup>king Arad the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south, heard tell that Israel came <sup>b</sup>by the way of the spies; then he fought against Israel, and took some of them prisoners.

2 <sup>c</sup>And Israel vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou wilt indeed deliver this people into my hand, then <sup>d</sup>I will utterly destroy their cities.

3 And the LORD hearkened unto the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites: and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place <sup>e</sup>Hormah.

4 And <sup>f</sup>they journeyed from mount Hor by the way of the Red Sea, to <sup>g</sup>compass the land of Edom: and the soul of the people was much <sup>h</sup>discouraged <sup>i</sup>because of the way.

5 And the people <sup>j</sup>spake against God, and against Moses, <sup>k</sup>Wherefore have ye brought us up out of Egypt to die in the wilderness? for there is no bread, neither is there any water, and <sup>l</sup>our soul loatheth this light bread.

Verse 1. The way of the spies] Some think that this signifies the way that the spies took when they went to search the land. But this is impossible, because Israel had now marched from Meribah-Kadesh to Mount Hor, beyond Ezion-Gaber, and were turning round Edom to the south-east; and therefore the word is to be understood here as the name of a place.

Verse 3. The Lord hearkened to the voice of Israel] The whole of this verse appears to me to have been added after the days of Joshua. It is certain the Canaanites were not utterly destroyed at the time here spoken of, for this did not take place till after the death of Moses. If instead of utterly destroyed them, we translate devoted them to utter destruction, it will make a good sense, and not repugnant to the Hebrew; though some think it more probable that the verse was added afterwards by Joshua or Ezra, in testimony of the fulfilment of God's promise; for Arad, who is mentioned as being destroyed here, is mentioned among those destroyed by Joshua long after (see Josh. xii. 14): but this is quite consistent with their being devoted to destruction, as this might be fulfilled any time after.

Verse 5. This light bread.] A word of excessive scorn; as if they had said, This innutritive, unsubstantial, cheat-stomach stuff.

Verse 6. Fiery serpents] I have observed before, on Gen. iii. that it is difficult to assign a name to the creature termed in Hebrew nachash; it has different significations, but its meaning here and in Gen. iii. is most difficult to be ascertained. Seraphim is one of the orders of angelic beings, Isa. vi. 2, 6: but as it comes from the root saraph, which signifies to burn, it has been translated fiery in the text. It is likely that St. Paul alludes to the seraphim, Heb. i. 7:

6 And <sup>m</sup>the LORD sent <sup>n</sup>fiery serpents among the people, and they bit the people; and much people of Israel died.

7 <sup>o</sup>Therefore the people came to Moses, and said, We have sinned, for <sup>p</sup>we have spoken against the LORD, and against thee: <sup>q</sup>pray unto the LORD, that he take away the serpents from us. And Moses prayed for the people.

8 And the LORD said unto Moses, Make thee a fiery serpent, and set it upon a pole: and it shall come to pass, that every one that is bitten, when he looketh upon it, shall live.

9 And <sup>r</sup>Moses made a serpent of brass, and put it upon a pole, and it came to pass, that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass, he lived.

10 And the children of Israel set forward, and <sup>s</sup>pitched in Oboth.

11 And they journeyed from Oboth, and <sup>t</sup>pitched at <sup>u</sup>Ijc-abarim, in the wilderness which is before Moab, toward the sunrising.

Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a FLAME of FIRE. The animals mentioned here by Moses may have been called fiery because of the heat, violent inflammation, and thirst, occasioned by their bite: and consequently if serpents, they were of the prester or dipsas species, whose bite, especially that of the former, occasioned a violent inflammation through the whole body, and a fiery appearance of the countenance.

Bochart supposes that the hydrus or chersydrus is meant; a serpent that lives in marshy places, the bite of which produces the most terrible inflammations, burning heat, fetid vomitings, and a putrid solution of the whole body. It is more likely to have been a serpent of the prester or dipsas kind, as the wilderness through which the Israelites passed did neither afford rivers nor marshes. But very probably the serpents themselves were immediately sent by God for the chastisement of this rebellious people. The cure was certainly preternatural; this no person doubts; and why might not the agent be so, that inflicted the disease?

Verse 8. Make thee a fiery serpent] Literally, make thee a scaph.

And set it upon a pole] Upon a standard or ensign.

Verse 9. And Moses made a serpent of brass] Nechash nechoseth. Hence we find that the word for brass or copper comes from the same root with nachash, which here signifies a serpent, probably on account of the colour; as most serpents, especially those of the bright spotted kind, have a very glistening appearance, and those who have brown or yellow spots appear something like burnished brass: but the true meaning of the root cannot be easily ascertained.

To the circumstance of looking at the brazen serpent in order to be healed, our Lord refers, John iii. 14, 15. The brazen serpent was certainly no type of Jesus Christ; but from our Lord's words we may learn, 1. That as the serpent was lifted up on the pole or ensign, so Jesus Christ was lifted up on the cross. 2. That as the Israelites were to look at the brazen serpent, so sinners must look to Christ for salvation. 3. That as God provided no other remedy than this looking for the wounded Israelites, so he has provided no other way of salvation than faith in the blood of his Son. 4. That as he who looked at the brazen serpent was cured and did live, so he that believeth on the Lord Jesus Christ shall not perish, but have eternal life. 5. That as neither the serpent, nor looking at it, but the invisible power of God healed the people, so neither the cross of Christ, nor his merely being crucified, but the pardon he has bought by his blood, communicated by the powerful energy of his Spirit, saves the souls of men. May not all these things be plainly seen in the circumstances of this transaction, without making the serpent a type of Jesus Christ (the most exceptionable that could possibly be chosen), and running the parallel, as some have done, through ten or a dozen particulars?

12 * From thence they removed, and pitched in the valley of Zared.

Verse 12. They—pitched in the valley of Zared. This should be translated the brook Zared, as it is in Deut. ii. 13, 14. This stream has its origin in the mountains eastward of Moab, and runs from east to west, and discharges itself into the Dead Sea. [Probably the present Wady Kerek.]

Verse 18. Arnon. Another river which takes its rise in the mountains of Moab, and, after having separated the ancient territories of the Moabites and Ammonites, falls into the Dead Sea, near the mouth of Jordan. [Now the Wady Mojeb.]

Verse 14. The book of the wars of the Lord There are endless conjectures about this book, both among ancients and moderns. Dr. Lightfoot's opinion is the most simple, and to me bears the greatest appearance of being the true one. "This book seems to have been some book of remembrances and directions, written by Moses for Joshua's private instruction for the management of the wars after him. See Exod. xvii. 14-16. It may be that this was the same book which is called the book of Jasher, i.e. the book of the upright, or a directory for Joshua, from Moses, what to do and what to expect in his wars: and in this book it seems as if Moses directed the setting up of archery, see 2 Sam. i. 18, and warrants Joshua to command the sun, and expect its obedience, Josh. x. 13." [According to Keil the book "of the wars" was a collection of odes of the time of Moses in 22 * Let me pass through thy land: we will not turn into the fields, or into the vineyards; we will not drink of the waters of the well: but we will go along by the king's high-way, until we be past thy borders.

21 And * Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, saying,

23 * And Sihon would not suffer Israel to pass through his border: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and went out against Israel into the wilderness: * and he came to Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

24 And * Israel smote him with the edge of the sword, and possessed his land from Arnon unto Jabbok, even unto the children of Ammon: for the border of the children of Ammon was strong.

25 And Israel took all these cities: and Israel dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, in Heshbon, and in all the <sup>o</sup> villages thereof.

26 For Heshbon was the city of Sihon the king of the Amorites, who had fought against the former king of Moab, and taken all his land out of his hand, even unto Arnon.

celebration of the glorious acts of the Lord to and for the Israelites.]

What he did in the Red Sea, and in the brooks of Arnon This clause is impenetrably obscure. All the Versions, all the translators, and all the commentators, have been puzzled with it. Scarcely any two agree. The original is eth vahab besuphah, which our translators render, what he did in the Red Sea. As I judge the whole clause to have been a common proverb in those days, and Vahab to be a proper name, I therefore propose the following translation, which I believe to be the best: From Vahab unto Suph, and unto the streams of Arnon. If we allow it to have been a proverbial expression, used to point out extensive distance, then it was similar to that well known phrase, From Dan even unto Beer-sheba. [May not the original words have been simply the title of one of the odes in the "book of the wars"? Vahab is probably the name of an Amoritish fortress, and besuphah may mean "in storm," referring to the action of Jehovah.]

Verse 17. Spring up, O well, &c. This is one of the most ancient war songs in the world, but is not easily understood, which is commonly the case with all very ancient compositions, especially the poetic.

Verse 18. The princes digged the well—with their staves. This is not easily understood. Who can suppose that the princes dug this well with their staves? And is there any other idea conveyed by our translation? The word which is translated they digged, should be rendered they searched out, which is a frequent meaning of the root; and that which we render with their staves, should be translated on their borders or confines, from the root shaan, to lie along. With these corrections the whole song may be read thus:

Spring up, O well! Answer ye to it. { i.e., Repeat the other part of the song.
The well, the princes searched it out. { This is the answer.
The nobles of the people have digged it. { This was the chorus.
By a decree, upon their own borders. }

This is the whole of the quotation from what is called the book of the wars of the Lord.

Verse 26. For Heshbon was the city of Sihon, &c. It appears therefore that the territory now taken from Sihon, by the Israelites, was taken from a former king of Moab, in commemoration of which an epikiedion or war song was flame from the city of Sihon : it hath consumed * Ar of Moab, and the lords of the high places of Arnon.

29 Woe to thee, Moab ! thou art undone, O people of <sup>b</sup> Chemosh : he hath given his sons that escaped, and his daughters, into captivity unto Sihon king of the Amorites.

30 We have shot at them ; Heshbon is perished even <sup>c</sup> unto Dibon, and we have laid them waste even unto Nophah, which reacheth unto <sup>d</sup> Medeba.

31 Thus Israel dwelt in the land of the Amorites.

32 And Moses sent to spy out <sup>e</sup> Jaazer, and they took the villages thereof, and drove out the Amorites that were there.

made, several verses of which, in their ancient poetic form, are here quoted by Moses.

Verse 27. They that speak in proverbs] Mashal, to rule, to exercise authority ; hence a mighty proverbial saying, because admitted as a maxim for the government of life. The moshelim of the ancient Asiatics were the same, in all probability, as the Poetae among the Greeks and Latins ; whose poems celebrated past transactions, and especially those which concerned the military history of their nation. Similar to these were the bards among the ancient Druids, and the Sennachies among the ancient Celtic inhabitants of these nations.

The ode from the 27th to the 30th verse is composed of 33 'And they turned and went up by the way of Bashan : and Og the king of Bashan went out against them, he, and all his people, to the battle * at Edrei.

34 And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>b</sup> Fear him not : for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land ; and <sup>c</sup> thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

three parts. The first takes in verses 27 and 28 ; the second ver. 29 ; and the third verse 30.

The first records with bitter irony the late insults of Sihon and his subjects over the conquered Moabites.

The second expresses the compassion of the Israelites over the desolations of Moab, with a bitter sarcasm against their god Chemosh, who had abandoned his votaries in their distress, or was not able to rescue them out of the hands of their enemies.

The third sets forth the revenge taken by Israel upon the whole country of Sihon, from Heshbon to Dibon, and from Nophah even to Medeba.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Israelites pitch in the plains of Moab, 1. Balak, king of Moab, is greatly terrified, 2-4 ; and sends to Balaam, a diviner, to come and curse them, 5, 6. The elders of Moab take a reward and carry it to Balaam, 7. He inquires of the Lord, and is positively ordered not to go with them, 8, 12. He communicates this to the elders of Moab, 13. They return to Balak with this information, 14. He sends some of his princes to Balaam with promises of great honour, 15-17. He consults God, and is permitted to go, on certain conditions, 18-20. Balaam sets off, is opposed by an angel of the Lord, and the Lord miraculously opens the mouth of his ass to reprove him, 21-30. Balaam sees the angel, and is reprov'd by him, 31-33. He humbles himself, and offers to go back, 34 ; but is ordered to proceed, on the same conditions as before, 35. The king of Moab goes out to meet him, 36. His address to him, 37. Balaam's firm answer, 38. Balak sacrifices, and takes Balaam to the high places of Baal, that he may see the whole of the Israelitish camp, 39-41.

Verse 1. And pitched in the plains of Moab] They had taken no part of the country that at present appertained to the Moabites : they had taken only that part which had formerly belonged to this people, but had been taken from them by Sihon, king of the Amorites.

On this side Jordan] On the east side. By Jericho, that is, over against it.

Verse 5. To Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people] Dr. Kennicott justly remarks, that "the description now given of Balaam's residence, instead of being particular, agrees with any place in any country where there is a river ; for he lived by Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people.

us, as the ox licketh up the grass of the field. And Balak the son of Zippor was king of the Moabites at that time.

5 <sup>e</sup> He sent messengers therefore unto Balaam the son of Beor to <sup>f</sup> Pethor, which is by the river of the land of the children of his people, to call him, saying, Behold, there is a people come out from Egypt : behold, they cover the <sup>g</sup> face of the earth, and they abide over against me :

6 Come now, therefore, I pray thee, <sup>h</sup> curse me

But was Pethor then near the Nile in Egypt ? Or in Canaan, near Jordan ? Or in Mesopotamia, near the Euphrates, and belonging to the Ammonites ? This last was in fact the case ; and the passage should therefore stand thus : by the river of the land of the children of Ammon ; and thus it agrees with Deut. xxiii. 4.

Verse 6. Come now, therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people] Balaam, once a prophet of the true God, appears to have been one of the Moshelim (see chap. xxi. 27) who had added to his poetic gift that of sorcery or divination. It was supposed that prophets and sorcerers had a power to curse persons and places so as to confound all their designs, frustrate their counsels, enervate their strength, and fill them this people; for they are too mighty for me: peradventure I shall prevail, that we may smite them, and that I may drive them out of the land: for I wot that he whom thou blestest is blessed, and he whom thou cursest is cursed.

7 And the elders of Moab and the elders of Midian departed with * the rewards of divination in their hand; and they came unto Balaam, and spake unto him the words of Balak.

8 And he said unto them, <sup>b</sup> Lodge here this night. and I will bring you word again, as the LORD shall speak unto me: and the princes of Moab abode with Balaam.

9 <sup>c</sup> And God came unto Balaam, and said, What men are these with thee?

10 And Balaam said unto God, Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, hath sent unto me, saying, 11 Behold, there is a people come out of Egypt, which covereth the face of the earth: come now, curse me them; peradventure <sup>d</sup> I shall be able to overcome them, and drive them out.

12 And God said unto Balaam, Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people: for <sup>e</sup> they are blessed.

13 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and said unto the princes of Balak, Get you into your land: for the LORD refuseth to give me leave to go with you.

14 And the princes of Moab rose up, and they went unto Balak, and said, Balaam refuseth to come with us.

15 And Balak sent yet again princes, more, and more honourable than they.

16 And they came to Balaam, and said to him, Thus saith Balak the son of Zippor, 'Let nothing, I pray thee, hinder thee from coming unto me:

17 For I will promote thee unto very great honour, and I will do whatsoever thou sayest unto me:

* come therefore, I pray thee, curse me this people.

18 And Balaam answered and said unto the servants of Balak, <sup>h</sup> If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, <sup>i</sup> I cannot go beyond the word of the LORD my God, to do less or more.

19 Now therefore, I pray you, <sup>j</sup> tarry ye also here this night, that I may know what the LORD will say unto me more.

20 <sup>k</sup> And God came unto Balaam at night, and said unto him, If the men come to call thee, rise up, and go with them; but <sup>l</sup> yet the word which I shall say unto thee, that shalt thou do.

21 And Balaam rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab.

22 And God's anger was kindled because he went: <sup>m</sup> and the angel of the LORD stood in the way for an adversary against him. Now he was riding upon his ass, and his two servants were with him.

23 And <sup>n</sup> the ass saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and the ass turned aside out of the way, and went into the field: and Balaam smote the ass, to turn her into the way.

24 But the angel of the LORD stood in a path of the vineyards, a wall being on this side, and a wall on that side.

25 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she thrust herself unto the wall, and crushed Balaam's foot against the wall: and he smote her again.

26 And the angel of the LORD went further, and stood in a narrow place, where was no way to turn either to the right hand or to the left.

27 And when the ass saw the angel of the LORD, she fell down under Balaam: and Balaam's anger was kindled, and he smote the ass with a staff.

28 And the LORD <sup>o</sup> opened the mouth of the ass, and she said unto Balaam, What have I done unto with fear, terror, and dismay. See Gen. ix. 25; Ps. cix. 6, 20; Josh. vi. 26; Jer. xvii. 5, 6.

Verse 7. The rewards of divination] Whoever went to consult a prophet took with him a present, as it was on such gratuitous offerings the prophets lived; but here more than a mere present is intended, perhaps every thing necessary to provide materials for the incantation. The drugs, &c., used on such occasions were often very expensive. It appears that Balaam was very covetous, and that he loved the wages of unrighteousness, and probably lived by it; see 2 Pet. ii. 15.

Verse 8. I will bring you word again, as the Lord shall speak] So it appears he knew the true God, and had been in the habit of consulting him, and receiving oracles from his mouth.

Verse 12. Thou shalt not go with them; thou shalt not curse the people] That is, Thou shalt not go with them to curse the people. With them he might go, as we find he afterwards did by God's own command, but not to curse the people; this was wholly forbidden. Probably the command, Thou shalt not go, refers here to that time, viz., the first invitation: and in this sense it was most punctually obeyed by Balaam; see ver. 18.

Verse 18. I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God] Balaam knew God too well to suppose he could reverse any of his purposes; and he respected him too much to attempt to do any thing without his permission. Though he was covetous, yet he dared not, even when strongly tempted both by riches and honours, to go contrary to the command of his God. Many make all the professions of Balaam, without justifying them by their conduct. "They pretend," says one, "they would not do any thing against the word of God for a house full of gold, and yet will do it for a handful!"

Verse 19. What the Lord will say unto me more.] He did not know but God might make a further discovery of his will to him, and therefore he might very innocently seek farther information.

Verse 20. If the men come—go with them.] This is a confirmation of what was observed on the twelfth verse; though we find his going was marked with the divine displeasure, because he wished, for the sake of the honours and rewards, to fulfil as far as possible the will of the king of Moab. [From the use of the participle instead of the imperfect it would seem that God's anger was kindled not because he went, but as he was going, i.e. because of some behaviour on the journey.] How many are restrained from sinning, merely through the fear of God! They would gladly do the evil, but it is forbidden on awful penalties; they wish the thing were not prohibited, for they have a strong desire to do it.

Verse 23. And the ass saw the angel.] When God granted visions, those alone who were particularly interested saw them, while others in the same company saw nothing; see Dan. x. 7, Acts ix. 7.

Verse 26. And the angel—stood in a narrow place.] In this carriage of the angel, says Mr. Ainsworth, the Lord shows us the proceedings of his judgments against sinners: First, he mildly shakes his rod at them, but lets them go untouched. Secondly, he comes nearer, and touches them with an easy correction, as it were wringing their foot against the wall. Thirdly, when all this is ineffectual, he brings them into such straits that they can neither turn to the right hand nor to the left, but must fall before his judgments, if they do not fully turn to him.

Verse 28. The Lord opened the mouth of the ass.] And where is the wonder of all this? If the ass had opened her own mouth, and reproved the rash prophet, we might well thee, that thou hast smitten me these three times?

29 And Balaam said unto the ass, Because thou hast mocked me: I would there were a sword in mine hand, * for now would I kill thee.

30 <sup>b</sup> And the ass said unto Balaam, Am not I thine ass, ' upon which thou hast ridden ' ever since I was thine unto this day? was I ever wont to do so unto thee? And he said, Nay.

31 Then the Lord <sup>a</sup> opened the eyes of Balaam, and he saw the angel of the Lord standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he <sup>c</sup> bowed down his head, and <sup>d</sup> fell flat on his face.

32 And the angel of the Lord said unto him, Wherefore hast thou smitten thine ass these three times? behold, I went out <sup>e</sup> to withstand thee, because thy way is ' perverse before me:

33 And the ass saw me, and turned from me these three times: unless she had turned from me, surely now also I had slain thee, and saved her alive.

34 And Balaam said unto the angel of the Lord, <sup>f</sup> I have sinned; for I knew not that thou stoodest in the way against me: now therefore, if it <sup>g</sup> displease thee, I will get me back again.

Verse 33. Surely now also I had slain thee] How often are the meanest animals, and the most trivial occurrences, instruments of the preservation of our lives, and of the salvation of our souls! The messenger of justice would have killed Balaam, had not the mercy of God prevented the ass from proceeding.

Verse 34. If it displease thee, I will get me back again.] Here is a proof, that though he loved the wages of unrighteousness, yet he still feared God! and he is now willing to drop the enterprise if God be displeased with his proceeding. The piety of many called Christians does not extend thus far; they see that the thing displeases God, and yet they proceed. Reader, is this thy case?

35 And the angel of the Lord said unto Balaam, Go with the men: <sup>1</sup> but only the word that I shall speak unto thee, that thou shalt speak. So Balaam went with the princes of Balak.

36 And when Balak heard that Balaam was come, <sup>2</sup> he went out to meet him unto a city of Moab, <sup>3</sup> which is in the border of Arnon, which is in the utmost coast.

37 And Balak said unto Balaam, Did I not earnestly send unto thee to call thee? wherefore camest thou not unto me? am I not able indeed <sup>4</sup> to promote thee to honour?

38 And Balaam said unto Balak, Lo, I am come unto thee: have I now any power at all to say any thing? <sup>5</sup> the word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.

39 And Balaam went with Balak, and they came unto <sup>6</sup> Kirjath-huzoth.

40 And Balak offered oxen and sheep, and sent to Balaam, and to the princes that were with him.

41 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Balak took Balaam, and brought him up into the <sup>7</sup> high places of Baal, that thence he might see the utmost part of the people.

Verse 38. The word that God putteth in my mouth, that shall I speak.] Here was a noble resolution, and he was certainly faithful to it; though he wished to please the king, and get wealth and honour, yet he would not displease God to realize even these bright prospects. Many who slander this poor semi-antinomian prophet, have not half his piety.

Verse 40. And Balak offered oxen, &c.] This was to gain the favour of his gods, and perhaps to propitiate Jehovah, that the end for which he had sent for Balaam might be accomplished. [It is more reasonable to suppose that the oxen were offered to Jehovah, whom Balak hoped to propitiate.]

Verse 41. That—he might see the utmost part of the people.] As he thought Balaam must have them all in his eye when he pronounced his curse, lest it might not extend to those who were not in sight. On this account he took him up into the high places of Baal.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Being arrived at the high places of Baal (chap. xxii. 41), Balaam orders Balak to build seven altars, and prepare oxen and rams for sacrifice, 1, 2. Balaam inquires of the Lord, receives an answer, with which he returns to Balak, 3-10. Balak, finding that this was a prediction of the prosperity of the Israelites, is greatly troubled, 11. Balaam excuses himself, 12. He brings him to another place, where he might see only a part of Israel, and repeats his sacrifices, 13, 14. Balaam again consults the Lord, 15, 17. Returns with his answer, and again predicts the glory of Israel, 18-24. Balak is angry, 25; and Balaam again excuses himself. Balak proposes another trial, takes him to another place, and repeats the same sacrifices, 26-30.

Verse 1. Build me here seven altars, &c.] The oxen and the rams were such as the Mosaic law had ordered to be offered to God in sacrifice; the building of seven altars was not commanded. Some think that these seven altars were built to the seven planets: this is most gratuitously said; of it there is no proof whatever; it is mere trifling, even with conjecture. As seven was a number of perfection,

2 And Balak did as Balaam had spoken; and Balak and Balaam <sup>b</sup> offered on every altar a bullock and a ram.

Balaam chose it on this occasion, because he intended to offer a grand sacrifice, and to offer a bullock and a ram upon each of the altars; the whole to be made a burnt-offering at the same time. And as he intended to offer seven bullocks and seven rams at the same time, it could not be conveniently done on one altar, therefore he ordered seven to be built. We need go no farther to find out his reasons.

3 And Balaam said unto Balak, "Stand by thy burnt-offering, and I will go: peradventure the LORD will come <sup>b</sup>to meet me: and whatsoever he sheweth me I will tell thee. And <sup>c</sup>he went to an high place.

4 "And God met Balaam: and he said unto him, I have prepared seven altars, and I have offered upon every altar a bullock and a ram.

5 And the LORD <sup>a</sup>put a word in Balaam's mouth, and said, Return unto Balak, and thus thou shalt speak.

6 And he returned unto him, and lo, he stood by his burnt sacrifice, he, and all the princes of Moab.

7 And he <sup>a</sup>took up his parable, and said, Balak, the king of Moab, hath brought me from Aram, out of the mountains of the east, saying, "Come, curse me Jacob, and come, <sup>b</sup>defy Israel.

8 "How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or how shall I defy, whom the LORD hath not defied?

profitably. He who would die well should live well; for a bad death must be the issue of a bad life. [The popular interpretation of the words, "my last end," is undoubtedly the correct one.]

Verse 13. Thou shalt see but the utmost part of them] Balak thought that the sight of such an immense camp had intimidated Balaam: he thought therefore to get Balaam to curse them in detached parties, till the whole camp should be devoted to destruction by successive execrations.

Verse 17. What hath the Lord spoken?] Balaam himself now understood that Balaam was wholly under the influence of Jehovah, and would say nothing but what God commanded him; but not knowing Jehovah as Balaam did, he hoped that he might be induced to change his mind, and curse a people whom he had hitherto determined to bless.

Verse 19. God is not a man, that he should lie] This seems to be spoken to correct the foregoing supposition of Balak that God could change his mind.

Verse 21. He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob, neither hath he seen perverseness in Israel] This is a difficult passage; for if we take the words as spoken of the people Israel, as their iniquity and their perverseness were almost unparalleled, such words cannot be spoken of them with strict truth. If we consider them as spoken of the patriarch Jacob and Israel, or of Jacob after he became Israel, they are most strictly true, as after that time a more unblemished and noble character (Abraham excepted) is not to be found in the page of history, whether sacred or profane. In this way, I think, this difficult text may be safely understood.

There is another way in which the words may be interpreted, which will give a good sense. Aven not only signifies iniquity, but most frequently trouble, labour, distress, and affliction; and these indeed are its ideal meanings, and iniquity is only an accommodated or metaphorical one, because of the pain, distress, &c., produced by sin. Amal, translated here perverseness, occurs often in scripture, but is never translated perverseness except in this place. It signifies simply labour, especially that which is of an afflictive or oppressive kind. The words may therefore be considered

Verse 3. Stand by thy burnt-offering] We have already seen that blessing and cursing in this way were considered as religious rites, and therefore must be always preceded by sacrifice.

Verse 7. And he took up his parable] All these oracular speeches of Balaam are in hemistich metre in the original. They are highly dignified, and may be considered as immediate poetic productions of the Spirit of God; for it is expressly said, ver. 5, that God put the word in Balaam's mouth, and that the Spirit of God came upon him, chap. xxiv. 2.

Verse 8. How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed?] It was granted on all hands that no incantations nor imprecations could avail, unless God concurred and ratified them. From God's communication to Balaam he saw that God was determined to bless and defend Israel, and therefore all endeavours to injure them must be in vain.

Verse 9. From the tops of the rocks I see him] That is, from the high places of Baal where he went, chap. xxii. 41, that he might the more advantageously see the whole camp of Israel.

The people shall dwell alone] They shall ever be preserved as a distinct nation. This prophecy has been literally fulfilled through a period of 3300 years to the present day. This is truly astonishing.

Verse 10. Let me die the death of the righteous] Probably Balaam had some presentiment that he should be taken off by a premature death, and therefore he lodges this petition against it. The death of the righteous in those times implied being gathered to one's fathers in a good old age, having seen his children, and children's children; and to this, probably, the latter part of this petition applies: And let my last end be like his (uthehi acharithi chamohu, And let my posterity be like his). It has been generally supposed that Balaam is here praying for a happy death, such as true Christians die who die in the Lord; and in this way his words are generally applied; but I am satisfied this is not their meaning. The prayer, however, understood in the common way is a good one, and may be offered to God

God is with him, *and the shout of a king is among them.

22 <sup>b</sup> God brought them out of Egypt; he hath as it were <sup>c</sup> the strength of an unicorn.

23 Surely there is no enchantment <sup>a</sup> against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel: according to this time it shall be said of Jacob and of Israel, *What hath God wrought!

24 Behold, the people shall rise up <sup>f</sup> as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: <sup>e</sup> he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

25 And Balak said unto Balaam, Neither curse them at all, nor bless them at all.

as implying that God will not suffer the people either to be exterminated by the sword, or to be brought under a yoke of slavery. Either of these methods of interpretation gives a good sense, but our common version gives none. [A yet better interpretation is that the words apply to the people "by virtue of their calling as the holy nation of Jehovah, and consequently there is no denial of the sins of individuals."—Keil.]

Verse 22. The strength of an unicorn.] It is generally allowed that there is no such beast in nature as the unicorn; i.e., a creature of the horse kind, with one long rich curled horn in the forehead. The creature painted from fancy is represented as one of the supporters of the royal arms of Great Britain. It is difficult to say what kind of beast is intended by the original word. The Septuagint translate the word the unicorn or one-horned animal: the Vulgate, sometimes, unicornus; and in the text rhinocerotis, by which the rhinoceros, a creature which has its name from the horn on its nose, is supposed to be meant. That no single-horned animal can be intended by the reem of Moses, is sufficiently evident from this, that Moses, speaking of Joseph, says, "he has the horns of a unicorn," or reem, where the horns are spoken of in the plural, the animal in the singular. The creature referred to is either the rhinoceros, some varieties of which have two horns on the nose, or the wild bull, urus, or buffalo; though some think the beast intended is a species of goat; but the rhinoceros seems the most likely.

26 But Balaam answered and said unto Balak. Told not I thee, saying, <sup>b</sup> All that the Lord speaketh, that I must do?

27 And Balak said unto Balaam, <sup>c</sup> Come, I pray thee, I will bring thee unto another place; peradventure it will please God that thou mayest curse me them from thence.

28 And Balak brought Balaam unto the top of Peor, that looketh <sup>d</sup> toward Jeshimon.

29 And Balaam said unto Balak, <sup>e</sup> Build me here seven altars, and prepare me here seven bullocks and seven rams.

30 And Balak did as Balaam had said, and offered a bullock and a ram on every altar.

Verse 28. There is no enchantment, &c.] Because God has determined to save them, therefore no enchantment can prevail against them.

According to this time, &c.] I think this clause should be read thus: "As at this time it shall be told to Jacob and to Israel what God worketh;" i.e., this people shall always have prophetic information of what God is about to work. And indeed, they are the only people under heaven who ever had this privilege. When God himself designed to punish them because of their sins, he always forewarned them by the prophets; and also took care to apprise them of all the plots of their enemies against them. [The true sense of "according to this time," seems to be "at the right time."]

Verse 24. Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion] The great, mighty, or old lion, the king of the forest, who is feared and respected by all the other beasts of the field;—so shall Israel be the subduer and possessor of the whole land of Canaan. And as a young lion, from arah, to tear off, the predatory lion, or the lion in the act of seizing and tearing his prey;—the nations against whom the Israelites are now going shall be no more able to defend themselves against their attacks, than the feeblest beasts of the forest are against the attacks of the strong lion.

Verse 28. Unto the top of Peor] Probably the place where the famous Baal-Peor had his chief temple. He appears to have been the Priapus of the Moabites, and to have been worshipped with the same obscene and abominable rites.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Balaam, finding that God was determined to bless Israel, seeks no longer for enchantments, 1. The Spirit of God coming upon him, he delivers a most important prophetic parable, 2-9. Balak's anger is kindled against him, and he commands him to depart to his own country, 10, 11. Balaam vindicates his conduct, 12, 13; and delivers a prophecy relative to the future destruction of Moab by the Israelites, 14-17; also of Edom, 18, 19; of the Amalekites, 20; and of the Kenites, 21, 22. Predicts also the destruction of Asshur and Eber, by the naval power of Chittim, which should afterwards be itself destroyed, 23, 24. *Balaam and Balak separate, 25.

AND when Balaam saw that it pleased the LORD to bless Israel, he went not, as at <sup>a</sup> other times, <sup>b</sup> to seek for enchantments, but he set his face toward the wilderness.

Verse 1. He went not, as at other times, to seek for enchantments] This word probably means no more than the knowledge of future events. When Balaam saw that it pleased God to bless Israel, he therefore thought it unnecessary to apply for any farther prophetic declarations of God's will as he had done before, for he could safely infer every good to this people, from the evident disposition of God towards them.

Verse 2. The spirit of God came upon him.] This divine afflatus he had not expected on the present occasion, but God had not yet declared the whole of his will.

Verse 3. He took up his parable] His prophetic declaration, couched in highly poetic terms, and in regular metre, as the preceding were.

The man whose eyes are open] I believe the original shethrum, should be translated shut, not open; for in the next verse, where the opening of his eyes is mentioned, a widely different word is used, galal, which signifies to open the son of Beor hath said, and the man * whose eyes are open hath said :

4 He hath said, which heard the words of God, which saw the vision of the Almighty, * falling into a trance, but having his eyes open :

5 How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob, and thy tabernacles, O Israel !

6 As the valleys are they spread forth, as gardens by the river's side, * as the trees of lign aloes * which the LORD hath planted, and as cedar-trees beside the waters.

7 He shall pour the water out of his buckets, and his seed shall be * in many waters, and his king shall be higher than * Agag, and his * kingdom shall be exalted.

8 * God brought him forth out of Egypt ; he hath as it were the strength of an unicorn ; he shall * eat up the nations his enemies, and shall * break their bones, and * pierce them through with his arrows.

9 * He couched, he lay down as a lion, and as a great lion : who shall stir him up ? * Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee.

or reveal. At first the eyes of Balaam were shut, and so closely too that he could not see the angel who withstood him, till God opened his eyes : nor could he see the gracious intentions of God towards Israel, till the eyes of his understanding were opened by the power of the Divine Spirit. This therefore he mentions, we may suppose, with humility and gratitude, and to the credit of the prophecy which he is now about to deliver, that the Moabites may receive it as the word of God, which must be fulfilled in due season. His words, in their meaning, are similar to those of the blind man in the gospel : " Once I was blind, but now I see."

Verse 4. Falling into a trance] There is no indication in the Hebrew that he fell into a trance : these words are added by our translators, but they are not in the original. Mophet, the only word used, simply signifies falling or falling down, perhaps in this instance by way of religious prostration. [But taken with the expressions in the previous verse, the falling down evidently refers to a state of ecstacy.]

Verse 6. Lign aloes which the Lord hath planted] Or, as the texts which the Lord hath pitched : for it is the same word, ahalim, which is used in the 5th verse. But from other parts of scripture we find that the word also signifies a species of tree, called by some the sandal tree, and by others the lignum or wood aloes. This tree is described as being eight or ten feet high, with very large leaves growing at the top ; and it is supposed that a forest of those at some distance must bear some resemblance to a numerous encampment. [By the Lord's planting are probably meant such trees as grow independently of the cultivation of man.]

Verse 7. He shall pour the water out of his buckets, &c.] Here is a very plain allusion to their method of raising water in different parts of the east. By the well a tall pole is erected, which serves as a fulcrum to a very long lever, to the smaller end of which a bucket is appended. On the opposite end, which is much larger, are many notches cut in the wood, which serve as steps for a man, whose business it is to climb up to the fulcrum, in order to lower the bucket into the well, which, when filled, he raises by walking back on the opposite arm, till his weight brings the bucket above the well's mouth : a person standing by the well empties the bucket into a trench, which communicates with the ground intended to be watered.

His seed shall be in many waters] Another simple allusion to the sowing of rice. The ground must not only be well watered, but flooded, in order to serve for the proper growth and, behold, thou hast altogether blessed them these three times.

11 Therefore now flee thou to thy place : * I thought to promote thee unto great honour ; but, lo, the LORD hath kept thee back from honour.

12 And Balaam said unto Balak, spake not I also to thy messengers which thou sentest unto me, saying, 13 * If Balak would give me his house full of silver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandment of the LORD, to do either good or bad of mine own mind ; but what the LORD saith, that will I speak ?

14 And now, behold, I go unto my people : come therefore, and * I will advertise thee what this people shall do to thy people * in the latter days.

15 * And he took up his parable, and said, Balaam the son of Beor hath said, and the man whose eyes are open hath said :

16 He hath said, which heard the words of God, and knew the knowledge of the Most High, which saw the vision of the Almighty, falling into a trance, but having his eyes open :

17 * I shall see him, but not now : I shall behold him, but not nigh : there shall come * a Star out of Jacob, and * a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and of this grain. The rice that was sown in many waters must be the most fruitful. By an elegant and chaste metaphor all this is applied to the procreation of a numerous posterity.

His king shall be higher than Agag] This name is supposed to have been as common to all the Amalekitish kings as Pharaoh was to those of Egypt.

Verse 8. God brought him forth out of Egypt] They were neither expelled thence, nor came voluntarily away. God alone, with a high hand and uplifted arm, brought them forth.

These oracles, delivered by Balaam, are evident prophecies of the victories which the Israelites should gain over their enemies, and of their firm possession of the promised land. They may also refer to the great victories to be obtained by the Lord Jesus Christ, that Lion of the tribe of Judah, over sin, death, and Satan, the grand enemies of the human race ; and to that most numerous posterity of spiritual children which should be begotten by the preaching of the gospel.

Verse 11. Lo, the Lord hath kept thee back from honour.] A bitter and impious sarcasm. " Hadst thou cursed this people, I would have promoted thee to great honour ; but thou hast chosen to follow the directions of Jehovah rather than mine, and what will he do for thee ?"

Verse 15. The man whose eyes are open] See on ver. 3.

Verse 17. I shall see him, but not now] Or, I shall see him, but he is not now. I shall behold him, but not nigh—I shall have a full view of him, but the time is yet distant. That is, The person of whom I am now prophesying does not at present exist among these Israelites, nor shall he appear in this generation. There shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel—a person eminent for wisdom, and formidable for strength and power shall arise as king among this people. He shall smite the corners of Moab—he shall bring the Moabites perfectly under subjection (see 2 Sam. viii. 2) ; and destroy all the children of Sheth.

Rabbi Moses ben Maimon has, in my opinion, perfectly hit the meaning of the prophecy in the following paraphrase of the text : " I shall see him, but not now. This is DAVID.—I shall behold him, but not nigh. This is the king MESSIAH.—A Star shall come out of Jacob. This is DAVID.—And a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel. This is the king MESSIAH.—And shall smite the corners of Moab. This is DAVID (as it is written, 2 Sam. viii. 2 : And he smote Moab, casting them down to the ground).—And shall destroy all the shall *smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth.

18 And <sup>b</sup>Edom shall be a possession, Seir also shall be a possession for his enemies; and Israel shall do valiantly.

19 <sup>c</sup>Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion, and shall destroy him that remaineth of the city.

20 And when he looked on Amalek he took up his parable, and said, Amalek was <sup>d</sup>the first of the nations; but his latter end <sup>e</sup>shall be that he perish for ever.

children of Sheth. This is the king MESSIAH, of whom it is written (Ps. lxi. 8), He shall have dominion from sea to sea."

Verse 18. And Edom shall be a possession] That is, to DAVID; as it is said: "And all they of Edom became David's servants;" 2 Sam. viii. 14.

Seir also shall be a possession] That is, unto the king MESSIAH; as it is said: "And saviours shall come upon Mount Zion to judge the Mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's;" Obad., ver. 21.

Verse 19. Out of Jacob shall come, &c.] This is supposed to refer to Christ, because of what is said, Gen. xlix. 10.

It is exceedingly difficult to fix the true sense of this prophecy in all its particulars. Probably the star, ver. 17, is only an emblem of kingly power. Among the Egyptians a star is said to have been the symbol of the Divine Being. The sceptre refers to the kingly power in exercise. The corners or outskirts may mean the petty Moabitish governments, as the Chaldee has understood the term. If karkor, which we translate utterly destroy, be not the name of a place here, as it is in Judg. viii. 10 (which is not very likely), it may be taken in one of those senses assigned to it (see on ver. 17), and signify the blending together the children of Sheth, that is, all the inhabitants of the earth; for so the children of Sheth must necessarily be understood, unless we consider it here as meaning some king of the Moabites, according to Grotius, or a city on the borders of Moab, according to Rabbi Nathan. As neither Israel nor the Messiah ever destroyed all the children of men, we must (in order to leave the children of Sheth what they are generally understood to be, all the inhabitants of the world) understand the whole as a prophecy of the final universal sway of the sceptre of Christ, when the middle wall of partition shall be broken down, and the Jews and Gentiles become one united, blended fold, under one shepherd and bishop of their souls. [The best interpretation of the prophecy is that which refers it in the first instance to David, and then to the Messiah, of whom he was the type. "The children of Sheth" are the children of confusion, i.e. the Moabites.]

I cannot think that the meteoric star which guided the wise men of the East to Bethlehem can be intended here; nor do I think that Peter refers to this prophecy when he calls Christ the day star, 2 Epist. i. 19; nor that Rev. ii. 28, where Christ is called the morning star, nor Rev. xxii. 16, where he is called the bright and morning star, refers at all to this prophecy of Balaam. Nor do I think that the false Christ who rose in the time of Adrian, and who calls himself Barcochab, which literally signifies the son of a star, did refer to this prophecy. If he had, he must have defeated his own intention, because the SON of the star is not THE STAR that should arise, but at the utmost a descendant; and then, to vindicate his right to the Jewish throne, he must show that the person who was called the star, and of whom he pretended to be the son or descendant, had actually reigned before him. As the sun, moon, stars, planets, light, splendour, affluence, day, &c., were always considered among the Asiatics as emblems of royalty, government, &c., therefore many, both men and women, had these names given to them as titles, surnames, &c.

Verse 20. Amalek was the first of the nations] The most ancient and most powerful of all the nations or states then within the view of Balaam; but his latter end shall be that 21 And he looked on the Kenites, and took up his parable, and said, Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock.

22 Nevertheless <sup>f</sup>the Kenite shall be wasted, <sup>g</sup>until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.

23 And he took up his parable, and said, Alas! who shall live when God doeth this?

24 And ships shall come from the coast of <sup>h</sup>Chittim, and shall afflict Asshur, and shall afflict <sup>i</sup>Eber, and he also shall perish for ever.

25 And Balaam rose up, and went and <sup>j</sup>returned to his place: and Balak also went his way.

he perish for ever, or his posterity, acharitho, shall be destroyed, or shall utterly fail. This oracle began to be fulfilled by Saul, 1 Sam. xv. 7, 8, who overthrew the Amalekites, and took their king, Agag, prisoner. Afterwards they were nearly destroyed by David, 1 Sam. xxvii. 8, and they were finally exterminated by the sons of Simeon in the days of Hezekiah, 1 Chron. iv. 41, 43; since that time they have ceased to exist as a people, and now no vestige of them remains on the face of the earth; so completely is their posterity cut off, according to this prophecy. The marginal reading does not appear to give the proper sense.

Verse 21. He looked on the Kenites] Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, is called a priest or prince of Midian, Exod. iii. 1, and in Judg. i. 16 he is called a Kenite; we may infer, therefore, that the Kenites and the Midianites were the same, or at least that the Kenites and Midianites were confederate tribes. Some of these we learn from Judg. i. followed the Israelites, others abode still among the Midianites and Amalekites. When Saul destroyed the latter, we find he had no commission against the Kenites, 1 Sam. xv. 6, for it appears that they were then a small and inconspicuous people; they had doubtless been wasted, as the text says, though by what means does not appear from history. On the other hand, it may be observed that the Midianites mentioned here lived close to the Dead Sea, at a great distance from the Midian where Jethro lived, which was near Horeb. Perhaps they were a colony or tribe that had migrated from the vicinity of Mount Sinai. It seems that at this time the Kenites occupied a very strong position: Strong is thy dwelling-place, and thou puttest thy nest in a rock; where there is a play on the original word, which signifies both a Kenite and a nest. High rocks in those countries were generally used as their strong places.

Verse 22. Until Asshur shall carry thee away captive.] The Assyrians and Babylonians who carried away captive the ten tribes, 2 Kings xvii. 6, and the Jews into Babylon, 2 Kings xxv., probably carried away the Kenites also. Indeed, this seems pretty evident, as we find some Kenites mentioned among the Jews after their return from the Babylonish captivity, 1 Chron. ii. 55.

Verse 23. Who shall live when God doeth this?] The words are very similar to those of our Lord, and probably are to be taken in the same sense: "Woe to them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days."

Verse 24. Ships shall come from the coast of Chittim] Some think by Chittim the Romans, others the Macedonians under Alexander the Great, are meant. It is certain that the Romans did conquer the Assyrians, including all the people of Syria, Mesopotamia, &c.; but Calmet strongly contends that by Chittim Macedonia is meant, and that the prophecy refers to the conquests of Alexander. [Chittim is probably Cyprus, which was the principal station for the maritime commerce of the Phœnicians.]

And shall afflict Eber] Probably not the Hebrews, as some think, but the people on the other the Euphrates, from abar, to pass over, go beyond; all which people were discomfited, and their empire destroyed by Alexander the Great.

Verse 25. And Balaam—returned to his place] Intended to have gone to Mesopotamia, his native country (see Deut. xxxiii. 4), but seems to have settled among the Midianites, where he was slain by the Israelites: see chap. xxxi. 8.

CHAPTER XXV.

While Israel abode in Shittim the people commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab, 1. They become idolaters, 2. The anger of the Lord is kindled against them, and he commands the ringleaders to be hanged, 3, 4. Moses causes the judges to slay the transgressors, 5. Zimri, one of the Israelitish princes of the tribe of Simeon, brings a Midianitish princess, named Cozbi, into his tent, while the people are deploring their iniquity before the tabernacle, 6. Phinehas the son of Eleazar, incensed by this insult to the laws and worship of God, runs after them and pierces them both with a javelin, 7, 8. Twenty-four thousand die of the plague, sent as a punishment for their iniquity, 9. The Lord grants to Phinehas a covenant of peace and an everlasting priesthood, 10-13. The name and quality of the Israelitish man and Midianitish woman, 14, 15. God commands the Israelites to vex and smite the Midianites, who had seduced them to the worship of Baal-peor, 16-18.

AND Israel abode in <sup>a</sup> Shittim, and <sup>b</sup> the people began to commit whoredom with the daughters of Moab.

2 And <sup>c</sup> they called the people unto <sup>d</sup> the sacrifices of their gods; and the people did eat, and <sup>e</sup> bowed down to their gods.

3 And Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor: and <sup>f</sup> the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel.

4 And the Lord said unto Moses, <sup>g</sup> Take all the heads of the people, and hang them up before the Lord against the sun, <sup>h</sup> that the fierce anger of the Lord may be turned away from Israel.

5 And Moses said unto <sup>i</sup> the judges of Israel, <sup>j</sup> Slay ye every one his men that were joined unto Baal-peor.

7 And <sup>l</sup> when Phinehas <sup>m</sup> the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, saw <sup>n</sup> it, he rose up from among the congregation, and took a javelin in his hand;

8 And he went after the man of Israel into the tent, and thrust both of them through, the man of Israel, and the woman through her belly. So <sup>o</sup> the plague was stayed from the children of Israel.

Verse 3. Israel joined himself unto Baal-peor] The same as the Priapus of the Romans, and worshipped with the same obscene rites, as we have frequently had occasion to remark.

The joining to Baal-peor, mentioned here, was probably what St. Paul had in view when he said, 2 Cor. vi. 14; Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers. And this joining, though done even in a matrimonial way, was nevertheless fornication (see Rev. ii. 14), as no marriage between an Israelite and a Midianite could be legitimate, according to the law of God.

Verse 4. Take all the heads of the people, &c.] Dr. Kenicott has remarked that the Samaritan and the Hebrew texts must be both taken together, to make the sense here complete: And the Lord said unto Moses, SPEAK unto all the heads of the people; and LET THEM SLAY THE MEN THAT WERE JOINED TO BAAL-PEOR; and hang them up before the Lord against the sun, &c., i.e. in the most public manner.

Verse 5. Slay ye every one his men] In the different departments where you preside over thousands, hundreds, fifties, and tens, slay all the culprits that shall be found.

Verse 6. One of the children of Israel] Zimri, the son of Salu, a prince of a chief family in the tribe of Simeon, ver. 14, brought a Midianitish woman, Cozbi, daughter of Zur, head over a people of one of the chief families in Midian, 9 And <sup>p</sup> those that died in the plague were twenty and four thousand.

10 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

11 <sup>q</sup> Phinehas the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the priest, hath turned my wrath away from the children of Israel, while he was zealous <sup>r</sup> for my sake among them, that I consumed not the children of Israel in <sup>s</sup> my jealousy.

12 Wherefore say, <sup>t</sup> Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace:

13 And he shall have it, and <sup>u</sup> his seed after him, even the covenant of <sup>v</sup> an everlasting priesthood; because he was <sup>w</sup> zealous for his God, and <sup>x</sup> made an atonement for the children of Israel,

14 Now the name of the Israelite that was slain, even that was slain with the Midianitish woman, was Zimri, the son of Salu, a prince of <sup>y</sup> a chief house among the Simeonites.

15 And the name of the Midianitish woman that was slain was Cozbi, the daughter of <sup>z</sup> Zur; he was head over a people, and of a chief house in Midian.

16 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

17 <sup>aa</sup> Vex the Midianites, and smite them:

18 For they vex you with their <sup>ab</sup> wives, wherewith they have beguiled you in the matter of Peor, and in the matter of Cozbi, the daughter of a prince of Midian, their sister, which was slain in the day of the plague for Peor's sake.

ver. 15. The condition of these two persons plainly proves it to have been a matrimonial alliance, the one was a prince, the other a princess; therefore I must conclude that fornication or whoredom, in the common sense of the word, was not practised on this occasion. The matter was bad enough, as the marriage was in flat opposition to the law of God; and we need not make it worse by representing the woman as a common prostitute, as the Vulgate and several others have done. In such a case this is absolutely inadmissible. Josephus positively says that Zimri had married Cozbi, Antiq., l. iv., cap. 6; and if he had not said so, still the thing is nearly self-evident. [The original language, as well as the sequel, seems to point to a sin more heinous than that of a forbidden matrimonial connexion.]

The children of Israel, who were weeping] This aggravated the crime, because the people were then in a state of great humiliation, because of the late impure and illegal transactions.

Verse 8. Thrust both of them through] Inspired undoubtedly by the Spirit of the God of justice to do the act, which can never be a precedent on any common occasion.

Verse 9. Those that died—were twenty and four thousand.] St. Paul, 1 Cor. x. 8, reckons only twenty-three thousand; though some MSS. and Versions, particularly the latter

Syriac and the Armenian, have twenty-four thousand, with the Hebrew text. Allowing the 24,000 to be the genuine reading, and none of the Hebrew MSS. exhibit any various reading here, the two places may be reconciled thus: 1000 men were slain in consequence of the examination instituted ver. 4, and 23,000 in consequence of the orders given ver. 5; making 24,000 in the whole. St. Paul probably refers only to the latter number.

Verses 12, 13. My covenant of peace—of an everlasting priesthood] As the word peace implied all kinds of blessings, both spiritual and temporal, it may mean no more here than the promise of God, to grant him and his family the utmost prosperity in reference to both worlds. The everlasting priesthood refers properly to the priesthood of Christ which was shadowed out by the priesthood under the law; no matter in what family it was continued. Therefore the eternal priesthood does not merely refer to any sacerdotal ministrations which should be continued in the family of Phinehas, during the Mosaic dispensation, but to that priesthood of Christ typified by that of Aaron and his successors. The priesthood alone is everlasting, and a covenant or grant of that was made to Phinehas and his descendants. The Jews reckon twelve high-priests of the race of Phinehas, from this time to the days of Solomon, nine more from that time to the captivity (see 1 Chron. vi. 4, 15), and fifteen from their return to the time of Antiochus Eupator, the last of whom was Onias, slain by Lysias. Ezra, the great priest and scribe, was of this line, Ezra vii. 1, 5. The family of Ithamar, uncle of Phinehas, had the priesthood for about 150 years; but it was restored to the family of Phinehas in the person of Zadok the priest, 1 Chron. vi. 50, in which it continued in the whole about 950 years. Probably the Maccabees were of the same family; but though this is not certain, there is no evidence against it. God therefore sufficiently fulfilled his promise; he gave to him and his descendants almost the utmost temporal length that could be given of that priesthood which is in its own nature eternal. Here then the word eternal means, not a limited time, but what is eternal in its duration.

Verse 17. Ver the Midianites, &c.] 12,000 Israelites attacked the Midianites, destroyed all their cities, slew their five kings, every male and every grown up woman, and took all their spoils.

In this census or enumeration not one man was found, save Joshua and Caleb, of all who had been reckoned 38 years before, the rest having died in the wilderness, 63-65.*

AND it came to pass after the plague, that the LORD spake unto Moses, and unto Eleazar the son of Aaron the priest, saying,
2 *Take the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, <sup>b</sup>from twenty years old and upward, throughout their fathers' house, all that are able to go to war in Israel.

3 And Moses and Eleazar the priest spake with them <sup>c</sup>in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

4 Take the sum of the people, from twenty years old and upward; as the LORD <sup>d</sup>commanded Moses and the children of Israel, which went forth out of the land of Egypt.

5 *Reuben, the eldest son of Israel: the children of Reuben; Hanoch, of whom cometh the family of the Hanochites: of Pallu, the family of the Palluites:

6 Of Hezron, the family of the Hezronites: of Carmi, the family of the Carmites.

7 These are the families of the Reubenites: and they that were numbered of them were forty and three thousand and seven hundred and thirty.

8 And the sons of Pallu; Eliab.

9 And the sons of Eliab; Nemuel, and Dathan, and Abiram. This is that Dathan and Abiram which were <sup>e</sup>famous in the congregation who strove against Moses and against Aaron in the company of Korah, when they strove against the LORD:

10 *And the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up together with Korah, when that company died, what time the fire devoured two hundred and fifty men: <sup>f</sup>and they became a sign.

11 Notwithstanding <sup>g</sup>the children of Korah died not.

Verse 2. Take the sum of all the congregation] After <sup>a</sup>eight years God commands a second census of the Israelites to be made, to preserve the distinction in families, and to regulate the tribes previously to their entry into the promised land, and to ascertain the proportion of land which should be allowed to each tribe. For though the whole was divided by lot, yet the portions were so disposed that a numerous tribe did not draw where the lots assigned small inheritances.

Verse 10. Together with Korah] The Samaritan text does not intimate that Korah was swallowed up, but that he was burnt, as appears in fact to have been the case. And the earth swallowed them up, what time that company died; and the fire devoured Korah with the two hundred and fifty men, who became a sign.

Verse 11. The children of Korah died not.] It is difficult to reconcile this place with chap. xvi. 27, 31-33, where it seems to be intimated that not only the men, but the wives, and the sons, and the little ones, of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, were swallowed up by the earthquake; see especially ver. 27, collated with ver. 33, of chap. xvi. But the text here expressly says, The children of Korah died not; and on a close inspection of ver. 27 of the above-mentioned chapter, we shall find that the sons and the little ones of Dathan and Abiram alone are mentioned. Here is no mention of the children of Korah; they therefore escaped, Notwithstanding the amazing increase in some and decrease in other tribes, the same sort of proportion is preserved in the east, west, north, and south divisions, as before; so as to keep the division of Judah, which was always in the front or van, the largest; and the division of Dan, which was always in the rear, the next in number. But it is worthy of remark that as they are now, properly speaking, to commence their grand military operations, so their front or advanced division is increased from 186,400 to 201,300; and their rear from 157,600 to 163,200. The first division is strengthened 14,900 men, and the last division 5,600 men. The reasons for this are sufficiently obvious.

or pebble formerly used for the purpose of what we term casting lots. From the original division of the promised land by lot to the children of Israel, all portions, appointments, offices, shares, or divisions, in spiritual and ecclesiastical matters, were termed lots. As therefore the promised land was divided by lot to the believing Israelites, God determined the lot as he saw good, none of the people having any claim on or right to it; so the kingdom of heaven is a lot given by the mere good-will of God to them that believe and obey him; for as unbelief and disobedience threw 600,000 people out of the inheritance of the promised land; so none who disbelieve God's word, and rebel against his authority, shall ever enter into the kingdom of Heaven.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The daughters of Zelophehad claim their inheritance, 1-4. Moses brings their case before the Lord, 5. He allows their claim, 6, 7; and a law is made to regulate the inheritance of daughters, 8-11. Moses is commanded to go up to Mount Abarim, and view the promised land, 12; is apprised of his death, 13; and because he did not sanctify God at the waters of Meribah, he shall not enter into it, 14. Moses requests the Lord to appoint a person to supply his place as leader of the Israelites, 15-17. God appoints Joshua, commands Moses to lay his hands upon him, to set him before Eleazar the priest, and give him a charge in the sight of the people, 18-20. Eleazar shall ask counsel for him by Urim, and at his command shall the Israelites go out and come in, 21. Moses does as the Lord commanded him, and consecrates Joshua, 22, 23.

THEN came the daughters of <sup>a</sup>Zelophehad, the son of Hephher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of Manasseh, the son of Joseph: and

Verse 1. The daughters of Zelophehad] The singular case of these women caused an additional law to be made to the civil code of Israel, which satisfactorily ascertained and simply secured the right of succession in cases of inheritance. The law, which is as reasonable as it is just, stands thus: 1. On the demise of the father the estate goes to the sons; 2. If there be no son, the daughters succeed; 3. If there be these are the names of his daughters; Mahlah, Noah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Tirzah.

no daughter, the brothers of the deceased inherit; 4. If there be no brethren or paternal uncles, the estate goes to the brothers of his father; 5. If there be no grand uncles or brothers of the father of the deceased, then the nearest akin succeeds to the inheritance. Beyond this fifth degree the law does not proceed, because as the families of the Israelites were kept distinct in their respective tribes, there must gregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

3 Our father <sup>a</sup> died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the LORD <sup>b</sup> in the company of Korah; but died in his own sin, and had no sons.

4 Why should the name of our father be <sup>c</sup> done away among his family, because he hath no son?

5 And Moses <sup>e</sup> brought their cause before the LORD.

6 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

7 The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: <sup>f</sup>thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them.

8 And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then he shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter.

9 And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren.

10 And if he have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his father's brethren.

11 And if his father have no brethren, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his kinsman that is next to him of his family, and he shall possess it: and it shall be unto the children of Israel <sup>g</sup> a statute of judgment, as the LORD commanded Moses.

12 And the LORD said unto Moses, <sup>h</sup> Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel.

13 And when thou hast seen it, thou also <sup>i</sup> shalt be gathered unto thy people, as Aaron thy brother was gathered.

always be some who could be called kinsmen, and were really such, having descended without interruption from the patriarch of the tribe.

Verse 7. Thou shalt surely give them—an inheritance among their father's brethren] There is a curious anomaly here in the Hebrew text which cannot be seen in our translation. In Hebrew they, them, and their, you, ye, and your, are both of the masculine and feminine genders, according as the nouns are to which they are affixed; but these words are of no gender in English. In this verse, speaking of the brethren of the father of those women, the masculine termination hem, THEIR, is used instead of the feminine hen, governed by benoth, daughters. So lahem, to THEM, and abihem, THEIR fathers, masculine, are found in the present text, instead of lahen, and abihen, feminine. Interpreters have sought for a hidden meaning here, and they have found several, whether hidden here or not. One says "the masculine gender is used, because these daughters are treated as if they were heirs male." Another, "that it is because of their faith and conscientious regard to the ancient customs and to keep the memory of their father in being, which might well befit men." Another, "that it signifies the free gift of God in Christ, where there is neither male nor female, bond nor free, for all are one in Christ;" and so on, for where there is no rule there is no end to conjecture. Now the plain truth is, that the masculine is in the present printed text a mistake for the feminine.

Verse 12. Get thee up into this mount Abarim] The mountain which Moses was commanded to ascend was certainly Mount Nebo, see Deut. xxii. 49, &c., which was the same as Pisgah, see Deut. xxxiv. 1. The mountains of Abarim are a long ridge of frightful, rocky, precipitous hills, which are continued all along the eastern coast of the Dead Sea, as far as the eye can reach. As in Hebrew abar signifies

15 And Moses spake unto the LORD, saying,

16 Let the LORD, <sup>4</sup> the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation.

17 <sup>5</sup> Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the LORD be not <sup>6</sup> as sheep which have no shepherd.

18 And the LORD said unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man <sup>7</sup> in whom <sup>8</sup> is the spirit, and <sup>9</sup> lay thine hand upon him;

19 And set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation, and <sup>10</sup> give him a charge in their sight.

20 And <sup>11</sup> thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, that all the congregation of the children of Israel <sup>12</sup> may be obedient.

21 <sup>13</sup> And he shall stand before Eleazar the priest, who shall ask counsel for him <sup>14</sup> after the judgment of Urim before the LORD: <sup>15</sup> at his word shall they go out, and at his word they shall come in, both he, and all the children of Israel with him, even all the congregation.

22 And Moses did as the LORD commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation.

23 And he laid his hands upon him, <sup>16</sup> and gave him a charge, as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

to pass over, Abarim here probably signifies passages; and the ridge in this place had its name in all likelihood from the passage of the Israelites, as it was opposite to these that they passed the Jordan into the promised land.

Verse 17. That the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep which have no shepherd.] This is a beautiful expression, and shows us in what light Moses viewed himself among his people. He was their shepherd; he sought no higher place; he fed and guided the flock of God under the direction of the Divine Spirit, and was faithful in all his Master's house.

Verse 18. In whom is the spirit] This must certainly mean the Spirit of God; and because he was endued with this Spirit, therefore he was capable of leading the people. How miserably qualified is that man for the work of God who is not guided and influenced by the Holy Ghost! God never chooses a man to accomplish his designs but that one whom he himself has qualified for the work.

Verse 20. And thou shalt put, &c.] Thou shalt show to the whole congregation that thou hast associated him with thyself in the government of the people.

Verse 21. Eleazar the priest—shall ask counsel for him] Here was a remarkable difference between him and Moses. God talked with Moses face to face; but to Joshua, only through the medium of the high-priest.

Verse 23. He laid his hands upon him] As a proof of his being appointed to and qualified for the work. So at the word of Joshua they were to go out, and at his word to come in, ver. 21. And thus he was a type of our blessed Lord as to his mediatorial office and divine appointment as man to the work of our salvation; and to this circumstance of the appointment of Joshua to this work, and his receiving of Moses' honour and glory, St. Peter seems to refer in 2 Epist. i. 16, 17. See also Mat. xvii. 5. But one infinitely greater than either Moses or Joshua is here.

Verse 2. Command the children of Israel, &c.] It is not easy to account for the reason of the introduction of these precepts here, which had been so circumstantially delivered before in different parts of the books of Exodus and Leviticus. It is possible that the daily, weekly, monthly, and yearly services had been considerably interrupted for several years, owing to the unsettled state of the people in the wilderness, and that it was necessary to repeat these laws for two reasons: 1. Because they were now about to enter into the Verse 1. And in the seventh month, &c.] This was the beginning of their civil year, and was a time of great festivity, and was ushered in by the blowing of trumpets. It answers to a part of our September. In imitation of the Jews different nations began their new year with sacrifices and festivity. The ancient Egyptians did so; and the Persians still celebrate their new year's day, which they hold on the vernal equinox. The first day of the year is generally a time for festivity in all civilized nations. On this day the Israelites offered one young bullock, one ram, seven lambs, and a kid, for a sin-offering, besides minchahs or meat-offerings.

Verse 12. On the fifteenth day of the seventh month] On this day there was to be a solemn assembly, and for seven days sacrifices were to be offered; on the first day thirteen young bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs. On each succeeding day one bullock less, till on the seventh day there were only seven, making in all seventy. What an expensive service! How should we magnify God for being delivered from it! Yet these were all the taxes they had to pay. At the public charge there were annually offered to God, independently of trespass-offerings and voluntary vows, fifteen goats, twenty-one kids, seventy-two rams, one hundred and thirty-two bullocks, and eleven hundred and one lambs! But shall be according to their numbers, <sup>a</sup> after the manner:

19 And one kid of the goats for a sin-offering; beside the continual burnt-offering, and the meat-offering, thereof, and their drink-offerings.

20 And on the third day, eleven bullocks, two rams, fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish.

21 And their meat-offering and their drink-offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, <sup>b</sup> after the manner.

22 And one goat for a sin-offering; beside the continual burnt offering, and his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

23 And on the fourth day ten bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish?

24 Their meat-offering and their drink-offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner,

25 And one kid of the goats for a sin-offering; beside the continual burnt-offering, his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

26 And on the fifth day nine bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without spot.

27 And their meat-offering and their drink-offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

28 And one goat for a sin-offering; beside the continual burnt-offering, and his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

29 And on the sixth day eight bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

30 And their meat-offering and their drink-offering for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

31 And one goat for a sin-offering; beside the continual burnt-offering, his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

32 And on the seventh day seven bullocks, two rams, and fourteen lambs of the first year without blemish:

33 And their meat-offering and their drink-offerings for the bullocks, for the rams, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

34 And one goat for a sin-offering; beside the continual burnt-offering, his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

35 On the eighth day ye shall have a <sup>c</sup>solemn assembly: ye shall do no servile work therein:

36 But ye shall offer a burnt-offering, a sacrifice made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD: one bullock, one ram, seven lambs of the first year without blemish:

37 Their meat-offering and their drink-offerings for the bullock, for the ram, and for the lambs, shall be according to their number, after the manner:

38 And one goat for a sin-offering, beside the continual burnt-offering, and his meat-offering, and his drink-offering.

39 These things ye shall <sup>d</sup>do unto the LORD in your <sup>e</sup>set feasts, beside your <sup>f</sup>vows, and your freewill-offerings, for your burnt-offerings, and for your meat-offerings, and for your drink-offerings, and for your peace-offerings.

how little is all this when compared with the lambs slain every year at the passover, which amounted in one year to the immense number of 255,600 slain at the temple itself, which was the answer that Cestius, the Roman general, received when he asked the priests how many persons had come to Jerusalem at their annual festivals; the priests, numbering the people by the lambs that had been slain, said, "twenty-five myriads, five thousand and six hundred."

Verse 35. On the eighth day ye shall have a solemn assembly.]

This among the Jews was esteemed the chief or high day of the feast, though fewer sacrifices were offered on it than on the others; the people seemed to have finished the solemnity with a greater measure of spiritual devotion, and it was on this day of the feast that our blessed Lord called the Jews from the letter to the spirit of the law, proposing himself as the sole fountain whence they could derive the streams of salvation, John vii. 37.

Verse 2. If a man vow a vow] A vow is a religious promise made to God. Vows were of several kinds: 1. Of abstinence or humiliation, see ver. 13; 2. Of the Nazarite, see chap. vi.; 3. Of giving certain things or sacrifices to the Lord, Lev. vii. 16; 4. Of alms given to the poor, see Deut. xxiii. 21. The law in this chapter must have been very useful, as it both prevented and annulled rash vows, and provided a proper sanction for the support and performance of 3 If a woman also vow a vow unto the LORD, and bind herself by a bond, being in her father's house in her youth;

4 And her father hear her vow, and her bond wherewith she hath bound her soul, and her father shall hold his peace at her: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she hath bound her soul shall stand.

5 But if her father disallow her in the day that he heareth; not any of her vows, or of her bonds wherewith she hath bound her soul, shall stand: and the LORD shall forgive her, because her father disallowed her.

6 And if she had at all an husband, when * she vowed, or uttered ought out of her lips, wherewith she bound her soul;

7 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her in the day that he heard it: then her vows shall stand, and her bonds wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

8 But if her husband <sup>b</sup> disallowed her on the day that he heard it; then he shall make her vow which she vowed, and that which she uttered with her lips, wherewith she bound her soul, of none effect: and the LORD shall forgive her.

9 But every vow of a widow, and of her that is divorced, wherewith they have bound their souls, shall stand against her.

* Heb. her vows were upon her.

those that were rationally and piously made. Besides, this law must have acted as a great preventive of lying and hypocrisy. If a vow was properly made, a man or woman was bound, under penalty of the displeasure of God, to fulfil it.

Verse 3. In her youth] That is, say the rabbins, under twelve years of age; and under thirteen in case of a young man. Young persons of this age were considered to be under the authority of their parents, and had consequently no power to vow away the property of another. A married woman was in the same circumstances, because she was under the authority of her husband. If however the parents or the husband heard of the vow, and objected to it in the same day in which they heard of it (ver. 5), then the vow was annulled; or if, having heard of it, they held their peace, this was considered a ratification of the vow.

A rash vow was never to be kept; "for," says Philo, and common sense and justice say the same, "he who commits an unjust action because of his vow adds one crime to another, 1. By making an unlawful vow; 2. By doing an unlawful action."

10 And if she vowed in her husband's house, or bound her soul by a bond with an oath;

11 And her husband heard it, and held his peace at her, and disallowed her not: then all her vows shall stand, and every bond wherewith she bound her soul shall stand.

12 But if her husband hath utterly made them void on the day he heard them; then whatsoever proceeded out of her lips concerning her vows, or concerning the bond of her soul, shall not stand: her husband hath made them void; and the LORD shall forgive her.

13 Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the soul, her husband may establish it, or her husband may make it void.

14 But if her husband altogether hold his peace at her from day to day; then he establisheth all her vows, or all her bonds, which are upon her: he confirmeth them, because he held his peace at her in the day that he heard them.

15 But if he shall any ways make them void after that he hath heard them; then he shall bear her iniquity.

16 These are the statutes, which the LORD commanded Moses, between a man and his wife, between the father and his daughter, being yet in her youth in her father's house.

Pa. lvi. 12.—<sup>b</sup> Gen. iii. 16.

Verse 12. Concerning the bond of her soul] Her life is at stake if she fulfil not the obligation under which she has laid herself.

Verse 16. These are the statutes] It is very probable that this law, like that concerning the succession of daughters, (chap. xxvii.), rose from the exigency of some particular case that had just then occurred.

Making vows, in almost any case, is a dangerous business; they seldom do any good, and often much evil. He who does not feel himself bound to do what is fit, right, and just, from the standing testimony of God's word, is not likely to do it from any obligation he may lay upon his own conscience. If God's word lacks weight with him, his own will prove lighter than vanity. Every man who professes the Christian religion is under the most solemn obligation to devote body, soul, and spirit to God, not only to the utmost extent of his powers, but also as long as he exists. Being baptized, and receiving the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, are additional ratifications of the great, general, Christian vow; but every true follower of Christ should always remember, and frequently renew, his covenant with God.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The command of the Lord to make war on the Midianites, 1, 2. One thousand men are chosen out of each of the twelve tribes, and sent with Phinehas against the Midianites, 3-6. They slay all the males, 7; their five kings and Balaam, 8. They take all the women captives, with the flocks and goods, 9; burn their cities, and bring away the spoil, 10, 11. They bring the captives, &c., to Moses, who is wroth with the officers for sparing the women, who had formerly been the cause of their transgression and punishment, 12-16. He commands all the male children and all the grown up females to be slain, 17, 18. How the soldiers were to purify themselves, 19, 20; and the different articles taken in war, 21-24. They are commanded to take the sum of the prey to divide it into two parts; one for the 12,000 warriors, and the other for the rest of the congregation, 25-27. One of 500, both of persons and cattle, of the share of the warriors, to be given to the Lord, 28, 29; and one part of fifty, of the people's share, to be given to the Levites, 30. The sum of the prey remaining after the above division: sheep 675,000, beeves 72,000, asses 61,000, young women, 32,000, ver. 31-35. How the soldiers' part was divided, 36-40. How the part belonging to the congregation was divided, 41-47. The officers report that they had not lost a man in this war, 48, 49. They bring a voluntary oblation to God, of gold and ornaments, 50, 51; the amount of which was 16,750 shekels, 52, 53. Moses and Eleazar bring the gold into the tabernacle for a memorial, 54.

AND the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 *Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou<sup>b</sup> be gathered unto thy people.

3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the LORD of Midian.

4 *Of every tribe a thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war.

5 So there were delivered out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.

6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and<sup>a</sup> the trumpets to blow in his hand.

7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and<sup>c</sup> they slew all the<sup>d</sup> males.

8 And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, *Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: <sup>b</sup>Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.

10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.

11 And<sup>e</sup> they took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

12 And they brought the captives, and the prey, and the spoil unto Moses, and Eleazar the priest, and unto the congregation of the children of Israel, unto the camp at the plains of Moab, which are by Jordan near Jericho.

13 And Moses and Eleazar the priest, and all the princes of the congregation, went forth to meet them without the camp.

14 And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the<sup>f</sup> battle.

15 And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved<sup>g</sup> all the women alive?

17 Now therefore<sup>k</sup> kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with<sup>l</sup> him.

18 But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

19 And<sup>m</sup> do ye abide without the camp seven days: whosoever hath killed any person, and<sup>n</sup> whosoever hath touched any slain, purify both yourselves and your captives on the third day, and on the seventh day.

20 And purify all your raiment, and all<sup>o</sup> that is made of skins, and all work of goats' hair, and all things made of wood.

21 And Eleazar the priest said unto the men of war, which went to the battle, This is the ordinance of the law which the LORD commanded Moses;

22 Only the gold, and the silver, the brass, the iron, the tin, and the lead.

23 Every thing that may abide the fire, ye shall make it go through the fire, and it shall be clean: nevertheless it shall be purified<sup>p</sup> with the water of Verse 2. Gathered unto thy people.] When? Not in the grave surely. Moses was gathered with none of them, his burial-place no man ever knew. "But being gathered unto one's people means dying." It does imply dying, but it does not mean this only. The truth is, God considers all those who are dead to men in a state of conscious existence in another world. Therefore he calls himself the God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob; now God is not the God of the dead, but of the living; because all LIVE to HIM, whether dead to men or not. Moses therefore was to be gathered to his people—to enter into that republic of Israel which, having died in the faith, fear, and love of God, were now living in a state of conscious blessedness beyond the confines of the grave.

Verse 3. Avenge the Lord of Midian.] It was God's quarrel, not their own, that they were now to take up. These people were idolaters; idolatry is an offence against GOD; the civil power has no authority to meddle with what belongs to Him, without especial directions, certified in the most unequivocal way. Private revenge, extension of territory, love of plunder, were to have no place in this business; the Lord is to be avenged; and through HIM the children of Israel (ver. 2), because their souls as well as their bodies had been well nigh ruined by their idolatry.

Verse 6. A thousand of every tribe.] Twelve thousand men in the whole. And Phinehas, the son of Eleazar; some think he was made general in this expedition, but this is not likely. The ark and its contents must proceed to this battle, because the battle was the Lord's, and he dwelt between the cherubim over the ark; and Phinehas, who had before got a grant in the eternal priesthood, was chosen to accompany the ark in place of his father Eleazar, who was probably now too far advanced in years to undergo the fatigue. Who then was general? Joshua, without doubt, though not here mentioned, because the battle being the Lord's, he alone is to have the supreme direction and all the glory. Besides, it was an extraordinary war, and not conducted on the common principle, for we do not find that peace was offered to the Midianites, and that they refused it; see Deut. xx. 10, &c. In such a case only hostilities could lawfully commence; but they were sinners against GOD; the cup of their iniquity was full, and God thought proper to destroy them. Though a leader there certainly was, and Joshua was probably that leader, yet because God for the above reason was considered as commander-in-chief, therefore no one else is mentioned; for it is evident that the sole business of Phinehas was to take care of the holy instruments and to blow with the trumpet.

Verse 8. Balaam—they slew with the sword.] This man had probably committed what St. John calls the sin unto death—a sin which God punishes with temporal death, while at the same time he extends mercy to the soul.

Verse 17. Kill every male among the little ones.] For this action I account simply on the principle that God, who is the author and supporter of life, has a right to dispose of it when and how he thinks proper; and the Judge of all the earth can do nothing but what is right. Of the women killed on this occasion, it may be safely said their lives were forfeited by their personal transgressions; and yet even in this case there can be little doubt that God showed mercy to their souls. The little ones were safely lodged; they were taken to heaven and saved from the evil to come.

Verse 23. The water of separation.] The water in which the ashes of the red heifer were mingled; see on chap. viii. 7, xix. 2, &c. Garments, whether of cloth or skins were to be washed. Gold, silver, brass, iron, tin, and lead, to pass through the fire, probably to be melted down, [or rather, to be purified.]

separation: and all that abideth not the fire ye shall make go through the water.

24 * And ye shall wash your clothes on the seventh day, and ye shall be clean, and afterward ye shall come into the camp.

25 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

26 Take the sum of the prey <sup>b</sup> that was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation:

27 And <sup>c</sup> divide the prey into two parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation:

28 And levy a tribute unto the LORD of the men of war which went out to battle: <sup>d</sup> one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep:

29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for an heave-offering of the LORD.

30 And of the children of Israel's half, thou shalt take <sup>e</sup> one portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the <sup>f</sup> flocks, of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, <sup>g</sup> which keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD.

31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses,

32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand and seventy thousand and five hundred sheep,

33 And threescore and twelve thousand beeves,

34 And threescore and one thousand asses,

35 And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him.

36 And the half, which was the portion of them that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred sheep:

37 And the LORD's tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen.

38 And the beeves were thirty and six thousand: of which the LORD's tribute was threescore and twelve.

39 And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred; of which the LORD's tribute was three-score and one.

40 And the persons were sixteen thousand: of which the LORD's tribute was thirty and two persons.

41 And Moses gave the tribute, which was the LORD's heave-offering, unto Eleazar the priest, <sup>h</sup> as the LORD commanded Moses.

42 And of the children of Israel's half, which Moses divided from the men that warred, 43 (Now the half that pertained unto the congregation was three hundred thousand and thirty thousand and seven thousand and five hundred sheep,

44 And thirty and six thousand beeves,

45 And thirty thousand asses and five hundred,

46 And sixteen thousand persons;)

47 Even <sup>i</sup> of the children of Israel's half, Moses took one portion of fifty, both of man and of beast, and gave them unto the Levites, which kept the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD: as the LORD commanded Moses.

48 And the officers which were over thousands of the host, the captains of thousands, and captains of hundreds, came near unto Moses:

49 And they said unto Moses, Thy servants have taken the sum of the men of war which are under our <sup>j</sup> charge, and there lacketh not one man of us.

50 We have therefore brought an oblation for the LORD, what every man hath <sup>k</sup> gotten, of jewels of gold, chains, and bracelets, rings, earrings, and tablets, <sup>l</sup> to make an atonement for our souls before the LORD.

51 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of them, even all wrought jewels.

52 And all the gold of the <sup>m</sup> offering that they offered up to the LORD, of the captains of thousands, and of the captains of hundreds, was sixteen thousand seven hundred and fifty shekels.

53 (For <sup>n</sup> the men of war had taken spoil, every man for himself.)

54 And Moses and Eleazar the priest took the gold of the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and brought it into the tabernacle of the congregation, <sup>o</sup> for a memorial for the children of Israel before the LORD.

Verse 28. And levy a tribute unto the Lord—one soul of five hundred, &c.] The persons to be employed in the Lord's service, under the Levites—the cattle either for sacrifice, or for the use of the Levites, ver. 30. Some monsters have supposed that one out of every five hundred of the captives was offered in sacrifice to the Lord! but this is abominable. When God chose to have the life of a man, he took it in the way of justice, as in the case of the Midianites above; but never in the way of sacrifice.

Verse 32. The booty] It appears from the enumeration here, that the Israelites, in this war against the Midianites, took 32,000 female prisoners, 61,000 asses, 72,000 beeves, 675,000 sheep and small cattle; besides the immense number of males who fell in battle, and the women and children who were slain by the divine command, ver. 17. And it does not appear that in this expedition a single man of Israel fell! This was naturally to be expected, because the battle was the Lord's, ver. 49.

As the booty was divided into two equal parts, ver. 22, one for the soldiers employed in the expedition, and the other for those who, being equally willing to be employed, were ordered to stay in the camp; so each of the parties in this booty was to give a certain proportion to the Lord.

—Ver. 30.—Heb. hand.—Heb. found.—Exod. xxx. 12, 16.—<sup>m</sup> Heb. heave-offering.—Deut. xx. 14.—Exod. xxx. 16.

The soldiers to give to the Lord one out of every five hundred persons, beeves, asses, and sheep, ver. 28. The people, who by staying at home risked nothing, and had no fatigue, were to give one out of fifty of the above, ver. 30.

Verse 50. We have brought an oblation for the Lord] So it appears there was a great deal of booty taken which did not come into the general account; and of this the soldiers, of their own will, made a very extensive offering to God, because he had preserved them from falling in battle. That not one man should have been slain is a most extraordinary circumstance, and powerfully marks the peculiar superintendence of God's especial providence. The Midianites must certainly have made some resistance; but that was ineffectual, because it was against the Lord. When any nation undertakes a crusade against those whom they are pleased to call the Lord's enemies, let them bring from the contest this proof of their divine mission, viz., that not one man of them is either lost or missing; and then, and not till then, shall we believe that God hath sent them.

To make an atonement for our souls] That is, to make an acknowledgment to God for the preservation of their lives. The gold offered on this occasion amounted to 16,750 shekels, equal to £37,869 16s. 5d. of our money.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Reubenites and Gadites request Moses to give them their inheritance on this side of Jordan, 1-5. Moses expostulates with and reproves them, 6-15. They explain themselves, and propose conditions, with which Moses is satisfied—they are to build cities for their wives and children, and folds for their cattle, and go over Jordan armed with the other tribes, and fight against their enemies till the land is subdued; after which they are to return, 16-27. Moses proposes the business to Eleazar, Joshua, and the elders, 28-30. The Gadites and Reubenites promise a faithful observance of the conditions, 31-32; on which Moses assigns to them, and the half tribe of Manasseh, the kingdom of Sihon, king of the Amorites, and the kingdom of Og, king of Bashan, 33. The cities built by the Gadites, 34-36. The cities built by the Reubenites, 37, 38. The children of Machir, the son of Manasseh, expel the Amorites from Gilead, 39, which Moses grants to them, 40. Jair, the son of Manasseh, takes the small towns of Gilead, 41, And Nobah takes Kenath and its villages, 42.

NOW the children of Reuben and the children of Gad had a very great multitude of cattle: and when they saw the land of * Jazer, and the land of Gilead, that, behold, the place was a place for cattle;

2 The children of Gad and the children of Reuben came and spake unto Moses, and to Eleazar the priest, and unto the princes of the congregation, saying,

3 Ataroth, and Dibon, and Jazer, and <sup>b</sup> Nimrah, and Heshbon, and Elealeh, and <sup>c</sup> Shebam, and Nebo, and <sup>d</sup> Beon,

4 Even the country * which the LORD smote before the congregation of Israel, is a land for cattle, and thy servants have cattle:

5 Wherefore, said they, if we have found grace in thy sight, let this land be given unto thy servants for a possession, and bring us not over Jordan.

6 And Moses said unto the children of Gad and to the children of Reuben, Shall your brethren go to war, and shall ye sit here?

7 And wherefore <sup>e</sup> discourage ye the heart of the children of Israel from going over into the land which the LORD hath given them?

8 Thus did your fathers, <sup>f</sup> when I sent them from Kadesh-barnea <sup>g</sup> to see the land.

9 For <sup>h</sup> when they went up unto the valley of Eshcol, and saw the land, they discouraged the heart of the children of Israel, that they should not go into the land which the LORD hath given them?

10 <sup>i</sup> And the LORD's anger was kindled the same time, and he sware, saying,

11 Surely none of the men that came up out of Egypt, <sup>j</sup> from twenty years old and upward, shall see the land which I swear unto Abraham, unto

Isaac, and unto Jacob; because <sup>k</sup> they have not <sup>l</sup> wholly followed me:

12 Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenazite, and Joshua the son of Nun: <sup>m</sup> for they have wholly followed the LORD.

13 And the LORD's anger was kindled against Israel: and he made them <sup>n</sup> wander in the wilderness forty years, until <sup>o</sup> all the generation that had done evil in the sight of the LORD was consumed.

14 And, behold, ye are risen up in your fathers' stead, an increase of sinful men, to augment yet the <sup>p</sup> fierce anger of the LORD toward Israel.

15 For if ye <sup>q</sup> turn away from after him, he will again leave them in the wilderness: and ye shall destroy all this people.

16 And they came near unto him, and said, We will build sheepfolds here for our cattle, and cities for our little ones:

17 But <sup>r</sup> we ourselves will go ready armed before the children of Israel, until we have brought them unto their place: and our little ones shall dwell in the fenced cities because of the inhabitants of the land.

18 <sup>s</sup> We will not return unto our houses, until the children of Israel have inherited every man his inheritance.

19 For we will not inherit with them on yonder side Jordan, or forward; <sup>t</sup> because our inheritance is fallen to us on this side Jordan eastward.

20 And <sup>u</sup> Moses said unto them, If ye will do this thing, if ye will go armed before the LORD to war,

21 And will go all of you armed over Jordan before the LORD, until he hath driven out his enemies from before him,

22 And <sup>v</sup> the land be subdued before the LORD:

Verse 3. Ataroth and Dibon, &c.] The places mentioned here belonged to Sihon, king of the Amorites, and Og, king of Bashan, which, being conquered by the Israelites, constituted ever after a part of their territories, ver. 33.

Verse 5. Let this land be given unto thy servants] Because it was good for pasturage, and they had many flocks, ver. 1.

Verse 12. Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenazite] It was Jephunneh that was the Kenazite, and not Caleb. Kenaz was probably the father of Jephunneh.

Verse 16. We will build—cities for our little ones] It was impossible for these, numerous as they might be, to build cities and fortify them for the defence of their families in their absence. Calmet supposes they meant no more than repairing the cities of the Amorites which they had lately taken; which work might have been very easily accomplished in the time they spent on this side of Jordan, before they went over with their brethren, to put them in possession of the land.

Verse 17. Because of the inhabitants of the land.] These were the Ammonites, Moabites, Idumeans, and the remains of the Midianites and Amorites. But could the women and children even keep the defenced cities, when placed in them? This certainly cannot be supposed possible. Many of the men of war must of course stay behind. In the last census, chap. xxvi., the tribe of Reuben consisted of 43,780 men; the tribe of Gad, 40,500; the tribe of Manasseh, 52,700; the half of which is 26,350. Add this to the sum of the other two tribes, and the amount is 110,580. Now, from Joshua iv. 13, we learn that of the tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half of the tribe of Manasseh, only 40,000 armed men passed over Jordan to assist their brethren in the reduction of the land: consequently the number of 70,580 men were left behind for the defence of the women, the children, and 25 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben spake unto Moses, saying, Thy servants will do as my lord commandeth.

28 So <sup>g</sup>concerning them Moses commanded Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the chief fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel:

29 And Moses said unto them, If the children of Gad and the children of Reuben will pass with you over Jordan, every man armed to battle, before the LORD, and the land shall be subdued before you; then ye shall give them the land of Gilead for a possession:

30 But if they will not pass over with you armed, they shall have possessions among you in the land of Canaan.

31 And the children of Gad and the children of Reuben answered, saying, As the LORD hath said unto thy servants, so will we do.

Verse 34. The children of Gad built—Aroer] This was situated on the river Arnon, Deut. ii. 36; 2 Kings x. 33. It was formerly inhabited by the Emim, a warlike and perhaps gigantic people. They were expelled by the Moabites; the Moabites by the Amorites; and the Amorites by the Israelites. The Gadites then possessed it till the captivity of their tribe, with that of Reuben and the half of the tribe of

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The journeyings of the Israelites written out by Moses, according to the commandment of the Lord, 1, 2. They depart from Rameses on the fifteenth day of the first month, on the day after the passover, the first-born of the Egyptians having been slain, 3, 4. Their forty-two stations enumerated, 5-49. They are authorized to expel all the former inhabitants, and destroy all remnants of idolatry, 50-53. The land is to be divided by lot, 54. Should they not drive out the former inhabitants, they shall be to them as pricks in their eyes and thorns in their sides, 55. And if not obedient, God will deal with them as he has purposed to do with the Canaanites, 56.

Verse 2. And Moses wrote their goings out according to their journeys] We may consider the whole book of Num-

4 For the Egyptians buried all their first-born, <sup>d</sup> which the LORD had smitten among them: <sup>e</sup> upon their gods also the LORD executed judgments.

5 <sup>f</sup> And the children of Israel removed from Rameses, and pitched in Succoth.

6 And they departed from <sup>g</sup> Succoth, and pitched in Etham, which is in the edge of the wilderness.

7 And <sup>h</sup> they removed from Etham, and turned again unto Pi-hahiroth, which is before Baalzephon: and they pitched before Migdol.

8 And they departed from before Pi-hahiroth, and <sup>i</sup> passed through the midst of the sea into the wilderness, and went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham, and pitched in Marah.

9 And they removed from Marah, and <sup>j</sup> came unto Elim: and in Elim were twelve fountains of water, and threescore and ten palm-trees; and they pitched there.

10 And they removed from Elim, and encamped by the Red Sea.

route of the Israelites through this great, dreary, and trackless desert, and have ascertained many of the stages here described. Indeed there are sufficient evidences of this important journey still remaining, for the descriptions of many are so particular that the places are readily ascertained by them; but this is not the case with all. Israel was the church of God in the wilderness, and its unsettled, wandering state under Moses may point out the unsettled state of religion under the law. Their being brought, after the death of Moses, into the promised rest by Joshua, may point out the establishment, fixedness, and certainty of that salvation provided by Jesus Christ, of whom Joshua, in name and conduct, was a remarkable type.

Verse 3. From Rameses] This appears to have been the metropolis of the land of Goshen, and the place of rendezvous whence the whole Israelitish nation set out on their journey to the promised land; and is supposed to be the same as Cairo. [Or rather the modern Belbeis.]

HERE FOLLOW THE FORTY-TWO STATIONS.

STATION I. Verse 5. And pitched in SUCCOTH.] This name signifies booths or tents, and probably refers to no town or village, but simply designates the place where they pitched their tents for the first time after their departure from Rameses.

STAT. II. Verse 6. ETHAM, which is in the edge of the wilderness.] This place is not well known; Dr. Shaw supposes it to have been one mile from Cairo. Calmet thinks it is the city of Buthum mentioned by Herodotus, which he places in Arabia, on the frontiers of Egypt.

STAT. III. Verse 7. PI-HAHIROTH] Baal-zephon Calmet supposes to be the Clyma of the Greeks, and the Kolzum of the Arabians.

STAT. IV. Verse 8. And went three days' journey in the wilderness of Etham] Called the wilderness of Shur, Exod. xv. 22.

STAT. V. Verse 9. And came unto ELIM] A place on the skirts of the deserts of Sin, two leagues from Tor, and nearly thirty from Corandel, a large bay on the east side of the Red Sea. See on Exod. xv. 27.

STAT. VI. Verse 10. Encamped by the RED SEA.] It is difficult to assign the place of this encampment, as the Israelites were now on their way to Mount Sinai, which lay considerably to the east of Elim, and consequently farther from the sea than the former station. It might be called by the Red Sea, as the Israelites had it, as the principal object still in view. This station however is mentioned nowhere else. By the Red Sea we are not to understand a sea, the waters of which are red, or the sand red, or any thing else 11 And they removed from the Red Sea, and encamped in the <sup>k</sup> wilderness of Sin.

12 And they took their journey out of the wilderness of Sin, and encamped in Dophkah.

13 And they departed from Dophkah, and encamped in Alush.

14 And they removed from Alush, and encamped at <sup>l</sup> Rephidim, where was no water for the people to drink.

15 And they departed from Rephidim, and pitched in the <sup>m</sup> wilderness of Sinai.

17 And they departed from Kibroth-hattaavah, and <sup>p</sup> encamped at Hazeroth.

18 And they departed from Hazeroth, and pitched in <sup>q</sup> Rithmah.

19 And they departed from Rithmah, and pitched at Rimmon-parez.

20 And they departed from Rimmon-parez, and pitched in Libnah.

21 And they removed from Libnah, and pitched at Rissah.

22 And they journeyed from Rissah, and pitched in Kehelathah.

about or in it red; for nothing of this kind appears. It is called in Hebrew yam suph, which signifies the weedy sea.

STAT. VII. Verse 11. The wilderness of SIN.] This lies between Elim and Mount Sinai.

STAT. VIII. Verse 12. DOPHKAH.] This place is not mentioned in Exodus, and its situation is not known.

STAT. IX. Verse 13. ALUSH.] Neither is this mentioned in Exodus, and its situation is equally unknown.

STAT. X. Verse 14. REPHIDIM] Remarkable for the rebellion of the Israelites against Moses, because of the want of water, Exod. xvii.

STAT. XI. Verse 15. The WILDERNESS OF SINAI.] Somewhere northward of Mount Sinai, on the straight road to the promised land, to which they now directed their course.

STAT. XII. Verse 16. KIBROTH-HATTAVAH.] No city, village, &c., but a place in the open desert, which had its name from the plague that fell upon the Israelites, through their murmuring against God, and their inordinate desire of flesh. But it appears that the Israelites had travelled three days' journey in order to reach this place, chap. x. 33, and commentators suppose there must have been other stations which are not laid down here, probably because the places were not remarkable.

STAT. XIII. Verse 17. HAZEROth.] This place Dr. Shaw computes to have been about thirty miles distant from Mount Sinai.

STAT. XIV. Verse 18. RITHMAH.] This place lay somewhere in the wilderness of Paran; through which the Israelites were now passing. The name signifies the juniper-tree; and the place probably had its name from the great number of those trees growing in that district.

STAT. XV. Verse 19. RIMMON-PAREZ.] Unknown.

STAT. XVI. Verse 20. LIBNAH.] The situation of this place is uncertain. A city of this name is mentioned, Josh. x. 29, as situated between Kadesh-barnea and Gaza.

STAT. XVII. Verse 21. RISSAH.] A place mentioned nowhere else in the sacred writings. Its situation utterly unknown.

STAT. XVIII. Verse 22. KEHELATHAH.] Utterly unknown; though some conjecture that it might have been the place called Keilah, 1 Sam. xiii. 1, &c., but this is unlikely.

STAT. XIX. Verse 23. SHAPHER.] Where this mountain lay cannot be determined.

STAT. XX. Verse 24. HARADAH.] Unknown. Calmet supposes that it may be the place called Bered, Gen. xvi. 14, which was in the vicinity of Kadesh.

STAT. XXI. Verse 25. MAKHELOTH.] A name found nowhere else in Scripture.

STAT. XXII. Verse 26. TAHATH.] Unknown.

23 And they went from Kehelathah, and pitched in Mount Shapher.

24 And they removed from Mount Shapher, and encamped in Haradah.

25 And they removed from Haradah, and pitched in Makheloth.

26 And they removed from Makheloth, and encamped at Tahath.

27 And they departed from Tahath, and pitched at Tarah.

28 And they removed from Tarah, and pitched in Mithcah.

29 And they went from Mithcah, and pitched in Hashmonah.

30 And they departed from Hashmonah, and * encamped at Moseroth.

31 And they departed from Moseroth, and pitched in Bene-jaakan.

32 And they removed from <sup>b</sup> Bene-jaakan, and * encamped at Hor-hagidgad.

33 And they went from Hor-hagidgad, and pitched in Jotbathah.

34 And they removed from Jotbathah, and encamped at Ebronah.

35 And they departed from Ebronah, <sup>a</sup> and encamped at Ezion-gaber.

36 And they removed from Ezion-gaber, and pitched in the * wilderness of Zin, which is Kadesh.

37 And they removed from <sup>c</sup> Kadesh, and pitched in Mount Hor, in the edge of the land of Edom.

38 And <sup>a</sup> Aaron the priest went up into Mount Hor at the commandment of the LORD, and died there, in the fortieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the first day of the fifth month.

39 And Aaron was an hundred and twenty and three years old when he died in Mount Hor.

40 And <sup>b</sup> king Arad, the Canaanite, which dwelt in the south in the land of Canaan, heard of the coming of the children of Israel.

41 And they departed from Mount <sup>c</sup> Hor, and pitched in Zalmonah.

42 And they departed from Zalmonah, and pitched in Punon.

45 And they departed from Iim, and pitched <sup>h</sup> in Dibon-gad.

46 And they removed from Dibon-gad, and encamped in Almon<sup>i</sup>-diblathaim.

47 And they removed from Almon-diblathaim, <sup>j</sup> and pitched in the mountains of Abarim, before Nebo.

48 And they departed from the mountains of Abarim, and <sup>k</sup> pitched in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho.

49 And they pitched by Jordan, from Beth-jesimoth even unto <sup>l</sup> Abel-shittim <sup>m</sup> in the plains of Moab.

50 And the LORD spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying,

51 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, <sup>n</sup> When ye are passed over Jordan into the land of Canaan ;

52 <sup>o</sup> Then ye shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures, and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places.

STAT. XXV. Verse 29. HASHMONAH.] Supposed by some to be the same as Azmon, chap. xxxiv. 4.

STAT. XXVI. Verse 30. MOSEROTH.] Situation unknown. In Deut. x. 6 it is said that the Israelites took their journey from Beeroth, the wells of the children of Jaakan, to Mosera, and there Aaron died. If so, Mosera, Moseroth, and Hor must be different names of the same place ; or Moseroth, or Mosera, must have been some town or village near Mount Hor, for there Aaron died. See ver. 38.

STAT. XXVII. Verse 31. BENE-JAAKAN.] Unknown. STAT. XXVIII. Verse 32. HOR-HAGIDGAD.] The hole or pit of Gidgad. Unknown. It was a place perhaps remarkable for some vast pit or cavern, from which it took its name.

STAT. XXIX. Verse 33. JOTBATHAH.] Situation unknown. It is said in Deut. x. 7 to be a land of rivers of waters.

STAT. XXX. Verse 34. EBONAH.] Nowhere else mentioned.

STAT. XXXI. Verse 35. EZION-GABER.] On the western coast of the Elanitic gulf of the Red Sea. It is now called Maenah el Deshab, or the golden port, by the Arabs ; because it was at this place that Solomon sent his ships for gold to Ophir, 1 Kings ix. 26.

STAT. XXXII. Verse 36. ZIN, which is KADESH.] A place remarkable for the death of Miriam the prophetess, and bringing water out of the rock. As this place was on the borders of Edom, the Israelites, being denied permission to pass through their land, were obliged to turn to the right to Mount Hor, now called Accaba by the Arabs.

STAT. XXXIII. Verse 37. HOR.] Famous for the death of Aaron. Perhaps Moseroth or Mosera, ver. 30, was a village near this mountain.

STAT. XXXIV. Verse 41. ZALMONAH.] Probably in the neighbourhood of the land of Edom. As tselem signifies an image, this place probably had its name from the brazen serpent set up by Moses. From the same root the word telem, corruptly called talisman, which signifies a consecrated image, is derived.

STAT. XXXV. Verse 42. PUNON.] A place in Idumea. Nowhere else mentioned.

STAT. XXXVI. Verse 43. OBOTH.] Mentioned before, chap. xxi. 10.

STAT. XXXVII. Verse 44. IJE-ABARIM.] The heaps of Abarim. Situation uncertain. It is called Iim in the following verse. As the word signifies heaps or protuberances, it probably means tumuli or small hills near some of the foras of Jordan.

STAT. XXXVIII. Verse 45. DIBON-GAD.] Supposed to be the same as Dibon, chap. xxxii. 34, and to be situated on the brook Arnon.

STAT. XXXIX. Verse 46. ALMON-DIBLATHAIM.] Situation not known. It belonged to the Mosabites in the time of the prophet Jeremiah ; Jer. xlviii. 23.

STAT. XL. Verse 47. Mountains of Abarim, before Nebo.] The mountain on which Moses died. They came to this place after the overthrow of the Amorites.

STAT. XLI. Verse 48. The plains of Moab.] This was the scene of the transactions between Balaam and Balak ; see chapters xiii., xxiv., xlv.

Verse 56. Shall be pricks in your eyes] Under these metaphors, the continual mischief that should be done to them, both in soul and body, by these idolaters, is set forth in a very expressive manner. What can be more vexatious than a continual goading of each side, so that the attempt to avoid the one throws the body more forcibly on the other? And what can be more distressing than a continual pricking in the eye, harassing the mind, tormenting the body, and extinguishing the sight?

It has been usual among pious men to consider these Canaanites remaining in the land, as emblems of indwelling sin; and it must be granted that what those remaining Canaanites were to the people of Israel, who were disobedient to God, such is indwelling sin to all those who will not have the blood of the Covenant to cleanse them from all unrighteousness. For a time, while conscience is tender, such persons feel themselves straitened in all their goings, hindered in all their religious services, and distressed beyond measure because of the law—the authority and power, of sin, which they find warring in their members: by and by the eye of their mind becomes obscured by the constant piercings of sin, till at last, fatally persuaded that sin must dwell in them as long as they live, they accommodate their minds to their situation, their consciences cease to be tender, and they content themselves with expecting redemption where and when it has never been promised, viz., beyond the grave.

The Mediterranean Sea, called here the Great Sea, to distinguish it from the Dead Sea, the Sea of Tiberias, &c., which were only a sort of lakes. In Hebrew there is properly but one term, yam, which is applied to all collections of water apparently stagnant, and which is generally translated sea. The Greek of the New Testament follows the Hebrew and employs, in general, one word whether it speaks of the Mediterranean, or of the sea or lake of Galilee.

Verse 11. The sea of Chinnereth] The same as the sea of Galilee, sea of Tiberias, and sea of Gennesareth.

the goings out of it shall be at <sup>a</sup>the salt sea: this shall be your land with the coasts thereof round about.

13 And Moses commanded the children of Israel, saying, <sup>b</sup>This is the land which ye shall inherit by lot, which the LORD commanded to give unto the nine tribes, and to the half tribe:

14 <sup>c</sup>For the tribe of the children of Reuben according to the house of their fathers, and the tribe of the children of Gad according to the house of their fathers, have received their inheritance; and half the tribe of Manasseh have received their inheritance:

15 The two tribes and the half tribe have received their inheritance on this side Jordan near Jericho eastward, toward the sunrising.

16 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,

17 These are the names of the men which shall divide the land unto you: <sup>d</sup>Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun.

18 And ye shall take one <sup>e</sup>prince of every tribe, to divide the land by inheritance.

27 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Asher, Ahihud the son of Shelomi.

28 And the prince of the tribe of the children of Naphtali, Pedahel the son of Ammihud.

29 These are they whom the LORD commanded to divide the inheritance unto the children of Israel in the land of Canaan.

Verse 12. The border shall go down to Jordan] This river is famous both in the Old and New Testaments. It takes its rise at the foot of Mount Libanus, passes through the sea of Chinnereth or Tiberias, and empties itself into the lake Asphaltites or Dead Sea, from which it has no outlet. In and by it God wrought many miracles. God cut off the waters of this river as he did those of the Red Sea, so that they stood on a heap on each side, and the people passed over on dry ground. Both Elijah and Elisha separated its waters in a miraculous way, 2 Kings ii. 8-14. Naaman, the Syrian general, by washing in it at the command of the prophet, was miraculously cured of his leprosy, 2 Kings v. 10-14. In this river John baptized great multitudes of Jews; and in it was CHRIST himself baptized, and the Spirit of God descended upon him, and the voice from heaven proclaimed him the great and only Teacher and Saviour of men, Mat. iii. 16, 17, Mark i. 5-11.

Verse 13. This is the land which ye shall inherit by lot] Much of what is said concerning this land is peculiarly emphatic. It is a land that contains a multitude of advantages in its climate, its soil, situation, &c. It is bounded on the south by a ridge of mountains, which separate it from Arabia, and screen it from the burning and often pestiferous winds which blow over the desert from that quarter. On the west it is bounded by the Mediterranean Sea; on the north by Mount Libanus, which defends it from the cold northern blasts; and on the east by the river Jordan, and its fertile, well-watered plains. It is described by God himself as "a good land, &c., Deut. viii. 7-9; a land finely diversified with hills and valleys, and well watered by the rain of heaven, in this respect widely different from Egypt; a land which God cared for, on which his eyes were continually placed from the beginning to the end of the year; watched over by a most merciful providence; in a word, a land which flowed with milk and honey, and was the most pleasant of all lands; Deut. xi. 11, 12, Ezek. xx. 6. Such was the land, and such were the advantages that this most favoured people were called to possess. They were called to possess it by lot, that each might be satisfied with his possession, as considering it to be appointed to him by the especial providence of God; and its boundaries were ascertained on divine authority, to prevent all covetousness after the territories of others.

Verse 19, &c. And the names of the men are these] It is worthy of remark that Moses does not follow any order hitherto used of placing the tribes; 1. Judah; 2. Simeon; 3. Benjamin; 4. Dan; 5. Manasseh; 6. Ephraim; 7. Zebulun; 8. Issachar; 9. Asher; 10. Naphtali. And as in encamping about the tabernacle they were arranged according to their fraternal relationship (see chap. ii.), so they were in the division and inheriting of the promised land. Thus God, in nominating the princes that should divide the land, signified beforehand the manner of their possession, and that they should be so situated as to dwell together as brethren in unity, for the mutual help and comfort of each other. In this arrangement there is much skill, judgment, and kindness every where displayed.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Israelites are commanded to give the Levites, out of their inheritances, cities and their suburbs for themselves and for their cattle, goods, &c., 1-3. The suburbs to be 3,000 cubits round about from the wall of the city, 4, 5. The cities to be forty-two, to which six cities of refuge should be added, in all forty-eight cities, 6, 7. Each tribe shall give of these cities in proportion to its possessions, 8. These cities to be appointed for the person who might slay his neighbour unawares, 9-12. Of these six cities there shall be three on each side Jordan, 13, 14. The cities to be places of refuge for all who kill a person unawares, whether they be Israelites, strangers, or sojourners, 15. Cases of murder, to which the benefit of the cities of refuge shall not extend, 16-21. Cases of manslaughter to which the benefit of the cities of refuge shall extend, 22, 23. How the congregation shall act between the manslayer and the avenger of blood, 24, 25. The manslayer shall abide in the city of refuge till the death of the high-priest; he shall then return to the land of his possession, 26-28. Two witnesses must attest a murder before a murderer can be put to death, 29-30. Every murderer to be put to death, 31. The manslayer is not to be permitted to come to the land of his inheritance till the death of the high-priest, 32. The land must not be polluted with blood, for the Lord dwells in it, 33, 34.

AND the Lord spake unto Moses in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho, saying, 2 * Command the children of Israel, that they give unto the Levites of the inheritance of their possession, cities to dwell in; and ye shall give also unto the Levites suburbs for the cities round about them.

3 And the cities which they have to dwell in; and the suburbs of them shall be for their cattle, and for their goods, and for all their beasts.

4 And the suburbs of the cities, which ye shall give unto the Levites, shall reach from the wall of the city and outward a thousand cubits round about.

5 And ye shall measure from without the city on the east side two thousand cubits, and on the south side two thousand cubits, and on the west side two thousand cubits, and on the north side two thousand cubits; and the city shall be in the midst: this shall be to them the suburbs of the cities.

6 And among the cities which ye shall give unto the Levites there shall be <sup>b</sup> six cities for refuge, which ye shall appoint for the manslayer, that he may flee thither: and <sup>c</sup> to them ye shall add forty and two cities.

7 So all the cities which ye shall give to the Levites shall be <sup>d</sup> forty and eight cities: them shall ye give with their suburbs.

8 And the cities which ye shall give shall be <sup>e</sup> of the possession of the children of Israel: 'from them that have many, ye shall give many; but from them that have few, ye shall give few: every one shall give of his cities unto the Levites, according to his inheritance which <sup>f</sup> he inheriteth.

9 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

10 Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, <sup>h</sup> When ye be come over Jordan into the land of Canaan;

11 Then <sup>i</sup> ye shall appoint you cities to be cities of refuge for you; that the slayer may flee thither, which killeth any person <sup>j</sup> at unawares.

12 <sup>k</sup> And they shall be unto you cities for refuge from the avenger; that the manslayer die not, until he stand before the congregation in judgment.

13 And of these cities which ye shall give, <sup>l</sup> six cities shall ye have for refuge.

14 <sup>m</sup> Ye shall give three cities on this side Jordan, and three cities shall ye give in the land of Canaan, which shall be cities of refuge.

15 These six cities shall be a refuge, both for the children of Israel, and <sup>n</sup> for the stranger, and for the sojourner among them; that every one that killeth any person unawares may flee thither.

16 <sup>o</sup> And if he smite him with an instrument of iron, so that he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

17 And if he smite him <sup>p</sup> with throwing a stone, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

18 Or <sup>q</sup> if he smite him with an hand weapon of wood, wherewith he may die, and he die, he is a murderer: the murderer shall surely be put to death.

19 <sup>r</sup> The revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer: when he meeteth him, he shall slay him.

20 But <sup>s</sup> if he thrust him of hatred, or hurl at him <sup>t</sup> by laying of wait, that he die;

21 Or in enmity smite him with his hand, that he die: he that smote him shall surely be put to death; for he is a murderer: the revenger of blood shall slay the murderer, when he meeteth him.

22 But if he thrust him suddenly <sup>u</sup> without enmity, or have cast upon him any thing without laying of wait.

23 Or with any stone, wherewith a man may die, seeing him not, and cast it upon him, that he die, and was not his enemy, neither sought his harm:

24 Then <sup>v</sup> the congregation shall judge between the slayer and the revenger of blood according to these judgments:

25 And the congregation shall deliver the slayer out of the hand of the revenger of blood; and the congregation shall restore him to the city of his

Verse 5. And ye shall measure from without the city—two thousand cubits, &c.] Commentators have been much puzzled with the accounts in this and the former verse. In ver. 4 the measure is said to be 1,000 cubits from the wall; in ver. 5 the measure is said to be 2,000 from without the city. It is likely these two measures mean the same thing; at least so it was understood by the Septuagint and Coptic; but their reading is not acknowledged by any other of the ancient Versions, nor by any of the MSS. collated by Kenicott and De Rossi. We must seek therefore for some other method of reconciling this apparently contradictory account. Sundry modes have been proposed by commentators, which appear to me, in general, to require full as much explanation as the text itself. Maimonides is the only one intelligible on the subject. "The suburbs," says he, "of the cities are expressed in the Law to be 3,000 cubits on every side from the wall of the city and outwards. The first thousand cubits are the suburbs, and the 2,000, which they measured without the suburbs, were for fields and vineyards."

Verse 11. Ye shall appoint—cities of refuge.] The cities of refuge among the Israelites were widely different from the asyla among the Greeks and Romans, as also from the privileged altars among the Roman Catholics. Those among the Hebrews were for the protection of such only as had slain a person involuntarily. The temples and altars among the latter often served for the protection of the most profligate characters. Cities of refuge among the Hebrews were necessary, because the old patriarchal law still remained in force, viz., that the nearest akin had a right to avenge the death of his relation by slaying the murderer; for the original law enacted that whosoever shed man's blood, by man should his blood be shed, Gen. ix. 6, and none was judged so proper to execute this law as the man who was nearest akin to the deceased. As many rash executions of this law might take place, from the very nature of the thing, it was deemed necessary to qualify its claims, and prevent injustice; and the cities of refuge were judged proper for this purpose. Nor do we ever read that they were ever found inefficient, or that they were ever abused.

Verse 12. Until he stand before the congregation in judgment.] So one of these cities was not a perpetual asylum; it was only a pro tempore refuge, till the case could be fairly examined by the magistrates in the presence of the people, or the elders, their representatives; and this was done in the city or place where he had done the murder, Josh. xx. 4, 6. If he was found worthy of death, they delivered him to the avenger that he might be slain, Deut. xix. 12; if not, they sent him back to the city of refuge, where he remained till the death of the high-priest, ver. 25. Before the cities of refuge were appointed, the altar appears to have been a sanctuary for those who had killed a person unwittingly; see on Exod. xxi. 13, 14.

Verse 19. The revenger of blood.] Goel haddam, the redeemer of blood; the next in blood to him who was slain.

refuge, whither he was fled: and <sup>a</sup>he shall abide in it unto the death of the high priest, <sup>b</sup>which was anointed with the holy oil.

26 But if the slayer shall at any time come without the border of the city of his refuge, whither he was fled;

27 And the revenger of blood find him without the borders of the city of his refuge, and the revenger of blood kill the slayer: <sup>c</sup>he shall not be guilty of blood:

28 Because he should have remained in the city of his refuge until the death of the high-priest: but after the death of the high-priest the slayer shall return into the land of his possession.

29 So these things shall be for <sup>d</sup>a statute of judgment unto you throughout your generations in all your dwellings.

Verse 30. But one witness shall not testify against any] This was a just and necessary provision. One man may be mistaken, or so violently prejudiced as to impose even on his own judgment, or so wicked as to endeavour through malice to compass the life of his neighbour: but it is not likely that two or more should be of this kind; and even were they, their separate examination would lead to a discovery of the truth, and to their conviction.

Verse 31. Ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer] No atonement could be made for him, nor any commutation so as to save him from death. All the laws of the civilized world have either adjudged the murderer to death, or to a punishment equivalent to it.

Verse 32. Until the death of the priest.] Probably intended to typify, that no sinner can be delivered from his banishment from God, or recover his forfeited inheritance, till Jesus Christ, the great High-priest, had died for his offences, and risen again for his justification.

Verse 33. For blood it defileth the land.] The very land was considered as guilty till the blood of the murderer was shed in it. No wonder God is so particularly strict in his laws against murderers, 1. Because he is the author of life, and none has any right to dispose of it but himself. 2. Because life is the time to prepare for the eternal world, 30 Whoso killeth any person, the murderer shall be put to death by the <sup>a</sup>mouth of witnesses: but one witness shall not testify against any person to <sup>b</sup>cause him to die.

31 Moreover, ye shall take no satisfaction for the life of a murderer, which is <sup>c</sup>'guilty of death'; but he shall be surely put to death.

32 And ye shall take no satisfaction for him that is fled to the city of his refuge, that he should come again to dwell in the land, until the death of the priest.

and on it the salvation of the soul accordingly depends; therefore it is of infinite consequence to the man that his life be lengthened out to the utmost limits assigned by Divine Providence. As he who takes a man's life away before his time may be the murderer of his soul as well as of his body, the severest laws should be enacted against this, both to punish and prevent the crime.

The Mosaic cities of refuge have in general been considered, not merely as civil institutions, but as types or representations of infinitely better things; and in this light St. Paul seems to have considered them and the altar of God, which was a place of general refuge, as it is pretty evident that he had them in view in the passage, Heb. vi. 17, 18. Independently of this, it was a very wise political institute; and while the patriarchal law on this point continued in force, this law had a direct tendency to cool and moderate the spirit of revenge, to secure the proper accomplishment of the ends of justice, and to make way for every claim of mercy and equity. But this is not peculiar to the ordinance of the cities of refuge; every institution of God is distinguished in the same way, having his own glory, in the present and eternal welfare of man, immediately in view.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The inconveniences which might be produced by daughters, inheritorixes, marrying out of their own tribe, remedied on the recommendation of certain chiefs of the tribe of Joseph, who stated the case of the daughters of Zelophehad, 1-4. The daughters of Zelophehad are commanded to marry in their own tribe, 5, 6; which is to be an ordinance in all similar circumstances, 7-9. The daughters of Zelophehad marry their father's brothers' sons, and thus their inheritance is preserved in their own tribe, 10-12. The conclusion of the commandments given by the Lord to the Israelites in the plains of Moab, 13.

AND the chief fathers of the families of the <sup>a</sup>children of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel:

Verse 2. To give the inheritance of Zelophehad—unto his daughters.] Either the first eleven verses of chapter xxvii. should come in before this chapter, or this chapter should

2 And they said, <sup>b</sup>The LORD commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel: and <sup>c</sup>my lord was commanded by the LORD to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

3 And if they be married to any of the sons of

come in immediately after those eleven verses; they certainly both make parts of the same subject.

Here Moses determines that heiresses should marry in the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe <sup>a</sup>whereunto they are received; so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

4 And when <sup>b</sup>the jubilee of the children of Israel shall be, then shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

5 And Moses commanded the children of Israel according to the word of the LORD, saying, The tribe of the sons of Joseph <sup>c</sup>hath said well.

Verse 6. Let them marry to whom they think best] Here was latitude sufficient, and yet a salutary and reasonable restraint, which prevented a vexatious mixture of property and possession.

Verse 8. Every daughter that possesseth an inheritance] This law affected none but heiresses; all others were at liberty to marry into any of the other tribes. The priests and Levites, who could have no inheritance, were exempt from the operation of this law. Jehoiada had the king of Judah's daughter to wife, 2 Chron. xxii. 11. And another priest had for wife one of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite, Ezra ii. 61.

Thus ends the book of Numbers, containing a series of astonishing providences and events. Scarcely any piece of history in the sacred writings is better calculated to impress the mind of a serious reader with a sense of the goodness and severity of God. In every transaction his holiness and justice appear in closest union with his benevolence and mercy. From such a Being what have the wicked not to fear! From such a Father and Friend what have the upright not to hope! His justice requires him to punish

8 And <sup>k</sup>every daughter that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.

9 Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe; but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance.

10 Even as the LORD commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad:

11 <sup>l</sup>For Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Noah, the daughters of Zelophehad, were married unto their father's brothers' sons, 12 And they were married <sup>m</sup>into the families of the sons of Manasseh the son of Joseph, and their inheritance remained in the tribe of the family of their father.

some that were of the families.—<sup>k</sup> Ch. xxxv. 29.—<sup>l</sup> Ch. xxvi. 3. xxxiii. 50.

iniquity, but his mercy inclines him to pardon all who truly repent and believe in the Son of his love.

The journeyings of this people, from the time they left Egypt, exhibit a series of providential wonders. Every where, and in every circumstance, God appears; and yet there is no circumstance or occasion that does not justify those signal displays of his GRACE and his JUSTICE. The genuine history of God's providence must be sought for in this book alone; and as every occurrence happened as an example, we have authority to conclude that in every case where his own glory and the salvation of man are interested, he will interfere and give the fullest proofs that he is the same to-day that he was yesterday, and will continue unchangeable for ever and ever. Reader, are these matters examples to thee? Art thou, like the Israelites, come into the plains of Moab, on the very verge of the promised land? Jordan alone separates thee from the promised inheritance. Oh, watch and pray, that thou come not short of the glory of God. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is Death; see then that the sting of death, which is sin, be extracted from thy soul, that, being justified by Christ's blood, thou mayest be made an heir according to the hope of an eternal life. Amen, Amen.

PREFACE TO THE BOOK

DEUTERONOMY.

WE have borrowed the name of this book, as in former cases, from the Vulgate Latin, Deuteronomium, as the Vulgate has done from the Greek Version of the Septuagint. The word is a compound term literally signifying the second law, because it seems to contain a repetition of the preceding laws, from which circumstance it has been termed by the rabbins mishneh, the iteration or doubling.

It appears that both these names are borrowed from chap. xvii. 18, where the king is commanded to write him a copy of this law; the original is mishneh hattorah, a repetition or doubling of the law, which the Septuagint have translated this second law, which we, properly enough, translate a copy of the law.

The Book of Deuteronomy contains an account of what passed in the wilderness from the first day of the eleventh month of the fortieth year after the departure of the Israelites from Egypt to the seventh day of the twelfth month of the same; making in the whole a history of the transactions of exactly five weeks, the months of the Jews being lunar. The history is continued about seven days after the death of Moses; for he began to deliver his first discourse to the people in the plains of Moab the first day of the eleventh month of the fortieth year, chap. i. 3, and died on the first day of the twelfth month of the same year, aged 120 years.

As the Israelites were now about to enter into the promised land, and many of them had not witnessed the different transactions in the wilderness, the former generation having been all destroyed except Joshua and Caleb; to impress their hearts with a deep sense of their obligation to God, and to prepare them for the inheritance which God had prepared for them, Moses here repeats the principal occurrences of the forty years, now almost elapsed; shows them the absolute necessity of fearing, loving, and obeying God; repeats the ten commandments, and particularly explains each, and the ordinances belonging to them, adding others which he had not delivered before; confirms the whole law in a most solemn manner, with exceeding great and precious promises to them that keep it, and a denunciation of the most awful judgments against those who should break it; renews the covenant between God and the people; prophesies of things which should come to pass in the latter days; blesses each of the tribes, prophetically, with the choicest spiritual and temporal blessings; and then, having viewed the whole extent of the land, from the top of Mount Nebo or Pisgah, he yielded up the ghost, and was privately buried by God, leaving Joshua the son of Nun for his successor.

The Book of Deuteronomy and the Epistle to the Hebrews contain the best comment on the nature, design, and use of the Law; the former may be considered as an evangelical commentary on the four preceding books, in which the spiritual reference and signification of the different parts of the law are given, and given in such a manner as none could give who had not a clear discovery of the glory which was to be revealed. It may be safely asserted that very few parts of the Old Testament scriptures can be read with greater profit by the genuine Christian than the Book of Deuteronomy.

DEUTERONOMY.

CHAPTER I.

Introduction to the book, 1, 2. Moses addresses the people in the fortieth year after the exodus from Egypt, 3-5, and shows how God had spoken to them in Horeb, and the directions he gave them, 6-8. How, at the commandment of the Lord, he had appointed officers, judges, &c., to share the government with him, 9-18. Of their travels in the terrible wilderness, 19-21. The people's request to have spies sent to search out the land, 22-25. Of their murmuring and rebellion when they heard the report of the spies, 26-28. How Moses encouraged them, 29-33. The displeasure of the Lord against them because of their murmurings, and his purpose to exclude them from the good land, and give it to their children only, 34-40. How they repented, and yet, without the authority of God, went against the Amorites, by whom they were defeated, 41-44. Their return to Kadesh, where they abode many days, 45, 46.

THESE be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel <sup>a</sup> on this side Jordan in the wilderness, in the plain over against <sup>b</sup> the Red Sea, between Paran, and Tophel, and Laban, and <sup>c</sup> Hazeroth, and Dizahab.

2 (There are eleven days' journey from Horeb by the way of Mount Seir <sup>d</sup> unto Kadesh-barnea.)

3 And it came to pass <sup>e</sup> in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spake unto the children of Israel, according unto all that the LORD had given him in commandment unto them;

4 <sup>f</sup> After he had slain Sihon the king of the Amorites, which dwelt in Heshbon, and Og the king of Bashan, which dwelt at Astaroth <sup>g</sup> in Edroï:

5 On this side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying,

6 The LORD our God spake unto us <sup>h</sup> in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long <sup>i</sup> enough in this mount:

7 Turn you, and take your journey, and go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto <sup>j</sup> all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea-side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

8 Behold, I have <sup>k</sup> set the land before you: go in Verse 1. These be the words which Moses spake] The five first verses of this chapter contain the introduction to the rest of the book: they do not appear to be the work of Moses, but were added probably either by Joshua or Ezra.

On this side Jordan] At the passage of Jordan, i.e. near or opposite to the place where the Israelites passed over, after the death of Moses. Though eber is used to signify both on this side and on the other side, and the connexion in which it stands can only determine the meaning; yet here it signifies neither, but only the place or ford where the Israelites passed over Jordan.

In the plain] That is, of Moab; over against the Red Sea—not the Red Sea, for they were now farther from it than they had yet been: the word sea is not in the text, and the word suph, which we render red, does not signify the Red Sea, unless joined with yam, sea; here it must necessarily signify a place in or adjoining to the plains of Moab.

Paran] This could not have been the Paran which was contiguous to the Red Sea, and not far from Mount Horeb; for the place here mentioned lay on the very borders of the promised land, at a vast distance from the former.

Dizahab.] The word should be separated, as it is in the Hebrew, Di Zahab. As Zahab signifies gold, the Septuagint have translated it the gold mines; and the Vulgate ubi aurum est plurimum, where there is much gold. It is more likely to be the name of a place.

Verse 2. There are eleven days' journey] The Israelites were eleven days in going from Horeb to Kadesh-barnea, where they were near the verge of the promised land; after which they were thirty-eight years wandering up and down in the vicinity of this place, not being permitted, because of their rebellions, to enter into the promised rest, though they were the whole of that time within a few miles of the land of Canaan!

Verse 3. The fortieth year] This was a melancholy year to the Hebrews in different respects; in the first month of this year Miriam died, Num. xx.; on the first day of the fifth month Aaron died, Num. xxxiii. 38; and about the conclusion of it, Moses himself died.

Verse 5. Began Moses to declare this law] Began, hoil, willingly undertook; to declare, beer, to make bare, clear, &c., fully to explain, this law.

Verse 6. Ye have dwelt long enough, &c.] They came to Sinai in the third month after their departure from Egypt, Exod. xix. 1, 2; and left it the twentieth of the second month of the second year; so it appears they had continued there nearly a whole year.

and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers, *Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them.

9 And <sup>b</sup>I spake unto you at that time, saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone:

10 The LORD your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, <sup>c</sup>ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

11 (<sup>d</sup>The LORD God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, *as he hath promised you!)

12 <sup>e</sup>How can I myself alone bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife!

13 <sup>f</sup>Take <sup>g</sup>you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

14 And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

15 So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men and known, <sup>h</sup>and <sup>i</sup>made them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

16 And I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and <sup>j</sup>judge righteously between every man and his <sup>k</sup>brother, and the stranger that is with him.

17 <sup>l</sup>Ye shall not <sup>m</sup>respect persons in judgment: but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man: for <sup>n</sup>the judgment is God's: and the cause that is too hard for you, <sup>o</sup>bring it unto me, and I will hear it.

18 And I commanded you at that time, all the things which ye should do.

19 And when we departed from Horeb, <sup>p</sup>we went through all that great and terrible wilderness, Verse 7. Go to the mount of the Amorites] On the south of the land of Canaan, towards the Dead Sea.

Land of the Canaanites] That is, Phœnicia, the country of Sidon, and the coasts of the Mediterranean Sea from the country of the Philistines to Mount Libanus. The Canaanites and Phœnicians are often confounded.

The river Euphrates] Thus Moses fixes the bounds of the lands, to which on all quarters the territories of the Israelites might be extended, should the land of Canaan, properly so called, be found insufficient for them. Their south border might extend to the mount of the Amorites; their west to the borders of the Mediterranean Sea; their north to Lebanon; and their east border to the river Euphrates: and to this extent Solomon reigned; see 1 Kings iv. 21.

Verse 10. Ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude] This was the promise of God made to Abraham, Gen. xv. 5, 6; and Moses considers it now as amply fulfilled. But was it really so? Many suppose the expression to be hyperbolical: and others, no friends to revelation, think it a vain empty boast, because the stars, in their apprehension, amount to innumerable millions. Let us consider this subject. How many in number are the stars which appear to the naked eye? for it is by what appears to the naked eye we are to be governed in this business, for God brought Abraham forth abroad, i.e. out of doors, and bade him look towards heaven, not with a telescope, but with his naked eyes, Gen. xv. 5. Now I shall beg the objector to come forth abroad, and look up in the brightest and most favourable night, and count the stars—he need not be terrified at their abundance; the more they are, the more he can count; and I shall pledge myself to find a male Israelite, in the very last census taken of this people, Num. xvi., for every star which ye saw by the way of the mountain of the Amorites, as the LORD our God commanded us; and <sup>r</sup>we came to Kadesh-barnea.

20 And I said unto you, Ye are come unto the mountain of the Amorites which the LORD our God doth give unto us.

21 Behold, the LORD thy God hath set the land before thee: go up and possess it, as the LORD God of thy fathers hath said unto thee; <sup>s</sup>fear not, neither be discouraged.

22 And ye came near unto me every one of you, and said, We will send men before us, and they shall search us out the land, and bring us word again by what way we must go up, and into what cities we shall come.

23 And the saying pleased me well: and <sup>t</sup>I took twelve men of you, one of a tribe:

24 And <sup>u</sup>they turned and went up into the mountain, and came into the valley of Eschol, and searched it out.

25 And they took of the fruit of the land in their hands, and brought it down unto us, and brought us word again, and said, <sup>v</sup>It is a good land which the LORD our God doth give us.

26 <sup>w</sup>Notwithstanding ye would not go up, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD your God:

27 And ye murmured in your tents, and said, Because the LORD <sup>x</sup>hated us, he hath brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us.

28 Whither shall we go up? our brethren have <sup>y</sup>discouraged our heart, saying, <sup>z</sup>The people is greater and taller than we; the cities are great and walled up to heaven; and moreover we have seen the sons of the <sup>aa</sup>Anakims there.

he finds in the whole upper hemisphere of heaven. The truth is, only about 3010 stars can be seen by the naked eye in both the northern and southern hemispheres; and the Israelites, independently of women and children, were at the above time more than 600,000.

Verse 18. Take you wise men] Chuchamim, such as had gained knowledge by great labour and study. Understanding, nebonim, persons of discernment, judicious men. Known, yeluin, persons practised in the operations of nature, capable of performing curious and important works.

Verse 15. Captains over thousands, &c.] What a curious and well-regulated economy was that of the Israelites! See its order and arrangement: 1. GOD, the King and Supreme Judge; 2. Moses, God's prime minister; 3. The priests, consulting him by Urim and Thummim; 4. The chiefs or princes of the twelve tribes; 5. Lieutenants, or captains over thousands; 6. Centurions, or captains over hundreds; 7. Tribunes, or captains over fifty men; 8. Decurions, or captains over ten men; and 9. Officers, persons who might be employed by the different chiefs in executing particular commands. All these held their authority from God, and yet were subject and accountable to each other.

Verse 17. Ye shall not respect persons] Heb. faces. Lot not the bold, daring countenance of the mighty or rich induce you to give an unrighteous decision; and let not the abject look of the poor man induce you either to favour him in an unrighteous cause, or to give judgment against him at the demand of the oppressor. Be uncorrupt and incorruptible, for the judgment is God's; ye minister in the place of God, act like HIM.

Verse 28. Cities—walled up to heaven] That is, with very high walls which could not be easily scaled. High walls around houses, &c., in those parts of Arabia, are still 29 Then I said unto you, Dread not, neither be afraid of them.

30 * The LORD your God which goeth before you, he shall fight for you, according to all that he did for you in Egypt before your eyes;

31 And in the wilderness, where thou hast seen how that the LORD thy God <sup>b</sup> bare thee, as a man doth bear his son, in all the way that ye went, until ye came into this place.

32 Yet in this thing <sup>c</sup> ye did not believe the LORD your God, 33 <sup>d</sup> Who went in the way before you, <sup>e</sup> to search you out a place to pitch your tents in, in fire by night, to shew you by what way ye should go, and in a cloud by day.

34 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, <sup>f</sup> and sware, saying,

35 * Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land, which I sware to give unto your fathers, 36 <sup>h</sup> Save Caleb the son of Jephunneh; he shall see it, and to him will I give the land that he hath trodden upon, and to his children, because <sup>i</sup> he hath <sup>j</sup> wholly followed the LORD.

37 <sup>k</sup> Also the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, saying, Thou also shalt not go in thither.

38 <sup>l</sup> But Joshua the son of Nun, <sup>m</sup> which standeth before thee, he shall go in thither; <sup>n</sup> encourage him, for he shall cause Israel to inherit it.

39 * Moreover your little ones, which <sup>p</sup> ye said should be a prey, and your children, which in that day <sup>q</sup> had no knowledge between good and evil, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it, and they shall possess it.

40 <sup>r</sup> But as for you, turn you, and take your journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea:

41 Then ye answered and said unto me, * We have sinned against the LORD, we will go up and fight, according to all that the LORD our God commanded us. And when ye had girded on every man his weapons of war, ye were ready to go up into the hill.

42 And the LORD said unto me, Say unto them, <sup>s</sup> Go not up, neither fight; for I am not among you; lest ye be smitten before your enemies.

43 So I spake unto you; and ye would not hear, but rebelled against the commandment of the LORD, and <sup>t</sup> went <sup>u</sup> presumptuously up into the hill.

44 And the Amorites, which dwelt in that mountain, came out against you and chased you, <sup>v</sup> as bees do, and destroyed you in Scir, even unto Hormah.

45 And ye returned and <sup>w</sup> wept before the LORD; but the LORD <sup>x</sup> would not hearken to your voice, nor give ear unto you.

46 <sup>y</sup> So ye abode in Kadesh many days, according unto the days that ye abode there.

deemed a sufficient defence against the Arabs, who scarcely ever attempt anything in the way of plunder but on horseback.

Verse 34. The Lord—was wroth] That is, his justice was incensed, and he evidenced his displeasure against you; and he could not have been a just God if he had not done so.

Verse 44. The Amorites—as bees do] By irresistible numbers.

Verse 46. According unto the days that ye abode there.] They had been a long time at this place, see Num. xiii. 27, xx. 1, 14, 21. And some think that the words mean, "Ye abode as long at Kadesh, when ye came to it the second time, as ye did at the first." Or, according to others, "While ye were in that part of the desert, ye encamped at Kadesh."

1. As one grand object of the law of God was to instruct the people in those things which were calculated to promote their peace and insure their prosperity; and as they were apt to lose sight of their spiritual interests, without a due attention to which their secular interest could not be promoted: Moses, not only in this chapter, but through the whole book, calls upon them to recollect their former miserable situation, in which they held neither life nor property, but at the will of a merciless tyrant, and the great kindness and power of God, manifested in their deliverance from a bondage that was as degrading as it was oppressive.

2. But he wished them to keep constantly in view also that gracious providence which was manifested in every step they took; which directed all their movements, provided for all their wants, continually showing what they should do, how they should do it, and also the most proper time and place for every act, whether religious or civil. He lays out also before them a history of their miscarriages and rebellion, and the privations and evils they had suffered in consequence, that this might act as a continual warning, and thus become, in the hands of God, a preventive of crimes.

3. If every Christian were thus to call his past life into review, he would see equal proofs of God's gracious regard to his body and soul; equal proofs of eternal mercy in providing for his deliverance from the galling yoke and oppressive tyranny of sin; and equal displays of a most gracious providence, that had also been his incessant companion through all the changes and chances of this mortal life. O reader, remember what God has done for thee during thy forty, fifty, &c., years! He has nourished, fed, clothed, protected, and saved thee. How often and how powerfully has his Spirit striven with thee! How often and how impressively thou hast heard his voice in his gospel and in his providences! Remember the good resolutions thou hast made, the ingratitude and disobedience that have marked thy life; how his vows are still upon thee, and how his mercy still spares thee! And wilt thou live so as to perish for ever? God forbid! He still waits to be gracious, and rejoices over thee to do thee good. Learn from what is before thee how thou shouldst fear, love, believe in, and obey thy God. The Lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world, is still before the throne; and whosoever cometh unto God through him shall in no wise be cast out. He who believes these things with an upright heart will soon be enabled to live a sanctified life.

CHAPTER II.

Moses continues to relate how they compassed Mount Seir, 1. And the commands they received not to meddle with the descendants of Esau, 2-8; nor to distress the Moabites, 9. Of the Emims, 10, 11; the Horims, 12. Their passage of the brook Zered, 13. The time they spent between Kadesh-barnea and Zered, 14; during which all the men of war that came out of Egypt were consumed, 15, 16. The command not to distress the Ammonites, 17-19. Of the Zamzummims, 20, the Anakims, 21, the Horims, 22, the Avims, and Caph-torims, all destroyed by the Ammonites, 23. They are commanded to cross the river Arnon, and are promised the land of Sihon, king of the Amorites, 24, 25. Of the message sent to Sihon, to request a passage through his territories, 26-29. His refusal, 30. The consequent war, 31, 32. His total overthrow, 33; and extermination of his people, 34. The spoils that were taken, 35. And his land possessed from Aroer to Arnon by the Israelites, 36; who took care, according to the command of God, not to invade any part of the territories of the Ammonites, 37.

THEN we turned, and took our journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea, * as the Lord spake unto me: and we compassed Mount Seir many days.

2 And the Lord spake unto me, saying,

3 Ye have compassed this mountain <sup>b</sup> long enough: turn you northward.

4 And command you the people, saying, <sup>c</sup> Ye are to pass through the coast of your brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir; and they shall be afraid of you: take ye good heed unto yourselves therefore:

5 Meddle not with them; for I will not give you of their land, <sup>d</sup> no, not so much as a foot breadth; <sup>e</sup> because I have given Mount Seir unto Esau for a possession.

6 Ye shall buy meat of them for money, that ye may eat; and ye shall also buy water of them for money, that ye may drink.

7 For the Lord thy God hath blessed thee in all the works of thy hand: he knoweth thy walking through this great wilderness: 'these forty years the Lord thy God hath been with thee; thou hast lacked nothing.

8 * And when we passed by from our brethren the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir, through the way of the plain from <sup>b</sup> Elath, and from Ezion-gabor, we turned and passed by the way of the wilderness of Moab.

9 And the Lord said unto me, <sup>i</sup> Distress not the Moabites, neither contend with them in battle: for I will not give thee of their land for a possession; because I have given <sup>j</sup> Ar unto <sup>k</sup> the children of Lot for a possession.

10 <sup>l</sup> The Emims dwelt therein in times past, a people great, and many, and tall, as <sup>m</sup> the Anakims; 11 Which also were accounted giants, as the Anakims: but the Moabites call them Emims, 12 <sup>n</sup> The Horims also dwelt in Seir beforetime: but the children of Esau <sup>o</sup> succeeded them, when they had destroyed them from before them, and dwelt in their <sup>p</sup> stead; as Israel did unto the land of his possession which the Lord gave unto them.

13 Now rise up, said I, and get you over <sup>q</sup> the <sup>r</sup> brook Zered. And we went over the brook Zered.

14 And the space in which we came <sup>s</sup> from Kadesh-barnea, until we came over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years; 'until all the generation of the men of war were wasted out from among the host, <sup>t</sup> as the Lord sware unto them.

15 For indeed the <sup>u</sup> hand of the Lord was against them, to destroy them from among the host, until they were consumed.

16 So it came to pass, when all the men of war were consumed and dead from among the people.

17 That the Lord spake unto me, saying,

18 Thou art to pass over through Ar, the coast of Moab, this day:

19 And when thou comest nigh over against the children of Ammon, distress them not, nor meddle with them: for I will not give thee of the land of the children of Ammon <sup>v</sup> any possession; because I have given it unto <sup>w</sup> the children of Lot for a possession.

20 (That also was accounted a land of giants; giants dwelt therein in old time; and the Ammonites call them <sup>x</sup> Zamzummims;

Verse 3. Turn you northward.] From Mount Seir, in order to get to Canaan. This was not the way they went before, viz., by Kadesh-barnea; but they were to proceed between Edom on the one hand, and Moab and Ammon on the other, so as to enter into Canaan through the land of the Amorites.

Verse 5. Meddle not with them] That is, the Edomites.

Verse 7. The Lord—hath blessed thee, &c.] God had given them much property, and therefore they had no need of plunder; they had gold and silver to buy the provender they needed, and therefore God would not permit them to take any thing by violence.

Verse 10. The Emims dwelt therein] Probably they were a hardy, fierce, and terrible people, who lived, like the wandering Arabs, on the plunder of others. This was sufficient to gain them the appellation of giants, or men of prodigious stature.

Verse 11. Which also were accounted giants] This is not a fortunate version. The word is not giants, but Rephaim, the name of a people. It appears that the Emim, the Anakim, and the Rephaim, were probably the same people, called by different names in the different countries where they dwelt; for they appear originally to have been a kind of wandering freebooters, who lived by plunder. It must be granted, however, that there were several men of this race of extraordinary stature. And hence all gigantic men have been called Rephaim. But we well know that fear and public report have often added whole cubits to men's height.

Verse 12. The Horims also dwelt in Seir] The whole of this verse was probably added by Joshua or Ezra.

Verse 20. That also was accounted a land of giants] That was accounted the land or territory of the Rephaim. Zamzummims] Supposed to be the same as the Zuzim, 21 * A people great, and many, and tall, as the Anakims; but the LORD destroyed them before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead:

23 And <sup>d</sup> the Avims which dwelt in Hazerim, even unto <sup>e</sup> Azzah, <sup>f</sup> the Caphtorims, which came forth out of Caphtor, destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.)

24 Rise ye up, take your journey, and <sup>g</sup> pass over the river Arnon: behold, I have given into thine hand Sihon the Amorite, king of Heshbon, and his land: <sup>h</sup> begin to possess it, and contend with him in battle.

25 <sup>i</sup> This day will I begin to put the dread of thee, and the fear of thee, upon the nations that are under the whole heaven, who shall hear report of thee, and shall tremble, and be in anguish because of thee.

26 And I sent messengers out of the wilderness of Kedemoth, unto Sihon king of Heshbon, <sup>j</sup> with words of peace, saying, 27 <sup>k</sup> Let me pass through thy land: I will go along by the high-way, I will neither turn unto the right hand nor to the left.

28 Thou shalt sell me meat for money, that I may eat: and give me water for money, that I may drink: <sup>l</sup> only I will pass through on my feet;

Gen. xiv. 5. Of these ancient people we know very little; they were probably inconsiderable tribes or clans, "pursuing and pursued, each other's prey," till at length a stronger totally destroyed or subdued them, and their name became either extinct or absorbed in that of their conquerors. From the 10th to the 12th, and from the 20th to the 23d verse inclusive, we have certain historical remarks introduced which do not seem to have been made by Moses, but rather by Joshua or Ezra. By the introduction of these verses the thread of the narrative suffers considerable interruption. That they could not have made 29 (<sup>m</sup> As the children of Esau which dwell in Seir, and the Moabites which dwell in Ar, did unto me;) until I shall pass over Jordan, into the land which the LORD our God giveth us.

30 <sup>n</sup> But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for <sup>o</sup> the LORD thy God <sup>p</sup> hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day.

31 And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to <sup>q</sup> give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land.

32 <sup>r</sup> Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz.

33 And <sup>s</sup> the LORD our God delivered him before us; and <sup>t</sup> we smote him, and his sons, and all his people.

34 And we took all his cities at that time, and <sup>u</sup> utterly destroyed <sup>v</sup> the men, and the women, and the little ones, of every city, we left none to remain:

35 Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took.

36 <sup>w</sup> From Arer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us; <sup>x</sup> the LORD our God delivered all unto us:

part of the speech of Moses originally, needs little proof.

Verse 37. Only unto the land of the children of Ammon thou camest not] God gave them their commission; and those only were to be cut off, the cup of whose iniquity was full. Though the Moabites and Ammonites were thus spared, they required good with evil, for they fought against the Israelites, and cast them out of their possession, Judg. xi. 4, 5, 2 Chron. xx. 1, &c., and committed the most shocking cruelties: see Amos i. 13. Hence God enacted a law, that none of these people should enter into the congregation of the Lord, even to their tenth generation: see chap. xxiii. 3-6.

CHAPTER III.

The war with Og, king of Bashan, 1, 2. He is defeated, 3. Sixty fortified cities with many unvalled towns taken, 4, 5. The utter destruction of the people, 6. The spoils, 7; and extent of the land taken, 8-10. Account of Og's iron bedstead, 11. The land given to the Reubenites, Gadites, and half tribe of Manasseh, 12, 13. Jair takes the country of Argob, 14. Gilead is given unto Machir, 15. And the rest of the land possessed by the Reubenites and Gadites, 16, 17. The directions given to those tribes, 18-20. The counsel given to Joshua, 21, 22. Moses's prayer to God for permission to go into the promised land, 23-25; and God's refusal, 26. He is commanded to go up to Mount Pisgah to see it, 27; and to encourage Joshua, 28. They continue in the valley opposite to Beth-peor, 29.

THEN we turned, and went up the way to Bashan: and <sup>a</sup> Og the king of Bashan came out against us, he and all his people, to battle <sup>b</sup> at Edrei.

2 And the LORD said unto me, Fear him not: for

I will deliver him, and all his people, and his land, into thy hand; and thou shalt do unto him as thou didst unto <sup>c</sup> Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.

3 So the LORD our God delivered into our hands

* Num. xxi. 38, &c. Ch. xxix. 7.

Og also, the king of Bashan, and all his people: * and we smote him until none was left to him remaining.

4 And we took all his cities at that time, there was not a city which we took not from them, three-score cities, * all the region of Argob, the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

5 All these cities were fenced with high walls, gates, and bars; beside unwalled towns a great many.

6 And we utterly destroyed them, as we did unto Sihon, king of Heshbon, utterly destroying the men, women, and children, of every city.

7 But all the cattle, and the spoil of the cities we took for a prey to ourselves.

8 And we took at that time out of the hand of the two kings of the Amorites the land that was on this side Jordan from the river of Arnon unto Mount Hermon;

9 (Which <sup>a</sup> Hermon the Sidonians call Sirion; and the Amorites call it <sup>a</sup> Shenir;)

10 * All the cities of the plain, and all Gilead, and * all Bashan, unto Salchah and Edrei, cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan.

12 And this land, which we possessed at that time, <sup>e</sup> from Arocr, which is by the river Arnon and half Mount Gilead, and <sup>f</sup> the cities thereof, gave I unto the Reubenites and to the Gadites.

13 * And the rest of Gilead, and all Bashan, being the kingdom of Og, gave I unto the half tribe of Manasseh; all the region of Argob, with all Bashan, which was called the land of giants.

14 * Jair the son of Manasseh took all the country of Argob * unto the coasts of Geshuri and Maachathi; and <sup>g</sup> called them after his own name, Bashan-havoth-jair, unto this day.

Verse 4. All the region of Argob] Col-chebel Argob, all the cable or cord of Argob; this expression, which is used in various other parts of scripture, shows that anciently land was measured by lines or cords of a certain length, in a similar way to that by the chain among us, and the schœnus or cord among the Egyptians. Some think that it was the region of Argob that was afterwards called the region of Trachonitis.

Verse 9. Hermon the Sidonians call—Shenir] I suppose this verse to have been a marginal remark, which afterwards got incorporated with the text, or an addition by Joshua or Ezra.

Verse 11. Og king of Bashan remained] Og was the last king of the Amorites; his kingdom appears to have taken its name from the hill of Bashan; the country has been since called Batanæa.

His bedstead was—of iron] Iron was probably used partly for its strength and durability, and partly to prevent noxious vermin from harbouring in it.

Is it not in Rabbath, of the children of Ammon?] The bedstead was probably taken in some battle between the Ammonites and Amorites, in which the former had gained the victory. The bedstead was carried a trophy and placed in Rabbath, which appears, from 2 Sam. xii. 26, to have been the royal city of the children of Ammon.

15 * And I gave Gilead unto Machir.

16 And unto the Reubenites * and unto the Gadites I gave from Gilead even unto the river Arnon half the valley, and the border even unto the river Jabbok, * which is the border of the children of Ammon:

17 The plain also, and Jordan, and the coast thereof, from <sup>a</sup> Chinnereth * even unto the sea of the plain, * even the salt sea, * under Ashdodth-pisgah eastward.

18 And I commanded you at that time, saying, The Lord your God hath given you this land to possess it: * ye shall pass over armed before your brethren the children of Israel, all that are <sup>b</sup> meet for the war.

19 But your wives, and your little ones, and your cattle, (for I know that ye have much cattle), shall abide in your cities which I have given you;

20 Until the Lord hath given rest unto your brethren, as well as unto you, and until they also possess the land which the Lord your God hath given them beyond Jordan: and then shall ye <sup>c</sup> return every man unto his possession, which I have given you.

21 And <sup>d</sup> I commanded Joshua at that time, saying, Thine eyes have seen all that the Lord your God hath done unto these two kings: so shall the Lord do unto all the kingdoms whither thou passest.

22 Ye shall not fear them: for <sup>e</sup> the Lord your God he shall fight for you.

23 And <sup>f</sup> I besought the Lord at that time, saying,

24 O Lord God, thou hast begun to shew thy servant <sup>g</sup> thy greatness, and thy mighty hand: for * what God is there in heaven or in earth that can do according to thy works, and according to thy might?

25 I pray thee, let me go over, and see <sup>h</sup> the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon.

26 But the Lord <sup>i</sup> was wroth with me for your sakes, and would not hear me: and the Lord said

Nine cubits was the length—four cubits the breadth] Allowing the bedstead to have been one cubit longer than Og, which is certainly sufficient, and allowing the cubit to be about eighteen inches long, for this is perhaps the average of the cubit of a man, then Og was twelve feet high. This may be deemed extraordinary, and perhaps almost incredible, and therefore many commentators have, according to their fancy, lengthened the bedstead and shortened the man, making the former one-third longer than the person who lay on it, that they might reduce Og to six cubits; but even in this way they make him at least nine feet high.

Verse 14. Bashan-havoth-jair] Bashan of the cities of Jair.

Verses 24, 25. The prayer of Moses recorded in these two verses, and his own reflections on it, ver. 26, are very affecting. He had suffered much both in body and mind in bringing the people to the borders of the promised land; and it was natural enough for him to wish to see them established in it, and to enjoy a portion of that inheritance himself, which he knew was a type of the heavenly country. But notwithstanding his very earnest prayer, and God's especial favour towards him, he was not permitted to go over Jordan! He had grieved the Spirit of God, and he passed a sentence against him of exclusion from the promised land. Yet he permitted him to see it, and gave him the fullest unto me, Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter.

27 *Get thee up into the top of <sup>b</sup> Pisgah, and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

assurances that the people whom he had brought out of Egypt should possess it. Thus God may choose to deprive those of earthly possessions to whom he is nevertheless determined to give a heavenly inheritance.

Verse 26. Let it suffice thee] There is an abundance to thee—thou hast had honour enough already, and mayest well dispense with going over Jordan. He surely has no reason to complain who is taken from earthly felicity to heavenly glory. In this act God showed to Moses both his goodness and severity.

Verse 28. But charge Joshua, &c.] Give him authority in the sight of the people, let them see that he has the same commission which I gave to thee. Encourage him; for he will meet with many difficulties in the work to which he is called. And strengthen him—show him my unflinching promises, and exhort him to put his trust in me alone; for he shall go over before this people, and shall cause them to inherit the land; of this let him rest perfectly assured.

Verse 29. Beth-peor.] This was a city in the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites; and as beth signifies a house, the place probably had its name from a temple of the god Peor, who was worshipped there. Peor was nearly the same 28 But *charge Joshua, and encourage him, and strengthen him: for he shall go over before this people, and he shall cause them to inherit the land which thou shalt see.

among the Moabites that Priapus was among the Romans—the obscene god of an obscene people.

It is very likely that what God speaks here, both concerning Moses and Joshua, was designed to be typical of the procedure of his justice and grace in the salvation of man. 1. The land of Canaan was a type of the kingdom of heaven. 2. The law, which shows the holiness of God and the exceeding sinfulness of sin, could not bring the people to the possession of that kingdom. 8. Moses may probably be considered here as the emblem of that law by which is the knowledge of sin, but not redemption from it. 4. Joshua, the same as Jesus, the name signifying a Saviour, is appointed to bring the people into the rest which God had provided for them; thus it is by Jesus Christ alone that the soul is saved—fitted for and brought into the possession of the heavenly inheritance (see John i. 17; Gal. ii. 16; iii. 12, 13, 24): for he is the end of the law—the great scope and design of the law, for righteousness—for justification, to them that believe; Rom. x. 4. Such a use as this every pious reader may make of the circumstances recorded here, without the danger of pushing analogy or metaphor beyond their reasonable limits.

CHAPTER IV.

Exhortations to obedience, 1. Nothing to be added to or taken from the testimonies of God, 2. The people are exhorted to recollect how God had destroyed the ungodly among them, 3; and preserved those who were faithful, 4. The excellence of the divine Law, 5, 6. No nation in the world could boast of any such statutes, judgments, &c., 7, 8. They are exhorted to obedience by the wonderful manifestations of God in their behalf, 9-13. Moses exhorts them to beware of idolatry, and to make no likeness of any thing in heaven or earth as an object of adoration, 14-20. He informs them that he must die in that land, as God had refused to let him go into the promised land, being angry with him on their account, 21, 22. Repeats his exhortations to obedience, 23, 24. Predicts the judgments of God against them, should they turn to idolatry, 25-28. Promises of God's mercy to the penitent, 29-31. The grand and unparalleled privileges of the Israelites, 32-40. Moses severs three cities on the east side of Jordan for cities of refuge, 41, 42. Their names, 43. When and where Moses gave these statutes and judgments to Israel, 44-49.

NOW therefore hearken, O Israel, unto *the statutes and unto the judgments which I teach you, for to do them, that ye may live and go in and possess the land which the LORD God of your fathers giveth you.

2 <sup>b</sup> Ye shall not add unto the word which I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it, that ye may keep the commandments of the LORD your God which I command you.

3 Your eyes have seen what the LORD did because of *Baal-peor: for all the men that followed Baal-peor, the LORD thy God hath destroyed them from among you.

5 Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even as the LORD my God commanded me, that ye should do so in the land whither ye go to possess it.

6 Keep therefore and do them; for this is <sup>d</sup> your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes, and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.

7 For *what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for?

has any tendency to corrupt, weaken, or destroy any part of this revelation.

Neither shall ye diminish] Ye shall not take one jot or tittle from the LAW; it is that word of God that abideth for ever.

Verse 6. Keep—and do them; for this is your wisdom]

9 Only take heed to thyself, and * keep thy soul diligently, <sup>b</sup> lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life: but <sup>c</sup> teach them thy sons, and thy sons' sons:

10 Specially <sup>a</sup> the day that thou stoodest before the LORD thy God in Horeb, when the LORD said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

12 <sup>a</sup> And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: <sup>b</sup> ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; <sup>c</sup> only <sup>d</sup> ye heard a voice.

13 <sup>a</sup> And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even <sup>b</sup> ten commandments; and <sup>c</sup> he wrote them upon two tables of stone.

14 And <sup>a</sup> the LORD commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it.

16 Lest ye <sup>a</sup> corrupt yourselves, and <sup>b</sup> make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, <sup>c</sup> the likeness of male or female.

There was no mode of worship at this time that was not wicked, obscene, or ridiculous, except that established by God himself among the Israelites. And every part of this, taken in its connection and reference, may be truly called a wise and reasonable service.

The nations—and say, Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.] Almost all the nations in the earth showed that they had formed this opinion of the Jews, by borrowing from them the principal part of their civil code. Take away what Asia and Europe, whether ancient or modern, have borrowed from the Mosaic laws, and you leave little behind that can be called excellent.

Verse 9. Only take heed to thyself] Be circumspect and watchful.

Keep thy soul diligently] Be mindful of thy eternal interests. Whatever becomes of the body, take care of the soul.

Lest thou forget] God does his works that they may be had in everlasting remembrance; and he that forgets them, forgets his own mercies. Besides, if a man forget the work of God on his soul, he loses that work.

Lest they depart from thy heart] It is not sufficient to lay up divine things in the memory, they must be laid up in the heart. The life of God in the soul of man can alone preserve the soul to life everlasting; and this grace must be retained all the days of our life. When Adam fell, his condition was not ameliorated by the reflection that he had been once in paradise; nor does it avail Satan now that he was once an angel of light. Were it impossible for men finally to fall from the grace of God, exhortations of this kind had never been given, because they would have been unnecessary, and God never does an unnecessary thing.

But teach them thy sons] If a man know the worth of his own soul, he will feel the importance of the salvation of the souls of his family. Those who neglect family religion, neglect personal religion; if more attention were paid to the former, even among those called religious people, we should soon have a better state of civil society. On family religion

17 The likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air,

18 The likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth:

19 And lest thou <sup>a</sup> lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even <sup>b</sup> all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to <sup>c</sup> worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath <sup>d</sup> divided unto all nations under the whole heaven.

20 But the LORD hath taken you, and <sup>a</sup> brought you forth out of the iron furnace, even out of Egypt, <sup>b</sup> to be unto him a people of inheritance, as ye are this day,

21 Furthermore <sup>a</sup> the LORD was angry with me for your sakes, and sware that I should not go over Jordan, and that I should not go in unto that good land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance:

22 But <sup>a</sup> I must die in this land, <sup>b</sup> I must not go over Jordan: but ye shall go over, and possess <sup>c</sup> that good land.

23 Take heed unto yourselves, <sup>a</sup> lest ye forget the covenant of the LORD your God, which he made with you, <sup>b</sup> and make you a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, which the LORD thy God hath forbidden thee.

God lays much stress; and no head of a family can neglect it without endangering the final salvation of his own soul.

Verse 15. Ye saw no manner of similitude] Howsoever God chose to appear or manifest himself, he took care never to assume any describable form. He would have no image worship, because he is a SPIRIT, and they who worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

Verse 16. The likeness of male or female] Such as Baal-peor and the Roman Priapus, Ashteroth or Astarte, and the Greek and Roman Venus; after whom most nations of the world literally went a whoring.

Verse 17. The likeness of any beast, &c.] Such as the Egyptian god Apis, who was worshipped under the form of a white bull; the ibis and hawk, among the FOWLS, had also divine honours paid to them; serpents and the crocodile among REPTILES; besides monkeys, dogs, cats, the scarcabeus, leeks, and onions!

Verse 19. When thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars] The worship of the heavenly bodies was the oldest species of idolatry. Those who had not the knowledge of the true God were led to consider the sun, moon, planets, and stars as not only self-existing, but the authors of all the blessings possessed by mankind. The knowledge of a rational system of astronomy served to destroy this superstition; and very little of it remains now in the world, except among a few Christian and Mohammedan astrologers; those miserable sinners who endeavour, as much as possible, to revive the old idolatry, while vainly professing to believe in the true God! Sound philosophy is next in importance to sound divinity; and next to the study of the work of grace is that of the operations of God in nature; for these visible things make known his eternal power and Godhead.

Verse 20. Out of the iron furnace] From this mention of the word iron furnace there can be little doubt that the Israelites were employed in Egypt in the most laborious works of metallurgy. [The expression is probably figurative.]

Verse 21. The Lord was angry with me] And if with me, land, and <sup>a</sup> shall corrupt yourselves, and make a graven image, or the likeness of any thing, and <sup>b</sup> shall do evil in the sight of the Lord thy God, to provoke him to anger:

26 <sup>c</sup> I call heaven and earth to witness against you this day, that ye shall soon utterly perish from off the land whereunto ye go over Jordan to possess it; ye shall not prolong your days upon it, but shall utterly be destroyed.

27 And the Lord <sup>d</sup> shall scatter you among the nations, and ye shall be left few in number among the heathen, whither the Lord shall lead you.

28 And <sup>e</sup> there ye shall serve gods, the work of men's hands, wood and stone, <sup>f</sup> which neither see, nor hear, nor eat, nor smell.

29 <sup>g</sup> But if from thence thou shalt seek the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him if thou seek him with all thy heart and with all thy soul.

30 When thou art in tribulation, and all these things <sup>h</sup> are come upon thee, <sup>i</sup> even in the latter days, if thou <sup>j</sup> turn to the Lord thy God, and shall be obedient unto his voice:

so as to debar me from entering into the promised land, can you think to escape if guilty of greater provocations?

Verse 24. Thy God is a consuming fire] They had seen him on the mount as an unconsuming fire, while appearing to Moses, and giving the law; and they had seen him as a consuming fire in the case of Korah, Dathan, Abiram, and their company. They had, therefore, every good to expect from his approbation, and every evil to dread from his displeasure.

Verse 26. I call heaven and earth to witness against you] A most solemn method of adjuration, in use among all nations in the world. Such appeals to God, for such purposes, show at once both the origin and use of oaths.

Verse 27. The Lord shall scatter you among the nations] This was amply verified in their different captivities and dispersions.

Verse 28. There ye shall serve gods—wood and stone] This was also true of the Israelites, not only in their captivities, but also in their own land. And it may now be literally the case with the ten tribes who were carried away captive by the Assyrians, and of whose residence no man at present knows any thing with certainty. That they still exist there can be no doubt; but they are now most probably so completely incorporated with the idolaters among whom they dwell, as to be no longer distinguishable; yet God can gather them.

Verse 29. But if from thence thou shalt seek the Lord] God is long-suffering, and of tender mercy; and waits, ever ready, to receive a backsliding soul when it returns to him. Is not this promise left on record for the encouragement and salvation of lost Israel?

Verse 30. When thou art in tribulation—in the latter days] Are not these the times spoken of? And is there not still hope for Israel? Could we see them become zealous for their own law and religious observances—could we see them humble themselves before the God of Jacob—then might we hope that the redemption of Israel was at hand; but alas! there is not the most distant evidence of any thing of the kind, except in a very few solitary instances. They are perhaps, in the present day, more lost to every sacred principle of their own institutions than they have ever been since their return from the Babylonish captivity. By whom shall Jacob arise? for in this sense he is small—deeply fallen, and greatly degraded.

34 Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, <sup>o</sup> by temptations, <sup>p</sup> by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and <sup>q</sup> by a mighty hand, and <sup>r</sup> by a stretched-out arm, <sup>s</sup> and by great terrors, according to all that the Lord your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

Verse 33. Did ever people hear the voice of God] It seems to have been a general belief that if God appeared to men, it was for the purpose of destroying them; and indeed most of the extraordinary manifestations of God were in the way of judgment; but here it was different; God did appear in a sovereign and extraordinary manner; but it was for the deliverance and support of the people. 1. They heard his voice speaking with them in a distinct, articulate manner. 2. They saw the fire, the symbol of his presence, the appearances of which demonstrated it to be supernatural. 3. Notwithstanding God appeared so terrible, yet no person was destroyed, for he came, not to destroy, but to save.

Verse 34. From the midst of another nation] This was a most extraordinary thing, that a whole people, consisting of upwards of 600,000 effective men, besides women and children, should, without striking a blow, be brought out of the midst of a very powerful nation, to the political welfare of which their services were so essential; that they should be brought out in so open and public a manner; that the sea itself should be supernaturally divided to afford this mighty host a passage; and that, in a desert utterly unfriendly to human life, they should be sustained for forty years. These were such instances of the almighty power and goodness of God as never could be forgotten.

In this verse Moses enumerates seven different means used by the Almighty in effecting Israel's deliverance.

1. TEMPTATIONS, massoth, from nasah, to try or prove; the miracles which God wrought to try the faith and prove the obedience of the children of Israel.

2. SIGNS, othoth, from athah, to come near, such signs as God gave them of his continual presence and especial providence, particularly the pillar of cloud and pillar of fire.

3. WONDERS, mophetum, from yaphath, to persuade. It probably means typical representations: in this signification the word is used, Zech. iii. 8. All the dealings of God with this people, and even the people themselves, were types—present signifiers of distant facts and future occurrences.

4. WAR, milchamah, hostile engagements; such as those with the Amalekites, the Amorites, and the Bashanites, in which the hand of God was seen, rather than the hand of man.

5. A MIGHTY HAND, yad chasakah; one that is strong to deal its blows, irresistible in its operations, and grasps its enemies hard, so that they cannot escape, and protects its thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

39 Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the LORD he is God in heaven above, and upon earth beneath: there is none else.

40 <sup>b</sup>Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, <sup>c</sup>that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, for ever.

41 Then Moses <sup>d</sup>severed three cities on this side Jordan, toward the sunrise;

42 <sup>e</sup>That the slayer might flee thither, which should kill his neighbour unawares, and hated him not in times past; and that fleeing unto one of these cities he might live:

43 Notably, <sup>f</sup>Bezer in the wilderness, in the plain country of the Reubenites; and Ramoth in Gilead, of the Gadites; and Golan in Bashan, of the Manassites.

friends so powerfully that they cannot be injured. Neither stratagem nor policy was used in this business, but the openly displayed power of God.

6. A STRETCHED-OUT <sup>a</sup>ARM, zerua netuyah; a series of almighty operations, following each other in quick and astonishing succession. Let it be noted that in the scriptures, 1. The finger of God denotes any manifestation of the divine power, where effects are produced beyond the power of art or nature. 2. The hand of God signifies the same power, but put forth in a more signal manner. 3. The arm of God, the divine omnipotence manifested in the most stupendous miracles. 4. The arm of God stretched out, this same omnipotence exerted in a continuation of stupendous miracles, both in the way of judgment and mercy. In this latter sense it appears to be taken in the text: the judgments were poured out on the Egyptians; the mercies wrought in favour of the Israelites.

44 And this is the law which Moses set before the children of Israel:

45 These are the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which Moses spake unto the children of Israel, after they came forth out of Egypt,

46 On this side Jordan, <sup>a</sup>in the valley over against Beth-peor, in the land of Sihon king of the Amorites, who dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses and the children of Israel <sup>b</sup>smote, after they came forth out of Egypt:

47 And they possessed his land, and the land <sup>c</sup>of Og king of Bashan, two kings of the Amorites, which were on this side Jordan, toward the sunrise;

xxi. 35. Ch. iii. 3, 4.—Ch. ii. 36. iii. 12.—Ch. iii. 9. Ps. cxxxiii. 3.—Ch. iii. 17.

7. GREAT TERRORS, moraim gedolim; such terror, dismay, and consternation as were produced by the ten plagues, to which probably the inspired penman here alludes; such as when God looked out of the cloud upon the Egyptians, and their chariot-wheels were taken off, Exod. xiv. 24, 25. More awful displays of God's judgments, power, and might, were never witnessed by man.

Verses 43, Bezer in the wilderness] As the cities of refuge are generally understood to be types of the salvation provided by Christ for sinners; so their names have been thought to express some attribute of the Redeemer of mankind.

I suppose the last nine verses of this chapter to have been added by either Joshua or Ezra.

CHAPTER V.

God's covenant with the people in Horeb, 1-4. Moses the mediator of it, 5. A repetition of the ten commandments, 6-21; which God wrote on two tables of stone, 22. The people are filled with dread at the terrible majesty of God, 23-26; and beseech Moses to be their mediator, 27. The Lord admits of their request, 28; and deplores their ungodliness, 29. They are exhorted to obedience, that they may be preserved in the possession of the promised land, 30-33.

AND Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and <sup>a</sup>keep, and do them.

2 <sup>b</sup>The LORD our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

3 The LORD <sup>c</sup>made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.

4 <sup>d</sup>The LORD talked with you face to face, in the mount, out of the midst of the fire,

5 (<sup>e</sup>I stood between the LORD and you at that time, to shew you the word of the LORD: for 'ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount;) saying,

7 <sup>h</sup>Thou shalt have none other gods before me.

8 <sup>i</sup>Thou shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth:

13 <sup>d</sup> Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work.

14 But the seventh day is the <sup>e</sup> sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy man-servant, nor thy maid-servant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy man-servant and thy maid-servant may rest as well as thou.

15 <sup>f</sup> And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the LORD thy God brought thee out thence <sup>g</sup> through a mighty hand, and by a stretched-out arm: therefore the LORD thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day.

16 <sup>h</sup> Honour thy father and thy mother, as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee; <sup>i</sup> that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

17 <sup>j</sup> Thou shalt not kill.

18 <sup>k</sup> Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

20 <sup>m</sup> Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

21 <sup>n</sup> Neither shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife, neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field, or his man-servant, or his maid-servant, his ox, or his ass, or any thing that is thy neighbour's.

22 These words the LORD spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice: and he added no more. And <sup>o</sup> he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

might do them—obey the whole will of God, taking his word for the invariable rule of their conduct. Should not all these points be kept in view by every Christian assembly?

Verse 8. The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers (only) but with us (also).

Verse 15. And remember that thou wast a servant] In this and the latter clause of the preceding verse Moses adds another reason why one day in seven should be sanctified, viz., that the servants might rest, and this is urged upon them on the consideration of their having been servants in the land of Egypt. We see therefore that God had three grand ends in view by appointing a sabbath. 1. To commemorate the creation. 2. To give a due proportion of rest to man and beast. 3. To afford peculiar spiritual advantages to the soul, that it might be kept in remembrance of the rest which remains at the right hand of God.

Therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day.] Here is a variation in the manner of expression, sabbath day for seventh, owing, it is supposed, to a change of the day at the exodus from Sunday to Saturday, effected upon the gathering of the manna, Exod. xvi. 23. The sabbath now became a twofold memorial of the deliverance, as well as of the creation; and this accounts for the new reason assigned for its observance.

23 <sup>p</sup> And it came to pass, when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness, (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the heads of your tribes, and your elders;

24 And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath shewed us his glory and his greatness, and <sup>q</sup> we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he <sup>r</sup> liveth.

25 Now therefore why should we die? for this great fire will consume us: <sup>s</sup> if we <sup>t</sup> hear the voice of the LORD our God any more, then we shall die.

26 <sup>u</sup> For who is there of all flesh, that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

27 Go thou near, and hear all that the LORD our God shall say: and <sup>v</sup> speak thou unto us all that the LORD our God shall speak unto thee; and we will hear it, and do it.

28 And the LORD heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me; and the LORD said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee: <sup>w</sup> they have well said all that they have spoken.

29 <sup>x</sup> O that there were such a heart in them, that they would fear me, and <sup>y</sup> keep all my commandments always, <sup>z</sup> that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!

30 Go say to them, Get you into your tents again.

31 But as for thee, stand thou here by me, <sup>aa</sup> and I will speak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it.

32 Ye shall observe to do therefore as the LORD your God hath commanded you: <sup>bb</sup> ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

33 Ye shall walk in <sup>cc</sup> all the ways which the LORD your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, <sup>dd</sup> and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.

Verse 21. His field] This clause is not in the tenth commandment as it stands in Exod. x. 17.

Verse 29. O that there were such a heart in them] Or rather, Who will give such a heart to them, that they may fear, &c. If they had not been such perfectly free agents as could either use or abuse their liberty, could God have made the complaint or expressed the earnest desire we find in this text? He made the human will free; and in spite of all the influence of sin and Satan, he preserves its liberty. Had man no free will, he could neither be punished nor rewarded, because a mere machine, and consequently no more accountable for his actions than the fire for its consuming quality; or the stone for its gravity; the one having burned the house of the righteous, the other having crushed the innocent to death.

Verse 32. Ye shall observe to do] He who marks not the word of God is never likely to fulfil the will of God.

Ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.] The way of truth and righteousness is a right line; a man must walk straightforward who wishes to go to glory; no crooked or devious path ever led to God or happiness.

Verse 33. Ye shall walk in all the ways, &c.] God never gave a commandment to man which he did not design that he should obey. He who selects from the divine testimonies such precepts as he feels but little inclination to transgress, and lives in the breach of others, sins against the grand legislative authority of God, and shall be treated as a rebel.

That ye may live] Ticheyun, that ye may enjoy life (for the nun at the end of the word, deepens the sense), that it may be well with you, vetob lachem, and good shall be to you—God will prosper you in all things essential to the welfare of your bodies, and the salvation of your souls.

That ye may prolong your days in the land] That ye may arrive at a good old age, and grow more and more meet for the inheritance among the saints in light.

On this very important verse we may remark a long life is a great blessing, if a man live to God, because it is in life, and in life alone, that a preparation for eternal glory may be acquired. Those who wish to die soon, have never yet learned to live, and know not the value of life or time. Many have a vain hope that they shall get either in death, or in the other world, a preparation for glory. This is a fatal error. Here, alone, we may acquaint ourselves with God, and receive that holiness without which none can see him. Reader, be thankful to him that thou art still in a state of probation; and pray that thou mayest live for eternity.

CHAPTER VI.

The great design of God in giving his laws is, that the people may fear and obey him, that they may continue in peace and prosperity, and be mightily increased, 1-3. The great commandment of the law, 4, 5, which shall be laid up in their hearts, 6; taught to their children, 7; and affixed as a sign to their hands, heads, doors, and gates, 8, 9. How they are to act when they shall come into the promised land, 10-19. How they shall instruct their children, and relate the history to them of God's wonderful acts, 20-25.

NOW these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it:

2 That thou mightest fear the LORD thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee, thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that thy days may be prolonged.

3 Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it;

Verse 1. Now these are the commandments, &c.] See the difference between commandments, statutes, judgments, &c., pointed out, Lev. xxvi. 15.

Do them] That is, live in the continual practice of them; for by this they were to be distinguished from all the nations of the world, and all these were to be in force till the Son of God should come. Whither ye go, oberim, whither ye pass over, referring to the river Jordan, across which they must pass to get into Canaan.

Verse 2. That thou mightest fear the Lord] No man can walk either conscientiously or safely who has not the fear of God continually before his eyes. When this is gone, more than a guardian angel is fled.

Thou, and thy son, and thy son's son] Through all thy successive generations. Whoever fears God will endeavour to bring up his children in the way of righteousness.

Verse 3. Hear, therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it] Literally, Ye shall hear, O Israel, and thou shalt keep to do them. 1. God is to be heard; no obligation without law to found it on, and no law in religion but from God. 2. The commandment must be understood in order to be obeyed. 3. It must be observed—attentively considered, in order to be understood. And, 4. It must be performed, that the end for which it was given may be accomplished, viz., that God may be glorified, and that it may be well with the people. What is here spoken applies powerfully to every part of the moral law; God has given it as a rule of life, therefore obedience to it is indispensably necessary, not to the purchase of salvation, for no human merit can ever extend to that, but it is the way by which both the justice and mercy of God choose to conduct men to heaven. But let it be fully understood that no man can walk in the way of obedience but by and under the influence of the grace of God.

Verse 4. Hear, O Israel] These words may be variously rendered into English; but almost all possible verbal varieties in the translation (and there can be none other) amount to the same sense. On this verse the Jews lay great stress; it is one of the four passages which they write on their phylacteries, and they write the last letter in the first and last words very large, for the purpose of exciting attention to the weighty truth it contains. It is perhaps to this custom of the Jews that our blessed Lord alludes, Mat. xxiii. 38, Mark xii. 29, 30.

4 Hear, O Israel: the LORD our God is one LORD: 5 And thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

6 And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

7 And thou shalt teach them diligently unto

Many think that Moses teaches in these words the doctrine of the Trinity in Unity. It may be so; but if so, it is not more clearly done than in the first verse of Genesis. When this passage occurs in the sabbath readings in the synagogue, the whole congregation repeat the last word, achad, for several minutes together with the loudest vociferations: this I suppose they do against the Christians, for they suppose the latter hold three Gods, because of their doctrine of the Trinity; but all their skill and cunning can never prove that there is not a plurality expressed in the word Eloheinu, which is translated our God. It is because of their rejection of this doctrine that the wrath of God continues to rest on the Jews; for the doctrine of the atonement cannot be received, unless the doctrine of the Godhead of Christ is received too. Some Christians have joined the Jews against this doctrine, and some have even outdone them, and have put themselves to extraordinary pains to prove that Elohim is a noun of the singular number! This has not yet been proved. It would be as easy to prove that there is no plural in language.

Verse 5. Thou shalt love the Lord, &c.] Here we see the truth of that word of the apostle, 1 Tim. i. 5.

Verse 6. Shall be in thine heart] For where else can love be? If it be not in the heart, it exists not. And if these words be not in the heart—if they are not esteemed, prized, and received as a high and most glorious privilege, what hope is there that this love shall ever reign there?

Verse 7. Thou shalt teach them diligently] Shinnantam, from shanan, to repeat, iterate, or do a thing again and again; hence to whet or sharpen any instrument, which is done by reiterated friction or grinding. We see here the spirit of this divine injunction. God's testimonies must be taught to our children, and the utmost diligence must be used to make them understand them. This is a most difficult task; and it requires much patience, much prudence, much judgment, and much piety in the parents, to enable them to do this good, this most important work, in the best and most effectual manner.

And shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house] Thou shalt have religion at home as well as in the temple and tabernacle.

And when thou walkest by the way] Thou shalt be religious abroad as well as at home, and not be ashamed to own God wheresoever thou art.

When thou liest down, and when thou risest up.] Thou shalt begin and end the day with God, and thus religion will be the great business of thy life. O how good are these sayings, but how little regarded!

Verse 8. Thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand] Is not this an allusion to an ancient and general custom observed in almost every part of the world? When a person wishes to remember a thing of importance, and is afraid to trust to the common operations of memory, he ties a knot on some part of his clothes, or a cord on his hand or finger, or places something out of its usual order, and in view, that his memory may be whetted to recollection, and his eye affects his heart. God, who knows how slow of heart we are to understand, graciously orders us to make use of every help, and through the means of things sensible, to rise to things spiritual.

And they shall be as frontlets] Totaphoth seems to have the same meaning as phylacteries has in the New Testament.

Verse 9. Write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.] The Jews, forgetting the spirit and design of this precept, used these things as superstitious people do amulets and charms, and supposed if they had these passages of scriptures written upon slips of pure parchment, wrapt round their foreheads, tied to their arm, or nailed to their door-posts, that they should then be delivered from every evil! And how much better are many Christians who keep a Bible in their house merely that it may keep the devil out; and will have it in their rooms, or under their pillows, to ward off spirits and ghosts in the night? How ingenious is the heart of man to find out every wrong way, and to miss the right!

Verse 12. Beware lest thou forget the Lord] In earthly prosperity men are apt to forget heavenly things. While the animal senses have every thing they can wish, it is difficult for the soul to urge its way to heaven. God knows this well; and therefore, in his love to man, makes comparative poverty and frequent affliction his general lot. Should not every soul therefore magnify God for this lot in life. "Before

I was afflicted," says David, "I went astray," and had it not been for poverty and affliction, as instruments in the hands of God's grace, multitudes of souls now happy in heaven would have been wretched in hell. It is not too much to speak thus far; because we ever see that the rich and the affluent are generally negligent of God and the interests of their souls. It must however be granted that extreme poverty is as injurious to religion as excessive affluence. Hence the wisdom as well as piety of Agur's prayer, Prov. xxx. 7-9.

Verse 13. Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God] Thou shalt respect and reverence him as thy lawgiver and judge; as thy creator, preserver, and the sole object of thy religious adoration.

And serve him] Our blessed Lord, in Mat. iv. 10, Luke iv. 8, quotes these words thus: And him ONLY shalt thou serve. It appears, therefore, that lebadde was anciently in the Hebrew text, as it was and is in the SEPTUAGINT, from which our Lord quoted it.

Shalt swear by his name] Tishshabca, from shaba, he was full, satisfied, or gave that which was full or satisfactory. Hence an oath and swearing, because appealing to God, and taking him for witness in any case of promise, &c., gave full and sufficient security for the performance; and if done in evidence, or to the truth of any particular fact, it gave full security for the truth of that evidence. An oath, therefore, is an appeal to God, who knows all things, of the truth of the matter in question: and when a religious man takes such an oath, he gives full and reasonable satisfaction that the thing is so, as stated; for it is ever to be presumed that no man, unless in a state of deepest degradation, would make such an appeal falsely, for this would imply an attempt to make God a party in the deception.

Verse 14. Ye shall not go after other gods] The object of religious worship among every people, whether that object be true or false, is ever considered as the pattern or exemplar to his worshippers. Christians are termed the followers of God; they take God for their pattern, and walk—act as he does. Hence we see the meaning of the terms in this verse: Ye shall not go after—ye shall not take false gods for your patterns. The Canaanites, Greeks, Romans, &c., were a most impure people, because the objects of their worship were impure, and they went after them, i.e. were like their gods.

Verse 15. A jealous God] Jehovah has betrothed you to himself as a bride is to her husband. Do not be unfaithful, else that love wherewith he has now distinguished you shall assume the form of jealousy, and so divorce and consume you.

Verse 16. Ye shall not tempt the Lord] Ye shall not provoke him by entertaining doubts of his mercy, goodness, providence, and truth.

As ye tempted him in Massah.] How did they tempt him in Massah? They said, Is the Lord among us or not? Exod. xvii. 1-7. Doubting God's kindness, where there are with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the good land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, 19 <sup>a</sup>To cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the LORD hath spoken.

20 And <sup>b</sup>when thy son asketh thee <sup>c</sup>in time to come, saying, What mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the LORD our God hath commanded you?

21 Then thou shalt say unto thy son, We were Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt: and the LORD brought us out of Egypt <sup>d</sup>with a mighty hand:

so many evidences of it, is highly insulting to God Almighty.

Verse 20. What mean the testimonies, &c.] The Hebrew language has no word to express to mean or signify, and therefore uses simply the substantive verb what is, i.e. what mean or signify, &c.

Verse 25. It shall be our righteousness] The evidence that we are under the influence of the fear and love of God. Moses does not say that this righteousness could be wrought without the influence of God's mercy, nor does he say that they should purchase heaven by it; but God required them to be conformed to his will in all things, that they might be holy in heart, and righteous in every part of their moral conduct.

The making an appeal to the Supreme Being, and calling him to witness and record, constitute the spirit and great and 'sore, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, before our eyes:

23 And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he swore unto our fathers.

24 And the LORD commanded us to do all these statutes, <sup>a</sup>to fear the LORD our God, <sup>b</sup>for our good always, that <sup>c</sup>he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day.

25 And <sup>d</sup>it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the LORD our God, as he hath commanded us.

essence of an oath. It is no matter in what form this appeal is made; the oath is the same, for the appeal is made to God. On this ground, the holding up of the hand in a court of justice is as perfect, as substantial, and as formal an oath as kissing the New Testament. Why then so many objections against taking an oath in a court of justice by any one particular form, when the same thing is done in spirit, essence, and substance, when God is called to witness and record, though the form be different? Our Lord's command, Swear not at all, can never relate to an oath in a civil cause, taken according to the definition above given; profane and common swearing, with all light, irreverent oaths and imprecations, and all such oaths as are not required by the civil magistrate in cases where the Lord is supposed to be witness, are certainly intended in our blessed Lord's prohibition.

CHAPTER VII.

With the seven nations that God shall cast out, 1, they shall make no covenant, 2, nor form any matrimonial alliances, 3; lest they should be enticed into idolatry, 4. All monuments of idolatry to be destroyed, 5. The Israelites are to consider themselves a holy people, 6; and that the Lord had made them such, not for their merits, but for his own mercies, 7, 8. They shall therefore love him, and keep his commandments, 9-11. The great privileges of the obedient, 12-24. All idolatry to be avoided, 25, 26.

WHEN the LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, <sup>a</sup>the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations <sup>b</sup>greater and mightier than thou;

2 And when the LORD thy God shall <sup>c</sup>deliver them before thee; thou shalt smite them, and <sup>d</sup>utterly destroy them; <sup>e</sup>thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them.

3 <sup>f</sup>Neither shalt thou make marriages with them;

Verse 1. Seven nations greater and mightier than thou] In several places of the Hebrew text, each of these seven nations is not enumerated, some one or other being left out, which the Septuagint in general supply.

Verse 2. Thou shalt smite them, &c.] These idolatrous nations were to be utterly destroyed, provided they did not renounce their idolatry and receive the true faith: for if they did not, then no covenant was to be made with them on any secular or political consideration whatever; no mercy was to be shown to them, because the cup of their iniquity also was now full; and they must either embrace, heartily embrace, the true religion, or be cut off.

Verse 3. Neither shalt thou make marriages, &c.] There is more likelihood that the idolatrous wife should draw aside the believing husband, than that the believing husband should be able to bring over his idolatrous wife to the true faith.

Verse 6. Thou art an holy people] And therefore should have no connexion with the workers of iniquity.

A special people] A peculiar people, a private property.

special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

7 The LORD did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were <sup>a</sup> the fewest of all people:

8 But <sup>b</sup> because the LORD loved you, and because he would keep <sup>c</sup> the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, <sup>d</sup> hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

9 Know therefore that the LORD thy God he is God, <sup>e</sup> the faithful God, <sup>f</sup> which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments, to a thousand generations,

10 And <sup>g</sup> repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: <sup>h</sup> he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

11 Thou shalt therefore keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

12 <sup>i</sup> Wherefore it shall come to pass, <sup>j</sup> if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep and do them, that the LORD thy God shall keep unto thee <sup>k</sup> the covenant and the mercy which he swore unto thy fathers:

13 And he will <sup>l</sup> love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee: <sup>m</sup> he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he swore unto thy fathers to give thee.

14 Thou shalt be blessed above all people: <sup>n</sup> there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

15 And the LORD will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the <sup>o</sup> evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, upon thee; but will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

16 And <sup>p</sup> thou shalt consume all the people which the LORD thy God shall deliver thee; <sup>q</sup> thine eye shall have no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be <sup>a</sup> a snare unto thee.

17 If thou shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I: how can I <sup>a</sup> dispossess them?

18 <sup>b</sup> Thou shalt not be afraid of them: but shalt well <sup>c</sup> remember what the LORD thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt;

19 <sup>d</sup> The great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched-out arm, whereby the LORD thy God brought thee out: so shall the LORD thy God do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

20 <sup>e</sup> Moreover the LORD thy God will send the hornet among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

21 Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is <sup>f</sup> among you, <sup>g</sup> a mighty God and terrible.

22 <sup>h</sup> And the LORD thy God will <sup>i</sup> put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.

23 But the LORD thy God shall deliver them <sup>j</sup> unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

25 The graven images of their gods <sup>n</sup> shall ye burn with fire: thou <sup>o</sup> shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be <sup>p</sup> snared therein: for it is <sup>q</sup> an abomination to the LORD thy God.

26 Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; <sup>r</sup> for it is a cursed thing.

The words as they stand in the Septuagint are quoted by the Apostle, 1 Pet. ii. 9.

Verse 8. But because the Lord loved you] He intended to make a full discovery of his goodness to the world, and this must have a commencement in some particular place, and among some people. He chose that time, and he chose the Jewish people: but not because of their goodness or holiness.

Verse 12. The Lord—shall keep unto thee the covenant] So we find their continuance in the state of favour was to depend on their faithfulness to the grace of God. If they should rebel, though God had chosen them through his love, yet he would cast them off in his justice. The elect, we see, may become unfaithful, and so become reprobates. So it happened to 24,000 of them, whose carcases fell in the wilderness because they had sinned; yet these were of the elect that came out of Egypt. Let him that standeth take heed lest he fall.

Verse 22. Put out those nations—by little and little] The Israelites were not as yet sufficiently numerous to fill the whole land occupied by the seven nations mentioned ver. 1. And as wild and ferocious animals might be expected to multiply where either there are no inhabitants, or the place is but thinly peopled, therefore God tells them that, though at present, by force of arms, they might be able to expel them, it would be impolitic so to do, lest the beasts of the field should multiply upon them.

Verse 25. Thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them] Some of the ancient idols were plated over with gold, and God saw that the value of the metal and the excellence of the workmanship might be an inducement for the Israelites to preserve them; and this might lead, remotely at least, to idolatry. As the idols were accursed, all those who had them, or any thing appertaining to them, were accursed also, ver. 26.

DEUTERONOMY.

CHAPTER VIII.

An exhortation to obedience from a consideration of God's past mercies, 1, 2. Man is not to live by bread only, but by every word of God, 3. How God provided for them in the wilderness, 4. The Lord chastened them, that they might be obedient, 5, 6. A description of the land into which they were going, 7-9. Cautions lest they should forget God in their prosperity, 10-16, and lest they should attribute that prosperity to themselves, and not to God, 17, 18. The terrible judgments that shall fall upon them, should they prove unfaithful, 19, 20.

ALL the commandments which I command thee this day * shall ye observe to do, that ye may live, and multiply, and go in and possess the land which the LORD sware unto your fathers.

2 And thou shalt remember all the way which the LORD thy God <sup>b</sup> led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and <sup>c</sup> to prove thee, <sup>d</sup> to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments, or no.

3 And he humbled thee, and <sup>e</sup> suffered thee to hunger, and <sup>f</sup> fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth <sup>g</sup> not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the LORD doth man live.

4 <sup>h</sup> Thy raiment waxed not old upon thee, neither did thy foot swell, these forty years.

5 <sup>i</sup> Thou shalt also consider in thine heart, that, as a man chasteneth his son, so the LORD thy God chasteneth thee.

6 Therefore thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, <sup>j</sup> to walk in his ways, and to fear him.

7 For the LORD thy God bringeth thee into a good land, <sup>k</sup> a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills;

8 A land of wheat, and barley, and vines, and fig-trees, and pomegranates; a land <sup>l</sup> of oil olive, and honey;

9 A land wherein thou shalt eat bread without scarceness, thou shalt not lack any thing in it; a land <sup>m</sup> whose stones are iron, and out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.

10 <sup>n</sup> When thou hast eaten and art full, then thou shalt bless the LORD thy God, for the good land which he hath given thee.

11 Beware that thou forget not the LORD thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day:

12 <sup>o</sup> Lest when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses, and dwelt therein;

13 And when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied;

14 <sup>p</sup> Then thine heart be lifted up, and thou <sup>q</sup> forget the LORD thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage;

15 Who <sup>r</sup> led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, <sup>s</sup> wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water; <sup>t</sup> who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint;

16 Who fed thee in the wilderness with <sup>u</sup> manna, which thy fathers knew not, that he might humble thee, and that he might prove thee, <sup>v</sup> to do thee good at thy latter end;

17 <sup>w</sup> And thou say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth.

18 But thou shalt remember the LORD thy God: <sup>x</sup> for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that <sup>y</sup> he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day.

19 And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the LORD thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, <sup>z</sup> I testify against you this day that ye shall surely perish.

20 As the nations which the LORD destroyeth before your face, <sup>aa</sup> so shall ye perish; because ye would not be obedient unto the voice of the LORD your God.

Verse 2. Thou shalt remember all the way] The various dealings of God with you; the dangers and difficulties to which ye were exposed, and from which God delivered you; together with the various miracles which he wrought for you, and his long-suffering towards you.

Verse 3. He suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee] God never permits any tribulation to befall his followers, which he does not design to turn to their advantage. When he permits us to hunger, it is that his mercy may be the more observable in providing us with the necessities of life. Privations, in the way of providence, are the forerunners of mercy and goodness abundant.

Verse 4. Thy raiment waxed not old, &c.] The plain meaning of this much-tortured text appears to me to be this: "God so amply provided for them all the necessities of life, that they never were obliged to wear tattered garments, nor were their feet injured for lack of shoes or sandals." If they had carvers, engravers, silversmiths, and jewellers among them, is it to be wondered at if they also had habit and sandal makers, &c., &c., as we are certain they had weavers, embroiderers, and such like? And the traffic which we may suppose they carried on with the Moabites, or with travelling hordes of Arabians, doubtless supplied them with the materials; though, as they had abundance of sheep and neat cattle, they must have had much of the materials within themselves. It is generally supposed that God, by a miracle, preserved their clothes from wearing out: but if this sense be admitted, it will require, not one miracle, but a chain of the most successive and astonishing miracles, ever wrought, to account for the thing; for as there were not less than 600,000 males born in the wilderness, it would imply, that the clothes of the infant grew up with the increase of his body to manhood, which would require a miracle to be continually wrought on every thread, and on every particle of matter of which that thread was composed. And this is not all; it would imply that the clothes of the parent became miraculously lessened to fit the body of the child, with whose growth they were again to stretch and grow, &c. No such miraculous interference was necessary. [This criticism scarcely meets the case. It does not fully interpret the original; nor is it likely that Moses would have classed with the giving of the manna any divine provision which had not some miraculous element in it.]

Verse 9. A land whose stones are iron] Not only meaning that there were iron mines throughout the land, but that the loose stones were strongly impregnated with iron, ores of this metal (the most useful of all the products of the mineral kingdom) being every where in great plenty.

Out of whose hills thou mayest dig brass.] As there is no such thing in nature as a brass mine, the word nechosheth should be translated copper; of which, by the addition of the lapis calaminaris, brass is made.

Verse 15. Fiery serpents] Serpents whose bite occasioned a most violent inflammation, accompanied with an unquenchable thirst, and which terminated in death.

Verse 18. God—giveth the power to get wealth] Who among the rich and wealthy believes this saying? Who gives wisdom, understanding, skill, bodily strength, and health? Is it not God? And without these how can wealth be acquired? Whose is providence? Who gives fertility to the earth? And who brings every proper purpose to a right issue? Is it not God? And without these also can wealth be acquired? No. Then the proposition in the text is self-evident; it is God that giveth power to get wealth, and to God the wealthy man must account for the manner in which he has expended the riches which God hath given him,

CHAPTER IX.

The people are informed that they shall shortly pass over Jordan, and that God shall go over before them, to expel the ancient inhabitants, 1-3. They are cautioned not to suppose that it is on account of their righteousness that God is to give them that land, 4-6. They are exhorted to remember their various provocations of the Divine Majesty, especially at Horeb, 7-14; and how Moses interceded for them, and destroyed the golden calf, 15-21. How they murmured at Taberah, 22; and rebelled at Kadesh-barnea, 23; and had been perverse from the beginning, 24. An account of the intercession of Moses in their behalf, 25-29.

H O Israel: Thou art to pass over Jordan this day, to go in to possess nations <sup>b</sup> greater and mightier than thyself, cities great and <sup>c</sup> fenced up to heaven;

2 A people great and tall, <sup>d</sup> the children of the Anakims, whom thou knowest, and of whom thou hast heard say, Who can stand before the children of Anak!

3 Understand therefore this day, that the Lord thy God is he which <sup>e</sup> goeth over before thee; as a <sup>f</sup> consuming fire <sup>g</sup> he shall destroy them, and he shall bring them down before thy face: <sup>h</sup> so shalt thou drive them out, and destroy them quickly, as the Lord hath said unto thee.

4 <sup>i</sup> Speak not thou in thine heart, after that the Lord thy God hath cast them out from before thee, saying, For my righteousness the Lord hath brought me in to possess this land: but <sup>j</sup> for the wickedness of these nations the Lord doth drive them out from before thee.

5 <sup>k</sup> Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land: but for the wickedness of these nations the Lord thy God doth drive them out from before thee and that he may perform <sup>l</sup> the word which the Lord sware unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

6 Understand, therefore, that the Lord thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art <sup>m</sup> a stiff-necked people.

7 Remember and forget not, how thou provokedst the Lord thy God to wrath in the wilderness: <sup>n</sup> from the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the Lord.

8 Also <sup>o</sup> in Horeb ye provoked the Lord to wrath, so that the Lord was angry with you to have destroyed you.

9 <sup>p</sup> When I was gone up into the mount to receive the tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant which the Lord made with you, then <sup>q</sup> I abode in the mount forty days and forty nights, I neither did eat bread nor drink water:

10 <sup>r</sup> And the Lord delivered unto me two tables of stone written with the finger of God; and on them <sup>s</sup> was written according to all the words, which the Lord spake with you in the mount, out of the midst of the fire <sup>t</sup> in the day of the assembly.

11 And it came to pass, at the end of forty days and forty nights, that the Lord gave me the two tables of stone, even the tables of the covenant.

12 And the Lord said unto me, <sup>u</sup> Arise, get thee down quickly from hence; for thy people which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt have corrupted themselves; they are <sup>v</sup> quickly turned aside out of the way which I commanded them; they have made them a molten image.

13 Furthermore <sup>w</sup> the Lord spake unto me, saying,

Verse 1. Thou art to pass over Jordan this day] This time; they had come thirty-eight years before this nearly to the verge of the promised land, but were not permitted at that day or time to pass over, because of their rebellions; but this time they shall certainly pass over. This was spoken about the eleventh month of the fortieth year of their journeying, and it was on the first month of the following year they passed over; and during this interim Moses died.

Verse 5. For the wickedness of these nations] So then it was not by any sovereign act of God that these people were cast out, but for their wickedness; they had transgressed the law of their Creator; they had resisted his Spirit, and could no longer be tolerated. The Israelites were to possess their land, not because they deserved it, but first, because they were less wicked than the others; and secondly, because God thus chose to begin the great work of his salvation among men. Thus then the Canaanites were cut off, and the Israelites were grafted in; and the Israelites, because of their wickedness, were afterwards cut off, and the Gentiles grafted in. Let the latter not be high-minded, but fear; if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he spare not thee. But let it be remembered that this land was originally their own, and that the present possessors had no legal right to it.

Verse 12. Thy people—have corrupted themselves] Debased themselves by making and worshipping an Egyptian idol.

DEUTERONOMY.

I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiff-necked people:

14 <sup>b</sup> Let me alone, that I may destroy them, and blot out their name from under heaven: <sup>d</sup> and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they.

15 <sup>a</sup> So I turned and came down from the mount, and <sup>e</sup> the mount burned with fire: and the two tables of the covenant were in my two hands.

16 And <sup>f</sup> I looked, and, behold, ye had sinned against the Lord your God, and had made you a molten calf: ye had turned aside quickly out of the way which the Lord had commanded you.

17 And I took the two tables, and cast them out of my two hands, and brake them before your eyes.

18 And I <sup>h</sup> fell down before the Lord, as at the first, forty days and forty nights: I did neither eat bread, nor drink water, because of all your sins which ye sinned, in doing wickedly in the sight of the Lord, to provoke him to anger.

19 <sup>i</sup> For I was afraid of the anger and hot displeasure wherewith the Lord was wroth against you to destroy you. <sup>j</sup> But the Lord hearkened unto me at that time also.

20 And the Lord was very angry with Aaron to have destroyed him: and I prayed for Aaron also the same time.

21 And <sup>k</sup> I took your sin, the calf which ye had made, and burnt it with fire, and stamped it, and ground it very small, even until it was as small as

Verse 27. Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob] As if he had said: "These are their descendants, and the covenant was made with those patriarchs in behalf of these." God bestows many blessings on comparatively dust: and I cast the dust thereof into the brook that descended out of the mount.

23 Likewise <sup>o</sup> when the Lord sent you from Kadesh-barnea, saying, Go up and possess the land which I have given you; then ye rebelled against the commandment of the Lord your God, and <sup>p</sup> ye believed him not, nor hearkened to his voice.

24 <sup>q</sup> Ye have been rebellious against the Lord from the day that I knew you.

25 <sup>r</sup> Thus I fell down before the Lord, forty days and forty nights, as I fell down at the first; because the Lord had said he would destroy you.

26 <sup>s</sup> I prayed therefore unto the Lord, and said, O Lord God, destroy not thy people and thine inheritance, which thou hast redeemed through thy greatness; which thou hast brought forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand.

27 Remember thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin:

28 Lest <sup>t</sup> the land whence thou broughtest us out, say, <sup>u</sup> Because the Lord was not able to bring them into the land which he promised them, and because he hated them, he hath brought them out to slay them in the wilderness.

29 <sup>v</sup> Yet they are thy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest out by thy <sup>w</sup> mighty power, and by thy stretched-out arm.

CHAPTER X.

Moses is commanded to make a second set of tables, 1, 2. He makes an ark, prepares the two tables, God writes on them the ten commandments, and Moses lays them up in the ark, 3-5. The Israelites journey from Beeroth to Mosera, where Aaron dies, 6; and from thence to Gudgodah and Jotbath. 7. At that time God separated the tribe of Levi for the service of the sanctuary, 8, 9. How long Moses stayed the second time in the mount, 10, 11. What God requires of the Israelites, 12-15. Their heart must be circumcised, 16. God's character and conduct, 17, 18. They are commanded to love the stranger, 19; to fear, love, and serve God, 20, because he had done such great things for them and their fathers, 21, 22.

AT that time the Lord said unto me, <sup>a</sup> Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first, and come up unto me into the mount, and <sup>b</sup> make thoe an ark of wood.

2 And I will write on the tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest, and <sup>c</sup> thou shalt put them in the ark.

3 And I made an ark of <sup>d</sup> shittim wood, and <sup>e</sup> hewed two tables of stone, like unto the first, and went up into the mount, having the two tables in mine hand.

4 And <sup>f</sup> he wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten <sup>g</sup> commandments <sup>h</sup> which the Lord spake unto you in the mount, out of the midst of the fire, <sup>i</sup> in the day of the assembly: and the Lord gave them unto me.

5 And I turned myself, and <sup>j</sup> came down from the mount, and <sup>k</sup> put the tables in the ark which I had made; <sup>l</sup> and there they be, as the Lord commanded me.

6 And the children of Israel took their journey from Beeroth <sup>m</sup> of the children of Jaakan to <sup>n</sup> Mosera: <sup>o</sup> there Aaron died, there he was buried; and Eleazar his son ministered in the priest's office, in his stead.

7 <sup>p</sup> From thence they journeyed unto Gudgodah; and from Gudgodah to Jotbath, a land of rivers of waters.

9 <sup>e</sup>Wherefore Levi hath no part nor inheritance with his brethren; the LORD <sup>f</sup>is his inheritance, according as the LORD thy God promised him.

10 And <sup>g</sup>I stayed in the mount, according to the <sup>h</sup>first time, forty days and forty nights; and <sup>i</sup>the LORD hearkened unto me at that time also, and <sup>j</sup>the LORD would not destroy thee.

11 <sup>k</sup>And the LORD said unto me, Arise, <sup>l</sup>take thy journey before the people, that they may go in and possess the land, which I swore unto their fathers to give unto them.

12 And now, Israel, <sup>m</sup>what doth the LORD thy God require of thee, but <sup>n</sup>to fear the LORD thy God, <sup>o</sup>to walk in all his ways, and <sup>p</sup>to love him, and to serve the LORD thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, 13 To keep the commandments of the LORD and his statutes, which I command thee this day <sup>q</sup>for thy good?

14 Behold, <sup>r</sup>the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the LORD's thy God, <sup>s</sup>the earth also, with all that therein is.

15 <sup>t</sup>Only the LORD had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and he chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day.

16 Circumcise therefore <sup>u</sup>the foreskin of your heart, and be no more <sup>v</sup>stiff-necked.

18 <sup>ab</sup>He doth execute the judgment of the fatherless and widow, and loveth the stranger, in giving him food and raiment.

19 <sup>ac</sup>Love ye therefore the stranger: for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.

20 <sup>ad</sup>Thou shalt fear the LORD thy God; him shalt thou serve, and to him shalt thou <sup>ae</sup>cleave, <sup>af</sup>and swear by his name.

21 <sup>ag</sup>He is thy praise, and he is thy God, <sup>ah</sup>that hath done for thee these great and terrible things, which thine eyes have seen.

22 Thy fathers went down into Egypt <sup>ai</sup>with threescore and ten persons; and now the LORD thy God hath made thee <sup>aj</sup>as the stars of heaven for multitude.

<sup>ah</sup> spiritual things, and that it was not the cutting away a part of the flesh that was the object of the divine commandment, but the purification of the soul, without which all forms and ceremonies are of no avail. Loving God with all the heart, soul, mind, and strength, the heart being circumcised to enable them to do it, was, from the beginning, the end, design, and fulfilment of the whole Law.

Verse 17. God of gods, and Lord of lords] That is, He is the source whence all being and power proceed; every agent is finite but himself; and he can counteract, suspend, or destroy all the actions of all creatures whensoever he pleases. If he determine to save, none can destroy; if he purpose to destroy, none can save. How absolutely necessary to have such a God for our friend!

A great God—mighty] The mighty God; this is the very title that is given to our blessed Lord and Saviour, Isa. ix. 6. Verse 21. He is thy praise] It is an eternal honour to any soul to be in the friendship of God. Why are people ashamed of being thought religious? Because they know nothing of religion. He who knows his Maker may glory in his God, for without him what has any soul but disgrace, pain, shame, and perdition? How strange is it that those who fear God should be ashamed to own it, while sinners boldly proclaim their relationship to Satan!

Verse 22. With threescore and ten persons] And now, from so small a beginning, they were multiplied to more than 600,000 souls; and this indeed in the space of forty years, for the 603,000 which came out of Egypt were at this time all dead but Moses, Joshua, and Caleb. How easily can God increase and multiply, and how easily diminish and bring low! In all things, because of his unlimited power, he can do whatsoever he will; and he will do whatsoever is right.

Verse 12. Now, Israel, what doth the Lord—require of thee? An answer is immediately given. God requires,

1. That ye fear him as Jehovah, your God; him who made, preserves, and governs you.

2. That ye walk in all his ways—that, having received his precepts, all of which are good and excellent, ye obey the whole; walking in God's ways, not your own, nor in the ways of the people of the land.

3. That ye love him—have confidence in him as your father and friend, have recourse to him in all your necessities, and love him in return for his love.

4. That you serve him—give him that worship which he requires, performing it with all your heart—the whole of your affections, and with all your soul—your will, understanding, and judgment. In a word, putting forth your whole strength and energy of body and soul in the sacred work.

Verse 14. Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens] All these words in the original are in the plural number: behold the heavens and the heavens of heavens. But what do they mean? To say that the first means the atmosphere, the second the planetary system, and the third the region of the blessed, is saying but very little in the way of explanation. The words were probably intended to point out the immensity of God's creation, in which we may readily conceive one system of heavenly bodies, and others beyond them, and others still in endless progression through the whole vortex of space, every star in the vast abyss of nature being a sun, with its peculiar and numerous attendant worlds! Thus there may be systems on systems in endless gradation up to the throne of God!

Verse 16. Circumcise—the foreskin of your heart] A plain proof from God himself that this precept pointed out

A comparative description of Egypt and Canaan, 10-12. Promises to obedience, 13-15. Dissuasives from idolatry, 16, 17. The words of God to be laid up in their hearts, to be for a sign on their hands, foreheads, gates, &c., 18, taught to their children, made the subject of frequent conversation, to the end that their days may be multiplied, 19-21. If obedient, God shall give them possession of the whole land, and not one of their enemies shall be able to withstand them, 22-25. Life and death, a blessing and a curse, are set before them, 26-28. The blessings to be put on Mount Gerizim, and the curses on Mount Ebal, 29, 30. The promise that they should pass over Jordan, and observe these statutes in the promised land, 31, 32.*

THEREFORE thou shalt <sup>a</sup>love the LORD thy God, and <sup>b</sup>keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, alway.

2 And know ye this day: for I speak not with your children which have not known, and which have not seen <sup>c</sup>the chastisement of the LORD your God, <sup>d</sup>his greatness, <sup>e</sup>his mighty hand, and his stretched-out arm.

3 <sup>f</sup>And his miracles, and his acts, which he did in the midst of Egypt unto Pharaoh the king of Egypt, and unto all his land;

4 And what he did unto the army of Egypt, unto their horses, and to their chariots; <sup>g</sup>how he made the water of the Red Sea to overflow them as they pursued after you, and how the LORD hath destroyed them unto this day;

5 And what he did unto you in the wilderness, until ye came unto this place;

6 And <sup>h</sup>what he did unto Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, the son of Reuben: how the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed them up, and their households, and their tents, and all the <sup>i</sup>substance that <sup>j</sup>was in their possession, in the midst of all Israel:

7 But <sup>k</sup>your eyes have seen all the great acts of the LORD which he did.

8 Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments which I command you this day, that ye may <sup>l</sup>be strong, and go in and possess the land, whither ye go to possess it;

9 And <sup>m</sup>that ye may prolong your days in the land, <sup>n</sup>which the LORD swore unto your fathers to give unto them and to their seed, <sup>o</sup>a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 For the land whither thou goest in to possess it is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, <sup>p</sup>where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs:

11 <sup>q</sup>But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven:

12 A land which the LORD thy God <sup>r</sup>careth for; <sup>s</sup>the eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.

13 And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken <sup>t</sup>diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, <sup>u</sup>to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul, 14 That <sup>v</sup>I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, <sup>w</sup>the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.

15 <sup>x</sup>And I will <sup>y</sup>send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest <sup>z</sup>eat and be full.

Verse 1. Thou shalt love the Lord] Because without this there could be no obedience to the divine testimonies, and no happiness in the soul; for the heart that is destitute of the love of God is empty of all good, and consequently miserable.

Verse 8. Therefore shall ye keep all the commandments] Because God can execute such terrible judgments, and because he has given such proofs of his power and justice; and because, in similar provocations, he may be expected to act in a similar way; therefore keep his charge, that he may keep you unto everlasting life.

Verse 10. Wateredst it with thy foot] Rain scarcely ever falls in Egypt, and God supplies the lack of it by the inundations of the Nile. In order to water the grounds where the inundations do not extend, water is collected in ponds, and directed in streamlets to different parts of the field where irrigation is necessary. It is no unusual thing in the East to see a man, with a small mattock, making a little trench for the water to run by, and as he opens the passage, the water following, he uses his foot to raise up the mould against the side of this little channel, to prevent the water from being shed unnecessarily before it reaches the place of its destination. Thus he may be said to water the ground with his foot. But after all, the expression, wateredst it with thy foot, may mean no more than doing it by labour; for, as in the land of Egypt there is scarcely any rain, the watering of gardens, &c., must have been all artificial. But in Judea it was different, as there they had their proper seasons of rain. The compound word beregel, with, under, or by the foot, is used to signify any thing under the power, authority, &c., of a person; and this very meaning it has in the sixth verse, all the substance that was in their possession, is, literally, all the substance that was under their feet, that is, in their power, possession, or what they had acquired by their labour. [It is likely that the expression refers to the pumping wheels still in use in Egypt, which are worked by the feet for the drawing up of the water.]

Verse 14. The rain—in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain] By the first or former rain we are to understand that which fell in Judea about November, when they sowed their seed, and this served to moisten and prepare the ground for the vegetation of the seed. The latter rain fell about April, when the corn was well grown up, and served to fill the ears, and render them plump and perfect. Rain rarely fell in Judea at any other seasons than these. If the former rain were withheld, or not sent in due season, there could be no vegetation: if the latter rain were withheld, or not sent in its due season, there could be no full corn in the ear, and consequently no harvest. Of what consequence then was it that they should have their rain in due not deceived, and ye turn aside, and *serve other gods, and worship them;

17 And then <sup>b</sup> the LORD's wrath be kindled against you, and he <sup>c</sup> shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest <sup>d</sup> ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.

18 Therefore <sup>e</sup> shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and <sup>f</sup> bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

19 <sup>g</sup> And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

20 <sup>h</sup> And thou shalt write them upon the doorposts of thine house, and upon thy gates:

21 That <sup>i</sup> your days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the LORD swore unto your fathers to give them, <sup>j</sup> as the days of heaven upon the earth.

22 For if <sup>k</sup> ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you, to do them, to love the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, and <sup>l</sup> to cleave unto him; season! God, by promising this provided they were obedient, and threatening to withhold it should they be disobedient, shows that it is not a general providence that directs those things, but that the very rain of heaven falls by particular direction, and the showers are often regulated by an especial providence.

23 Then will the LORD <sup>m</sup> drive out all these nations from before you, and ye shall <sup>n</sup> possess greater nations and mightier than yourselves.

Verse 24. From the river] Euphrates, which was on the East, to the uttermost sea—the Mediterranean, which lay westward of the promised land. This promise, notwithstanding the many provocations of the Israelites, was fulfilled in the time of Solomon, for "he reigned over all the kings from the river (Euphrates) even unto the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt."

Verse 26. Behold, I set before you—a blessing and a curse] If God had not put it in the power of this people either to obey or disobey; if they had not had a free will, over which they had complete authority, to use it either in the way of willing or nilling; could God, with any propriety, have given such precepts as these, sanctioned with such promises and threatenings? A STONE is not rewardable because, in obedience to the laws of gravitation, it always tends to the centre; nor is it punishable because, in being removed from that centre, in its tending or falling towards it again it takes away the life of a man.

That God has given man a free, self-determining WILL, which cannot be forced by any power but that which is omnipotent, and which God himself never will force, is declared in the most formal manner through the whole of the sacred writings. No argument can affect this, while the Bible is considered as a divine revelation; no sophistry can explain away its evidence, as long as the accountableness of man for his conduct is admitted, and as long as the eternal bounds of moral good and evil remain, and the essential distinctions between vice and virtue exist.

Verse 29. Thou shalt put the blessing upon Mount Gerizim, and the curse upon Mount Ebal.] The etymology of these names may be supposed to cast some light on this institution. Gerizim, from garaz, to cut, cut off, cut down; hence gerizim, the cutters down, fellers, and reapers or harvest-men, this mountain being supposed to have its name from its 26 <sup>t</sup> Behold, I set before you this day a blessing and a curse;

27 <sup>u</sup> A blessing, if ye obey the commandments of the LORD your God, which I command you this day:

28 And a <sup>v</sup> curse, if ye will not obey the commandments of the LORD your God, but turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods, which ye have not known.

29 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD thy God hath brought thee in unto the land whither thou goest to possess it, that thou shalt put <sup>w</sup> the blessing upon Mount Gerizim, and the curse upon Mount Ebal.

30 Are they not on the other side Jordan, by the way where the sun goeth down, in the land of the Canaanites, which dwell in the champaign over against Gilgal, <sup>x</sup> beside the plains of Moreh?

31 <sup>y</sup> For ye shall pass over Jordan to go in to possess the land which the LORD your God giveth you, and ye shall possess it, and dwell therein.

32 And ye shall observe <sup>z</sup> to do all the statutes and judgments which I set before you this day.

great fertility, or the abundance of the crops it yielded, which is a possible case. Of ebal or eybal the root is not found in Hebrew; but in Arabic abal signifies rough, rugged, curled, &c.; and abal, from the same root, signifies white stones, and a mountain in which such stones are found; alabal, the mount of white stones. And as it is supposed that the mountain had this name because of its barrenness, on this metaphorical interpretation the sense of the passage would appear to be the following: God will so superintend the land, and have it continually under the eye of his watchful providence, that no change can happen in it but according to his divine counsel, so that its fertility shall ever be the consequence of the faithful obedience of its inhabitants, and a proof of the blessing of God upon it; on the contrary, its barrenness shall be a proof that the people have departed from their God, and that his curse has in consequence fallen upon the land. That Gerizim is very fruitful, and that Ebal is very barren, is the united testimony of all who have travelled in those parts. [These two mountains were selected because they were opposite to one another—and not because of the fertility of the one, and the barrenness of the other; for, as seen from the valley beneath, the sides of both are equally bare and sterile.]

That the land of Judea was naturally very fertile, can scarcely be supposed by any who consider the accounts given of it by travellers; with the exception of a few districts, the whole land is dry, stony, and barren, and particularly all the southern parts of Judea, and all the environs of Jerusalem, most of which are represented as absolutely incapable of cultivation. How then could it ever support its vast number of inhabitants? By the especial providence of God. While God kept that people under his continual protection, their land was a paradise; they lent to all nations and borrowed from none. What has it been since? A desolitude, because that especial blessing no longer descends upon it. No land, says Calmet, was more fertile while under the benediction of God; none more barren when under his curse. The land itself, in its present state, is an ample proof of the authenticity of the Pentateuch.

CHAPTER XII.

All monuments of idolatry in the promised land to be destroyed, 1-3; and God's service to be duly performed, 4-7. The difference between the performance of that service in the wilderness and in the promised land, 8-11. The people are to be happy in all their religious observances, 12. The offerings must be brought to the place which God appoints, and no blood is to be eaten, 13-16. The tithe of corn, wine, oil, &c., to be eaten in the place that God shall choose, 17, 18. The Levite must not be forsaken, 19. All clean beasts may be eaten, but the blood must be poured out before the Lord, and be eaten on no pretence whatever, 20-25. Of vows, burnt-offerings, &c., 26, 27. These precepts are to be carefully obeyed, 28. Cautions against the abominations of the heathen, 29-31. Nothing to be added to or diminished from the word of God, 32.

THESE <sup>a</sup>are the statutes and judgments which ye shall observe to do in the land which the LORD God of thy fathers giveth thee to possess it, <sup>b</sup>all the days that ye live upon the earth.

2 <sup>c</sup>Ye shall utterly destroy all the places wherein the nations which ye shall <sup>d</sup>possess served their gods, <sup>e</sup>upon the high mountains, and upon the hills, and under every green tree;

3 And <sup>f</sup>ye shall <sup>g</sup>overthrow their altars, and break their pillars, and burn their groves with fire; and ye shall hew down the graven images of their gods, and destroy the names of them out of that place.

4 <sup>h</sup>Ye shall not do so unto the LORD your God.

5 But unto the place which the LORD your God shall <sup>i</sup>choose out of all your tribes to put his name there, even unto his habitation shall ye seek, and thither thou shalt come:

6 And <sup>j</sup>thither ye shall bring your burnt-offerings, and your sacrifices, and your <sup>k</sup>tithes, and heave-offerings of your hand, and your vows, and your free-will offerings and the firstlings of your herds and of your flocks:

7 And <sup>l</sup>there ye shall eat before the LORD your God, and <sup>m</sup>ye shall rejoice in all that ye put your hand unto, ye and your households, wherein the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.

8 Ye shall not do after all the things that we do here this day, <sup>n</sup>every man whatsoever is right in his own eyes.

9 For ye are not as yet come to the rest and to the inheritance which the LORD your God giveth you.

10 But when <sup>o</sup>ye go over Jordan, and dwell in the land which the LORD your God giveth you to inherit, and when he giveth you rest from all your enemies round about, so that ye dwell in safety;

11 Then there shall be <sup>p</sup>a place which the LORD your God shall choose, to cause his name to dwell there; thither shall ye bring all that I command you; your burnt-offerings, and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave-offering of your hand, and all <sup>q</sup>your choice vows which ye vow unto the LORD:

12 And <sup>r</sup>ye shall rejoice before the LORD your God, ye and your sons, and your daughters, and your men-servants, and your maid-servants, and the Levite that is within your gates: forasmuch as <sup>s</sup>he hath no part or inheritance with you.

13 <sup>t</sup>Take heed to thyself that thou offer not thy burnt-offerings in every place that thou seest:

14 <sup>u</sup>But in the place which the LORD shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee.

15 Notwithstanding <sup>v</sup>thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee: <sup>w</sup>the unclean and the clean may eat thereof, <sup>x</sup>as of the roebuck, and as of the hart.

16 <sup>y</sup>Only ye shall not eat the blood; ye shall pour it upon the earth as water.

17 Thou mayest not eat within thy gates the tithe

Verse 8. Ye shall overthrow their altars] Where unholy sacrifices have been offered; and break their pillars, probably meaning statues and representations of their gods cut out of stone; and burn their groves, such as those about the temple of Ashtaroth, the Canaanitish Venus, whose impure rites were practised in different parts of the inclosures or groves round her temples; and ye shall hew down the graven images, probably implying all images carved out of wood; and destroy the names of them, which were no doubt at first graven on the stones, and carved on the trees, and then applied to the surrounding districts. In various instances the names of whole mountains, valleys, and districts, were borrowed from the gods worshipped there.

Verse 14. The place which the Lord shall choose] To prevent idolatry and bring about a perfect uniformity in the divine worship, which at that time was essentially necessary; because every rite and ceremony had a determinate meaning, and pointed out the good things which were to come, therefore one place must be established where those rites and ceremonies should be carefully and punctually observed.

Had it not been so, every man would have formed his worship according to his own mind, and the whole beauty and importance of the grand representative system would have been destroyed, and the Messiah and the glories of his kingdom could not have been seen through the medium of the Jewish ritual. For uniformity in every part of the divine worship the same necessity does not now exist; because that which was typified is come, and the shadows have all fled away. Yet, when it can be obtained, how desirable is it that all sincere Christians should with one mouth, as well as with one heart, glorify their common Lord and Saviour!

Verse 15. Thou mayest kill and eat flesh in all thy gates] With the proviso that the blood be poured out on the ground. 1. The blood should not be eaten. 2. It should be poured out by way of sacrifice. I think this is the meaning: and not that they should pour out the blood with as little ceremony and respect as they poured water upon the ground, which is the meaning according to Calmet and others.

The roebuck, and—the hart.] It is very likely that by tsabi the antelope is meant; and by ayal, the hart or deer. There of thy corn or of thy wine, or of thy oil, or the firstlings of thy herds or of thy flock, nor any of thy vows which thou vowest, nor thy freewill-offerings, or heave-offering of thine hand :

18 * But thou must eat them before the LORD thy God in the place which the LORD thy God shall choose, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite that is within thy gates ; and thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God in all that thou puttest thine hands unto.

19 <sup>b</sup> Take heed to thyself that thou forsake not the Levite <sup>c</sup> as long as thou livest upon the earth.

20 When the LORD thy God shall enlarge thy border, <sup>d</sup> as he hath promised thee, and thou shalt say, I will eat flesh (because thy soul longeth to eat flesh) ; thou mayest eat flesh, whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

21 If the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to put his name there be too far from thee, then thou shalt kill of thy herd and of thy flock, which the LORD hath given thee, as I have commanded thee, and thou shalt eat in thy gates whatsoever thy soul lusteth after.

22 * Even as the roebuck and the hart is eaten, so thou shalt eat them : the unclean and the clean shall eat of them alike.

23 ' Only <sup>e</sup> be sure that thou eat not the blood : <sup>f</sup> for the blood <sup>g</sup> is the life ; and thou mayest not eat the life with the flesh.

24 Thou shalt not eat it ; thou shalt pour it upon the earth as water.

25 Thou shalt not eat it ; <sup>h</sup> that it may go well were cases in which they might kill and eat in all their gates—cities and dwellings, clean wild beasts, for these being taken in hunting, and frequently shot by arrows, their blood could not be poured out at the altar. Therefore the command appears to take in only such tame beasts as were used for food.

Verse 19. Forsake not the Levite] These had no inheritance, and were to live by the sanctuary : if therefore the offerings were withheld by which the Levites were supported, they of course must perish. Those who have devoted themselves to the service of God in ministering to the salvation of the souls of men, should certainly be furnished at least with all the necessaries of life. Those who withhold this from 26 Only thy <sup>j</sup> holy things which thou hast, and <sup>k</sup> thy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the LORD shall choose :

27 And <sup>l</sup> thou shalt offer thy burnt-offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God : and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.

28 Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, <sup>m</sup> that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the LORD thy God.

30 Take heed to thyself <sup>p</sup> that thou be not snared <sup>q</sup> by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee ; and that thou inquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods ? even so will I do likewise.

31 * Thou shalt not do so unto the LORD thy God : for every <sup>r</sup> abomination to the LORD, which he hateth, have they done unto their gods ; for <sup>s</sup> even their sons and their daughters they have burnt in the fire to their gods.

Of false prophets and their lying signs, 1-6. Of those who endeavour to entice and seduce people to idolatry, 7, 8. The punishment of such, 9-11. Of cities perverted from the pure worship of God, 12-14. How that city is to be treated, 15. All the spoil of it to be destroyed, 16. Promises to them who obey these directions, 17, 18.

IF there arise among you a prophet, or a <sup>a</sup>dreamer of dreams, <sup>b</sup>and giveth thee a sign or a wonder,

2 And <sup>c</sup>the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them;

3 Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the LORD your God <sup>d</sup>proveth you, to know whether ye love the LORD your God with all your heart, and with all your soul.

4 Ye shall <sup>e</sup>walk after the LORD your God, and fear him, and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him, and <sup>f</sup>cleave unto him.

5 And <sup>g</sup>that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams, shall be put to death: because he hath <sup>h</sup>spoken to turn you away from the LORD your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed you out of the house of bondage, to thrust thee out of the way which the LORD thy God commanded thee to walk in. <sup>i</sup>So shalt thou put the evil away from the midst of thee.

6 If thy brother, the son of thy mother, or thy son, or thy daughter, or <sup>k</sup>the wife of thy bosom, or thy friend, <sup>l</sup>which is as thine own soul, entice thee secretly, saying, Let us go and serve other gods which thou hast not known, thou, nor thy fathers;

7 Namely, of the gods of the people which are round about you, nigh unto thee, or far off from thee, from the one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth:

8 Thou shalt <sup>m</sup>not consent unto him, nor hearken unto him; neither shall thine eye pity him, neither shalt thou spare, neither shalt thou conceal him:

9 But <sup>n</sup>thou shalt surely kill him; <sup>o</sup>thine hand shall be first upon him, to put him to death, and afterwards the hand of all the people.

10 And thou shalt stone him with stones, that he die; because he hath sought to thrust thee away from the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of <sup>p</sup>bondage.

11 And <sup>q</sup>all Israel shall hear, and fear, and shall do no more any such wickedness as this is among you.

12 <sup>r</sup>If thou shalt hear say in one of thy cities, which the LORD thy God hath given thee to dwell there, saying,

13 Certain men, <sup>s</sup>the children of Belial, <sup>t</sup>are gone out from among you, and have <sup>u</sup>withdrawn the inhabitants of their city, saying, <sup>v</sup>Let us go and serve other gods, which ye have not known;

14 Then shalt thou inquire, and make search, and ask diligently; and behold, if it be truth, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought among you;

15 Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants of that city with the edge of the sword, <sup>w</sup>destroying it utterly, and all that is therein, and the cattle thereof, with the edge of the sword.

16 And thou shalt gather all the spoil of it into the midst of the street thereof, and shalt <sup>x</sup>burn with fire the city, and all the spoil thereof every whit, for the LORD thy God: and it shall be <sup>y</sup>an heap for ever; it shall not be built again.

17 And <sup>z</sup>there shall cleave nought of the <sup>aa</sup>cursed thing to thine hand: that the LORD may <sup>ab</sup>turn from the fierceness of his anger, and shew thee mercy, and have compassion upon thee, and multiply thee, <sup>ac</sup>as he hath sworn unto thy fathers;

18 When thou shalt hearken to the voice of the LORD thy God, <sup>ad</sup>to keep all his commandments which I command thee this day, to do that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God.

Verse 1. If there arise among you a prophet] Any pretending to have a divine influence, so as to be able perfectly to direct others in the way of salvation; or a dreamer of dreams—one who pretends that some deity has spoken to him in the night-season; and giveth thee a sign, oth, what appears to be a miraculous proof of his mission; or a wonder, mopheth, some type or representation of what he wishes to bring you over to: as some have pretended to have received a consecrated image from heaven; hence the origin of the Palladium, Numa's Shields, and many of the deities among the Hindoos. But here the word seems to mean some portentous sign, such as an eclipse, which he who knew when it would take place might predict to the people, who know nothing of the matter, and thereby accredit his pretensions.

Verse 3. The Lord your God proveth you] God permits such impostors to arise to try the faith of his followers, and to put their religious experience to the test; for he who experimentally knows God cannot be drawn away after idols. He who has no experimental knowledge of God, may believe any thing. Experience of the truths contained in the word of God can alone preserve any man from Deism, or a false religion. They who have not this are a prey to the pretended prophet and to the dreamer of dreams.

Verse 6. If thy brother—or thy son] Because this was the highest offence that could be committed against God, and the most destructive to society; hence the severest laws were enacted against it.

Verse 13. Children of Belial] Persons good for nothing to themselves or others, and capable of nothing but mischief.

Verse 15. Thou shalt surely smite the inhabitants] If one city were permitted to practise idolatry, the evil would soon spread, therefore the contagion must be destroyed in its birth.

Verse 17. And there shall cleave nought of the cursed thing] As God did not permit them to take the spoils of these idolatrous cities, they could be under no temptation to make war upon them. It could only be done through a merely religious motive, in obedience to the command of God, as they could have no profit by the subversion of such places. How few religious wars would there ever have been in the world had they been regulated by this principle, "Thou shalt neither extend thy territory, nor take any spoils!"

CHAPTER XIV.

The Israelites are not to adopt superstitious customs in mourning, 1, 2. The different kinds of clean and unclean animals, 3-20. Nothing to be eaten that dieth of itself, 21. Concerning offerings which, from distance, cannot be carried to the altar of God, and which may be turned into money, 22-26. The Levite is not to be forsaken, 27. The third year's tithe for the Levite, stranger, widow, &c., 28, 29.

YE are <sup>a</sup> the children of the LORD your God: <sup>b</sup> ye shall not cut yourselves, nor make any baldness between your eyes for the dead.

2 <sup>c</sup> For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God, and the LORD hath chosen thee to be a peculiar people unto himself, above all the nations that are upon the earth.

3 <sup>d</sup> Thou shalt not eat any abominable thing.

4 <sup>e</sup> These are the beasts which ye shall eat: the ox, the sheep, and the goat.

5 The hart, and the roebuck, and the fallow deer, and the wild goat, and the <sup>f</sup> pygarg <sup>g</sup>, and the wild ox, and the chamois.

6 And every beast that parteth the hoof, and cleaveth the cleft into two claws, and cheweth the cud among the beasts, that ye shall eat.

7 Nevertheless these ye shall not eat of them that chew the cud, or of them that divide the cloven hoof; as the camel, and the hare, and the coney; for they chew the cud, but divide not the hoof; therefore they are unclean unto you.

8 And the swine, because it divideth the hoof, yet cheweth not the cud, it is unclean unto you: ye shall not eat of their flesh, <sup>h</sup> nor touch their dead carcase.

9 <sup>i</sup> These ye shall eat of all that are in the waters: all that have fins and scales shall ye eat:

10 And whatsoever hath not fins and scales ye may not eat: it is unclean unto you.

11 Of all clean birds ye shall eat.

12 <sup>j</sup> But these are they of which ye shall not eat: the eagle, and the ossifrage, and the ospray, 13 And the glede, and the kite, and the vulture after his kind.

14 And every raven after his kind.

15 And the owl, and the night-hawk, and the cuckow, and the hawk after his kind.

16 The little owl, and the great owl, and the swan,

17 And the pelican, and the gier eagle, and the cormorant,

18 And the stork, and the heron after her kind, and the lapwing, and the bat,

19 And <sup>k</sup> every creeping thing that flieth is unclean unto you: <sup>l</sup> they shall not be eaten.

20 But of all clean fowls ye may eat.

21 <sup>m</sup> Ye shall not eat of any thing that dieth of itself: thou shalt give it unto the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it; or thou mayest sell it unto an alien: <sup>n</sup> for thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God. <sup>o</sup> Thou shalt not see the kid in his mother's milk.

22 <sup>p</sup> Thou shalt truly tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year,

Verse 1. Ye are the children of the Lord] The very highest character that can be conferred on any created beings; ye shall not cut yourselves, i.e. their hair, for it was a custom among idolatrous nations to consecrate their hair to their deities, though they sometimes also made incisions in their flesh.

Verse 4. The ox] This term includes all clean animals of the beeve kind; not only the ox, properly so called, but also the bull, the cow, heifer, and calf.

The sheep] Including the ram, the wether, the ewe, and the lamb.

The goat] Including the he-goat, she-goat, and kid. The words in the text, seh chesabim, signify the lamb or young of sheep; and seh izzim, the young or kid of goats: but this is a Hebrew idiom which signifies every creature of the genus, as ben enosh and ben adam, son of man, signify any human being.

The flesh of these animals is universally allowed to be the most wholesome and nutritive. They live on the very best vegetables; and having several stomachs, their food is well concocted, and the chyle formed from it the most pure, because the best elaborated, as it is well refined before it enters into the blood.

Verse 5. The hart] Aiyal, the deer, according to Dr. Shaw.

The roebuck] Generally supposed to be the antelope. It has round twisted spiral horns, hairy tufts on the knees, browses on tender shoots, lives in hilly countries, is fond of climbing rocks, and is remarkable for its beautiful black eyes. The flesh is good and well-flavoured.

The fallow deer] Supposed to mean, not the fallow deer, but the bubalus or buffalo, a sullen, malevolent, and spiteful animal, capricious, ferocious, and every way brutal. According to 1 Kings iv. 23, this was one of the animals which was daily served up at the table of Solomon. Though the flesh of the buffalo is not considered very delicious, yet in the countries where it abounds it is eaten as frequently by all classes of persons as the ox is in England.

The wild goat] It is not easy to tell what creature is intended by the akko. The word is found nowhere else in the Hebrew Bible.

The pygarg] As this word is nowhere else used, we cannot tell what animal is meant by it. The word pygarg, literally signifies white buttocks, and is applied to a kind of eagle with a white tail; but here it evidently means a quadruped. It was probably some kind of goat, common and well known in Judea.

The wild ox] This is supposed to be the oryx of the Greeks, which is a species of large stag.

The chamois] This was probably a species of goat or deer, but of what kind we know not; that it cannot mean the chamois is evident from this circumstance, "that the chamois inhabits only the regions of snow and ice, and cannot bear the heat." The Septuagint and Vulgate translate it the carnelopard, but this creature is only found in the torrid zone, and probably was never seen in Judea; consequently could never be prescribed as a clean animal, to be used as ordinary food. To ascertain the natural history of the Bible is a hopeless case. Of a few of its animals and vegetables we are comparatively certain, but of the great majority we know almost nothing.

Verse 13. The vulture after his kind] The word daah, is improperly translated vulture, Lev. xi. 14, and means a kite or glede.

Verse 21. Thou shalt not see the kid in his mother's milk] Mr. Calmet thinks that this precept refers to the paschal lamb only, which was not to be offered to God till it was weaned from its mother.

23 * And thou shalt eat before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose to place his name there, the tithe of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the <sup>b</sup>firstlings of thy herds and of thy flocks: that thou mayest learn to fear the LORD thy God always.

24 And if the way be too long for thee, so that thou art not able to carry it; or <sup>c</sup>if the place be too far from thee, which the LORD thy God shall choose to set his name there, when the LORD thy God hath blessed thee:

25 Then shalt thou turn it into money, and bind up the money in thine hand, and shalt go unto the place which the LORD thy God shall choose.

26 And thou shalt bestow that money for whatsoever thy soul lusteth after, for oxen, or for sheep, Verse 22. Thou shalt surely tithe] Meaning the second tithe which themselves were to eat, ver. 23, for there was a first tithe that was given to the Levites, out of which they paid a tenth part to the priests, Num. xviii. 24-28, Neh. x. 37, 38. Then of that which remained, the owners separated a second tithe, which they ate before the Lord the first and second year; and in the third year it was given to the Levites and to the poor, Deut. xiv. 28, 29. In the fourth and fifth years it was eaten again by the owners, and in the sixth year was given to the poor. The seventh year was a sabbath to the land, and then all things were common.

or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul <sup>a</sup>desireth: * and thou shalt eat there before the LORD thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou, and thine household, 27 And <sup>f</sup>the Levite that is within thy gates, thou shalt not forsake him; for <sup>g</sup>he hath no part nor inheritance with thee.

28 <sup>h</sup>At the end of three years, thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates;

29 <sup>i</sup>And the Levite (because <sup>j</sup>he hath no part nor inheritance with thee), and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, which are within thy gates, shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; that <sup>k</sup>the LORD thy God may bless thee, in all the work of thine hand which thou doest.

Verse 26. Or for strong drink] This one verse sufficiently shows that the Mosaic law made ample provision for the comfort and happiness of the people.

Verse 29. And the Levite (because he hath no part nor inheritance) And hence much of his support depended on the mere freewill-offerings of the people. God chose to make his ministers thus dependent on the people, that they might be induced (among other motives) to labour for their spiritual profiting, that the people, thus blessed under their ministry, might feel it their duty and privilege to support and render them comfortable.

CHAPTER XV.

The sabbatical year of release, 1. The manner in which this release shall take place, 2-5. Of lending to the poor, and the disposition in which it should be done, 6-11. Of the Hebrew servant who has served six years, and who shall be dismissed well furnished, 12-15. The ceremony of boring the ear, when the servant wishes to continue with his master, 16-18. Of the firstlings of the flock and herd, 19, 20. Nothing shall be offered that has any blemish, 21. The sacrifice to be eaten both by the clean and unclean, except the blood, which is never to be eaten, but poured out upon the ground, 22, 23.

AT the end of <sup>a</sup>every seven years thou shalt make a release.

2 And this is the manner of the release:

Every <sup>b</sup>creditor that lendeth ought unto his neighbour shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD's release.

3 <sup>c</sup>Of a foreigner thou mayest exact it again: but that which is thine with thy brother, thine hand shall release:

4 <sup>d</sup>Save when there shall be no poor among you; <sup>e</sup>for the LORD shall greatly bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, for an inheritance to possess it:

7 If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren, within any of thy gates in thy land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, <sup>i</sup>thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother:

8 <sup>j</sup>But thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth.

Verse 9. Beware that there be not a thought in thy wicked heart] Thy belial heart, that is, thy good-for-nothing or unprofitable heart.

And thine eye be evil] An evil eye signifies a covetous disposition. Evil eye is by our Lord opposed to single eye, i.e. a person of a liberal, benevolent mind. Covetousness darkens the soul; liberality and benevolence enlighten it.

And he cry unto the Lord against thee] What a consola-

11 For i the poor shall never cease out of the land: therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy, in thy land.

12 And j if thy brother, an Hebrew man, or an Hebrew woman, be sold unto thee, and serve thee six years; then in the seventh year thou shalt let him go free from thee.

13 And when thou sendest him out free from thee, thou shalt not let him go away empty:

14 Thou shalt furnish him liberally out of thy flock, and out of thy floor, and out of thy winepress: of that wherewith the LORD thy God hath k blessed thee thou shalt give unto him.

Verse 11. For the poor shall never cease out of the land] To this passage our Lord appears to allude, Mark xiv. 7: For ye have the poor with you always. God leaves these in mercy among men to exercise the feelings of compassion, tenderness, mercy, &c. And without occasions afforded to exercise these, man would soon become a Stoic or a brute.

Verse 13. Thou shalt not let him go away empty] Because during the time he served thee, he made no property for himself, having been always honest towards thee; and now when he leaves thee, he has nothing to begin the world with.

16 And it shall be, i if he say unto thee, I will not go away from thee; because he loveth thee and thine house, because he is well with thee:

17 Then thou shalt take an aul, and thrust it through his ear unto the door, and he shall be thy servant for ever. And also unto thy maid-servant thou shalt do likewise.

18 It shall not seem hard unto thee, when thou sendest him away free from thee; for he hath been worth m a double hired servant to thee, in serving thee six years: and the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all that thou doest.

19 n All the firstling males that come of thy herd and of thy flock thou shalt sanctify unto the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work with the firstling of thy bullock, nor shear the firstling of thy sheep.

20 o Thou shalt eat it before the LORD thy God, year by year, in the place which the LORD shall choose, thou and thy household.

21 p And if there be any blemish therein, as if it be lame, or blind, or have any ill blemish, thou shalt not sacrifice it unto the LORD thy God.

22 Thou shalt eat it within thy gates: q the unclean and the clean person shall eat it alike, as the roebuck, and as the hart.

23 r Only thou shalt not eat the blood thereof; thou shalt pour it upon the ground as water.

Verse 20. Thou shalt eat it—in the place which the Lord shall choose] Thus God in his mercy made their duty and interest go hand in hand. And in every case God acts thus with his creatures; well, therefore, might Satan ask, Doth Job serve God for nought? No! nor does God design that any man should.

Verse 21. If there be any blemish] God will have both a perfect priest and a perfect offering.

8 Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread; and <sup>g</sup> on the seventh day shall be a <sup>h</sup> solemn assembly to the LORD thy God: thou shalt do no work therein.

9 <sup>i</sup> Seven weeks shalt thou number unto thee: begin to number the seven weeks from such time as thou beginnest to put the sickle to the corn.

10 And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God, with <sup>j</sup> a tribute of a freewill-offering of thine hand, which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, <sup>k</sup> according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee.

11 And <sup>l</sup> thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are among you, in the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to place his name there.

12 <sup>m</sup> And thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman in Egypt: and thou shalt observe and do these statutes.

13 <sup>n</sup> Thou shalt observe the feast of tabernacles seven days, after that thou hast gathered in thy <sup>o</sup> corn and thy wine:

14 And <sup>p</sup> thou shalt rejoice in thy feast, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy man-servant, and thy maid-servant, and the Levite, the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates.

15 <sup>q</sup> Seven days shalt thou keep a solemn feast unto the LORD thy God, in the place which the LORD shall choose: because the LORD thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thine hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice.

16 <sup>r</sup> Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God, in the place which he shall choose: in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles: and <sup>s</sup> they shall not appear before the LORD empty:

17 Every man shall give <sup>t</sup> as he is able, according to the blessing of the LORD thy God which he hath given thee.

18 <sup>u</sup> Judges and officers shalt thou make thee in all thy gates, which the LORD thy God giveth thee, throughout thy tribes: and they shall judge the people with just judgments.

20 <sup>z</sup> That which is altogether just shalt thou follow, that thou mayest <sup>aa</sup> live, and inherit the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

22 <sup>ac</sup> Neither shalt thou set thee up any <sup>ad</sup> image which the LORD thy God hateth.

out leaven, it was unsavoury, and put them in mind of their afflictive bondage in Egypt.

Verse 11. Thou shalt rejoice] The offerings of the Israelites were to be eaten with festivity, communicated to their friends with liberality, and bestowed on the poor with great generosity, that they might partake with them in these sacred repasts with joy before the Lord. To answer these views it was necessary to eat the flesh while it was fresh, as in that climate putrefaction soon took place; therefore they were commanded to let nothing remain until the morning, ver. 4.

Verse 18. Judges and officers shalt thou make] JUDGES, shophetim, among the Hebrews, were probably the same as our magistrates or justices of the peace. OFFICERS, shoterim, seem to have been the same as our inquest sergeants, beadles, &c., whose office it was to go into the houses, shops, &c. and examine weights, measures, and the civil conduct of the people. When they found any thing amiss, they brought the person offending before the magistrate, and he was punished by the officer on the spot. They seem also to have acted as heralds in the army, chap. xx. 5.

Verse 21. Thou shalt not plant thee a grove, &c.] We have already seen that groves were planted about idol temples for the purposes of the obscene worship performed in them. On this account God would have no groves or thickets about his altar, that there might be no room for suspicion that any thing contrary to the strictest purity was transacted there. Every part of the divine worship was publicly performed, for the purpose of general edification.

CHAPTER XVII.

All sacrifices to be without blemish, 1. Of persons convicted of idolatry and their punishment, 2-7. Difficult matters in judgment to be laid before the priests and judges, and to be determined by them; and all to submit to their decision, 8-13. The king that may be chosen to be one of their brethren; no stranger to be appointed to that office, 14, 15. He shall not multiply horses to himself, nor cause the people to return unto Egypt, 16. Nor multiply wives, money, &c., 17. He shall write a copy of the law for his own use, and read and study it all his days, that his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, 18-20.

THOU shalt not sacrifice unto the LORD thy God any bullock or sheep wherein is blemish, or any evil-favouredness: for that is an abomination unto the LORD thy God.

2 If there be found among you, within any of thy gates which the LORD thy God giveth thee, man or woman that hath wrought wickedness in the sight of the LORD thy God, in transgressing his covenant,

3 And hath gone and served other gods and worshipped them, either the sun, or moon, or any of the host of heaven, which I have not commanded:

4 And it be told thee, and thou hast heard of it, and inquired diligently, and, behold, it be true, and the thing certain, that such abomination is wrought in Israel:

5 Then shalt thou bring forth that man or that woman, which have committed that wicked thing, unto thy gates, even that man or that woman, and shalt stone them with stones, till they die.

6 At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death.

7 The hands of the witnesses shall be first upon him to put him to death, and afterward the hands of all the people. So thou shalt put the evil away from among you.

8 If there arise a matter too hard for thee in judgment, between blood and blood, between plea and plea, and between stroke and stroke, being matters of controversy within thy gates: then shalt thou arise, and get thee up into the place the LORD thy God shall choose:

9 And thou shalt come unto the priests, the Levites, and unto the judge that shall be in those days, and inquire; and they shall shew thee the sentence of judgment:

10 And thou shalt do according to the sentence which they of that place which the LORD shall choose shall shew thee; and thou shalt observe to do according to all that they inform thee:

11 According to the sentence of the law which they shall teach thee, and according to the judgment which they shall tell thee, thou shalt do; thou shalt not decline from the sentence which they shall shew thee, to the right hand, nor to the left.

12 And the man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the priest, that standeth to minister there, before the LORD thy God, or unto the judge, even that man shall die; and thou shalt put away the evil from Israel.

13 And all the people shall hear, and fear, and do no more presumptuously.

14 When thou art come unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, and shalt possess it, and shalt dwell therein, and shalt say, I will set a king over me, like as all the nations that are about me;

15 Thou shalt in any wise set him king over thee whom the LORD thy God shall choose: one from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee: thou mayest not set a stranger over thee, which is not thy brother.

16 But he shall not multiply horses to himself, nor cause the people to return to Egypt, to the end that he should multiply horses: forasmuch as the LORD hath said unto you, Ye shall henceforth return no more that way.

Verse 1. Wherein is blemish] God must not have that offered to him which thou wouldst not use thyself. This not only refers to the perfect sacrifice offered by Christ Jesus, but to that sincerity and uprightness of heart which God requires in all those who approach him in the way of worship.

Verse 4. If it be told thee] In a private way by any confidential person. And thou hast heard of it; so that it appears to be notorious, very likely to be true, and publicly scandalous. And hast inquired diligently—sought to find out the truth of the report by the most careful examination of persons reporting circumstances of the case, &c. And, behold, it be true—the report is not founded on vague rumour, hearsay, or malice. And the thing certain—substantiated by the fullest evidence. Then shalt thou bring forth that man, ver. 5. As the charge of idolatry was the most solemn and awful that could be brought against an Israelite, because it affected his life, therefore God required that the charge should be substantiated by the most unequivocal facts, and the most competent witnesses. Hence all the precautions mentioned in the fourth verse must be carefully used in order to arrive at so affecting and so awful a truth.

Verse 6. Two witnesses] ONE might be deceived, or be prejudiced or malicious; therefore God required two substantial witnesses for the support of the charge.

Verse 8. If there arise a matter too hard for thee] These directions are given to the common magistrates, who might not be able to judge of or apply the law in all cases that might be brought before them. The priests and Levites, who were lawyers by birth and continual practice, were reasonably considered as the best qualified to decide on difficult points.

Verse 12. The man that will do presumptuously] The man who refused to abide by this final determination forfeited his life, as being then in a state of rebellion against the highest authority, and consequently the public could have no pledge for his conduct.

Verse 15. One from among thy brethren shalt thou set king over thee] It was on the ground of this command that the Jews proposed that insidious question to our Lord, Is it lawful to give tribute to Cæsar, OR NO? Mat. xxii. 17; for 17 Neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that <sup>a</sup>his heart turn not away: neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold.

18 <sup>b</sup>And it shall be, when he sitteth upon the throne of his kingdom, that he shall write him a copy of this law in a book, out of <sup>c</sup>that which is before the priests the Levites:

19 And <sup>d</sup>it shall be with him, and he shall read they were then under the authority of a foreign power. Had Christ said Yes, then they would have condemned him by this law; had he said No, then they would have accused him to Caesar.

Verse 16. He shall not multiply horses] As horses appear to have been generally furnished by Egypt, God prohibits these, 1. Lest there should be such commerce with Egypt as might lead to idolatry. 2. Lest the people might depend on a well-appointed cavalry as a means of security, and so cease from trusting in the strength and protection of God. And 3. That they might not be tempted to extend their dominion by means of cavalry, and so get scattered among the surrounding idolatrous nations, and thus cease, in process of time, to be that distinct and separate people which God intended they should be, and without which the prophecies relative to the Messiah could not be known to have their due and full accomplishment.

Verse 17. Neither shall he multiply wives] For this would necessarily lead to foreign alliances, and be the means of introducing the manners and customs of other nations, and their idolatry also. Solomon sinned against this precept, and brought ruin on himself and on the land by it; see 1 Kings xi. 4.

Verse 18. He shall write him a copy of this law] An iteration or duplicate of this law; translated by the Septuagint, therein all the days of his life: that he may learn to fear the LORD his God, to keep all the words of this law and these statutes, to do them:

20 That his heart be not lifted up above his brethren, and that he <sup>a</sup>turn not aside from the commandment, to the right hand, or to the left: to the end that he may prolong his days in his kingdom, he, and his children, in the midst of Israel.

xxii. 8.—<sup>a</sup>Josh. i. 8. Ps. cxix. 97, 98.—Ch. v. 32. 1 Kings xv. 6.

this deuteronomy. From this version the Vulgate Latin and all the modern Versions have taken the name of this book; and from the original word the Jews call it Mishneh.

Out of that which is before the priests the Levites] It is likely this means, that the copy which the king was to write out was to be taken from the autograph kept in the tabernacle before the Lord, from which, as a standard, every copy was taken, and with which doubtless every copy was compared; and it is probable that the priests and Levites had the revising of every copy that was taken off, in order to prevent errors from creeping into the sacred text.

Verse 19. And it shall be with him, &c.] It was the surest way to bring the king to an acquaintance with the divine law to oblige him to write out a fair copy of it with his own hand, in which he was to read daily. This was essentially necessary, as these laws of God were all permanent, and no Israelitish king could make any new law, the kings of this people being ever considered as only the vicegerents of Jehovah.

Verse 20. He, and his children, in the midst of Israel.] From this verse it has been inferred that the crown in Israel was designed to be hereditary, and this is very probable; for long experience has proved to almost all the nations of the world that hereditary succession in the regal government is, on the whole, the safest, and best calculated to secure the public tranquillity.

CHAPTER XVIII.

*The priests and Levites to have no inheritance, 1, 2. What is the priest's due, 3-5. Of the Levites that come from any of the other cities, 6-8. The Israelites must not copy the abominations of the former inhabitants, 9. None to cause his son or daughter to pass through the fire, or use any kind of divination or enchantment, as the former inhabitants did, 10-14. THE priests the Levites, and all the tribe of Levi, <sup>a</sup>shall have no part nor inheritance with Israel; they <sup>b</sup>shall eat the offerings of the LORD made by fire, and his inheritance.

2 Therefore shall they have no inheritance among their brethren; the LORD is their inheritance, as he hath said unto them.

3 And this shall be the priest's due from the people, from them that offer a sacrifice, whether it

Verse 1. The priests the Levites—shall have no part] That is, says Rab. Maimon, they shall have no part in the spoils taken from an enemy.

Verse 2. The Lord is their inheritance] He is the portion of their souls; and as to their bodies, they shall live by the offerings of the Lord made by fire, i.e. the meat-offering, the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; and whatever was the Lord's right, in these or other offerings, he gave to the priests.

5 For <sup>a</sup>the LORD thy God hath chosen him out of all thy tribes, <sup>b</sup>to stand to minister in the name of the LORD, him and his sons for ever.

Verse 3. Offer a sacrifice] The word zebach is used to signify, not only an animal sacrificed to the Lord, but also one killed for common use. And in this latter sense it probably should be understood here; and, consequently, the command in this verse relates to what the people were to allow the priests and Levites from the animals slain for common use.

Verse 4. The first-fruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, &c.] All these first-fruits and firstlings the desire of his mind "unto the place which the LORD shall choose;

7 Then he shall minister in the name of the LORD his God, "as all his brethren the Levites do, which stand there before the LORD.

8 They shall have like "portions to eat, beside "that which cometh of the sale of his patrimony.

9 When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, "thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations.

10 There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter "to pass through the fire, "or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch.

11 "Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a "necromancer.

12 For all that do these things are an abomination unto the LORD: and "because of these abominations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee.

13 Thou shalt be "perfect with the LORD thy God.

14 For these nations, which thou shalt "possess, hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners: but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath not suffered thee so to do.

15 "The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken;

16 According to all that thou desiredst of the LORD thy God in Horeb "in the day of the assembly, saying, "Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God, neither let me see this great fire any more, that I die not.

17 And the LORD said unto me, "They have well spoken that which they have spoken.

18 "I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and "will put my words in his mouth; "and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.

19 "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.

20 But "the prophet which shall presume to speak a word in my name which I have not commanded him to speak, or "that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die.

21 And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken?

22 "When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, "if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that "is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it "presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

were the LORD's portion, and these he gave to the priests.
Verse 8. The sale of his patrimony.] So we find that, though the Levites might have no part of the land by lot, yet they were permitted to make purchases of houses, goods, and cattle, yea, of fields also. See the case of Abiathar, 1 Kings ii. 26, and of Jeremiah, Jer. xxxii. 7, 8.

Verse 10. To pass through the fire] Probably in the way of consecration to Molech, or some other deity. It is not likely that their being burnt to death is here intended.

Divination] One who endeavours to find out futurity by auguries, using lots, &c.

Observer of times] One who pretends to foretell future events by present occurrences, and who predicts great political or physical changes from the aspects of the planets, eclipses, motion of the clouds, &c., &c.

Enchanter] One who inspected the entrails of beasts, observed the flight of birds, &c., &c., and drew auguries thence. Some think divination by serpents is meant, which was common among the heathen.

A witch.] Probably those who, by means of drugs, herbs, perfumes, &c., pretended to bring certain celestial influences to their aid.

Verse 11. A charmer] One who uses spells; a peculiar conjunction, as the term implies, of words or things, tying knots, &c., for the purposes of divination.

A consulter with familiar spirits] A Pythoness, one who inquires by the means of one spirit to get oracular answers from another of a superior order.

A wizard] A wise one, a knowing one. Wizard was formerly considered as the masculine of witch, both practising divination by similar means.

Or a necromancer.] One who seeks from or inquires of the dead. Such as the witch at Endor, who professed to evoke the dead, in order to get them to disclose the secrets of the spiritual world.

Verse 15. The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet] Instead of diviners, observers of times, &c., God here promises to give them an infallible guide, who should tell them all things that make for their peace, so that his declarations should completely answer the end of all the knowledge that was pretended to be gained by the persons already specified.

Like unto me] Viz., a prophet, a legislator, a king, a mediator, and the head or chief of the people of God. This was the very person of whom Moses was the type, and who should accomplish all the great purposes of the Divine Being. Such a prophet as had never before appeared, and who should have no equal till the consummation of the world.

This prophet is the Lord Jesus, who was in the bosom of the Father, and who came to declare him to mankind. Every word spoken by him is a living, infallible oracle from God himself; and must be received and obeyed as such, on pain of the eternal displeasure of the Almighty.

Verse 22. If the thing follow not] It is worthy of remark that the prophets in general predicted those things which were shortly to come to pass, that the people might have the fullest proof of their divine mission, and of the existence of God's providence in the administration of the affairs of men.

The promise contained in the 15th and 18th verses of this chapter has long been considered of the first importance in the controversies between the Christians and Jews.

CHAPTER XIX.

Three cities of refuge to be appointed in the midst of the promised land; the land being divided into three parts, a city is to be placed in each, a proper way to which is to be prepared, 1-3. In what cases of man-slaughter the benefit of those cities may be claimed, 4-6. Three cities more to be added, should the Lord enlarge their coasts, and the reasons why, 7-10. The intentional murderer shall have no benefit from these cities, 11-13. The landmark is not to be shifted, 14. One witness shall not be deemed sufficient to convict a man, 15. How a false witness shall be dealt with—he shall bear the punishment which he designed should have been inflicted on his neighbour, 15-20. Another command to establish the lex talionis, 12.

WHEN the LORD thy God <sup>a</sup> hath cut off the nations whose land the LORD thy God giveth thee, and thou <sup>b</sup> succeedest them, and dwellest in their cities, and in their houses;

2 <sup>c</sup> Thou shalt separate three cities for thee in the midst of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

3 Thou shalt prepare thee a way, and divide the coasts of thy land, which the LORD thy God giveth thee to inherit, into three parts, that every slayer may flee thither.

4 And <sup>d</sup> this is the case of the slayer, which shall flee thither, that he may live: Whoso killeth his neighbour ignorantly, whom he hated not <sup>e</sup> in time past;

5 As when a man goeth into the wood with his neighbour to hew wood, and his hand fetcheth a stroke with the ax to cut down the tree, and the <sup>f</sup> head slippeth from the <sup>g</sup> helve, and <sup>h</sup> lighteth upon his neighbour, that he die; he shall flee unto one of those cities, and live:

6 <sup>i</sup> Lest the avenger of the blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot, and overtake him, because the way is long, and <sup>j</sup> slay him; whereas he was not worthy of death, inasmuch as he hated him not <sup>k</sup> in time past.

7 Wherefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt separate three cities for thee.

8 And if the LORD thy God <sup>l</sup> enlarge thy coast, as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, and give thee all the land which he promised to give unto thy fathers;

9 If thou shalt keep all these commandments to do them, which I command thee this day, to love the LORD thy God, and to walk ever in his ways; <sup>m</sup> then shalt thou add three cities more for thee, beside these three.

10 That innocent blood be not shed in thy land,

Verse 3. Thou shalt prepare thee a way] The Jews inform us that the roads to the cities of refuge were made very broad, thirty-two cubits; and even, so that there should be no impediments in the way; and were constantly kept in good repair.

Verse 9. Shalt thou add three cities more] This was afterwards found necessary, and accordingly six cities were appointed, three on either side Jordan. See Josh. xx. 1, &c. In imitation of these cities of refuge the heathens had their asyla, and the Catholics their privileged altars.

Verse 14. Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark] Before the extensive use of fences, landed property was marked out by stones or posts, set up so as to ascertain the divisions of family estates. It was easy to remove one of these landmarks, and set it in a different place; and thus which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and so blood be upon thee.

11 But <sup>r</sup> if any man hate his neighbour, and lie in wait for him, and rise up against him, and smite him <sup>s</sup> mortally that he die, and fleeth into one of these cities:

12 Then the elders of his city shall send and fetch him thence, and deliver him unto the hand of the avenger of blood, that he may die.

13 <sup>t</sup> Thine eye shall not pity him, <sup>u</sup> but thou shalt put away the guilt of innocent blood from Israel, that it may go well with thee.

14 <sup>v</sup> Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it.

15 <sup>w</sup> One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth: at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established.

16 If a false witness <sup>x</sup> rise up against any man to testify against him <sup>y</sup> that which is wrong:

17 Then both the men, between whom the controversy is, shall stand before the LORD, <sup>z</sup> before the priests and the judges, which shall be in those days;

18 And the judges shall make diligent inquiry: and, behold, if the witness be a false witness, and hath testified falsely against his brother;

19 <sup>aa</sup> Then shall ye do unto him as he had thought to have done to his brother: so <sup>ab</sup> shalt thou put the evil away from among you.

20 <sup>ac</sup> And those which remain shall hear, and fear, and shall henceforth commit no more any such evil among you.

21 <sup>ad</sup> And thine eye shall not pity; but <sup>ae</sup> life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.

the dishonest man enlarged his own estate by contracting that of his neighbour. The termini or landmarks among the Romans were held very sacred, and were at last deified.

Verse 19. Then shall ye do unto him as he had thought to have done unto his brother] Nothing can be more equitable or proper than this, that if a man endeavour to do any injury to or take away the life of another, on detection he shall be caused to undergo the same evil which he intended for his innocent neighbour.

Some of our excellent English laws have been made on this very ground. In the 37th of Edw. III., chap. 18, it is ordained that all those who make suggestion shall incur the same pain which the other should have had, if he were attainted, in case his suggestions be found evil. A similar law was made in the 38th of the same reign, chap. 9. By a law of the twelve Tables, a false witness was thrown down the Tarpeian rock. In short, false witnesses have been executed by all nations.

Verse 21. Life—for life, eye for eye, &c.] The operation of such a law as this must have been very salutary: if a man prized his own members, he would naturally avoid injuring those of others. It is a pity that this law were not still in force: it would certainly prevent many of those savage acts which both disgrace and injure society. I speak this in reference to law generally, and the provision that should be made to prevent and punish ferocious and malevolent offences. A Christian may always act on the plan of forgiving injuries; and where the public peace and safety may not be affected, he should do so; but if law did not make a provision for the safety of the community by enactment against the profligate, civil society would soon be destroyed.

CHAPTER XX.

Directions concerning campaigns, 1. The priest shall encourage the people with the assurance that God will accompany and fight for them, 2-4. The officers shall dismiss from the army all who had just built a new house, but had not dedicated it, 5. All who had planted a vineyard, but had not yet eaten of its fruits, 6. All who had betrothed a wife, but had not brought her home, 7. And all who were timid and faint-hearted, 8. The commanders to be chosen after the timid, &c., had retired, 9. No city to be attacked till they had proclaimed conditions of peace to it, provided it be a city beyond the bounds of the seven Canaanitish nations; if it submitted, it was to become tributary; if not, it was to be besieged, sacked, and all the males put to the sword; the women, children, and cattle to be taken as booty, 10-15. No such offers to be made to the cities of the Canaanites; of them nothing shall be preserved, and the reason, 16-18. In besieging a city no trees to be cut down but those which do not bear fruit, 19, 20.

WHEN thou goest out to battle against thine enemies, and sceest *horses, and chariots, and a people more than thou, be not afraid of them: for the LORD thy God is <sup>b</sup> with thee, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

2 And it shall be, when ye are come nigh unto the battle, that the priest shall approach and speak unto the people,

3 And shall say unto them, Hear, O Israel, ye approach this day unto battle against your enemies: let not your hearts <sup>c</sup> faint, fear not, and do not <sup>d</sup> tremble, neither be ye terrified because of them;

4 For the LORD your God is he that goeth with you, <sup>e</sup> to fight for you against your enemies, to save you.

5 And the officers shall speak unto the people, saying, What man is there that hath built a new house, and hath not <sup>f</sup> dedicated it? let him go and return to his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man dedicate it.

6 And what man is he that hath planted a vineyard, and hath not yet <sup>g</sup> eaten of it? let him also go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man eat of it.

7 <sup>h</sup> And what man is there that hath betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her? let him go and return unto his house, lest he die in the battle, and another man take her.

8 And the officers shall speak further unto the people, and they shall say, <sup>i</sup> What man is there that is fearful and faint-hearted? let him go and return unto his house, lest his brethren's heart <sup>j</sup> faint as well as his heart.

9 And it shall be, when the officers have made an end of speaking unto the people, that they shall make captains of the armies <sup>k</sup> to lead the people.

10 When thou comest nigh unto a city to fight against it, <sup>l</sup> then proclaim peace unto it.

11 And it shall be, if it make thee answer of peace, and open unto thee, then it shall be, that all the people that is found therein shall be tributaries unto thee, and they shall serve thee.

12 And if it will make no peace with thee, but

Verse 1. When thou goest out to battle] This refers chiefly to the battles they were to have with the Canaanites, in order to get possession of the promised land; for it cannot be considered to apply to any wars which they might have with the surrounding nations for political reasons, as the divine assistance could not be expected in wars which were not undertaken by the divine command.

Verse 2. The priest shall approach and speak unto the people—The priest on these occasions was the representative of that God whose servant he was, and whose worship he conducted. It is remarkable that almost all ancient nations took their priests with them to battle, as they did not expect success without having the object of their adoration with them, and they supposed they secured his presence by having that of his representative.

Verse 5. That hath built a new house, and hath not dedicated it] From the title of Ps. xxx.—A Psalm or Song at the Dedication of the house of David—it is evident that it was a custom in Israel to dedicate a new house to God with prayer, praise, and thanksgiving; and this was done in order to secure the divine presence and blessing, for no pious or sensible man could imagine he could dwell safely in a house that was not under the immediate protection of God. Hence it has been a custom in the most barbarous nations to consecrate a part of a new house to the deity they worshipped. At the times of dedication among the Jews, besides prayer and praise, a feast was made, to which the relatives and neighbours were invited. Something of this custom is observed in some parts of our own country in what is called warming the house: but in these cases the feasting only is kept up—the prayer and praise forgotten! so that the dedication appears to be rather more to Bacchus than to Jehovah, the author of every good and perfect gift.

Verse 7. Betrothed a wife, and hath not taken her] It was customary among the Jews to contract matrimony, espouse or betroth, and for some considerable time to leave the parties in the houses of their respective parents: when the bridegroom had made proper preparations, then the bride was brought home to his house, and thus the marriage was consummated. The provisions in this verse refer to a case of this kind; for it was deemed an excessive hardship for a person to be obliged to go to battle, where there was a probability of his being slain, who had left a new house unfinished; a newly purchased heritage half tilled; or a wife with whom he had just contracted marriage.

Verse 8. What man is there that is fearful and faint- will make war against thee, then thou shalt besiege it :

13 And when the LORD thy God hath delivered it into thine hands, <sup>a</sup>thou shalt smite every male thereof with the edge of the sword :

14 But the women, and the little ones, and <sup>b</sup>the cattle, and all that is in the city, even all the spoil thereof, shalt thou <sup>c</sup>take unto thyself; and <sup>d</sup>thou shalt eat the spoil of thine enemies, which the LORD thy God hath given thee.

15 Thus shalt thou do unto all the cities which are very far off from thee, which are not of the cities of these nations.

16 But <sup>e</sup>of the cities of these people, which the LORD thy God doth give thee for an inheritance thou shalt save alive nothing that breatheth :

17 But thou shalt utterly destroy them : namely, hearted? The original rach, signifies tender or soft-hearted. And a soft heart the man must have who, in such a contest, after such a permission, could turn his back upon his enemies and his brethren. However, such were the troops commanded by Gideon in his war against the Midianites; for after he gave this permission, out of 32,000 men only 10,000 remained to fight! Judges vii. 3.

Verse 10. Proclaim peace unto it. Interpreters are greatly divided concerning the objects of this law. The text, taken in connexion with the context (see verses 15-18), appears to state that this proclamation or offer of peace to a city is only to be understood of those cities which were situated beyond the limits of the seven anathematized nations, because these latter are commanded to be totally destroyed. Nothing can be clearer than this from the bare letter of the text, unless some of the words, taken separately, can be shown to have a different meaning.

Yet many plausible arguments have been brought to prove that even these seven Canaanitish nations might be received into mercy, provided they, 1. Renounced their idolatry; 2. Became subject to the Jews; and 3. Paid annual tribute: and that it was only in case these terms were rejected, that they were not to leave alive in such a city any thing that breathed, ver. 16.

Verse 17. But thou shalt utterly destroy them. The above reasoning will gain considerable strength provided we could translate ki haclavem techarimem, thou shalt utterly subdue them—slaying them if they resist, and thus leaving nothing alive that breathed; or totally expel them from the land, or reduce them to a state of slavery in it, that they might no longer exist as a people. This certainly made them an anathema as a nation, wholly destroying their political existence. Probably this was so understood by the Gibeonites, viz., that they either must be slain or utterly leave the land, which last was certainly in their power, and therefore, by a stratagem, they got the princes of Israel to make a league with them. When the deceit was discovered, the Israelites, though under no obligation to fulfil their part of the covenant, did not believe that they were bound to put even those deceivers to death; but they destroyed their political existence by making them hewers of wood and drawers of water to the congregation; i.e. slaves to the Israelites. (See Josh. ix.)

the Hittites, and the Amorites, the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites: as the LORD thy God hath commanded thee:

18 That <sup>f</sup>they teach you not to do after all their abominations, which they have done unto their gods; so should ye <sup>g</sup>sin against the LORD your God.

19 When thou shalt besiege a city a long time, in making war against it to take it, thou shalt not destroy the trees thereof by forcing an ax against them: for thou mayest eat of them, and thou shalt not cut them down (<sup>h</sup>for the tree of the field is man's life) <sup>i</sup>to employ them in the siege:

20 Only the trees which thou knowest that they be not trees for meat, thou shalt destroy and cut them down: and thou shalt build bulwarks against the city that maketh war with thee, until <sup>j</sup>it be subdued.

the tree of the field is to be employed in the siege.—<sup>h</sup> Heb. to go from before thee.—<sup>i</sup> Heb. it come down.

Rahab and her household also were spared. So that it does not appear that the Israelites believed that they were bound to put every Canaanite to death. Their political existence was under the anathema, and this the Hebrews annihilated.

That many of the Canaanites continued in the land even to the days of Solomon, we have the fullest proof; 2 Chron. viii. 7. Solomon destroyed their political existence, but did not consider himself bound by the law of God to put them to death.

Verse 19. (For the tree of the field is man's life) to employ them in the siege The following are the chief versions: For, O man, the trees of the field are for thee to employ THEM in the siege—or, For it is man, and the tree of the field that must go before thee for a bulwark—or, For it is a tree, and not men, to increase the number of those who come against thee to the siege—or lastly, The tree of the field (is as) a man, to go before thy face for a bulwark. The sense is sufficiently clear, though the strict grammatical meaning of the words cannot be easily ascertained: it was a merciful provision to spare all fruit-bearing trees, because they yielded the fruit which supported man's life; and it was sound policy also, for even the conquerors must perish if the means of life were cut off. [Keil suggests a translation of this obscure passage which is probably correct: "Is the tree of the field a man, that it should come into siege before thee?"]

There are several curious particulars in these verses: 1. The people had the most positive assurances from God that their enemies should not be able to prevail against them by strength, numbers, nor stratagem, because God should go with them to lead and direct them, and should fight for them; and against his might none could prevail. 2. All such interferences were standing proofs of the being of God, of his especial providence, and of the truth of their religion. 3. Though God promised them such protection, yet they were to expect it only in the diligent use of their own prudence and industry. Those who will not help themselves with the strength which God has already given them, shall not have any farther assistance from him. In all such cases the parable of the talents affords an accurate rule. 4. Their going to war against their enemies must not deprive them of mercy and tenderness towards their brethren.

CHAPTER XXI.

If a man be found slain in a field, and the cause of his death be unknown, the murder shall be expiated by the sacrifice of a heifer, in an uncultivated valley, 1-4. The rites to be used on the occasion, 5-9. The ordinance concerning marriage with a captive, 10-14. The law relative to the children of the hated and beloved wives: if the son of the hated wife should be the first-born, he shall not be disinherited by the son of the beloved wife, but shall have a double portion of all his father's goods, 15-18. The law concerning the stubborn and rebellious son, who, when convicted, is to be stoned to death, 19-21. Of the person who is to be hanged, 22. His body shall not be left on the tree all night; every one that is hanged on a tree is accursed of God, 23.

IF one be found slain in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee to possess it, lying in the field, and it be not known who hath slain him :

2 Then thy elders and thy judges shall come forth, and they shall measure unto the cities which are round about him that is slain :

3 And it shall be, that the city which is next unto the slain man, even the elders of that city shall take an heifer, which hath not been wrought with, and which hath not drawn in the yoke ;

4 And the elders of that city shall bring down the heifer unto a rough valley, which is neither eared nor sown, and shall strike off the heifer's neck there in the valley ;

5 And the priests, the sons of Levi, shall come near ; for <sup>a</sup> them the LORD thy God hath chosen to minister unto him, and to bless in the name of the LORD ; and <sup>b</sup> by their <sup>c</sup> word shall every controversy and every stroke be tried :

6 And all the elders of that city, that are next unto the slain man, <sup>d</sup> shall wash their hands over the heifer that is beheaded in the valley :

7 And they shall answer and say, Our hands have not shed this blood, neither have our eyes seen it.

8 Be merciful, O LORD, unto thy people Israel, whom thou hast redeemed, <sup>e</sup> and lay not innocent blood <sup>f</sup> unto thy people of Israel's charge. And the blood shall be forgiven them, 9 So <sup>g</sup> shalt thou put away the guilt of innocent blood from among you, when thou shalt do that which is right in the sight of the LORD.

10 When thou goest forth to war against thine enemies, and the LORD thy God hath delivered them into thine hands, and thou hast taken them captive,

11 And seest among the captives a beautiful woman, and hast a desire unto her, that thou wouldest have her to thy wife ;

12 Then thou shalt bring her home to thine house ; and she shall shave her head, and <sup>h</sup> pare <sup>i</sup> her nails ;

13 And she shall put the raiment of her captivity from off her, and shall remain in thine house, and

<sup>j</sup> bewail her father and her mother a full month : and after that thou shalt go in unto her, and be her husband, and she shall be thy wife.

14 And it shall be, if thou have no delight in her, then thou shalt let her go whither she will ; but thou shalt not sell her at all for money, thou shalt not make merchandise of her, because thou hast <sup>k</sup> humbled her.

15 If a man have two wives, one beloved, <sup>l</sup> and another hated, and they have born him children, both the beloved and the hated ; and if the first-born son be hers that was hated :

16 Then it shall be, <sup>m</sup> when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved first-born before the son of the hated, which is indeed the first-born :

17 But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the first-born, <sup>n</sup> by giving him a double portion of all <sup>o</sup> that he hath : for he is <sup>p</sup> the beginning of his strength ; <sup>q</sup> the right of the first-born is his.

18 If a man have a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they have chastened him, will not hearken unto them :

19 Then shall his father and his mother lay hold on him, and bring him out unto the elders of his city, and unto the gate of his place ;

20 And they shall say unto the elders of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious, he will not obey our voice ; <sup>r</sup> he is a glutton, and a drunkard.

21 And all the men of his city shall stone him with stones, that he die ; <sup>s</sup> so shalt thou put evil away from among you ; <sup>t</sup> and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

22 And if a man have committed a sin <sup>u</sup> worthy of death, and he be to be put to death, and thou hang him on a tree :

23 <sup>v</sup> His body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day ; (for <sup>w</sup> he that is hanged is <sup>x</sup> accursed of God ;) that <sup>y</sup> thy land be not defiled, which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

Verse 4. Shall bring down the heifer unto a rough valley] This might be translated a rapid stream, [or brook valley.] The spot of ground on which this sacrifice was made must be uncultivated, because it was considered to be a sacrifice to make atonement for the murder, and consequently would pollute the land. This regulation was calculated to keep murder in abhorrence, and to make the magistrates alert in their office, that delinquents might be discovered and punished, and thus public expense saved.

Verse 6. Shall wash their hands over the heifer] Washing the hands, in reference to such a subject as this, was a rite anciently used to signify that the persons thus washing were innocent of the crime in question. It was probably from the Jews that Pilate learnt this symbolical method of expressing his innocence.

Verse 11. And seest—a beautiful woman] No forcible possession was allowed even in this case, when the woman was taken in war, and was, by the general consent of ancient nations, adjudged as a part of the spoils. The person to whose lot or share such a woman as is here described fell might, if he chose, have her for a wife on certain conditions ; but he was not permitted to use her under any inferior character.

Verse 12. She shall shave her head] This was in token of her renouncing her religion, and becoming a proselyte to that of the Jews.

Pare her nails] “She shall make her nails.” Now whether this signifies paring or letting them grow, is greatly doubted among learned men. Possibly it means neither, but colouring the nails, staining them red with the hennah, which is much practised in India to the present day, and which was undoubtedly practised among the ancient Egyptians, as is evident from the nails of mummies which are found thus stained.

Verse 15. One beloved, and another hated] That is, one loved less than the other. This is the true notion of the word hate in scripture. So Jacob HATED Leah, that is, he loved her less than he did Rachel ; and Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I HATED, that is, I have shown a more particular affection to the posterity of Jacob than I have to the posterity of Esau. From this verse we see that polygamy did exist under the Mosaic laws, and that it was put under certain regulations ; but it was not enjoined, Moses merely suffered it, because of the hardness of their hearts, as our Lord justly remarks Mat. xix. 8.

Verses 18-21. The stubborn, rebellious, gluttonous, and drunken son is to be stoned to death.—This law, severe as it may seem, must have acted as a powerful preventive of crimes. If such a law were in force now, and duly executed, how many deaths of disobedient and profligate children would there be in all corners of the land!

Verse 23. His body shall not remain all night upon the tree] Its exposure for the space of one day was judged sufficient. The law which required this answered all the ends of public justice, exposed the shame and infamy of the conduct, but did not put to torture the feelings of humanity by requiring a perpetual exhibition of a human being, a slow prey to the most loathsome process of putrefaction.

How excellent are all these laws! How wondrously well calculated to repress crimes, by showing the enormity of sin! It is worthy of remark that in the infliction of punishment prescribed by the Mosaic law we ever find that Mercy walks hand in hand with Judgment.

CHAPTER XXII.

Ordinances relative to strayed cattle and lost goods, 1-3. Humanity to oppressed cattle, 4. Men and women shall not wear each other's apparel, 5. No bird shall be taken with her nest of eggs or young ones, 6, 7. Battlements must be made on the roofs of houses, 8. Improper mixtures to be avoided, 9-11. Fringes on the garments, 12. Case of the hated wife, and the tokens of virginity, and the proceedings thereon, 13-21. The adulterer and adulteress to be put to death, 22. Case of the betrothed damsel corrupted in the city, 23, 24. Cases of rape and the punishment, 25-27; of fornication, 28, 29. No man shall take his father's wife, 30.

THOU shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray, and <sup>b</sup>hide thyself from them: thou shalt in any case bring them again unto thy brother.

2 And if thy brother be not nigh unto thee, or if thou know him not, then thou shalt bring it unto thine own house, and it shall be with thee until thy brother seek after it, and thou shalt restore it to him again.

3 In like manner shalt thou do with his ass: and so shalt thou do with his raiment; and with all lost thing of thy brother's, which he hath lost, and thou hast found, shalt thou do likewise: thou mayest not hide thyself.

4 <sup>c</sup>Thou shalt not see thy brother's ass or his ox fall down by the way, and hide thyself from them: thou shalt surely help him to lift them up again.

5 The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment: for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord thy God.

6 If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, <sup>d</sup>thou shalt not take the dam with the young:

7 But thou shalt in any wise let the dam go, and take the young to thee: <sup>e</sup>that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days.

8 When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof, that thou bring not blood upon thine house, if any man fall from thence.

9 <sup>f</sup>Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds: lest the <sup>g</sup>fruit of thy seed which thou hast sown, and the fruit of thy vineyard, be defiled.

10 <sup>h</sup>Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together.

Verse 1. Thou shalt not see thy brother's ox or his sheep go astray] A humane man cannot bear to see even an ass fall under his burden, and not endeavour to relieve him: and a man who loves his neighbour as himself cannot see his property in danger without endeavouring to preserve it. These comparatively small matters were tests and proofs of matters great in themselves and in their consequences.

Verse 3. Thou mayest not hide thyself] Thou shalt not keep out of the way of affording help, nor pretend thou didst not see occasion to render thy neighbour any service. The priest and the Levite, when they saw the wounded man, passed by on the other side of the way, Luke x. 31, 32. This was a notorious breach of the merciful law mentioned above.

Verse 5. The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man] As the word geber is here used, which properly signifies a strong man or man of war, it is very probable that armour is here intended; especially as we know that in the worship of Venus, to which that of Astarte or Ashtaroath among the Canaanites bore a striking resemblance, the women were accustomed to appear in armour before her. It certainly cannot mean a simple change of dress, whereby the men might pass for women, and vice versa. This would have been impossible in those countries where the dress of the sexes had but little to distinguish it, and where every man wore a long beard. It is, however, a very good general precept understood literally, and applies particularly to those countries where the dress alone distinguishes between the male and the female. [It was intended mainly to preserve the sanctity of "that distinction between the sexes which was established by the creation of man and woman."]

Verse 7. Thou shalt—let the dam go, and take the young to thee; that it may be well with thee] This passage may be understood literally. If they destroyed both young and old, must not the breed soon fail, and would it not in the end be ill with them; and by thus cutting off the means of their continual support, must not their days be shortened on the land? But we may look for a humane precept in this law. The young never knew the sweets of liberty; the dam did: they might be taken and used for any lawful purpose, but the dam must not be brought into a state of captivity. Every thing contrary to the spirit of mercy and kindness the ever-blessed God has in utter abhorrence. And we should remember a fact, that he who can exercise cruelty towards a sparrow or a wren, will, when circumstances are favourable, be cruel to his fellow-creatures.

Verse 8. A battlement for thy roof] Houses in the East are in general built with flat roofs, and on them men walk to enjoy the fresh air, converse together, sleep, &c.; it was therefore necessary to have a sort of battlement or balustrade to prevent persons from falling off. If a man neglected to make a sufficient defence against such accidents, and the death of another was occasioned by it, the owner of the house must be considered in the light of a murderer.

Verse 10. Thou shalt not sow with an ox and an ass] It is generally supposed that mixtures of different sorts in seed, breed, &c., were employed for superstitious purposes, and therefore prohibited in this law. It is more likely, however, that there was a physical reason for this; two 11 *Thou shalt not wear a garment of divers sorts, as of woollen and linen together.

12 Thou shalt make thee <sup>b</sup>fringes, upon the four <sup>c</sup>quarters of thy vesture, wherewith thou coverest thyself.

13 If any man take a wife, and <sup>d</sup>go in unto her, and hate her,

14 And give occasions of speech against her, and bring up an evil name upon her, and say, I took this woman, and when I came to her, I found her not a maid:

15 Then shall the father of the damsel, and her mother, take and bring forth the tokens of the damsel's virginity unto the elders of the city in the gate:

16 And the damsel's father shall say unto the elders, I gave my daughter unto this man to wife, and he hateth her;

17 And, lo, he hath given occasions of speech against her, saying, I found not thy daughter a maid; and yet these are the tokens of my daughter's virginity. And they shall spread the cloth before the elders of the city.

18 And the elders of that city shall take that man and chastise him;

19 And they shall amerce him in an hundred shekels of silver, and give them unto the father of the damsel, because he hath brought up an evil name upon a virgin of Israel: and she shall be his wife; he may not put her away all his days.

20 But if this thing be true, and the tokens of virginity be not found for the damsel:

21 Then they shall bring out the damsel to the door of her father's house, and the men of her city shall stone her with stones that she die: because she hath wrought folly in Israel, to play the whore in her father's house: <sup>f</sup>so shalt thou put evil away from among you.

22 *If a man be found lying with a woman married to an husband, then they shall both of them die, both the man that lay with the woman, and the woman: so shalt thou put away evil from Israel.

23 If a damsel that is a virgin be <sup>h</sup>betrothed unto an husband, and a man find her in the city, and lie with her;

24 Then shall ye bring them both out unto the gate of that city, and ye shall stone them with stones that they die; the damsel, because she cried not, being in the city: and the man, because he hath <sup>i</sup>humbled his neighbour's wife: <sup>j</sup>so thou shalt put away evil from among you.

25 But if a man find a betrothed damsel in the field, and the man <sup>k</sup>force her, and lie with her: then the man only that lay with her shall die:

26 But unto the damsel thou shalt do nothing; there is in the damsel no sin worthy of death: for as when a man riseth against his neighbour, and slayeth him, even so is this matter:

27 For he found her in the field, and the betrothed damsel cried, and there was none to save her.

28 <sup>l</sup>If a man find a damsel that is a virgin, which is not betrothed, and lay hold on her, and lie with her, and they be found;

29 Then the man that lay with her shall give unto the damsel's father fifty shekels of silver, and she shall be his wife; <sup>m</sup>because he hath humbled her, he may not put her away all his days.

30 <sup>n</sup>A man shall not take his father's wife, nor <sup>o</sup>discover his father's skirt.

beasts of a different species cannot associate comfortably together, and on this ground never pull pleasantly either in cart or plough. After all, it is very probable that the general design was to prevent improper alliances in civil and religious life. To teach the Jews the propriety of these, a variety of precepts relative to improper and heterogeneous mixtures were interspersed through their law, so that in civil and domestic life they might have them ever before their eyes.

Verse 15. Tokens of the damsel's virginity] This was a perfectly possible case in all places where girls were married at ten, twelve, and fourteen years of age, which is frequent in the East. I have known several instances of persons having had two or three children at separate births before they were fourteen years of age. Such tokens, therefore, as the text speaks of, must be infallibly exhibited by females so very young on the consummation of their marriage.

Verse 17. They shall spread the cloth, &c.] A usage of this kind argues a roughness of manners which would ill comport with the refinement of European ideas on so delicate a subject. Attempts have been made to show that the law here is to be understood metaphorically; but they so perfectly fail to establish any thing like probability, that it would be wasting my own and my reader's time to detail them. A custom similar to that above is observed among the Mohammedans to the present day.

Verse 22. Shall both of them die] Thus we find that in the most ancient of all laws adultery was punished with death in both the parties.

Verse 25. And the man force her] A rape also, by these ancient institutions, was punished with death, because a woman's honour was considered equally as precious as her life; therefore the same punishment was inflicted on the ravisher as upon the murderer.

Verse 30. A man shall not take his father's wife] This is to be understood as referring to the case of a stepmother. It was probably on pretence of having broken this law, that Solomon put his brother Adonijah to death, because he had desired to have his father's concubine to wife, 1 Kings ii. 13-25.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Neither eunuchs, bastards, Ammonites, nor Moabites, shall be incorporated with the genuine Israelites, 1-3. The reason why the Ammonites and Moabites were excluded, 4-6. Edomites and Egyptians to be respected, 7. Their descendants in the third generation may be incorporated with the Israelites, 8. Cautions against wickedness when they go forth against their enemies, 9. To keep the camp free from every defilement, and the reason why, 10-14. The slave who had taken refuge among them is not to be delivered up to his former master, 15, 16. There shall be no prostitutes nor Sodomites in the land, 17. The hire of a prostitute or the price of a dog is not to be brought into the house of God, 18. The Israelites shall not lend on usury to each other, 19; but they may take usury from strangers, 20. Vows must be diligently paid, 21-23. In passing through a vineyard or field a man may eat of the grapes or corn, but must carry away none with him, 24, 25.

HE that is *wounded in the stones, or hath his privy member cut off, shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

2 A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

3 <sup>b</sup> An Ammonite or Moabite shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to their tenth generation, shall they not enter into the congregation of the LORD for ever:

4 <sup>c</sup> Because they met you not with bread and with water in the way, when ye came forth out of Egypt; and <sup>d</sup> because they hired against thee Balaam the son of Beor, of Pethor of Mesopotamia, to curse thee.

5 Nevertheless the LORD thy God would not hearken unto Balaam; but the LORD thy God turned the curse into a blessing unto thee, because the LORD thy God loved thee.

6 <sup>e</sup> Thou shalt not seek their peace nor their prosperity all thy days for ever.

7 Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite; <sup>f</sup> for he is thy brother: thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian; because <sup>g</sup> thou wast a stranger in his land.

8 The children that are begotten of them shall enter into the congregation of the LORD in their third generation.

9 When the host goeth forth against thine enemies, then keep thee from every wicked thing.

10 <sup>h</sup> If there be among you any man, that is not clean, by reason of uncleanness that chanceth him by night, then shall he go abroad out of the camp, he shall not come within the camp:

11 But it shall be, when evening <sup>i</sup> cometh on, <sup>j</sup> he shall wash himself with water: and when the sun is down, he shall come into the camp again.

12 Thou shalt have a place also without the camp, whither thou shalt go forth abroad:

13 And thou shalt have a paddle upon thy weapon; and it shall be, when thou <sup>k</sup> wilt ease thyself abroad, thou shalt dig therewith, and shalt turn back and cover that which cometh from thee:

14 For the LORD thy God <sup>l</sup> walketh in the midst of thy camp, to deliver thee, and to give up thine enemies before thee; therefore shall thy camp be holy: that he see no <sup>m</sup> unclean thing in thee, and turn away from thee:

15 <sup>n</sup> Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant which is escaped from his master unto thee:

16 <sup>o</sup> He shall dwell with thee, even among you, in that place which he shall choose in one of thy gates, where it <sup>p</sup> liketh him best: <sup>q</sup> thou shalt not oppress him.

17 There shall be no <sup>r</sup> whore of the daughters of Israel, nor a <sup>s</sup> sodomite of the sons of Israel.

18 Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore, or the price of a dog, into the house of the LORD thy God for any vow: for even both these are abomination unto the LORD thy God.

19 <sup>t</sup> Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother: usury of money, usury of victuals, usury of any thing that is lent upon usury:

20 <sup>u</sup> Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury: but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: <sup>v</sup> that the LORD thy God may bless thee in all that thou settest thine hand to in the land whither thou goest to possess it.

21 <sup>w</sup> When thou shalt vow a vow unto the LORD thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the LORD thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee.

22 But if thou shalt forbear to vow, it shall be no sin in thee.

23 <sup>x</sup> That which is gone out of thy lips thou shalt keep and perform; even a freewill-offering, according as thou hast vowed unto the LORD thy God, which thou hast promised with thy mouth.

24 When thou comest into thy neighbour's vineyard, <sup>y</sup> then thou mayest eat grapes thy fill at thine own pleasure; but thou shalt not put any in thy vessel.

25 When thou comest into the standing corn of thy neighbour, <sup>z</sup> then thou mayest pluck the ears with thine hand; but thou shalt not move a sickle unto thy neighbour's standing corn.

Verse 1. Shall not enter into the congregation, &c.] If by entering into the congregation be meant the bearing a civil office among the people, such as magistrate, judge, &c., then the reason of the law is very plain; no man with any such personal defect as might render him contemptible in the sight of others should bear rule among the people, lest the contempt felt for his personal defects might be transferred to his important office, and thus his authority be disregarded. The general meaning of these words is, simply, that the persons here designated should not be so incorporated with the Jews as to partake of their civil privileges. [Probably the law went further than this.]

Verse 2. A bastard shall not enter] Mamzer, which is here rendered bastard, should be understood as implying the offspring of an illegitimate or incestuous mixture.

Verse 3. An Ammonite or Moabite] These nations were subjected for their impiety and wickedness (see ver. 4 and 5) to peculiar disgrace, and on this account were not permitted to hold any office among the Israelites. But this did not disqualify them from being proselytes: Ruth, who was a Moabitess, was married to Boaz, and she became one of the progenitors of our Lord.

Even to their tenth generation.] That is, for ever, as the next clause explains.

Verse 12, &c.] These directions may appear trifling to some, but they were essentially necessary to this people in their present circumstances. Decency and cleanliness promote health, and prevent many diseases.

Verse 15. Thou shalt not deliver—the servant which is escaped—unto thee] That is, a servant who left an idolatrous master that he might join himself to God and to his people. In any other case, it would have been injustice to have harboured the runaway.

Verse 18. The hire of a whore, or the price of a dog] Many public prostitutes dedicated to their gods a part of their impure earnings; and some of these prostitutes were publicly kept in the temple of Venus Aemylia, whose gains were applied to the support of her abominable worship.

Verse 24. Thou shalt not put any in thy vessel.] Thou shalt carry none away with thee. The old English proverb, Eat thy fill, but pocket none, seems to have been founded on this law.

Verse 25. Thou mayest pluck the ears with thine hand] It was on the permission granted by this law that the disciples plucked the ears of corn, as related Mat. xii. 1. This was both a considerate and humane law, and is no dishonour to the Jewish code.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The case of a divorced wife, 1-4. No man shall be obliged to undertake any public service for the first year of his marriage, 5. The mill-stones shall not be taken as a pledge, 6. The man-stealer shall be put to death, 7. Concerning cases of leprosy, 8, 9. Of receiving pledges, and returning those of the poor before bed-time, 10-13. Of servants and their hire, 14, 15. Parents and children shall not be put to death for each other, 16. Of humanity to the stranger, fatherless, widow, and bondman, 17, 18. gleanings of the harvest, &c., to be left for the poor, stranger, widow, fatherless, &c., 19-22.

WHEN a man hath taken a wife, and married her, and it come to pass that she find no favour in his eyes, because he hath found some uncleanness in her: then let him write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house.

2 And when she is departed out of his house; she may go and be another man's wife.

3 And if the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divorcement, and give it in her hand, and sendeth her out of his house; or if the latter husband die, which took her to be his wife;

4 Her former husband, which sent her away, may not take her again to be his wife, after that she is defiled; for that is abomination before the Lord: and thou shalt not cause the land to sin, which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance.

5 When a man hath taken a new wife, he shall not go out to war, neither shall he be charged with any business: but he shall be free at home one year, and shall cheer up his wife which he hath taken.

6 No man shall take the nether or the upper mill-stone to pledge: for he taketh a man's life to pledge.

7 If a man be found stealing any of his brethren of the children of Israel, and maketh merchandise of him, or selleth him; then that thief shall die; and thou shalt put evil away from among you.

8 Take heed in the plague of leprosy, that thou observe diligently, and do according to all that the priests the Levites shall teach you: as I commanded them, so ye shall observe to do.

Verse 1. Some uncleanness] Any cause of dislike, for this great latitude of meaning the fact itself authorises us to adopt, for it is certain that a Jew might put away his wife for any cause that seemed good to himself; and so hard were their hearts, that Moses suffered this; and we find they continued this practice even to the time of our Lord, who strongly reprehended them on the account, and showed that such license was wholly inconsistent with the original design of marriage; see Mat. v. 31, &c., xix. 3, &c., and the notes there. [But the original word involves the idea of something shameful.]

Verse 3. And write her a bill of divorcement] These bills, though varying in expression, are the same in substance among the Jews in all places.

Verse 4. She is defiled] Though God, for the hardness of their hearts, suffered them to put away their wives, yet he considered all after-marriages in that case to be pollution and defilement; and it is on this ground that our Lord argues in the places referred to above, that whoever marries the woman that is put away is an adulterer: now this could not have been the case if God had allowed the divorce to be a legal and proper separation of the man from his wife; but in the sight of God nothing can be a legal cause of separation but adultery on either side. In such a case, according to the law of God, a man may put away his wife, and a wife

10 When thou dost lend thy brother any thing, thou shalt not go into his house to fetch his pledge.

13 In any case thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down, that he may sleep in his own raiment, and bless thee: and it shall be righteousness unto thee before the Lord thy God.

14 Thou shalt not oppress an hired servant that is poor and needy, whether he be of thy brethren, or of thy strangers that are in thy land within thy gates:

15 At his day thou shalt give him his hire, neither shall the sun go down upon it; for he is poor, and setteth his heart upon it: lest he cry against thee unto the Lord, and it be sin to thee.

16 The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, neither shall the children be put to death for the fathers: every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

17 Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the stranger, nor of the fatherless; nor take the widow's raiment to pledge:

may put away her husband (see Mat. xix. 9); for it appears that the wife had as much right to put away her husband as the husband had to put away his wife, see Mark x. 12.

Verse 6. The nether or the upper mill-stone] Small handmills which can be worked by a single person were formerly in use among the Jews, and are still used in many parts of the East. As therefore the day's meal was generally ground for each day, they keeping no stock beforehand, hence they were forbidden to take either of the stones to pledge, because in such a case the family must be without bread. On this account the text terms the millstone the man's life.

Verse 12. And if the man be poor, &c.] Did not this law preclude pledging entirely, especially in case of the abjectly poor? For who would take a pledge in the morning which he knew, if not redeemed, he must restore at night? However, he might resume his claim in the morning, and have the pledge daily returned, and thus keep up his property in it till the debt was discharged; see the note on Exod. xxii. 26. The Jews in several cases did act contrary to this rule, and we find them cuttishly reproved for it by the prophet Amos, chap. ii. 8.

Verse 15. He is poor, and setteth his heart upon it] How exceedingly natural is this! The poor servant who seldom sees money, yet finds from his master's affluence that he thee thence : therefore I command thee to do this thing.

19 * When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it : it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow : that the LORD thy God may <sup>b</sup> bless thee in all the work of thine hand.

Verses 16, 17. The fathers shall not be put to death for the children, &c. This law is explained and illustrated in sufficient detail, Ezek. xviii.

Verses 18, 19. Thou shalt remember that thou wast a bondman. A want of attention to this most wholesome precept is the reason why pride and arrogance are the general characteristics of those who have risen in the world from poverty to affluence ; and it is the conduct of those men which gave rise to the rugged proverb, "Set a beggar on horseback, and he will ride to the devil."

21 When thou gatherest the grapes of thy vineyard, thou shalt not glean it <sup>d</sup> afterward : it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow.

acteristics of those who have risen in the world from poverty to affluence ; and it is the conduct of those men which gave rise to the rugged proverb, "Set a beggar on horseback, and he will ride to the devil."

Verses 19, 20. When thou cuttest down thine harvest. The corners of the field, the gleanings, and the forgotten sheaf, were all the property of the poor. This the Hebrews extended to any part of the fruit or produce of a field, which had been forgotten in the time of general ingathering, as appears from the concluding verses of this chapter.

CHAPTER XXV.

Punishment by whipping not to exceed forty stripes, 1-3. The ox that treads out the corn is not to be muzzled, 4. The ordinance concerning marrying the wife of that brother who has died childless, 5-10. Of the woman who acts indecently in succouring her husband, 11, 12. Of false weights and measures, 13-16. Amalek is to be destroyed, 17-19.

IF there be a * controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them ; then they <sup>b</sup> shall justify the righteous, and condemn the wicked.

2 And it shall be, if the wicked man be <sup>c</sup> worthy to be beaten, that the judge shall cause him to lie down, <sup>d</sup> and to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number.

3 * Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed : lest, if he should exceed, and beat him above these, with many stripes, then thy brother should <sup>e</sup> seem vile unto thee.

4 * Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he <sup>b</sup> treadeth out the corn.

5 <sup>f</sup> If brethren dwell together, and one of them die, and have no child, the wife of the dead shall not marry without, unto a stranger : her <sup>g</sup> husband's brother shall go in unto her, and take her to him to wife, and perform the duty of an husband's brother unto her.

6 And it shall be, that the first-born which she beareth <sup>h</sup> shall succeed in the name of his brother which is dead, that <sup>i</sup> his name be not put out of Israel.

7 And if the man like not to take his <sup>m</sup> brother's wife, then let his brother's wife go up to the <sup>n</sup> gate unto the elders, and say, My husband's brother refuseth to raise up unto his brother a name in Israel, he will not perform the duty of my husband's brother.

8 Then the elders of his city shall call him, and speak unto him : and if he stand to it, and say, <sup>o</sup> I like not to take her ;

9 Then shall his brother's wife come unto him in the presence of the elders, and <sup>p</sup> loose his shoe from off his foot, and spit in his face, and shall answer

Thy brother be vile, or be contemptible.—By this God teaches us to hate and despise the sin, not the sinner, who is by his chastisement to be amended ; as the power which the Lord hath given is to edification, not to destruction, 2 Cor. xiii. 10.

Verses 4, 5. Thou shalt not muzzle the ox, &c. While the oxen were at work some muzzled their mouths to hinder them from eating the corn, which Moses here forbids, instructing the people by this symbolic precept to be kind to their servants and labourers, but especially to those who ministered to them in holy things ; so St. Paul applies it 1 Cor. ix. 9, &c. 1 Tim. v. 18.

Verses 6, 7. And loose his shoe. It is difficult to find the reason of these ceremonies of degradation. Perhaps the shoe was the emblem of power ; and by stripping it off, deprivation of that power and authority was represented. Spitting in the face was a mark of the utmost ignominy ; but the Verses 1, 2. They shall justify the righteous. This is a very important passage, and is a key to several others. The word tsadak is used here precisely in the same sense in which St. Paul sometimes uses the corresponding word, not to justify, or make just, but to acquit, declare innocent, to remit punishment, or give reasons why such an one should not be punished ; so here the magistrates, hitsidiku, shall acquit, the righteous—declare him innocent, because he is found to be righteous and not wicked : so the Septuagint ; using the same word with St. Paul when he speaks of a sinner's justification, i.e. his acquittance from blame and punishment, because of the death of Christ in his stead.

Verses 3, 4. Forty stripes he may give him, and not exceed. According to God's institution a criminal may receive forty stripes : not one more ! But is the institution from above or not, that for any offence sentences a man to receive three hundred, yea, a thousand, stripes ?

Jews, who are legitimate judges in this case, say that the spitting was not in his face, but before his face on the ground. The act of spitting, whether in or before the face, marked the strong contempt the woman felt for the man who had slighted her. And it appears that the man was ever after disgraced in Israel; for so much is certainly implied in the saying, ver. 10: And his name shall be called in Israel, The house of him that hath his shoe loosed.

Verse 13. Divers weights] A stone and a stone, because the weights were anciently made of stone, and some had two sets of stones, a light and a heavy. With the latter they bought their wares, by the former they sold them. In our own country this was once a common case; hence the term thy days may be lengthened in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

16 For <sup>a</sup> all that do such things, and all that do unrighteously, are an abomination unto the Lord thy God.

17 <sup>b</sup>Remember what Amalek did unto thee by the way, when ye were come forth out of Egypt;

18 How he met thee by the way, and smote the hindmost of thee, even all that were feeble behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary; and he <sup>c</sup> feared not God.

19 Therefore it shall be, <sup>d</sup> when the Lord thy God hath given thee rest from all thine enemies round about, in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, to possess it, that thou shalt <sup>e</sup> blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven: thou shalt not forget it.

a stone weight, which is still in use, though lead or iron be the matter that is used as a counterpoise.

Verse 14. Divers measures] Literally, an ephah and an ephah; one large, to buy thy neighbour's wares, another small, to sell thy own by. So there were knaves in all ages and among all nations.

Verse 18. Smote the hindmost of thee] It is supposed that this command had its final accomplishment in the death of Haman and his ten sons, Esther iii., vii., ix., as from this time the memory and name of Amalek was blotted out from under heaven, for through every period of their history it might be truly said, They feared not God.

CHAPTER XXVI.

First-fruits must be offered to God, 1, 2. The form of confession to be used on the occasion, 3-11. The third year's tithe to be given to the Levites and the poor, 12, and the form of confession to be used on this occasion, 13-15. The Israelites are to take Jehovah for their God, and to keep his testimonies, 16, 17. And Jehovah is to take them for his people, and make them high above all the nations of the earth, 18, 19.

AND it shall be, when thou art come in unto the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance, and possessest it, and dwellest therein;

2 <sup>a</sup> That thou shalt take of the first of all the fruit of the earth, which thou shalt bring of thy land that the Lord thy God giveth thee, and shalt put it in a basket, and shalt <sup>b</sup> go unto the place which the Lord thy God shall choose, to place his name there.

3 And thou shalt go unto the priest that shall be in those days, and say unto him, I profess this day unto the Lord thy God, that I am come unto the country which the Lord sware unto our fathers for to give us.

4 And the priest shall take the basket out of Verse 2. Thou shalt take of the first of all the fruit, &c.] God being the author of all their blessings, the first-fruits of the land were consecrated to him, as the author of every good and perfect gift.

Verse 5. A Syrian ready to perish was my father] This passage has been variously understood, both by the ancient Versions and by modern commentators.

5 And thou shalt speak and say before the Lord thy God, <sup>a</sup> A Syrian <sup>b</sup> ready to perish was my father, and <sup>c</sup> he went down into Egypt, and sojourned there with a <sup>d</sup> few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous:

6 And <sup>e</sup> the Egyptians evil entreated us, and afflicted us, and laid upon us hard bondage;

7 And <sup>b</sup> when we cried unto the Lord God of our fathers, the Lord heard our voice, and looked on our affliction, and our labour, and our oppression.

8 And <sup>c</sup> the Lord brought us forth out of Egypt with a mighty hand, and with an outstretched arm,

It is pretty evident, from the text, that by a Syrian we are to understand Jacob, so called from his long residence in Syria with his father-in-law Laban. And his being ready to perish may signify the hard usage and severe labour he had in Laban's service, by which, as his health was much impaired, so his life might have often been in imminent danger.

and * with great terribleness, and with signs, and with wonders :

9 And he hath brought us into this place, and hath given us this land, even <sup>b</sup> a land that floweth with milk and honey.

10 And now, behold, I have brought the first-fruits of the land, which thou, O LORD, hast given me. And thou shalt set it before the LORD thy God, and worship before the LORD thy God;

11 And <sup>c</sup> thou shalt rejoice in every good thing which the LORD thy God hath given unto thee, and unto thine house, thou, and the Levite, and the stranger that is among you.

12 When thou hast made an end of tithing all the <sup>d</sup> tithes of thine increase the third year, which is <sup>e</sup> the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled;

13 Then thou shalt say before the LORD thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, and the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me: I have not transgressed thy commandments, <sup>f</sup> neither have I forgotten them :

Verse 11. Thou shalt rejoice] God intends that his followers shall be happy; that they shall eat their bread with gladness and singleness of heart, praising him. Those who eat their meat grudgingly, under the pretence of their unworthiness, &c., profane God's bounties, and shall have no thanks for their voluntary humility.

Thou, and the Levite, and the stranger] The Levite has no inheritance, let him rejoice with thee. The stranger has no home, let him feel thee to be his friend and his father.

Verse 12. The third year, which is the year of tithing] From the letter in both these places it would appear that the tithe was for the Levites, and that this tithe was drawn only once in three years.

Verse 14. I have not—given ought thereof for the dead] That is, I have not consecrated any of it to an idol, which was generally a dead man whom superstition and ignorance had deified. From 1 Cor. x. 27, 28, we learn that it was customary to offer that flesh to idols which was afterwards sold publicly in the shambles; probably the blood was poured out before the idol in imitation of the sacrifices offered to the true God. Perhaps the text here alludes to a similar custom. [More probably it refers to the custom of sending provisions into a house of mourning, which was regarded as unclean.]

Verse 17. Thou hast avouched the Lord] The people

14 * I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away ought thereof for any unclean use, nor given ought thereof for the dead: but I have hearkened to the voice of the LORD my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me.

15 <sup>b</sup> Look down from thy holy habitation, from heaven and bless thy people Israel, and the land which thou hast given us, as thou swarest unto our fathers, a land that floweth with milk and honey.

16 This day the LORD thy God hath commanded thee to do these statutes and judgments; thou shalt therefore keep and do them with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

17 Thou hast <sup>c</sup> avouched the LORD this day to be thy God, and to walk in his ways, and to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and to hearken unto his voice;

18 And <sup>d</sup> the LORD hath avouched thee this day to be his peculiar people, as he hath promised thee, and that thou shouldst keep all his commandments;

19 And to make thee <sup>e</sup> high above all nations which he hath made, in praise, and in name, and in honour; and that thou mayest be <sup>f</sup> a holy people unto the LORD thy God as he hath spoken.

avouch—publicly declare, that they have taken Jehovah to be their God.

Verse 18. And the Lord hath avouched] Publicly declared by the blessings he pours down upon them, that he has taken them to be his peculiar people. Thus the covenant is made and ratified between God and his followers.

Verse 19. Make thee high above all nations] While Israel regarded God's word and kept his testimonies, they were the greatest and most respectable of all nations; but when they forsook God and his law, they became the most contemptible.

The form of confession when bringing the first-fruits, related ver. 4-10, is both affecting and edifying. Even when brought into a state of affluence and rest, they were commanded to remember and publicly acknowledge their former degradation and wretchedness, that they might be ever kept humble and dependent; and they must bring their offering as a public acknowledgment to God that it was by his mercy their state was changed, and by his bounty their comforts were continued. The case of the ten lepers that were cleansed, of whom only one returned to give God thanks, is an awful lesson. How many are continually living on the bounty of God, who feel no gratitude for his mercies! Reader, is this thy state? If so, then expect the just God to curse thy blessings.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Moses commands the people to write the law upon stones, when they shall come to the promised land, 1-3. And to set up these stones on Mount Ebal, 4; and to build an altar of unhewn stones, and to offer on it burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, 5-7. The words to be written plainly, and the people to be exhorted to obedience, 8-10. The six tribes which should stand on Mount Gerizim to bless the people, 11, 12. Those who are to stand upon Mount Ebal to curse the transgressors, 13. The different transgressors against whom the curses are to be denounced, 14-26.

AND Moses with the elders of Israel commanded the people, saying, Keep all the commandments which I command you this day.

2 And it shall be, on the day <sup>a</sup> when ye shall pass over Jordan unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, that <sup>b</sup> thou shalt set thee up great stones, and plaster them with plaster:

3 And thou shalt write upon them all the words of this law, when thou art passed over, that thou mayest go in unto the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, a land that floweth with milk and honey: as the LORD God of thy fathers hath promised thee.

4 Therefore it shall be when ye be gone over Jordan that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, <sup>c</sup> in Mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster.

5 And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: <sup>d</sup> thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them.

6 Thou shalt build the altar of the LORD thy God of whole stones: and thou shalt offer burnt-offerings thereon unto the LORD thy God:

7 And thou shalt offer peace-offerings, and shalt eat there, and rejoice before the LORD thy God.

8 And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law very plainly.

9 And Moses, and the priests the Levites, spake unto all Israel, saying, Take heed, and hearken, O Israel; <sup>e</sup> this day thou art become the people of the LORD thy God.

10 Thou shalt therefore obey the voice of the LORD thy God, and do his commandments and his statutes, which I command thee this day.

11 And Moses charged the people the same day, saying,

12 These shall stand <sup>f</sup> upon Mount Gerizim to bless the people, when ye are come over Jordan;

Verse 2. Thou shalt set thee up great stones] How many is not specified, possibly twelve, and possibly only a sufficient number to make a surface large enough to write the blessings and the curses on.

Plaster them with plaster] Perhaps the original should be translated, Thou shalt cement them with cement, because this was intended to be a durable monument. In similar cases it was customary to set up a single stone, or a heap, rudely put together, where no cement or mortar appears to have been used; and because this was common, it was necessary to give particular directions when the usual method was not to be followed. Some suppose that the writing was to be in relievo, and that the spaces between the letters were filled up by the mortar or cement. This is quite a possible case, as the eastern inscriptions are frequently done in this way. [The lime or gypsum with which the stones were to be covered was intended as a surface on which to trace the inscription. The Egyptian hieroglyphics are painted on a similar coating.]

Verse 3. All the words of this law] The law or ordinance in question simply means the blessings and curses mentioned in this and in the following chapter; and indeed these contained a very good epitome of the whole law in all its promises and threatenings, in reference to the whole of its grand moral design.

Verse 4. Set up these stones—in Mount Ebal] So the present Hebrew text, but the Samaritan has Mount Gerizim. Many think that the Jews have here corrupted the text

Simeon, and Levi, and Judah, and Issachar, and Joseph, and Benjamin:

13 And <sup>g</sup> these shall stand upon Mount Ebal <sup>h</sup> to curse; Reuben, Gad, and Asher, and Zebulun, Dan and Naphtali.

14 And <sup>i</sup> the Levites shall speak, and say unto all the men of Israel with a loud voice, 15 <sup>j</sup> Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the LORD, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place. <sup>k</sup> And all the people shall answer and say, Amen.

16 <sup>l</sup> Cursed be he that setteth light by his father or his mother. And all the people shall say, Amen.

17 <sup>m</sup> Cursed be he that removeth his neighbour's landmark. And all the people shall say, Amen.

18 <sup>n</sup> Cursed be he that maketh the blind to wander out of the way. And all the people shall say, Amen.

19 <sup>o</sup> Cursed be he that perverteth the judgment of the stranger, fatherless, and widow. And all the people shall say, Amen.

20 <sup>p</sup> Cursed be he that lieth with his father's wife; because he uncovereth his father's skirt. And all the people shall say, Amen.

21 <sup>q</sup> Cursed be he that lieth with any manner of beast. And all the people shall say, Amen.

22 <sup>r</sup> Cursed be he that lieth with his sister, the daughter of his father, or the daughter of his mother. And all the people shall say, Amen.

23 <sup>s</sup> Cursed be he that lieth with his mother-in-law. And all the people shall say, Amen.

24 <sup>t</sup> Cursed be he that smiteth his neighbour secretly. And all the people shall say, Amen.

25 <sup>u</sup> Cursed be he that taketh reward to slay an innocent person. And all the people shall say, Amen.

26 <sup>v</sup> Cursed be he that confirmeth not all the words of this law to do them. And all the people shall say, Amen.

through their enmity to the Samaritans. On all hands it is allowed that Gerizim abounds with springs, gardens, and orchards, and that it is covered with a beautiful verdure, while Ebal is as naked and as barren as a rock. [Recent criticism defends the reading of the text.]

Verse 12. These shall stand upon Mount Gerizim to bless the people] Instead of upon Mount, &c., we may translate by, as the particle al is sometimes used; for we do not find that the tribes did stand on either mount, for in Josh. viii. 33, when this direction was reduced to practice, we find the people did not stand on the mountains, but over against them on the plain.

Verse 15. Cursed be the man, &c.] Other laws, previously made, had prohibited all these things, and penal sanctions were necessarily understood; but here God more openly declares that he who breaks them is cursed—falls under the wrath and indignation of his Maker and Judge.

Verse 18. The blind to wander out of the way.] A sin against the sixth commandment.

Verse 26. That confirmeth not all the words of this law] The word col, ALL, is not found in any printed copy of the Hebrew text; but the Samaritan preserves it, and so do sua MSS. in the collections of Kennicott and De Rossi, besides several copies of the Chaldean Targum. The Septuagint also, and St. Paul in his quotation of this place, Gal. iii. 10. St. Jerome says that the Jews suppressed the word, that it might not appear that they were bound to fulfil ALL the precepts in the law of Moses.

In pronouncing these blessings and curses, the Talmud says, six tribes went up towards the top of Mount Gerizim, and six towards the top of Mount Ebal; and the priests and the Levites and the ark stood beneath in the midst. The priests encompassed the ark, and the Levites stood round about the priests; and all Israel on this side and on that; see Josh. viii. 33. Then they turned their faces towards Mount Gerizim and pronounced the blessing, Blessed be the man, &c., and those on each side answered AMEN! then they turned their faces towards Mount Ebal, and pronounced the curse, Cursed be the man, &c., and those on each side answered AMEN! till they had finished the blessings and the curses; and afterwards they brought stones and built an altar. Some suppose that the Levites were divided into two grand bodies, part standing at or on Mount Gerizim, and part on Mount Ebal, and that with each division were some of the priests.

It is worthy of remark that Moses assigns to the children of Rachel and Leah, the two mothers of the family, the office of  blessing  the people, as being the most honourable; and these he places on Mount Gerizim. On the contrary, he assigns the office of  cursing  the people to the sons of Zilpah and Bilhah, as being the least honourable office; but with these he joins Zebulun, the youngest of Leah's sons, and Reuben, the eldest. As there must be six tribes on each mountain, it was necessary that while six of the sons of Rachel and Leah, the legitimate wives, should be employed in blessing, two tribes descending from the same mothers should be joined to the other four who proceeded from the handmaids in order to make up the number six. The question is, which two of the more honourable tribes should be joined to the four least honourable in order to complete the number six? Zebulun is chosen, because, being the sixth and youngest of all Leah's sons, he was the least honourable of those who proceeded from the free woman; and Reuben is chosen, who, though the eldest of Jacob's sons, and entitled to the birth-right, had lost it by his transgression. And hence he, in his posterity, was degraded, and was obliged to pronounce the curse, Cursed is he that lieth with his father's wife.

It is strange how long the disgrace, consequent on some flagrant transaction of a parent, may cleave to his posterity! See this exemplified in the posterity of Reuben. Hence, with great propriety we may pray, "Remember not, Lord, our offences, nor the offences of our forefathers; neither take thou vengeance of our sins."—Litany. For the offences of our forefathers may be so remembered against their posterity, that God, in the course of his providence, may still keep up a controversy in secular matters with the descendants (though even pious) of unholy ancestors; for as all men are seminally included in their parents, they come into the world depraved with their depravity, and in some sort liable to their curses, though not so far as to affect their eternal interests without the addition of their own personal offences. Thus God may be said to visit the sins of the fathers upon the children, even unto the third and fourth generation; as he may have a controversy with the land for the evil which has been done in it, and for which no proper atonement has been made. We often see persons tried and afflicted, for whose distresses we can give no legitimate reason. We find others who, though they rise early, sit up late, work hard, eat the bread of carefulness, and have a full knowledge of their business, yet never get on in life. Who can account for this? Shall we say that some injustice in their ancestors has brought down the displeasure of God upon the earthly possessions that descend in that line, so that the goods ill-gotten shall never be permitted to multiply? Parents! leave nothing behind you that you cannot say before your God, with a clear conscience, "This has been honestly earned." If all bequests of a contrary description were to be deducted from last wills and testaments, the quantum of descending property would be, in many cases, small indeed.

A detailed account of the miseries which should be inflicted on them, should they neglect the commandments of the Lord, 20. They shall be smitten with the pestilence, 21; with consumption, fever, &c., 22; drought and barrenness, 23, 24; they shall be defeated by their enemies, 25, 26; they shall be afflicted with the botch of Egypt, 27; with madness and blindness, 28, 29; they shall be disappointed in all their projects, 30; deprived of all their possessions, and afflicted in all their members, 31-35; they and their king shall go into captivity, 36, and become a by-word among the nations, 37. Their land shall be unfruitful, and they shall be the lowest of all people, 38-44. All these curses shall come on them should they be disobedient, 45-48. Character of the people by whom they should be subdued, 49, 50. Particulars of their dreadful sufferings, 51-57. A recapitulation of their wretchedness, 58-63. Verse 2. All these blessings shall come on thee] There are several things in this verse worthy of the most careful observation.

1. If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God.] The voice of God must be heard; without a divine revelation how can the divine will be known? And if not known, it cannot be fulfilled.

2. When God speaks, men must hearken to the words of his mouth. He who does not hearken will not obey.

3 <sup>d</sup> Blessed shalt thou be in the city, and blessed shalt thou be <sup>e</sup> in the field.

4 Blessed shall be <sup>f</sup> the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

3. He who hearkens to the words of God must set out for the kingdom of heaven. The curse must fall on him who stands in the way of sinners, and will overtake them who loiter in the way of righteousness.

4. Those who run in the way of God's testimonies shall have an abundance of blessing. Blessings shall come upon them, and blessings shall overtake them—in every part of their march through life they shall continue to receive the fulfilment of the various promises of God, which relate to 5 Blessed shall be thy basket and thy <sup>a</sup> store.

6 <sup>b</sup> Blessed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and blessed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

7 The LORD <sup>c</sup> shall cause thine enemies that rise up against thee to be smitten before thy face: they shall come out against thee one way, and flee before thee seven ways.

8 The LORD shall <sup>d</sup> command the blessing upon thee in thy <sup>e</sup> storehouses, and in all that thou <sup>f</sup> settest thine hand unto; and he shall bless thee in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee.

9 <sup>g</sup> The LORD shall establish thee an holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, if thou shalt keep the commandments of the LORD thy God, and walk in his ways.

10 And all people of the earth shall see that thou art <sup>h</sup> called by the name of the LORD; and they shall be <sup>i</sup> afraid of thee.

11 And <sup>j</sup> the LORD shall make thee plenteous <sup>k</sup> in goods, in the fruit of thy <sup>l</sup> body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy ground, in the land which the LORD swore unto thy fathers to give thee.

12 The LORD shall open unto thee his good treasure, the heaven <sup>m</sup> to give the rain unto thy land in his season, and <sup>n</sup> to bless all the work of thine hand: and <sup>o</sup> thou shalt lend unto many nations, and thou shalt not borrow.

all circumstances, vicissitudes, trials, stages of life, &c., &c., each overtaking them in the time and place where most needed.

Verse 3. In the city] In all civil employments. In the field—in all agricultural pursuits.

Verse 4. Fruit of thy body] All thy children. Increase of thy kine, &c.; every animal employed in domestic and agricultural purposes shall be under the especial protection of Divine Providence.

Verse 5. Thy basket] Thy olive gathering and vintage, as the basket was employed to collect those fruits.

Store.] Mishereth, kneading-trough, or remainder; all that is laid up for future use, as well as what is prepared for present consumption. Some think that by basket all their property abroad may be meant, and by store all that they have at home, i.e. all that is in the fields, and all that is in the houses.

Verse 6. When thou comest in] From thy employment, thou shalt find that no evil has happened to the family or dwelling in thy absence.

When thou goest out] Thy way shall be made prosperous before thee, and thou shalt have the divine blessing in all thy labours.

Verse 7. The Lord shall cause thine enemies, &c.] This is a promise of security from foreign invasion, or total discomfiture of the invaders, should they enter the land. They shall come against thee one way—in the firmest and most united manner. And flee seven ways—shall be utterly broken, confounded, and finally routed.

Verse 8. The Lord shall command the blessing upon thee] Every thing that thou hast shall come by divine appointment; thou shalt have nothing casually, but every thing, both spiritual and temporal, shall come by the immediate command of God.

Verse 9. The Lord shall establish thee an holy people unto himself] This is the sum of all blessings, to be made holy, and be preserved in holiness.

If thou shalt keep, &c.] Here is the solemn condition; command thee this day, to observe and to do them:

14 <sup>a</sup> And thou shalt not go aside from any of the words which I command thee this day, to the right hand or to the left, to go after other gods to serve them.

15 But it shall come to pass, <sup>b</sup> if thou wilt not hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to observe to do all his commandments and his statutes which I command thee this day; that all these curses shall come upon thee, and <sup>c</sup> overtake thee:

16 Cursed shalt thou be <sup>d</sup> in the city, and cursed shalt thou be in the field.

17 Cursed shall be thy basket and thy store.

18 Cursed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy land, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep.

19 Cursed shalt thou be when thou comest in, and cursed shalt thou be when thou goest out.

20 The LORD shall send upon thee <sup>e</sup> cursing, vexation, and <sup>f</sup> rebuke, in all that thou settest thine hand unto <sup>g</sup> for to do, until thou be destroyed, and until thou perish quickly; because of the wickedness of thy doings, whereby thou hast forsaken me.

21 The LORD shall make <sup>h</sup> the pestilence cleave unto thee, until he have consumed thee from off the land, whither thou goest to possess it.

22 <sup>i</sup> The LORD shall smite thee with a consumption, and with a fever, and with an inflammation, and with an extreme burning, and with the <sup>j</sup> sword, and with <sup>k</sup> blasting, and with mildew; and they shall pursue thee until thou perish.

if they did not keep God's testimonies, taking them for the regulators of their lives, and according to their direction walking in his ways, under the influence and aids of his grace, then the curses, and not the blessings, must be their portion.

Verse 12. The Lord shall open unto thee his good treasure] The clouds, so that a sufficiency of fructifying showers should descend at all requisite times, and the vegetative principle in the earth should unfold and exert itself, so that their crops should be abundant.

Verse 14. Thou shalt not go aside—to the right hand or to the left] The way of obedience is a straight way; it goes right forward; he who declines either to right or left from this path goes astray and misses heaven.

Verse 20. Cursing] This shall be thy state: vexation—grief, trouble, and anguish of heart; rebuke—continual judgments, and marks of God's displeasure.

Verse 21. The pestilence cleave unto thee] The Lord shall cement the pestilence or plague to thee. Sept., The Lord will glue—inseparably attach, the death unto thee. How dreadful a plague it must be that ravages without intermission, any person may conceive who has ever heard of the name.

Verse 22. Consumption] Shachepheth, atrophy through lack of food; from shacaph, to be in want.

Fever] Kaddachath, from kadach, to be kindled, burn, sparkle; a burning inflammatory fever.

Inflammation] Dalleketh, from dalak, to pursue eagerly, to burn after; probably a rapidly consuming cancer.

Extreme burning] Charchar, burning upon burning, scald upon scald; from char, to be heated, enraged, &c. This probably refers, not only to excruciating inflammations on the body, but also to the irritation and agony of a mind utterly abandoned by God, and lost to hope.

Sword] War in general, enemies without, and civil broils within. This was remarkably the case in the last siege of Jerusalem.

Blasting] Shiddaphon, probably either the blighting east

24 The LORD shall make the rain of thy land powder and dust: from heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

25 <sup>b</sup>The LORD shall cause thee to be smitten before thine enemies: thou shalt go out one way against them, and flee seven ways before them: and <sup>c</sup>thalt be <sup>d</sup>removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.

26 And <sup>e</sup>thy carcase shall be meat unto all fowls of the air, and unto the beasts of the earth, and no man shall fray them away.

27 The LORD will smite thee with <sup>f</sup>the botch of Egypt, and with <sup>g</sup>the emerods, and with the scab, and with the itch, whereof thou canst not be healed.

28 The LORD shall smite thee with madness, and blindness, and <sup>h</sup>astonishment of heart:

29 And thou shalt <sup>i</sup>grope at noonday, as the blind gropeth in darkness, and thou shalt not prosper in thy ways: and thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore, and no man shall save thee.

30 <sup>j</sup>Thou shalt betroth a wife, and another man shall lie with her: <sup>k</sup>thou shalt build an house, and thou shalt not dwell therein: <sup>l</sup>thou shalt plant a vineyard, and shalt not <sup>m</sup>gather the grapes thereof.

31 Thine ox shall be slain before thine eyes, and thou shalt not eat thereof: thine ass shall be violently taken away from before thy face, and

<sup>n</sup>shall not be restored to thee: thy sheep shall be given unto thine enemies, and thou shalt have none to rescue them.

32 Thy sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people, and thine eyes shall look, and <sup>o</sup>fail with longing for them all the day long: and there shall be no might in thine hand.

33 <sup>p</sup>The fruit of thy land, and all thy labours, shall a nation which thou knowest not eat up: and thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed always:

34 So that thou shalt be mad <sup>q</sup>for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

35 The LORD shall <sup>r</sup>smite thee in the knees, and in the legs, with a sore botch that cannot be healed, from the sole of thy foot unto the top of thy head.

36 The LORD shall <sup>s</sup>bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and <sup>t</sup>there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone.

37 And thou shalt become <sup>u</sup>an astonishment, a proverb, <sup>v</sup>and a byword, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee.

38 <sup>w</sup>Thou shalt carry much seed out into the field, and shalt gather but little in; for <sup>x</sup>the locust shall consume it.

wind that ruined vegetation, or those awful pestilential winds which suffocate both man and beast wherever they come.

Mildeu] Yerakon, an exudation of the vegetative juice from different parts of the stalk, by which the maturity and perfection of the plant are utterly prevented. It comes from yarak, to throw out moisture.

Of these seven plagues, the five former were to fall on their bodies, the two latter upon their substance. What a fearful thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God!

Verse 23. Thy heaven—shall be brass, and the earth—iron.] The atmosphere should not be replenished with aqueous vapours; hence the earth—the ground, must be wholly intractable, and, through its hardness, incapable of cultivation. God shows them by this that he is Lord of nature: and that drought and sterility are not casualties, but proceed from the immediate appointment of the Lord.

Verse 24. The rain of thy land powder and dust] As their heavens—atmosphere, clouds, &c., were to be as brass—yielding no rain; so the surface of the earth must be reduced to powder; and this, being frequently taken up by the strong winds, would fall down in showers instead of rain. The ophthalmia in Egypt appears to be chiefly owing to a very fine sand, the particles of which are like broken glass, which are carried about by the wind, and, entering into the ciliary glands, produce grievous and continual inflammations.

Verse 27. The Lord will smite thee with the botch] Shechin, a violent inflammatory swelling. In Job ii., one of the Hexapla versions renders it the elephantiasis, a disease the most horrid that can possibly afflict human nature. In this disorder, the whole body is covered with a most loathsome scurf; the joints are all preternaturally enlarged, and the skin swells up and grows into folds like that of an elephant, whence the disease has its name. The skin, through its rigidity, breaks across at all the joints, and a most abominable ichor flows from all the chinks, &c.

Emerods] Ophthalm, from aphal, to be elevated, raised up; swellings, protuberances; probably the bleeding piles.

Scab] Garab does not occur as a verb in the Hebrew Bible, but gharb, in Arabic, signifies a distemper in the corner of the eye, and may amount to the Egyptian ophthalcommon meat; as ch. xx. 6.—<sup>n</sup>Heb. shall not return to thee.—<sup>o</sup>Ps. cxix. 82.—<sup>p</sup>Ver. 51. Lev. xxvi. 16. min, which is so epidemic and distressing in that country: some suppose the scurvy to be intended.

Itch] Cheres, a burning itch, probably something of the erysipelatos kind, or what is commonly called St. Anthony's fire.

Whereof thou canst not be healed.] For as they were inflicted by GOD's justice, they could not of course be cured by human art.

Verse 28. The Lord shall smite thee with madness] Shiggon, distraction, so that thou shalt not know what to do.

And blindness] Both physical and mental; the garab (ver. 27) destroying their eyes, and the judgments of God confounding their understandings.

Astonishment] By the just judgments of God they were so completely confounded, as not to discern the means by which they might prevent or remove their calamities, and to adopt those which led directly to their ruin. How true is the ancient saying, "Those whom God is determined to destroy, he first infatuates."

Verse 29. Thou shalt be only oppressed, &c.] Perhaps no people under the sun have been more oppressed and spoiled than the rebellious Jews. Indeed, this has been their portion with but little intermission for nearly 1,800 years. And still they grope at noon-day, as the blind gropeth in darkness—they do not yet discover, notwithstanding the effulgence of the light by which they are encompassed, that the rejection of their own Messiah is the cause of all their calamities.

Verse 30. Thou shalt betroth a wife, &c.] Can any heart imagine any thing more grievous than the evils threatened in this and the following verses? To be on the brink of all social and domestic happiness, and then to be suddenly deprived of all, and see an enemy possess and enjoy every thing that was dear to them, must excite them to the utmost pitch of distraction and madness.

Verse 32. Thy sons and thy daughters shall be given unto another people] In several countries, particularly in Spain and Portugal, the children of the Jews have been taken from them by order of government, and educated in the Popish faith. There have been some instances of Jewish children being taken from their parents even in Protestant countries.

coasts. but thou shalt not anoint thyself with the oil; for thine olive shall cast his fruit.

41 Thou shalt beget sons and daughters, but <sup>a</sup>thou shalt not enjoy them; for <sup>b</sup>they shall go into captivity.

42 All thy trees and fruit of thy land shall the locust <sup>c</sup>consume.

43 The stranger that is within thee shall get up above thee very high; and thou shalt come down very low.

44 <sup>a</sup>He shall lend to thee, and thou shalt not lend to him; <sup>c</sup>he shall be the head, and thou shalt be the tail.

45 Moreover <sup>a</sup>all these curses shall come upon thee, and shall pursue thee, and overtake thee, till thou be destroyed; because thou hearkenedst not unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which he commanded thee:

46 And they shall be upon thee <sup>a</sup>for a sign and for a wonder, and upon thy seed for ever.

47 <sup>b</sup>Because thou servedst not the Lord thy God with joyfulness, and with gladness of heart, <sup>c</sup>for the abundance of all things;

48 Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies which the Lord shall send against thee, in hunger, and in thirst, and in nakedness, and want of all things; and he <sup>d</sup>shall put a yoke of iron upon thy neck, until he have destroyed thee.

49 <sup>a</sup>The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, <sup>b</sup>as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not <sup>c</sup>understand;

50 A nation <sup>a</sup>of fierce countenance, <sup>c</sup>which shall not regard the person of the old, nor shew favour to the young:

51 And he shall <sup>a</sup>eat the fruit of thy cattle, and the fruit of thy land, until thou be destroyed: which also shall not leave thee either corn, wine, or oil, or the increase of thy kine, or flocks of thy sheep, until he have destroyed thee.

52 And he shall <sup>a</sup>besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down, wherein thou trustedst, throughout all thy land; and he shall besiege thee in all thy gates throughout all thy land, which the Lord thy God hath given thee.

53 And <sup>a</sup>thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own <sup>b</sup>body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the Lord thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee:

54 So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, <sup>a</sup>his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward <sup>b</sup>the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave:

55 So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates.

56 The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, <sup>a</sup>her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter,

57 And toward her <sup>a</sup>young one that cometh out <sup>b</sup>from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates.

58 If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear <sup>a</sup>thy glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD:

59 Then the Lord will make thy plagues <sup>a</sup>wonderful, and the plagues of thy seed, even great plagues, and of long continuance, and sore sicknesses, and of long continuance.

60 Moreover he will bring upon thee all <sup>a</sup>the diseases of Egypt, which thou wast afraid of; and they shall cleave unto thee.

61 Also every sickness, and every plague, which is not written in the book of this law, them will the Lord <sup>b</sup>bring upon thee, until thou be destroyed.

62 And ye <sup>a</sup>shall be left few in number, whereas ye were <sup>b</sup>as the stars of heaven for multitude; because thou wouldest not obey the voice of the Lord thy God.

63 And it shall come to pass, that as the Lord <sup>a</sup>rejoiced over you to do you good, and to multiply you; so the Lord <sup>b</sup>will rejoice over you to destroy you, and to bring you to nought; and ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it.

Verse 35. With a sore botch] Shechin, an inflammatory swelling, a burning boil. See verse 2.

Verse 48. Therefore shalt thou serve thine enemies] Because they would not serve GOD, therefore they became slaves to men.

Verse 49. A nation—from far] Probably the Romans. [Or, in the first instance, the Chaldeans, who are described as flying eagles in Hab. i. 6, Jer. xlviii. 40, Ezek. xvii. 3, 7.]

As the eagle flieth] The very animal on all the Roman standards. The Roman eagle is proverbial.

Whose tongue thou shalt not understand] The Latin language, than which none was more foreign to the structure and idiom of the Hebrew.

Verse 52. He—Nebuchadnezzar first, (2 Kings xxv. 1, 2, &c.) and Titus next; shall beset thee—beset thee round on every side, and cast a trench around thee, viz., lines of circumvallation, as our Lord predicted (see Mat. xxiv. 1, &c., and Luke xxi. 5, &c.); in all thy gates throughout all thy land—all thy fenced cities, which points out that their subjugation should be complete, as both Jerusalem and all their fortified places should be taken. This was done literally by Nebuchadnezzar and the Romans.

Verse 56. The tender and delicate woman] This was literally fulfilled when Jerusalem was besieged by the Romans; a woman named Mary, of a noble family, driven to distraction by famine, boiled and ate her own child!

Verse 57. Toward her young one—and toward her children which she shall bear] There seems to be a species of tautology in the two clauses of this verse, which may be prevented by translating the last word literally, her second-ines, which is the meaning of the Arabic, not badly understood by the Septuagint, the chorion or exterior membrane, which invests the fetus in the womb; and still better trans-people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other; and *there thou shalt serve other gods, which neither thou nor thy fathers have known, even wood and stone.

65 And <sup>b</sup>among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest: <sup>c</sup>but the LORD shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of eyes, and <sup>d</sup>sorrow of mind:

66 And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shalt fear day and night, and shalt have none assurance of thy life:

lated by Luther, the after birth. No words can more forcibly depict the miseries of those dreadful times.

Verse 64. The Lord shall scatter thee among all people] How literally has this been fulfilled! The people of the Jews are scattered over every nation under heaven.

Verse 65. No ease—a trembling heart, and failing of eyes] The trembling of heart may refer to their state of continual insecurity, being, under every kind of government, proscribed, and, even under the most mild, uncertain of toleration and protection; and the failing of eyes, to their vain and over-disappointed expectation of the Messiah.

Verse 68. And the Lord shall bring thee into Egypt again] That is, into another state of slavery and bondage similar to 67 *In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! and at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning! for the fear of thine heart wherewith thou shalt fear, and <sup>f</sup>for the sight of thine eyes which thou shalt see.

68 And the LORD <sup>g</sup>shall bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee, <sup>h</sup>Thou shalt see it no more again: and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bondmen and bondwomen, and no man shall buy you.

that of Egypt, out of which they had been lately brought. And there ye shall be sold, that is, be exposed to sale, or expose yourselves to sale, as the word may be rendered; they were vagrants, and wished to become slaves that they might be provided with the necessaries of life. And no man shall buy you; even the Romans thought it a reproach to have a Jew for a slave, they had become so despicable to all mankind. When Jerusalem was taken by Titus, many of the captives, who were above seventeen years of age, were sent into the works in Egypt.

This is an astonishing chapter; in it are prophecies delivered more than 3,000 years ago, and now fulfilling.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A recapitulation of God's gracious dealings with Israel, 1-8. An exhortation to obedience, and to enter into covenant with their God, that they and their posterity may be established in the good land, 9-15. They are to remember the abominations of Egypt, and to avoid them, 16, 17. He who hardens his heart, when he hears these curses, shall be utterly consumed, 18-21. Their posterity shall be astonished at the desolations that shall fall upon them, 22, 23; shall inquire the reason, and shall be informed that the Lord has done thus to them because of their disobedience and idolatry, 24-28. A caution against prying too curiously into the secrets of the divine providence, and to be contented with what God has revealed, 29.

THESE are the words of the covenant, which the LORD commanded Moses to make with the children of Israel, in the land of Moab, beside *the covenant which he made with them in Horeb.

2 And Moses called unto all Israel, and said unto them, <sup>b</sup>Ye have seen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt unto Pharaoh, and unto all his servants, and unto all his land;

3 *The great temptations which thine eyes have seen, the signs, and those great miracles:

Verse 1. These are the words of the covenant] This verse seems properly to belong to the preceding chapter, as a widely different subject is taken up at ver. 2 of this; and it is distinguished as the 69th verse in some of the most correct copies of the Hebrew Bible.

Commanded Moses to make] To cut, alluding to the covenant sacrifice which was offered on the occasion and divided, as it is explained, Gen. xv. 18.

Beside the covenant which he made—in Horeb.] What is mentioned here is an additional institution to the ten words given on Horeb; and the curses denounced here are different from those denounced against the transgressors of the decalogue.

Verse 4. The Lord hath not given you an heart, &c.] Some critics read this verse interrogatively: And hath not God given you an heart, &c.? because they suppose that God could not reprehend them for the non-performance of a duty, when he had neither given them a mind to perceive the obligation of it, nor strength to perform it, had that obligation been known. Though this is strictly just, yet there is no need for the interrogation, as the words only imply that they had not such a heart, &c., not because God had not given them all the means of knowledge and helps of his grace and Spirit, which were necessary; but they had not made a faithful use of their advantages, and therefore they had not that wise, loving, and obedient heart which they otherwise might have had.

Verse 6. Ye have not eaten bread, &c.] That is, ye have not been supported in an ordinary providential way; I have been continually working miracles for you, that ye might know that I am the Lord. Thus we find that God had furnished them with all the means of this knowledge, and that the means were ineffectual, not because they were not properly calculated to answer God's gracious purpose, but 9 *Keep therefore the words of this covenant, and do them, that ye may <sup>b</sup> prosper in all that ye do.

10 Ye stand this day <sup>a</sup> all of you before the LORD your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel.

11 Your little ones, your wives, and thy stranger that is in thy camp, from <sup>c</sup> the hewer of thy wood unto the drawer of thy water:

12 That thou shouldest <sup>d</sup> enter into covenant with the LORD thy God, and <sup>e</sup> into his oath, which the LORD thy God maketh with thee this day.

13 That he may <sup>f</sup> establish thee to day for a people unto himself, and that he may be unto thee a God, <sup>g</sup> as he hath said unto thee, and <sup>h</sup> as he hath sworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob,

14 Neither with you only <sup>i</sup> do I make this covenant and this oath;

15 But with him that standeth here with us this day before the LORD our God, <sup>j</sup> and also with him that is not here with us this day:

16 (For ye know how we have dwelt in the land of Egypt; and how we came through the nations which ye passed by;

17 And ye have seen their abominations, and their <sup>k</sup> idols, wood and stone, silver and gold, which were among them:)

18 Lest there should be among you man, or woman, or family, or tribe, <sup>l</sup> whose heart turneth away this day from the LORD our God, to go and serve the gods of these nations; <sup>m</sup> lest there should be among you a root that beareth <sup>n</sup> gall <sup>o</sup> and wormwood;

19 And it come to pass, when he heareth the words of this curse, that he bless himself in his heart, saying, I shall have peace, though I walk <sup>p</sup> in the <sup>q</sup> imagination of mine heart, <sup>r</sup> to add <sup>s</sup> drunkenness to thirst:

because the people were not workers with God; consequently they received the grace of God in vain.

Verse 10. Ye stand—all of you before the Lord] They were about to enter into a covenant with God; and as a covenant implies two parties contracting, God is represented as being present, and they and all their families, old and young, come before him.

Verse 12. That thou shouldest enter] Pass through, that is, between the separated parts of the covenant sacrifice.

And into his oath] Thus we find that in a covenant were these seven particulars: 1. The parties about to contract were considered as being hitherto separated. 2. They now agree to enter into a state of close and permanent amity. 3. They meet together in a solemn manner for this purpose. 4. A sacrifice is offered to God on the occasion, for the whole is a religious act. 5. The victim is separated exactly into two equal parts, the separation being in the direction of the spine; and these parts are laid opposite to each other, sufficient room being allowed for the contracting parties to pass between them. 6. The contracting parties meet in the victim, and the conditions of the covenant by which they are to be mutually bound are recited. 7. An oath is taken by these parties that they shall punctually and faithfully perform their respective conditions, and thus the covenant is made and ratified.

Verse 15. Him that standeth here] The present generation. Him that is not here—all future generations of this people.

Verse 18. A root that beareth gall and wormwood] See 20 'The LORD will not spare him, but then <sup>a</sup> the anger of the LORD and <sup>b</sup> his jealousy shall smoke against that man, and all the curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him, and the LORD <sup>c</sup> shall blot out his name from under heaven.

21 And the LORD <sup>d</sup> shall separate him unto evil out of all the tribes of Israel, according to all the curses of the covenant that <sup>e</sup> are written in this book of the law:

22 So that the generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and the stranger that shall come from a far land, shall say, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses <sup>f</sup> which the LORD hath laid upon it;

23 And that the whole land thereof is brimstone, <sup>g</sup> and salt, and burning, that is not sown, nor beareth, nor any grass groweth therein, <sup>h</sup> like the overthrow of Sodom, and Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, which the LORD overthrew in his anger, and in his wrath:

24 Even all nations shall say, <sup>i</sup> "Wherefore hath the LORD done this unto this land? what meaneth the heat of this great anger?"

25 Then men shall say, Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD God of their fathers, which he made with them when he brought them forth out of the land of Egypt:

26 For they went and served other gods, and worshipped them, gods whom they knew not, and <sup>j</sup> whom he had not <sup>k</sup> given unto them:

27 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against this land, <sup>l</sup> to bring upon it all the curses that are written in this book:

28 And the LORD <sup>m</sup> rooted them out of their land in anger, and in wrath, and in great indignation, and cast them into another land, as it is this day.

29 The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law.

Prov. ii. 22.

Heb. iii. 12. It may also signify false doctrines, or idolatrous persons among themselves.

Verse 19. To add drunkenness to thirst] A proverbial expression denoting the utmost indulgence in all sensual gratifications.

Verse 26. Gods—whom he had not given unto them] This is an unhappy translation. Chalak signifies a portion, lot, inheritance, and God is frequently represented in scripture as the portion or inheritance of his people. Here, therefore, I think the original should be rendered, And there was no portion to them, that is, the gods they served could neither supply their wants nor save their souls—they were no portion.

Verse 29. The secret things belong unto the Lord, &c.] This verse has been variously translated. The simple general meaning seems to be this: "What God has thought proper to reveal, he has revealed; what he has revealed is essential to the wellbeing of man, and this revelation is intended not for the present time more, nor for one people, but for all succeeding generations. The things which he has not revealed concern not man, but God alone, and are therefore not to be inquired after." Thus, then, the things that are hidden belong unto the Lord, those that are revealed belong unto us and our children. But possibly the words here refer to the subjects of these chapters, as if he had said, "Apostasy from God and his truth is possible. When a national apostasy among us may take place, is known only to God; but he has revealed himself to us and our children that we may do all the words of this law, and so prevent the dreadful evils that shall fall on the disobedient."

CHAPTER XXX.

Gracious promises are given to the penitent, 1-6. The Lord will circumcise their heart, and put all these curses on their enemies, if they hearken to his voice and keep his testimonies, 7-10. The word is near to them, and easy to be understood, 11-14. Life and death, a blessing and a curse, are set before them; and they are exhorted to love the Lord, obey his voice, and cleave unto him, that they may inherit the land promised to Abraham, 15-20.

AND <sup>a</sup>it shall come to pass, when <sup>b</sup>all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and <sup>c</sup>thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath driven thee,

2 And shalt <sup>d</sup>return unto the LORD thy God, and shalt obey his voice, according to all that I command thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul;

3 <sup>e</sup>That then the LORD thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and <sup>f</sup>gather thee from all the nations, whither the LORD thy God hath scattered thee.

4 <sup>g</sup>If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the LORD thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee:

5 And the LORD thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers.

6 And <sup>h</sup>the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

7 And the LORD thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

Verse 1. When all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse] God speaks of their sin and punishment as certain; yet, at the same time, shows how they might turn to himself and live, even while he was pouring out his indignation upon them because of their transgressions.

Verse 3. Gather thee from all the nations] This must refer to a more extensive captivity than that which they suffered in Babylon.

Verse 5. Will bring thee into the land] As this promise refers to a return from a captivity in which they had been scattered among all nations, consequently it is not the Babylonish captivity which is intended; and the repossession of their land must be different from that which was consequent on their return from Chaldaea.

Verse 6. God will circumcise thine heart] This promise remains yet to be fulfilled. There remaineth, therefore, a rest for this people of God. Now, as the law, properly speaking, made no provision for the circumcision of the heart, which implies the remission of sins, and purification of the soul from all unrighteousness; and as circumcision itself was only a sign of spiritual good, consequently the promise here refers to the days of the Messiah, "for circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, and not in the letter," Rom. ii. 29; and the genuine followers of God "are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands—by the circumcision of Christ," Col. ii. 11, 12. Hence we see these promises cannot be fulfilled to the Jews but in their embracing the gospel of Christ.

Verse 11. This commandment—is not hidden] Not too wonderful or difficult for thee to comprehend or perform, as the word implies. Neither is it afar off—the word or doctrine

8 And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the LORD, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day.

9 <sup>i</sup>And the LORD thy God will make thee plentiful in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good: for the LORD will again <sup>j</sup>rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers:

10 If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

11 For this commandment which I command thee this day, <sup>k</sup>it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off.

12 <sup>l</sup>It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

13 Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it?

14 But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.

15 See, <sup>m</sup>I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

Verse 12. It is not in heaven] Shall not be communicated in that way in which the prophets received the living oracles; but the word shall be made flesh and dwell among you.

Verse 13. Neither is it beyond the sea] Ye shall not be obliged to travel for it to distant nations, because salvation is of the Jews.

Verse 14. But the word is very nigh unto thee] The doctrine of salvation preached by the apostles; in thy mouth, the promises of redemption made by the prophets forming a part of every Jew's creed; in thy heart—the power to believe with the heart unto righteousness, that the tongue may make confession unto salvation.

Verse 15. Life and good] Present and future blessings. Death and evil] Present and future miseries: termed, ver. 19, Life and death, blessing and cursing. And why were these set before them? That they might comprehend their import, feel their importance, choose life, and thus be the favourites of God in time and eternity.

Were there no such thing as free-will in man, who could reconcile these sayings either with sincerity or common sense? God has made the human will free, and there is no power or influence either in heaven, earth, or hell, except the power of God, that can deprive it of its free volitions; of its power to will and nill, to choose and refuse, to act or not act; or force it to sin against God. Hence man is accountable for his actions because they are his; were he necessitated by fate, or sovereign constraint, they could not be his. Hence he is rewardable, hence he is punishable.

17 But if thine heart turn away, so that thou wilt not hear, but shalt be drawn away, and worship other gods, and serve them;

20 That thou mayest love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him: for he is thy <sup>d</sup>life, and the length of <sup>e</sup>thy days: that thou mayest dwell in the land which the Lord swore unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Moses being one hundred and twenty years old and about to die, calls the people together, and exhorts them to courage and obedience, 1-6. Delivers a charge to Joshua, 7, 8. Delivers the law which he had written to the priests, with a solemn charge that they should read it, every seventh year, publicly to all the people, 9-13. The Lord calls Moses and Joshua to the tabernacle, 14. He appears to them, informs Moses of his approaching death, and delivers to him a prophetic and historical song, or poem, which he is to leave with Israel, for their instruction and reproof, 15-21. Moses writes the song the same day, and teaches it to the Israelites, 22; gives Joshua a charge, 23; finishes writing the book of the law, 24. Commands the Levites to lay it up in the side of the ark, 25, 26. Predicts their rebellions, 27. Orders the elders to be gathered together, and shews them what evils would befall the people in the latter days, 28, 29, and repeats the song to them, 30.

AND Moses went and spake these words unto all Israel.

2 And he said unto them, I am an hundred and twenty years old this day; I can no more <sup>b</sup>*go out and come in: also the Lord hath said unto me, c*Thou shalt not go over this Jordan.

3 The Lord thy God, <sup>d</sup>*he will go over before thee, and he will destroy these nations from before thee, and thou shalt possess them: and Joshua, he shall go over before thee, e*as the Lord hath said.

4 <sup>f</sup>And the Lord shall do unto them as he did to Sihon and to Og, kings of the Amorites; and unto the land of them whom he destroyed.

5 And <sup>h</sup>the Lord shall give them up before your face, that ye may do unto them according unto all the commandments which I have commanded you.

6 <sup>i</sup>*Be strong and of a good courage, j*fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the Lord thy God, <sup>k</sup>he

*it is that doth go with thee; l*he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

7 And Moses called unto Joshua, and said unto him in the sight of all Israel, <sup>m</sup>Be strong and of a good courage: for thou must go with this people unto the land which the Lord hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it.

8 And the Lord, <sup>n</sup>*he it is that doth go before thee; o*he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed.

9 And Moses wrote this law, <sup>p</sup>and delivered it unto the priests the sons of Levi, <sup>q</sup>which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and unto all the elders of Israel.

10 And Moses commanded them, saying, *At the end of every seven years, in the solemnity of the r*year of release, <sup>s</sup>in the feast of tabernacles, Verse 2. I am an hundred and twenty years old] The life of Moses was exactly the same in length as the time Noah employed in preaching righteousness to the antediluvian world. These one hundred and twenty years were divided into three remarkable periods: forty years he lived in Egypt, in Pharaoh's court, acquiring all the learning and wisdom of the Egyptians; forty years he sojourned in the land of Midian in a state of preparation for his mission; and forty years he guided, led, and governed the Israelites under the express direction and authority of God.

Verse 6. Be strong] The same word that is used, Exod. iv. 21, ix. 16, for hardening Pharaoh's heart. The Septuagint, in this and the following verse, have, Play the man, and be strong; and from this St. Paul seems to have borrowed his ideas, 1 Cor. xvi. 13.

Verse 8. The Lord—doth go before thee] To prepare thy way, and to direct thee.

He will be with thee] Accompany thee in all thy journeys, and assist thee in all thy enterprises.

He will not fail thee] Thy expectation, however strong and extensive, shall never be disappointed.

Neither forsake thee] He will continue with thee, and in such a manner too that the excellence of the power shall appear to be of him, and not of man.

Verse 9. Moses wrote this law] Not the whole Pentateuch, but either the discourses and precepts mentioned in the preceding chapters, or the book of Deuteronomy, which is most likely.

Verses 10, 11. At the end of every seven years—thou shalt read this law] Every seventh year was a year of release, 11 When all Israel is come to *appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose, *thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing.

12 * Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the LORD your God, and observe to do all the words of this law :

13 And that their children, * which have not known any thing, * may hear, and learn to fear the LORD your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

14 And the LORD said unto Moses, * Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourselves in the tabernacle of the congregation, that * I may give him a charge. And Moses and Joshua went and presented themselves in the tabernacle of the congregation.

15 And * the LORD appeared in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud; and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle.

16 And the LORD said unto Moses, Behold, thou shalt * sleep with thy fathers; and this people will * rise up, and * go a whoring after the gods of the strangers of the land, whither they go to be among them; and will * forsake me, and * break my covenant which I have made with them.

17 Then my anger shall be kindled against them in that day, and * I will forsake them, and I will * hide my face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall * befall them; so that they will say in that day, * Are not these evils come upon us because our God is * not among us ?

18 And * I will surely hide my face in that day for all the evils which they shall have wrought, in that they are turned unto other gods.

19 Now therefore write ye this song for you, and teach it the children of Israel: put it in their mouths, that this song may be * a witness for me against the children of Israel.

20 For when I shall have brought them into the land which I swear unto their fathers, that floweth with milk and honey; and they shall have eaten and filled themselves, * and waxen fat; * then will they turn unto other gods, and serve them, and provoke me, and break my covenant.

21 And it shall come to pass, * when many evils and troubles are befallen them, that this song shall testify * against them as a witness; for it shall not be forgotten out of the mouths of their seed: for * I know their imagination * which * they go about, even now, before I have brought them into the land which I swear.

22 Moses therefore wrote this song the same day, and taught it the children of Israel.

23 * And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, * Be strong, and of a good courage; for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I swear unto them; and I will be with thee.

24 And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of * writing the words of this law in a book until they were finished,

25 That Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, saying, 26 Take this book of the law, * and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God, that it may be there * for a witness against thee.

27 * For I know thy rebellion, and thy * stiff neck: behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD; and how much more after my death ?

28 Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, * and call heaven and earth to record against them.

29 For I know that after my death ye will utterly * corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you; and * evil will befall you * in the latter days; because ye will do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger through the work of your hands.

30 And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended.

chap. xv. 1, at which time the people's minds, being under a peculiar degree of solemnity, were better disposed to hear and profit by the words of God. I suppose on this ground also that the whole book of Deuteronomy is meant, as it alone contains an epitome of the whole Pentateuch.

This commandment, relative to a public reading of the law every seven years, was rarely attended to. It does not appear that from the time mentioned, Josh. viii. 30, till the reign of Jehoshaphat, 2 Chron. xvii. 7, there was any public seventh year reading—a period of 530 years. The next seventh year reading was not till the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah, 2 Chron. xxxiv. 30, a space of two hundred and eighty-two years. Nor do we find any other publicly mentioned from this time till the return from the Babylonish captivity, Neh. viii. 2. Nor is there any other on record from that time to the destruction of Jerusalem.

Verse 16. Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers] Shocheb, thou shalt lie down; it signifies to rest, take rest in sleep, and, metaphorically, to die. Much stress cannot be safely laid on this expression to prove the immortality of the soul, or that the people in the time of Moses had a distinct notion of its separate existence.

Verse 18. I will surely hide my face] Withdraw my approbation and my protection. This is a general meaning of the word in scripture.

Verse 19. Write ye this song] The song which follows in the next chapter. Things which were of great importance and of common concern were, among the ancients, put into verse, as this was found the best method of keeping them in remembrance, especially in those times when writing was little practised.

Verse 21. This song shall testify against them] Because in it their general defection is predicted, but in such a way as to show them how to avoid the evil; and if they did not avoid the evil, and the threatened punishment should come upon them, then the song should testify against them, by showing that they had been sufficiently warned, and might have lived to God, and so escaped those disasters.

Verse 26. Take this book of the law] The standard copy to which all transcripts must ultimately refer: another copy was put into the hands of the priests.

Verse 27. While I am yet alive—ye have been rebellious] Such was the disposition of this people to act contrary to moral goodness that Moses felt himself justified in inferring what would take place from what had already happened.

1. Never was a people more fully and faithfully warned, and from this very circumstance we may see that they were under no fatal constraining necessity to commit sin against God; they might have avoided it, but they would not. Those who abuse God's grace shall not only have that grace taken away from them, but shall be punished for the abuse of it, as well as for the transgression. Every sin is double, and must have a twofold punishment; for 1. Grace is resisted; 2. Transgression is committed; and God will visit for both.

2. How astonishing it is that, with such examples of God's justice before their eyes, the Jews should be so little affected; and that the Gentiles, who have received the gospel of God, should act as if God would no more punish transgression, or that he must be so partial to them as to pass by iniquities for which the hand of his justice still continues heavy upon the descendants of Jacob! Let them take heed, for if God spared not the natural branches, he will not spare them. If they sin after the manner of the Jews, they may expect to be partakers with them in their punishments. What God does to nations he will do to individuals who reject his mercy, or trample under foot his grace; the soul that sinneth, and returns not to God by repentance and faith, shall die. This is a decree of God that shall never be reversed, and every day bears witness how strictly he keeps it in view.

8. The ode composed by Moses for this occasion was probably set to some lively and affecting air, and sung by the people. It would be much easier to keep such a song in remembrance, than an equal quantity of prose. The whole would have the additional circumstances of cadence and tune to cause it to be often repeated; and thus insure its being kept in memory. Poetry, though often, nay, generally abused, is nevertheless a gift from God, and may be employed with the best effect in his service. A very considerable part of the Old Testament is written in poetry; particularly the whole book of Psalms, great part of the prophet Isaiah, the Lamentations, and much of the minor prophets. Those who speak against poetic compositions in the service of God, speak against what they do not understand. All that a man hath should be consecrated to his Maker, and employed in his service; not only the energy of his heart and mind, the physical force of his body, but also the musical tones and modulations of his voice.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The prophetic and historical song of Moses, showing forth the nature of God's doctrine, 1-3. The character of God, 4. The corruption of the people, 5, 6. They are called to remember God's kindness, 7, and his dealings with them during their travels in the wilderness, 8-14. Their ingratitude and iniquity, 15-18. They are threatened with his judgments, 19-28. A pathetic lamentation over them because of their sins, 29-35. Gracious purposes in their behalf, mixed with reproaches for their manifold idolatries, and threatenings against his enemies, 36-42. A promise of salvation to the Gentiles, 43. Moses, having finished the song, warmly exhorts the people to obedience, 44-47. God calls him up to the mount, that he may see the good land, and then die, 48-52.

GIVE ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth.

2 My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain

Verse 1.—This ode is allowed by the best judges to contain a specimen of almost every species of excellence in composition. It is so thoroughly poetic that even the dull Jews themselves found they could not write it in the prose form; and hence it is distinguished as poetry in every Hebrew Bible by being written in its own hemistichs or short half lines, which is the general form of the Hebrew poetry; and were it translated in the same way it would be more easily understood. The song itself has suffered both by transcribers and translators, the former having mistaken some letters in different places, and made wrong combinations of them in others.

[Give ear, O ye heavens] Let angels and men hear, and let this testimony of God be registered both in heaven and earth. Heaven and earth are appealed to as permanent witnesses.

Verse 2. My doctrine] Likhi, from lakach, to take, carry away; to attract or gain over the heart by eloquence or persuasive speech. Hence the Septuagint translate the word apophthegm, a sententious and weighty saying, for the regulation of the moral conduct. Such, properly, are the sayings in this inimitable ode.

[Shall drop as the rain] It shall come drop by drop as the shower, beginning slowly and distinctly, but increasing more and more till the plenitude of righteousness is poured down, and the whole canon of divine revelation completed.

My speech shall distil as the dew] In hot regions dew is often a substitute for rain, without it there could be no fertility, especially in those places where rain seldom falls. And in such places only can the metaphor here used be felt in its perfection. Though we know nothing certain as to the manner of the production of dew, yet we know that the thing exists, and that it is essentially useful. So much we know of the sayings of our God, and the blessed effects produced by them: God hath spoken, and the entering in of his words gives light and life.

As the small rain] Seirim, from saar, to be rough or tempestuous; sweeping showers, accompanied with a strong gale of wind.

And as the showers] Rebim, from rabah, to multiply, to increase greatly; shower after shower, or rather a continual rain, whose drops are multiplied beyond calculation, upon the earth; alluding perhaps to the rainy seasons in the East, or to those early and latter rains so essentially necessary for the vegetation and perfection of the grain.

No doubt these various expressions point out that great variety in the Word or Revelation of God whereby it is suited to every place, occasion, person, and state; being "profitable for doctrine, reproof, and edification in righteousness." See Heb. i. 1, 2. By every prophet, evangelist, and apostle, God speaks a particular language; all is his doctrine, his great system of instruction, for the information and salvation of the souls of men. But some portions are like the sweeping showers, in which the tempest of God's wrath appears against sinners. Others are like the incessant showers of gentle rain, preparing the soil for the germination of the grain, and causing it to take root. And others still are like the dew, mildly and gently insinuating convictions, persuasions, reproofs, and consolations.

Verse 4. He is the rock] The word tsur is rendered creator by some eminent critics; and khalyk is the reading in the Arabic Version. Rab. Moses ben Maimon observes that the word signifies origin, fountain, first cause, &c., his ways are judgment: * a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he.

5 * They have <sup>a</sup> corrupted themselves, * their spot is not the spot of his children, they are a <sup>c</sup> perverse and crooked generation.

6 Do ye thus <sup>e</sup> requite the LORD, O foolish people and unwise? is not he <sup>b</sup> thy father that hath <sup>1</sup> bought thee? hath he not <sup>1</sup> made thee, and established thee?

7 Remember the days of old, consider the years of <sup>k</sup> many generations: <sup>1</sup> ask thy father, and he will shew thee; thy elders, and they will tell thee.

8 When the Most High <sup>m</sup> divided to the nations their inheritance, when he <sup>n</sup> separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel.

and in this way it should be translated here: "He is the first principle, his work is perfect." Some think the word rock gives a very good sense; for, as in those lands rocks were the ordinary places of defence and security, God may be metaphorically represented thus, to signify his protection of his followers. I prefer the opinion of Maimon. [The best critics prefer the authorized version.]

Verse 5. Their spot is not the spot of his children] The interpretation commonly given to these words is as unfounded as it is exceptionable: "God's children have their spots, i.e. their sins, but sin in them is not like sin in others; in others sin is exceedingly sinful, but God does not see the sins of his children as he sees the sins of his enemies," &c. The text, which is very obscure, may be thus translated: He (Israel) hath corrupted himself. They (the Israelites) are not his children: they are spotted. Coverdale renders the whole passage thus: "The froward and overthwart generation have marred themselves to himward, and are not his children, because of their deformity." This is the sense of the verse. There may be here an allusion to the marks which the worshippers of particular idols had on different parts of their bodies, especially on their foreheads; and as idolatry is the crime with which they are here charged, the spot or mark mentioned may refer to the mark or stigma of their idol. This very custom is referred to in Rev. xx. 4, where the beast gives his mark to his followers, and it is very likely that Moses refers to such a custom among the idolatrous of his own day. This removes all the difficulty of the text. God's children have no sinful spots, because Christ saves them from their sins; and their motto or mark is, Holiness to the Lord.

Verse 8. He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel] The Septuagint is very curious, "He established the bounds of the nations according to the number of the angels of God." The meaning of the passage seems to be, that when God divided the earth among mankind, he reserved twelve lots, according to the number of the sons of Jacob, which he was now about to give to their descendants, according to his promise.

Verse 9. The Lord's portion is his people] What an astonishing saying! As holy souls take GOD for their portion, so GOD takes them for his portion. He represents himself as happy in his followers; and they are infinitely happy in, and satisfied with, God as their portion. This is what is implied in being a saint. He who is seeking for an earthly portion, has little commerce with the Most High.

Verse 10. He—the Lord, found him—Jacob, in his descendants, in a desert land—the wilderness. He led him about forty years in this wilderness, Deut. viii. 2, or he compassed him about, i.e. God defended them on all hands, and in all places. He instructed him—giving them statutes and judgment, which, for depth of wisdom and correct political adaptation to times, places, and circumstances, are so wondrously constructed, as essentially to secure the comfort, peace, and happiness of the individual, and the prosperity and permanency of the moral system.

He kept him as the apple of his eye.] Nothing can exceed 9 For * the LORD's portion is his people; Jacob is the <sup>p</sup> lot of his inheritance.

the force and delicacy of this expression. As deeply concerned and as carefully attentive as man can be for the safety of his eye-sight, so was God for the protection and welfare of this people. How amazing this condescension!

Verse 11. As an eagle stirreth up her nest] Flutters over her brood to excite them to fly; or, as some think, disturbs her nest to oblige the young ones to leave it; so God by his plagues in Egypt obliged the Israelites, otherwise very reluctant, to leave a place which he appeared by his judgments to have devoted to destruction.

Fluttereth over her young] Broodeth over them, communicating to them a portion of her own vital warmth: so did God by the influences of his Spirit, enlighten, encourage, and strengthen their minds. It is the same word which is used in Gen. i. 2.

Spreadeth abroad her wings, &c.] In order, not only to teach them how to fly, but to bear them when weary. For to this fact there seems an allusion, it having been generally believed that the eagle, through extraordinary affection for her young, takes them upon her back when they are weary of flying, so that the archers cannot injure them but by piercing the body of the mother. [Some critics make Jehovah the nominative to "spreadeth abroad," and read the passage: "As an eagle, which stirreth up its nest, and soars over its young, he spread out his wings, took him up, &c."]

Verse 12. So the Lord alone did lead him] By his power, and by his only, were they brought out of Egypt, and supported in the wilderness.

And there was no strange god] They had help from no other quarter. The Egyptian idols were not able to save their own votaries; but God not only saved his people, but destroyed the Egyptians.

Verse 13. He made him ride] All the verbs here are in the future tense, because this is a prophecy of the prosperity they should possess in the promised land. The Israelites were to ride—exult, on the high places, the mountains, and hills of their land, in which they are promised the highest degrees of prosperity; as even the rocky part of the country should be rendered fertile by the peculiar benediction of God.

Suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock] Even the most barren places in the country should yield an abundance of aromatic flowers, from which the bees should collect honey in abundance; and even the tops of the rocks afford sufficient support for olive-trees, from the fruit of which they should extract oil in abundance: and all this should be occasioned by the peculiar blessing of God upon the land.

Verse 14. Fat of kidneys of wheat] The expression here may be considered as a very strong and peculiarly happy figure to point out the finest wheat, containing the healthiest and most vigorous germ, growing in a very large and nutritive grain; and consequently the whole figure points out to us a species of wheat, equally excellent both for seed and bread. This beautiful metaphor seems to have escaped the notice of every commentator.

Pure blood of the grape.] Red wine, or the pure juice of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan; and goats, * with the fat of kidneys of wheat; and thou didst drink the pure <sup>b</sup> blood of the grape.

16 <sup>h</sup> They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger.

17 <sup>i</sup> They sacrificed unto devils, <sup>k</sup> not to God; to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not.

18 <sup>l</sup> Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast <sup>m</sup> forgotten God that formed thee.

19 <sup>n</sup> And when the Lord saw it, he <sup>o</sup> abhorred them, <sup>p</sup> because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters.

whatever colour, expressed from the grapes, without any adulteration or mixture with water: blood here is synonymous with juice. This intimates that their vines should be of the best kind, and their wine in abundance, and of the most delicious flavour.

Verse 15. Jeshurun] This appellative is here put for Israel, and, as it comes from yashar, he was right, straight, may be intended to show that the people who once not only promised fair, but were really upright, walking in the paths of righteousness, should, in the time signified by the prophet, not only revolt from God, but actually fight against him; like a full fed horse, who not only will not bear the harness, but breaks away from his master, and endeavours to kick him as he struggles to get loose. All this is spoken prophetically, and is intended as a warning, that the evil might not take place. For were the transgression unavoidable, it must be the effect of some necessitating cause, which would destroy the turpitude of the action, as it referred to Israel; for if the evil were absolutely unavoidable, no blame could attach to the unfortunate agent, who could only consider himself the miserable instrument of a dire necessity. See a case in point, 1 Sam. xxiii. 11, 12, where the prediction appears in the most absolute form, and yet the evil was prevented by the person receiving the prediction as a warning.

The Rock of his salvation.] The figure is admirably well supported through the whole verse. We see, first a miserable, lean steed, taken under the care and into the keeping of a master who provides him with an abundance of provender. We see, secondly, this horse waxing fat under this keeping. We see him, thirdly, breaking away from his master, leaving his rich pasture, and running to the wilderness, unwilling to bear the yoke or harness, or to make any returns for his master's care and attention. We see, fourthly, whence this conduct proceeds—from a want of consciousness that his strength depends upon his master's care and keeping. How easy to apply all these points to the case of the Israelites; and how illustrative of their former and latter state! And how powerfully do they apply to the case of many called Christians, who, having increased in riches, forget that God from whose hand alone those mercies flowed!

Verse 17. They sacrificed unto devils] The original word shedim has been variously understood. The Arabic has sheateen, the plural of Sheetan, Satan, by which the rebellious angels appear to be intended, as the word comes from the root shatana, he was obstinate, proud, refractory, went far away. And it is likely that these fallen spirits, having utterly lost the empire at which they aimed, got themselves worshipped under various forms and names in different places. The Anglo-Saxon has devils.

21 <sup>a</sup> They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger <sup>b</sup> with their vanities: and <sup>c</sup> I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

22 For <sup>d</sup> a fire is kindled in mine anger, and <sup>e</sup> shall burn unto the lowest hell, and <sup>f</sup> shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains.

23 I will <sup>g</sup> heap mischiefs upon them; <sup>h</sup> I will spend mine arrows upon them.

24 They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction: I will also send <sup>i</sup> the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of serpents of the dust.

25 <sup>j</sup> The sword without and terror <sup>k</sup> within, shall <sup>l</sup> destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also, with the man of grey hairs.

New gods that came newly up] Which came up from their neighbours; viz., the Moabites and Ammonites, whose gods they received and worshipped on their way through the wilderness, and often afterwards.

Verse 19. When the Lord saw it, &c.] More literally, And the Lord saw it, and through indignation he reprobated his sons and his daughters.

Verse 20. Children in whom is no faith.] No steadfastness. They are fickle, because they are faithless.

Verse 21. They have moved me to jealousy] This verse contains a very pointed promise of the calling of the Gentiles, in consequence of the rejection of the Jews threatened ver. 19; and to this great event it is applied by St. Paul. Rom. x. 19.

Verse 22. The lowest hell] Sheol tachtith, the very deepest destruction; a total extermination, so that the earth—their land, and its increase and all their property, should be seized; and the foundations of their mountains—their strongest fortresses, should be razed to the ground.

Verse 23. I will spend mine arrows upon them.] The judgments of God in general are termed the arrows of God, Job vi. 4; Ps. xxxviii. 2, 3; xci. 5; see also Ezek. v. 16; Jer. i. 14; 2 Sam. xxii. 14, 15.

It was customary among the heathens to represent any judgment from their gods under the notion of arrows, especially a pestilence; and one of their greatest deities, Apollo, is ever represented as bearing a bow and quiver full of deadly arrows.

Verse 24. They shall be burnt with hunger] Their land shall be cursed, and famine shall prevail. This is one of the arrows.

Burning heat] No showers to cool the atmosphere; or rather, boils, blains, and pestilential fevers; this was a second.

Bitter destruction] The plague; this was a third.

Teeth of beasts—with the poison of serpents] The beasts of the field should multiply upon and destroy them; this was a fourth: and poisonous serpents, infesting all their steps, and whose mortal bite should produce the utmost anguish, were to be a fifth arrow. Added to all these, the sword of their enemies—terror among themselves, ver. 25, and captivity were to complete their ruin, and thus the arrows of God were to be spent upon them. There is a beautiful saying in the Toozuki Teemour, which will serve to illustrate this point, while it exhibits one of the finest metaphors that occurs in any writer, the sacred writers excepted.

It was once demanded of the fourth Khaleefeh (Aaly) on whom be the mercy of the Creator, 'If the canopy of heaven were a bow; and if the earth were the cord thereof; and if Verse 27. Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy? Had not God punished them in such a way as proved that his hand and not the hand of man had done it, the heathens would have boasted of their prowess, and Jehovah would have been blasphemed, as not being able to protect his worshippers, or to punish their infidelities. Titus, when he took Jerusalem, was so struck with the strength of the place that he acknowledged that if God had not delivered it into his hands, the Roman armies never could have taken it.

Verse 29. That they would consider their latter end. Properly, their latter times—the glorious days of the Messiah, who, according to the flesh, should spring up among them. Should they carefully consider this subject, and receive the promised Saviour, they would consequently act as persons under infinite obligation to God; his strength would be their shield, and then,—

Verse 30. How should one chase a thousand? If therefore they had not forgotten their Rock, God their author and defence, it could not possibly have come to pass that a thousand of them should flee before one of their enemies.

Verse 31. For their rock. The gods and pretended protectors of the Romans.

Is not as our Rock? Have neither power nor influence like our God.

Our enemies themselves being judges. For they often acknowledged the irresistible power of that God who fought for Israel.

Verse 32. For their vine is of the vine of Sodom. The Jews are as wicked and rebellious as the Sodomites; for by the vine the inhabitants of the land are signified, see Isa. v. 2, 7.

Their grapes. Their actions are gall and wormwood—producing nothing but mischief and misery to themselves and others.

Their clusters are bitter. Their united exertions, as well as their individual acts, are sin, and only sin continually. That by vine is meant the people, and by grapes their moral conduct, is evident from Isa. v. 1-7. It is very likely that the grapes produced about the lake Asphaltites, where Sodom and Gomorrah formerly stood, were not only of an acid, disagreeable taste, but of a deleterious quality; and to this, it is probable, Moses here alludes.

Verse 33. Their wine. Their system of doctrines and teaching, is the poison of dragons, &c., fatal and destructive to all them who follow it.

Verse 34. Sealed up among my treasures? Doods or engagements by which persons were bound at a specified time to fulfil certain conditions, were sealed and laid up in places of safety; so here God's justice is pledged to avenge the quarrel of his broken covenant on the disobedient Jews, but the time and manner were sealed in his treasures, and known only to himself.

Verse 36. The Lord shall judge his people. He has an absolute right over them as their creator, and authority to punish them for their rebellions as their sovereign; yet he will repent himself—he will change his manner of conduct towards them, when he seeth that their power is gone—when they are entirely subjugated by their adversaries, so that their political power is entirely destroyed; and there is none shut up or left—not one strong place untaken, and not one family left, all being carried into captivity, or scattered into strange lands. Or he will do justice to his people, and avenge them of their adversaries; see ver. 35.

Verse 37. He shall say. This may refer to the preaching of the gospel to them in the latter days.

Verse 39. See now that I—am he. Be convinced that God alone can save, and God alone can destroy, and that your idols can neither hurt nor help you.

I kill, and I make alive, &c. My mercy is as great as my justice, for I am as ready to save the penitent as I was to punish the rebellious.

Verse 42. From the beginning of revenges. The word paroth, rendered revenges, a sense in which it never appears to be taken, has rendered this place very perplexed and obscure.

Probably it may be more properly translated, from the naked head—the enemy shall have nothing to shield him from my vengeance; the crown of dignity shall fall off, and even the helmet be no protection against the sword and arrows of the Lord.

Verse 43. Rejoice, O ye nations. Ye Gentiles, for the casting off of the Jews shall be the means of your ingathering with his people, for they shall not be utterly cast off. (See Rom. xv. 9, for in this way the apostle applies it.) But how shall the Gentiles be called, and the Jews have render vengeance to his adversaries, and * will be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

44 And Moses came and spake all the words of this song in the ears of the people, he, and <sup>b</sup> Hoshea the son of Nun.

45 And Moses made an end of speaking all these words to all Israel :

46 And he said unto them, <sup>c</sup> Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law.

47 For it is not a vain thing for you ; <sup>d</sup> because it is your life : and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land, whither ye go over Jordan to possess it.

48 <sup>e</sup> And the Lord spake unto Moses that selfsame day, saying, their iniquity purged? He will be merciful unto his land and to his people, he shall cause an atonement to be made for his land and people ; i.e. Jesus Christ, the long-promised Messiah, shall be crucified for Jews and Gentiles, and the way to the holiest be made plain by his blood.

This is a very proper and encouraging conclusion to the awfully important matter of this poem.

Verse 44. And Moses came] Probably from the tabernacle, where God had given him this prophetic ode, and he rehearsed it in the ears of the people.

Verse 46. Set your hearts unto all the words] Another proof that all these awful denunciations of divine wrath, though delivered in an absolute form, were only declaratory of what God would do if they rebelled against him.

Verse 47. Through this thing ye shall prolong your days] Instead of being cut off, as God here threatens, ye shall be preserved and rendered prosperous in the land which, when they passed over Jordan, they should possess.

Verse 49. Get thee up into this mountain Abarim] The mount of the passages, i.e. of the Israelites when they entered into the promised land.

Verse 50. And die in the mount—as Aaron] Some have supposed that Moses was translated ; but if so, then Aaron was translated, for what is said of the death of the one, is said of the death of the other.

Verse 52. Thou shalt see the land before thee] How glorious to depart out of this life with God in his heart and heaven in his eye ! his work, his great, unparalleled usefulness, ending only with his life.

In writing this ode the design of Moses was,

1. To set forth the Majesty of God. He shows that from his holiness and purity he must be displeased with sin ; from his justice and righteousness he must punish it ; and from the goodness and infinite benevolence of his nature he is ever disposed to help the weak, instruct the ignorant, and show mercy to the wretched, sinful sons and daughters of men.

2. To show the duty and interest of his people. To have such a Being for their friend is to have all possible happiness, both spiritual and temporal, secured ; to leave him for their enemy is to be exposed to inevitable destruction and ruin.

49 Get thee up into this 'mountain Abarim, unto Mount Nebo, which is in the land of Moab, that is over against Jericho ; and behold the land of Canaan, which I gave unto the children of Israel for a possession :

51 Because <sup>b</sup> ye trespassed against me among the children of Israel at the waters of 'Meribah-kadesh, in the wilderness of Zin ; because ye <sup>c</sup> sanctified me not in the midst of the children of Israel.

3. To warn them against irreligion and apostasy ; to show the possibility of departing from God, and the miseries that would overwhelm them and their posterity should they be found walking in opposition to the laws of their Creator.

4. To give a proper and impressive view of the providence of God, by referring to the history of his gracious dealings with them and their ancestors.

5. To leave on record an everlasting testimony against them, should they ever cast off his fear and pollute his worship, which should serve at once as a warning to the world, and a vindication of his justice, when the judgments he had threatened were found to be poured out upon them ; for he who loved them so long and so intensely could not become their enemy but in consequence of the greatest and most unprincipled provocations.

6. To show the shocking and unprecedented ingratitude which induced a people so highly favoured, to sin against their God ; and how reasonable and just it was, that God should pour out upon them such judgments as he had never inflicted on any other people, and so mark their disobedience and ingratitude, (that the punishment should bear some proportion to the guilt, and that their preservation as a distinct people might afford a feeling proof both of the providence and justice of God.

7. To show the glory of the latter days in the re-election of the long reprobated Jewish nation, and the final diffusion of his grace and goodness over the earth by means of the gospel of Christ.

And all this is done with such strength and elegance of diction, with such appropriate, energetic, and impressive figures and metaphors, and in such a powerful torrent of that soul-penetrating, pure poetic spirit that comes from the bosom of God, that the reader is alternately elated or depressed, filled with compunction or confidence, with despair or hope, according to the quick transitions of the inimitable writer to the different topics which form the subject of this incomparable and wondrously varied ode.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Moses delivers a prophetic blessing to the children of Israel, 1. The introduction, 2-5. Prophetic declarations concerning Reuben, 6 ; concerning Judah, 7 ; concerning Levi, 8-11 ; concerning Benjamin, 12 ; concerning Joseph, 13-17 ; concerning Zebulun, 18, 19 ; concerning Gad, 20, 21 ; concerning Dan, 22 ; concerning Naphtali, 23 ; concerning Asher, 24, 25. The glory of the God of Jeshurun, and the glorious privileges of his true followers, 26-29.

AND this is <sup>a</sup>the blessing wherewith Moses, <sup>b</sup>the man of God, blessed the children of Israel before his death.

3 Yea, <sup>g</sup>he loved the people; <sup>h</sup>all his saints are in thy hand: and they <sup>i</sup>sat down at thy feet; <sup>j</sup>every one shall <sup>k</sup>receive of thy words.

4 <sup>l</sup>Moses commanded us a law, <sup>m</sup>even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.

5 And he was <sup>n</sup>king in <sup>o</sup>Jeshurun, when the Verse 1. And this is the blessing wherewith Moses—blessed, &c. The general nature of this solemn introduction is to show the foundation which Moses had for blessing his brethren, viz., because God had frequently manifested his glory in their behalf; and the several parts of this introduction are disposed in the following order:

1. The manifestation of the Divine Glory on Sinai, as it was prior in time and more magnificent in splendour, is mentioned first.

2. That God manifested his glory at Seir is evident from Judg. v. 4.

3. The next place is Paran, where the glory of the Lord appeared before all the children of Israel, Num. xiv. 10.

Instead of he came with ten thousand saints, by which our translators have rendered meribehoth kadesh, Dr. Kennicott reads Meribah-Kadesh, the name of a place: for we find that, towards the end of forty years, the Israelites came to Kadesh, Num. xx. 1, which was also called Meribah, on account of their contentious opposition to the determinations of God in their favour, ver. 13; and there the glory of the Lord again appeared, as we are informed ver. 6. These four places, Sinai, Seir, Paran, and Meribah-Kadesh, mentioned by Moses in the text, are the identical places where God manifested his glory in a fiery appearance, the more illustriously to proclaim his special providence over and care of Israel. [This criticism is not reliable. The probability is that the three clauses do not refer to different manifestations, but to the one manifestation of God on Sinai, which sent its beams from Seir to Paran, the eastern and northern extremities of the desert.]

Instead of a fiery law, esh dath, we may read, following the Samaritan Version, esh ur, a fire shining out upon them. In vindication of this change in the original, it may be observed, 1. That, though dath signifies a law, yet it is a Chaldee term, and appears no where in any part of the sacred writing, previously to the Babylonish captivity; torah being the term constantly used to express the Law at all times prior to the corruption of the Hebrew by the Chaldees. 2. That the word itself is obscure in its present situation, as the Hebrew Bibles write it and esh in one word, eshdath, which has no meaning; and which, in order to give it one, the Massorah directs should be read separate, though written connected. 3. That the word is not acknowledged by the two most ancient Versions, the Septuagint and Syriac. 4. That in the parallel place, Hab. iii. 8, 4, a word is used which expresses the rays of light, karnayim, horns, that is, splendours, rays, or effulgence of light. 5. That on all these accounts, together with the almost impossibility of giving a rational meaning to the text as it now stands, the translation contended for should be adopted. [There is no need for the proposed change, as the word eshdath has a meaning. Fürst translates it "the south country," but Keil, with many others, renders it "shooting fire," i.e. lightning. The whole passage is obscure.]

Verse 6. Let Reuben live, and not die Though his life and his blessings have been forfeited by his transgression with his father's concubine, Gen. xlix. 8, 4; and in his rebellion with Korah, Num. xvi. 1, &c., let him not become extinct as a tribe in Israel.

And let not his men be few. It is possible that this heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together.

6 Let Reuben live, and not die; and let not his men be few.

7 And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said, Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: <sup>a</sup>let his hands be sufficient for him; and be thou <sup>b</sup>an help to him from his enemies.

8 And of Levi he said, <sup>c</sup>Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one, <sup>d</sup>whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

9 Who said unto his father and to his mother, I have not <sup>e</sup>seen him; <sup>f</sup>neither did he acknowledge clause belongs to Simeon. In the Alexandrian copy of the Septuagint the clause stands thus: and let SIMEOON be very numerous, but none of the other Versions insert the word. As the negative particle is not in the Hebrew, but is supplied in our translation, and the word Simeon is found in one of the most ancient and most authentic copies of the Septuagint Version; and as Simeon is nowhere else mentioned here, if not implied in this place, probably the clause anciently stood: Let Reuben live, and not die; but let the men of Simeon be few. That this tribe was small when compared with the rest, and with what it once was, is evident enough from the first census, taken after they came out of Egypt, and that in the plains of Moab, nearly forty years after. In the first, Simeon was 59,800; in the last, 22,200, a decrease of 37,600 men! [But Simeon may have been passed over by Moses, and included only in the general blessing, because, according to Jacob, he was to be scattered abroad in Israel, Gen. xlix. 7.]

Verse 7. And this is the blessing of Judah Though the word blessing is not in the text, yet it may be implied from ver. 1. Let his hands be sufficient for him—let him have a sufficiency of warriors always to support the tribe, and vindicate its rights; and let his enemies never be able to prevail against him! Three things are expressed here: 1. That the tribe of Judah, conscious of its weakness, shall depend on the Most High, and make prayer and supplication to him; 2. That God will hear such prayer; 3. That his hands shall be increased, and that he shall prevail over his enemies. This blessing has a striking affinity with that which this tribe received from Jacob, Gen. xlix. 9; and both may refer to our blessed Lord, who sprang from this tribe, as is noticed on the above passage, who has conquered our deadly foes by his death, and whose praying posterity ever prevail through his might.

Verse 8. Thy holy one Aaron primarily, who was anointed the high-priest of God, and whose office was the most holy that man could be invested with. Therefore Aaron was called God's holy one, and the more especially so as he was the type of the MOST HOLY and blessed Jesus, from whom the Urim—all light and wisdom, and Thummim—all excellence, completion, and perfection, are derived.

Whom thou didst prove, &c. God contended with Aaron as well as with Moses at the waters of Meribah, and excluded him from the promised land, because he did not sanctify the Lord before the people.

From the words of St. Paul, 1 Cor. x. 8-12, it is evident that these words, at least in a secondary sense, belong to Christ. [Some think that the "holy one" is Levi, the tribe-father.]

Verse 9. Who said unto his father, &c. I suppose these words to be primarily spoken of Aaron and the tribe of Levi. The law had strictly enjoined that if the father, mother, brother, or child of the high-priest should die, he must not mourn for them, but act as if they were not his kindred; see Lev. xxi. 11, 12. Neither must Aaron mourn for his sons Nadab and Abihu, &c., though not only their death, but the circumstances of it, were the most afflicting that could possibly affect a parent's heart. Besides, the high-priest was forbidden, on pain of death, to go out from the door of the tabernacle, Lev. x. 2-7, for God would have his brethren, nor knew his own children: for *they have observed thy word, and kept thy covenant.

10 <sup>b</sup>They <sup>c</sup>shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law: <sup>d</sup>they <sup>e</sup>shall put incense <sup>f</sup>before thee, <sup>g</sup>and whole burnt-sacrifice upon thine altar.

11 Bless, LORD, his substance, and <sup>h</sup>accept the work of his hands: smite through the loins of them that rise against him, and of them that hate him, that they rise not again.

12 And of Benjamin he said, The beloved of the LORD shall dwell in safety by him; and the LORD shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders.

13 And of Joseph he said, 'Blessed of the LORD be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for <sup>i</sup>the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath;

14 And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things <sup>k</sup>put forth by the <sup>l</sup>moon.

*See Jer. xviii. 18. Mal ii. 5, 6.—<sup>b</sup>Or, Let them teach, &c.—<sup>c</sup>Lev. x. 11. Ch. xvii. 9, 10, 11. xxiv. 8. Ezek. xlv. 23, 24. them more to regard their function and duty in his service, than any natural affection whatever. And herein Christ was figured, Mat. xii. 46-50. It is likely also that Moses may refer here to the fact of the Levites, according to the command of Moses, killing every man his brother, friend, neighbour, and even son, who had sinned in worshipping the golden calf, Exod. xxxii. 26; and in this way the Chaldee Paraphrast understands the words.

Verse 10. They shall teach Jacob, &c. This was the office of the Levites. And of their faithfulness in this respect God bears testimony by the prophet, Mal. ii. 5, 6.

Verse 11. Bless, Lord, his substance This blessing was peculiarly necessary, because they had no inheritance among the children of Israel, and lived more immediately than others upon the providence of God. Yet, as they lived by the offerings of the people and the tithes, the increase of their substance necessarily implied the increase of the people at large: the more fruitful the land was, the more abundant would the tithes of the Levites be; and thus in the increased fertility of the land the substance of Levi would be blessed.

Verse 12. Of Benjamin—the beloved of the Lord Alluding to his being particularly beloved of his father Jacob, Gen. xlix. 27, &c.

Shall dwell in safety by him That is, by the Lord, whose temple, which is considered as his dwelling-place, was in the tribe of Benjamin, for a part of Jerusalem belonged to this tribe.

And he shall dwell between his shoulders—within his coats, or in his chief city, viz., Jerusalem, where the temple of God was built on his mountains, Zion and Moriah, here poetically termed his shoulders. [The expression, “between his shoulders,” is simply proverbial.]

Verse 13. Blessed—be his land The whole of this passage certainly relates to the peculiar fertility of the soil in the portion that fell to this tribe, which, the Jews say, yielded a greater abundance of all good things than any other part of the promised land.

The precious things of heaven The peculiar mildness and salubrity of its atmosphere.

For the dew A plentiful supply of which was a great blessing in the dry soil of a hot climate.

The deep that coucheth beneath Probably referring to the plentiful supply of water which should be found in digging wells: hence the Septuagint have fountains of the deep.

Verse 14. The precious fruits brought forth by the sun All excellent and important productions of the earth, which come to perfection once in the year. So the precious things put forth by the moon may imply those vegetables which require but about a month to bring them to perfection, or vegetables of which several crops may be had in the course of a year.

Verse 15. The chief things of the ancient mountains

15 And for the chief things of <sup>m</sup>the ancient mountains, and for the precious things <sup>n</sup>of the lasting hills,

16 And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof; and for the good will of <sup>o</sup>him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing <sup>p</sup>come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

17 His glory is like the <sup>q</sup>firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like <sup>r</sup>the horns of <sup>s</sup>unicorns: with them <sup>t</sup>he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and <sup>u</sup>they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh.

18 And of Zebulun he said, <sup>v</sup>Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out; and, Issachar, in thy tents.

19 They shall <sup>w</sup>call the people unto the mountain: there <sup>x</sup>they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness: for they shall suck of the abundance of the seas, and of treasures hid in the sand.

And from the head or top of the ancient or eastern mountains, the precious things or productions being still understood. And this probably refers to the large trees, &c., growing on the mountain tops, and the springs of water issuing from them. The mountains of Gilead may be here intended, as they fell to the half tribes of Manasseh. And the precious things of the lasting hills may signify the metals and minerals which might be digged out of them.

Verse 16. The good-will of him that dwelt in the bush The favour of him who appeared in the burning bush on Mount Sinai, who there, in his good-will—mere love and compassion, took Israel to be his people; and who has preserved, and will preserve, in tribulation and distress, all those who trust in him, so that they shall as surely escape unhurt, as the bush, though enveloped in fire, was unburnt.

The top of the head, &c. The same words are used by Jacob in blessing this tribe, Gen. xlix. 26. The meaning appears to be that God should distinguish this tribe in a particular way, as Joseph himself was separated, nazir, a Nazarite, a consecrated prince to God from among and in preference to all his brethren.

Verse 17. His glory is like the firstling of his bullock This similitude is very obscure. A bullock was the most excellent of animals among the Jews, not only because of its acceptableness in sacrifice to God, but because of its great usefulness in agriculture. There is something peculiarly noble and dignified in the appearance of the ox, and his greatest ornament are his fine horns; these the inspired penman has particularly in view, as the following clause proves; and it is well known that in scriptural language horns are the emblem of strength, glory, and sovereignty.

His horns are like the horns of unicorns See the notes on Num. xxiii. 22, xxiv. 8. Reem is in the singular number, and because the horns of a unicorn, a one-horned animal, would have appeared absurd, our translators, with an unfaithfulness not common to them, put the word in the plural number.

To the ends of the earth Of the land of Canaan, for Joshua with his armies conquered all this land, and drove the ancient inhabitants out before him.

They are the ten thousands of Ephraim, &c. That is, The horns signify the ten thousands of Ephraim and the thousands of Manasseh. Jacob prophesied, Gen. xlviii. 19, that the younger should be greater than the elder; so here TENS of thousands are given to Ephraim, and only thousands to Manasseh.

Verse 18. Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out That is, Thou shalt be very prosperous in thy coasting voyages; for this tribe's situation was favourable for traffic, having many sea-ports.

And, Issachar, in thy tents That is, as Zebulun should be prosperous in his shipping and traffic, so should Issachar be in his tents—his agriculture and pasturage.

Verse 19. They shall call the people unto the mountain By their traffic with the Gentiles (for so I think ammin should be understood here) they shall be the instruments in God's hands of converting many to the true faith; so that, instead of sacrificing to idols, they should offer sacrifices of righteousness.

They shall suck of the abundance of the seas] That is, grow wealthy by merchandise.

And of treasures hid in the sand.] Jonathan ben Uzziel has probably hit upon the true meaning of this difficult passage: "From the sand," says he, "are produced looking-glasses and glass in general; the treasures—the method of finding and working this was revealed to these tribes." Some think that the celebrated shell-fish called murex, out of which the precious purple dye was extracted, is here intended by the treasure hid in the sand: this also Jonathan introduces in this verse. And others think that it is a general term for the advantages derived from navigation and commerce. [Such an interpretation is forced. The reference is evidently to the treasures of both sea and land.]

Verse 20. Blessed be he that enlarge<sup>d</sup> Gad] As deliverance out of distress is termed enlarging (see Ps. iv. 1), this may refer to God's deliverance of the tribe of Gad out of that distress mentioned, Gen. xlix. 19, and to the enlargement obtained through means of Jephthah, Judg. xi. 33, and probably also to the victories obtained by Gad and Reuben over the Hagarites, 1 Chron. v. 18-20.

He dwelleth as a lion] Probably the epithet of lion or lion-like was applied to this tribe from their fierce and warlike disposition. And on this supposition, 1 Chron. xii. 8 will appear to be a sufficient comment. Tearing the arm or shoulder with the crown of the head seems simply to mean that no force should be able to prevail over them, or stand against them; as the arm or shoulder signifies dominion, and the crown of the head sovereign princes.

Verse 21. He provided the first part] That is, he chose for himself a very excellent portion, viz., the land of Sihon and Og, in which this tribe had requested to be settled by the lawgiver, viz., Moses, from whom they requested this portion, Num. xxxii. 1-5.

He came with the heads of the people] Notwithstanding this portion fell unto them on the east side of Jordan, yet they proceeded with the heads of the people, the chiefs of the other tribes.

To execute the justice of the Lord] To extirpate the old inhabitants of the country, according to the decree and purpose of the Lord.

Verse 22. Dan is a lion's whelp: he shall leap from Bashan.] The Jewish interpreters observe that Bashan was a place much frequented by lions, who issued thence into all parts to look for prey. By this probably Moses intended to point out the strength and prowess of this tribe, that it should extend its territories, and live a sort of predatory life. Jacob, in his prophetic blessing of this tribe, represents it under the notion of a serpent in the path, Gen. xlix. 17. The character there, and that given here, constitute the complete warrior—stratagem and courage.

Verse 23. O Naphtali, satisfied with favour] Though this may refer to the very great fertility of the country that fell to this tribe, yet certainly something more is intended. Scarcely any of the tribes was more particularly favoured by the wondrous mercy and kindness of God, than this and the tribe of Zebulun. The light of the glorious gospel of Christ shone brightly here, Mat. iv. 18, 16. Christ's chief residence was at Capernaum in this tribe, Mat. ix. 1, Mark ii. 1; and this city, through Christ's constant residence, and the mighty miracles he wrought in it, is represented as being exalted unto heaven, Mat. xi. 23. And it is generally allowed that the apostles were principally of the tribe of Naphtali. The word yam, which we here translate west, literally signifies the sea, and probably refers to the sea of Genesareth, which was in this tribe.

Verse 24. Let Asher be blessed with children] Let him have a numerous posterity, continually increasing.

Let him be acceptable to his brethren] May he be in perfect union and harmony with the other tribes.

Let him dip his foot in oil.] Let him have a fertile soil, and an abundance of all the conveniences and comforts of life.

Verse 25. Thy shoes shall be iron and brass] Some suppose this may refer to the iron and copper mines in their territory; but it is more likely that it relates to their warlike disposition, as we know that greaves, boots, shoes, &c., of iron, brass, and tin, were used by ancient warriors. Goliath had greaves of brass on his legs, 1 Sam. xvii. 6; and the brass-booted Greeks, is one of the epithets given by Homer to his heroes. [Keil reads the original not shoes, but bolts, a poetical expression for "fortresses."]

And as thy days, so shall thy strength be.] The original is only two words, the latter of which has been translated in a great variety of ways. Of the first term there can be no doubt, it literally means, and as thy days; the second word, dobe, occurs nowhere else in the Hebrew Bible: the Septuagint have rendered it by strength, and most of the Versions have followed them; but others have rendered it affliction, old age, fame, weakness, &c., &c. Where a word occurs not as a verb in the Hebrew Bible, its root may be legitimately sought in the Arabic. In this language the root is found; daba signifies he rested, was quiet. This gives a very good sense, and a very appropriate one; for as the borders of this tribe lay on the vicinity of the Phœnicians, it was naturally to be expected that they should be constantly exposed to irruptions, pillage, &c.; but God, to give them confidence in his protection, says, According to thy days—all circumstances and vicissitudes, so shall thy rest be—while faithful to thy God no evil shall touch thee; thy days shall increase, and thy quiet be lengthened out.

Moses now addresses all the tribes collectively under the names Jeshurun and Israel; and in an ode of astonishing energy and elegance describes this wondrous people, and their still more wonderful privileges.

Verse 26. There is none like unto the God of Jeshurun] We have already seen the literal meaning of Jeshurun; but besides its literal meaning, it seems to be used as an expression of particular affection: hence Calmet understands it as a diminutive of the word Israel.

Israel's God, and God's Israel, have no fellows. What were all the gods of the nations, even supposing they were real beings, in comparison of the Almighty? And what nation under heaven could be compared to the Israel of God? It was, however, from God's excellence that they derived theirs.

Rideth upon the heaven, &c.] Unites heaven and earth in thy defence and support, and comes with irresistible velocity to succour and defend thee, and to discomfit thine adversaries.

Verse 27. The eternal God] The former God; He who was of old. Not like the gods which were lately come up. He who ever was and ever will be; and he who was, is, and will be unchangeably holy, wise, just, and merciful.

Everlasting arms] As the arm is the emblem of power, and of power in a state of exertion, the words here state that an unlimited and unconquerable power shall be eternally exerted in the defence of God's church, and in the behalf of all those who trust in him.

neath are the everlasting arms : and <sup>a</sup> he shall thrust out the enemy from before thee ; and shall say, Destroy them !

28 <sup>b</sup> Israel then shall dwell in safety alone : <sup>c</sup> the fountain of Jacob shall be upon the land of corn and wine ; also his <sup>d</sup> heavens shall drop down dew.

Thrust out the enemy] He will expel all the ancient inhabitants, and put thee in possession of their land.

Verse 28. Israel then shall dwell—alone] This people shall not be incorporated with any other people under heaven. A prophecy which continues to be fulfilled to the very letter. Every attempt to unite them with any other people has proved absolutely ineffectual.

The fountain of Jacob] His offspring, shall possess a most fertile land ; such was Palestine.

Verse 29. Happy art thou, &c.] O the happiness of Israel ! it is ineffable, inconceivable, because they are a people saved by the Lord—have such a salvation as it becomes the infinite perfections of God to bestow ; he is their help—their never-failing strength, and the shield of that help—he defends their defence, saves them and preserves them in the state of salvation.

Sword of thy excellency] Or whose sword—his all-conquering word, is thine excellency, in its promises, threatenings, 29 Happy art thou, O Israel ! 'who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, 'the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency ! and thine enemies 'shall 'be found liars unto thee ; and 'thou shalt tread upon their high places.

precepts, &c., &c. St. Paul, in his exhortations to the Christians at Ephesus, uses the same metaphor, Take unto you the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God.

Thine enemies shall be found liars] Who said thou shouldst never be able to gain the possession of this good land ; for thou shalt tread on—subdue, their high places—even their best fortified cities.

The blessings contained in this chapter belong also to the spiritual Israel of God, who, according to the divine promise, shall have a complete victory over all their spiritual foes, shall have all their inward enemies, the whole of the carnal mind, destroyed (for the blood of Jesus Christ, applied by the energy of the eternal Spirit, shall not only blot out all their sin, but purify their hearts from all unrighteousness) ; and thus, being delivered from their enemies, they shall love God with all their heart, and serve him in righteousness and true holiness, without fear before him all the days of their life.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Moses goes up Mount Nebo to the top of Pisgah, and God shows him the whole extent of the land which he promised to give to the descendants of Abraham, 1-4. There Moses died, and was so privately buried by the Lord that his sepulchre was never discovered, 5, 6. His age and strength of constitution, 7. The people weep for him thirty days, 8. Joshua being filled with the spirit of wisdom, the Israelites hearken to him, as the Lord commanded them, 9. The character of Moses as a prophet and as a worker of the most extraordinary miracles, both in the sight of the Egyptians, and the people of Israel : conclusion of the Pentateuch, 10-12.

Verse 1. And Moses went up] This chapter could not have been written by Moses. A man certainly cannot give an account of his own death and burial. We may therefore consider Moses's words as ending with the conclusion of the preceding chapter, himself. To suppose that he anticipated these circumstances, or that they were shown to him by an especial revelation, is departing far from propriety and necessity, and involving the subject in absurdity ; for God gives no prophetic intimations but such as are absolute necessary to be made ; but there is no necessity here, for the Spirit which inspired the writer of the following book would naturally communicate the matter that concludes this.

This chapter forms a very proper commencement to the book of Joshua, for of this last chapter of Deuteronomy the first chapter of Joshua is an evident continuation. If the subject be viewed in this light it will remove every appearance of absurdity and contradiction with which, on the common mode of interpretation, it stands sadly encumbered.

Verse 5. So Moses—died—according to the word of the which I swear unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, saying, I will give it unto thy seed : <sup>a</sup> I have caused thee to see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not go over thither.

5 <sup>b</sup> So Moses the servant of the LORD died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the LORD.

6 And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor : but <sup>c</sup> no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day.

Lord.] At the mouth of Jehovah ; i.e. by the especial command and authority of the Lord ; but it is possible that what is here said refers only to the sentence of his exclusion from the promised land, when he offended at the waters of Meribah.

Verse 6. He buried him] It is probable that the reason why Moses was buried thus privately was, lest the Israelites, prone to idolatry, should pay him divine honours : and God would not have the body of his faithful servant abused in this way. Almost all the gods of antiquity were deified men, great lawgivers, eminent statesmen, or victorious generals. [But would not the fact of his dead body being unclean in the eye of an Israelites prevent any idolatrous worship of it ? The real reason of concealment of his burial was to place him in the same category with Enoch and Elijah.]

Verse 7. His eye was not dim] Even at the advanced age of a hundred and twenty ; nor his natural force abated—he was a young man even in old age, notwithstanding the unparalleled hardships he had gone through.

old when he died: <sup>a</sup>his eye was not dim, nor his <sup>b</sup>natural force <sup>c</sup>abated.

8 And the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab <sup>d</sup>thirty days: so the days of weeping and mourning for Moses were ended.

9 And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the <sup>e</sup>spirit of wisdom; for <sup>f</sup>Moses had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the LORD commanded Moses.

Verse 10. There arose not a prophet, &c.] Among all the succeeding prophets none was found so eminent in all respects nor so highly privileged as Moses: with him God spoke face to face—admitted him to the closest familiarity and greatest friendship with himself. Now all this continued true till the advent of Jesus Christ, of whom Moses said, “A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from among your brethren, like unto me;” but how great was this person when compared with Moses! Moses desired to see God’s glory; this sight he could not bear; he saw his back parts, probably meaning God’s design relative to the latter days: but Jesus, the Almighty Saviour, in whom dwells all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, who lay in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared God to man. The Pentateuch is an original work; nothing like it was ever found among the nations of the earth. Those who have asserted that its principal institutions have been borrowed from the Egyptians, neither know the Mosaic code, nor are acquainted with the Egyptian mythology.

PREFACE TO THE BOOK

JOSHUA.

JOSHUA, the son of Nun, of the tribe of Ephraim, was first called Oshca or Hoshca, Num. xiii. 16, which signifies saved, a saviour, or salvation, but afterwards Moses, guided no doubt, by a prophetic spirit, changed his name into Yehoshua or Joshua, which signifies he shall save, or the salvation of Jehovah; referring, no doubt, to his being God's instrument in saving the people from the hands of their enemies, and leading them from victory to victory over the different Canaanitish nations, till he put them in possession of the promised land. He was denominated the servant of Moses, as he seems to have acted sometimes as his secretary, sometimes as his aide-de-camp, and sometimes as the general of the army. He was early appointed to be the successor of Moses, see Exod. xvii. 14; and under the instruction of this great master, he was fully qualified for the important office. From the preceding books, it appears that he became attached to Moses shortly after the exodus from Egypt; that he was held by him in the highest esteem; had the command of the army confided to him in the war with the Amalekites; and accompanied his master to the Mount, when he went up to receive the Law from God. These were the highest honours he could possibly receive during the life-time of Moses.

Commentators and critics are divided in opinion whether the book that goes under his name was actually compiled by him.

It is argued by those who deny Joshua to be the author, that there are both names and transactions in it which did not exist till considerably after Joshua's time.

Some of these difficulties might be so removed as to render it still probable that Joshua was the author of the whole book, as some think to be intimated, chap. xxiv. 26: And Joshua wrote these words in the book of the law of the Lord (but this probably refers to nothing more than the words of the covenant which was then made, and which is included in ver. 2-24); but there are other difficulties that cannot be removed on the above supposition, and therefore it has been generally supposed that the book was written by some inspired person after the time of Joshua; and positively before many kings had reigned in Israel. The book has been attributed to Samuel, though some give this honour to Ezra.

After all, I cannot help considering the book in the main as the composition of Joshua himself. It is certain that Moses kept an accurate register of all the events that took place during his administration in the wilderness, at least from the giving of the law to the time of his death. And in that wilderness he wrote the Book of Genesis, as well as the others that bear his name. Now, it is not likely that Joshua, the constant servant and companion of Moses, could see all this—be convinced, as he must be, of its utility—and not adopt the same practice; especially as at the death of Moses he came into the same office. I therefore take it for granted, that the Book of Joshua is as truly his work, as the Commentaries of Cæsar are his; and all the real difficulties mentioned above may be rationally and satisfactorily accounted for on the ground, that in transcribing this book in after ages, especially between the times of Joshua and the Kings, some few changes were made, and a very few slight additions, which referred chiefly to the insertion of names by which cities were then known, instead of those by which they had been anciently denominated.

PREFACE TO JOSHUA.

The Book of Joshua is one of the most important writings in the old covenant, and should never be separated from the Pentateuch, of which it is at once both the continuation and completion. Between this Book and the five Books of Moses, there is the same analogy as between the four Gospels and the Acts of the Apostles. The PENTATEUCH contains a history of the ACTS of the great Jewish legislator, and the LAWS on which the Jewish church should be established. The Book of JOSHUA gives an account of the establishment of that church in the Land of Canaan, according to the oft-repeated promises and declarations of God. The GOSPELS give an account of the transactions of JESUS CHRIST, the great Christian legislator, and of those LAWS on which his church should be established, and by which it should be governed. The ACTS of the APOSTLES gives an account of the actual establishment of that church, according to the predictions and promises of its great founder. Thus, then, the Pentateuch bears as pointed a relation to the Gospels, as the Book of Joshua does to the Acts of the Apostles.

CHAPTER I.

Moses being dead, God commissions Joshua to bring the people into the promised land, 1, 2. The extent of the land to be possessed, 3, 4. Joshua is assured of victory over all his enemies, and is exhorted to courage and activity, 5, 6; and to be careful to act, in all things, according to the law of Moses, in which he is to meditate day and night, 7, 8. He is again exhorted to courage, with the promise of continual support, 9. Joshua commands the officers to prepare the people for their passage over Jordan, 10-11. The Reubenites, Gadites, and half tribe of Manasseh, are put in mind of their engagement to pass over with their brethren, 12-15. They promise the strictest obedience, and pray for the prosperity of their leader, 16-18.

NOW after the death of Moses the servant of the LORD, it came to pass that the LORD spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying,

2 <sup>b</sup> Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel.

3 <sup>c</sup> Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses.

4 <sup>d</sup> From the wilderness and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea, toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast.

5 <sup>e</sup> There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life: 'as I was with Moses, so <sup>f</sup> I will be with thee: <sup>h</sup> I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

6 <sup>i</sup> Be strong and of a good courage: for <sup>j</sup> unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land, which I swear unto their fathers to give them.

7 Only be thou strong, and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law,

Verse 1. Now after the death of Moses] Vayehi, and it was or happened after the death of Moses. Even the first words in this book show it to be a continuation of the preceding, and intimately connected with the narrative in the last chapter of Deuteronomy, of which I suppose Joshua to have been the author, and that chapter to have originally made the commencement of this book. The time referred to here must have been at the conclusion of the thirty days in which they mourned for Moses.

Verse 2. Moses my servant] The word servant, as applied both to Moses and Joshua, is to be understood in a very peculiar sense. It signifies God's prime minister, the person by whom he issued his orders, and by whom he accomplished all his purposes and designs. No person ever bore this title in the like sense but the Redeemer of mankind, of whom both Moses and Joshua were types.

Verse 3. The sole of your foot shall tread upon] That is, the whole land occupied by the seven Canaanitish nations, and as far as the Euphrates to the east; for this was certainly the utmost of the grant now made to them; and all that was included in what is termed the promised land, the boundaries of which have already been defined. It has been supposed that the words, Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, were intended to express the ease with which they were to conquer the whole land, an instance of which occurs in the taking of Jericho. It was only their unfaithfulness to God that rendered the conquest in any case difficult.

Verse 4. From the wilderness and this Lebanon] Joshua appears to be standing with his face towards the promised land, and pointing out the different places, or their situation, with his hand, This Lebanon, &c. The utmost of their limits should be from the desert of Arabia Petraea on the south to Lebanon on the north; and from the Euphrates on the east to the Mediterranean Sea on the west. The Israelites did not possess the full extent of this grant till the days of David.

Land of the Hittites] The most hardy and warlike of all the Canaanitish nations; and as they occupied mountainous countries, it is natural to suppose that they would be the most difficult to subdue, and on this account, it is supposed, God particularly specifies these; but it is probable that under this one term all the other nations are included, as it is certain they are in other places under the term Amorites.

Great sea] The Mediterranean, called great in respect of the lakes in the land of Judea, such as the sea of Genesareth, or the sea of Tiberias, and the Dead Sea, which were comparatively small lakes; but the Hebrews gave the name of sea, yam, to every large collection of waters.

Verse 5. Be able to stand before thee] Because God shall be with thee, therefore thou shalt be irresistible. This promise was most punctually and literally fulfilled.

Verse 7. Only be thou strong, and very courageous] Though God had promised him that no man should be able to stand before him, yet it was on condition that he should use all his military skill, and avail himself to the uttermost of all * which Moses my servant commanded thee: <sup>b</sup> turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest <sup>c</sup> prosper whithersoever thou goest.

8 <sup>d</sup> This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but <sup>e</sup> thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt <sup>f</sup> have good success.

9 <sup>g</sup> Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; <sup>h</sup> be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the LORD thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

10 Then Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying,

11 Pass through the host, and command the people, saying, Prepare you victuals; for <sup>i</sup> within three days ye shall pass over this Jordan, to go in to possess the land, which the LORD your God giveth you to possess it.

12 And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manassah, spake Joshua saying, the means, natural and providential, which God should place within his reach. God will not help them who refuse to help themselves.

13 Remember <sup>j</sup> the word which Moses the servant

Verse 8. This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth] The law, which had already been written by Moses, and from which he and the people were to take all those precepts by which their lives were to be governed. Though there was a copy of the law laid up in the sanctuary, yet this was not sufficient. Joshua must have a copy for himself, and he was to consult it incessantly; that his way might be made prosperous, and that he might have good success. If he kept God's word, God would keep him in body and soul; if he should observe to do according to that word, then God would cause all his way to be prosperous. Those who are obedient to God, lack no manner of thing that is good.

Verse 10. Commanded the officers] Shoterim. These were different from the shophetim, who were judges among the people, and whose business it was to determine in all civil cases. The shoterim have been supposed to be subordinate officers, whose business it was to see the decisions of the shophetim carried into effect. [Their principal function was that of writing and keeping the genealogical lists.]

Verse 11. Prepare you victuals] The word signifies prey, or what is taken by hunting, &c. This was necessary, as they were about to undergo considerable fatigue in marching and in making preparations for the passage of the Jordan; for although the manna had not ceased to fall, yet such other provisions as are mentioned above were necessary on this occasion.

For within three days ye shall pass] The text is supposed to mean, Prepare victuals for three days' march, for "on the third day after your decampment from Shittim ye shall pass over this Jordan."

Verse 13. Remember the word] He puts the Reubenites, &c., in remembrance of the engagements they had made with Moses (see Num. xxxii. 20) when he granted them their portion on the east side of Jordan.

Verse 14. Your wives, your little ones] And with these it appears, from Num. xxiii. 17, were left behind 70,680 effective men to guard them and their property; only 40,000 having passed over Jordan to assist the nine tribes and half to conquer the land.

Armed] Chamushim, by fives; in several lines, five in front, probably the usual method of marching; but it seems to signify arrayed, equipped, accoutred, well-armed, and ready for battle.

Verse 15. Toward the sun-rising] This is the EAST, as toward the going down of the sun signifies the WEST.

Verse 16. All that thou commandest us we will do] Here of the Lord commanded you, saying, The LORD your God hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

14 Your wives, your little ones, and your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan; but ye shall pass before your brethren <sup>k</sup> armed, all the mighty men of valour, and help them;

15 Until the LORD have given your brethren rest, as he hath given you, and they also have possessed the land which the LORD your God giveth them: <sup>l</sup> then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and enjoy it, which Moses the LORD's servant gave you on this side Jordan, toward the sun-rising.

16 And they answered Joshua, saying, All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us, we will go.

17 According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee: only the LORD thy God <sup>m</sup> be with thee, as he was with Moses.

18 Whosoever he be that doth rebel against thy commandment, and will not hearken unto thy words in all that thou commandest him, he shall be put to death: only be strong and of a good courage.

they acknowledge the divine mission of Joshua, as they had done that of Moses, and consequently promise to follow his directions in all things.

Verse 17. Only the Lord thy God be with thee] Provided God be with thee, as he was with Moses, we will implicitly obey thee. The words, however, may mean no more than an earnest prayer for Joshua's prosperity: May God be with thee, as he was with Moses!

Verse 18. He shall be put to death] This was martial law; and it was essentially necessary in order that proper discipline should be kept up in this great army. By insubordination their fathers had suffered much in the wilderness; they rejected the authority of Moses, mutilated and made themselves a leader to conduct them back to Egypt. And Joshua himself, for attempting to encourage them against their fears, was near being stoned to death.

1. Notwithstanding the great honour God puts on his servants, Moses, Aaron, Phinehas, and Joshua, yet we find him using every means to induce the people to trust in himself alone. Hence he is ever showing them that even those great men had nothing but what they had received, and that they were as fully dependent upon himself as the meanest of the people. What was even Moses without his GOD?

2. Is it not strange that at the death of Moses utter despair had not overwhelmed the whole camp, as he whom they expected to give them rest had died before any conquest was made in Canaan? We find, however, that they are not discouraged; he who gave them Moses, has now given them Joshua in his place; and they had now fully learned that if God be for them, none could be successfully against them.

3. From all this we may learn, that when God has a great work to accomplish, he will provide himself with suitable instruments; and though one which he has greatly honoured appear to fail, we should know that he is not confined to work by that one alone.

4. Though God had so implicitly promised them his help, yet he strongly insists on their own co-operation. He requires the use of every power and talent he has given; even Joshua himself must be strong and very courageous, and the people must obey him in all things, in order that they may go over the Jordan to possess the good land; and without this they had never got into the promised rest. Shall we suppose, then, that if we be not workers together with God, we shall be saved? He works in us to will and to do, i.e. he gives the principle of volition in things that are holy, and the principle of power to bring the acts of will into good practical effect; therefore, says the apostle, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.

CHAPTER II.

Joshua sends out two spies to examine the state of the inhabitants of the land, particularly those of Jericho, who are entertained at the house of Rahab, 1. The king of Jericho is informed of their being in the town, and sends to Rahab, commanding her to deliver them up, 2, 3. She hides the spies, and tells the messengers that the men were departed and gone towards the mountain, 4, 5. When the officers of the king of Jericho were departed, she took the spies to the house-top, and covered them with flax, 6, 7. She relates to them that the fear of the Israelites had fallen on all the inhabitants of the country on hearing of their victories over the Amorites; that she knew none could resist the God of Israel, and therefore desired them to give her an oath that, when they took Jericho, they would preserve the lives of her and her family, 8-13. The spies swear to her, 14. She lets them down by a cord from the house-top, and gives them directions how to proceed, in order to avoid the pursuers, 15, 16. She is to tie a scarlet line to the window, through which she had let them down, which should be the sign to the Israelites to spare that house and its inhabitants, 17-19. Having bound her to secrecy, they depart, 20, 21. After three days' stay in the mountain, they return to Joshua, and make a favourable report, 22-24.

AND Joshua the son of Nun <sup>a</sup> sent <sup>b</sup> out of Shittim two men to spy secretly, saying, Go view the land, even Jericho. And they went, and <sup>c</sup> came into an harlot's house, named <sup>d</sup> Rahab, and <sup>e</sup> lodged there.

2 And <sup>f</sup> it was told the king of Jericho, saying, Behold, there came men in hither to night of the children of Israel, <sup>g</sup> to search out the country.

3 And the king of Jericho sent unto Rahab, saying, Bring forth the men that are come to thee, which are entered into thine house: for they be come to search out all the country.

4 <sup>h</sup> And the woman took the two men, and hid them, and said thus, There came men unto me, but I wist not whence they were:

Verse 1. Joshua—sent—two men to spy secretly] It is very likely that these spies had been sent out soon after the death of Moses, and therefore our marginal reading, had sent, is to be preferred. [The better rendering of the original is, "then he sent."] Secretly—It is very probable also that these were confidential persons, and that the transaction was between them and him alone. As they were to pass over the Jordan opposite to Jericho, it was necessary that they should have possession of this city, that in case of any reverses they might have no enemies in their rear. He sent the men, therefore, to see the state of the city, avenues of approach, fortifications, &c., that he might the better concert his mode of attack.

An harlot's house] Harlots and inn-keepers seem to have been called by the same name, as no doubt many who followed this mode of life, from their exposed situation, were not the most correct in their morals. Among the ancients women generally kept houses of entertainment, and among the Egyptians and Greeks this was common.

It is very likely that women kept the places of public entertainment among the Philistines; and that it was with such an one, and not with an harlot, that Samson lodged (see Judges xvi. 1, &c.) This custom seems to have obtained among the Israelites themselves, even in the most polished period of their history; for it is much more reasonable to suppose that the two women, who came to Solomon for judgment, relative to the dead child (1 Kings iii. 16, &c.), were inn-keepers, than that they were harlots. It is well known that common prostitutes, from their abandoned course of life, scarcely ever have children; and the laws were so strict against such in Israel (Deut. xxiii. 18), that if these had been of that class it is not at all likely they would have dared to appear before Solomon. All these circumstances considered, I am fully satisfied that the term zonah in the text, which we translate harlot, should be rendered tavern or inn-keeper, or hostess. The spies were undoubtedly the most confidential persons that Joshua had in his host; they went on an errand of the most weighty importance, and which involved the greatest consequences. The risk they ran of losing their lives in this enterprise was extreme. Is it therefore likely that persons who could not escape apprehension and death, without the miraculous interference of God, should in despite of that law which at this time must have been so well known unto them, go into a place where they might expect, not the blessing, but the curse, of God? Is it not therefore more likely that they went rather to an inn to lodge than to a brothel? But what completes in my judgment the evidence on this point is, that this very Rahab, whom we call a harlot, was actually married to Salmon, a Jewish prince, see Mat. i. 5. And is it probable that a prince of Judah would have taken to wife such a person as our text represents Rahab to be?

To all this may be added, that as our blessed Lord came through the line of this woman, it cannot be a matter of little consequence to know what moral character she sustained; as an inn-keeper she might be respectable, if not honourable; as a public prostitute she could be neither; and it is not very likely that the providence of God would have suffered a person of such a notoriously bad character to enter into the sacred line of his genealogy. It is true that the cases of Tamar and Bathsheba may be thought sufficient to destroy this argument; but whoever considers those two cases maturely will see that they differ totally from that of Rahab, if we allow the word harlot to be legitimate. As to the objection that her husband is nowhere mentioned in the account here given; it appears to me to have little weight. She might have been either a single woman or a widow; and in either of these cases there could have been no mention of a husband; or if she even had a husband, it is not likely he would have been mentioned on this occasion, as the secret seems to have been kept religiously between her and the spies. If she were a married woman her husband might be included in the general terms all that she had, and all her kindred, chap. vi. 23. But it is most likely that she was a single woman or a widow, who got her bread honestly by keeping a house of entertainment for strangers. [Dr. Clarke's criticism on the case of Rahab cannot be sustained. The original word is against it, and so are the New Testament references. She may have been both a harlot and an inn-keeper.]

Verse 3. The king of Jericho sent unto Rahab] This appears to be a proof of the preceding opinion: had she been a prostitute or a person of ill fame, he could at once have sent officers to have seized the persons lodged with her as vagabonds; but if she kept a house of entertainment, the persons under her roof were sacred, according to the universal custom of the Asiatics, and could not be molested on any trifling grounds. A guest or a friend is sacred in whatever house he may be received, in every part of the East, to the present day.

Verse 4. And hid them] Probably she secreted them in some private corner, till she had the opportunity of concealing them on the house-top in the manner mentioned ver. 6.

Verse 5. When it was dark] So it appears that it was after night that the king of Jericho sent to Rahab, ordering her to produce the persons who lodged with her. The season itself was friendly to the whole plot: had these trans-of the gate, when it was dark, that the men went out: whither the men went, I wot not: pursue after them quickly; for ye shall overtake them.

6 But <sup>a</sup> she had brought them up to the roof of the house, and hid them with the stalks of flax, which she had laid in order upon the roof.

7 And the men pursued after them, the way to Jordan, unto the fords: and as soon as they which pursued after them were gone out, they shut the gate.

8 And before they were laid down, she came up unto them upon the roof;

9 And she said unto the men, I know that the LORD hath given you the land, and that <sup>b</sup> your terror is fallen upon us, and that all the inhabitants of the land <sup>c</sup> faint because of you.

10 For we have heard how the LORD <sup>d</sup> dried up the water of the Red Sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt; and <sup>e</sup> what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites, that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly destroyed.

11 And as soon as we had <sup>f</sup> heard these things, <sup>g</sup> our hearts did melt, neither <sup>h</sup> did there remain any more courage in any man, because of you: for <sup>i</sup> the LORD your God, he is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath.

12 Now therefore, I pray you, <sup>j</sup> swear unto me by the LORD, since I have shewed you kindness, that ye will also shew kindness unto <sup>k</sup> my father's house, and <sup>l</sup> give me a true token:

13 And that ye will save alive my father, and my actions taken place in daylight, it is scarcely possible that the spies could have escaped. But this is no excuse for the woman's prevarication; for God could have saved his messengers independently of her falsity. God never says to any, Do evil that good may come of it.

Verse 6. Hide them with the stalks of flax. It is a matter of little consequence whether we translate pistey hoets stalks of flax, or stalks of hemp: the word ets, which signifies wood, serves to show that whether it was hemp or flax, it was in its rough, unmanufactured state; and as this was about the season, viz. the end of March or the beginning of April, in which the flax is ripe in that country, consequently Rahab's flax might have been recently pulled, and was now drying on the roof of her house.

Upon the roof. All the houses in the East were made flat-roofed. On these flat roofs the Asiatics to this day walk, converse, and oftentimes even sleep and pass the night. It is probable that this hiding was after that referred to in the fourth verse.

Verse 9. I know that the Lord hath given you the land. It is likely she had this only from conjecture, having heard of their successes against the Amorites, their prodigious numbers, and seeing the state of terror and dismay to which the inhabitants of her own land were reduced.

Verse 11. He is God in heaven above, and in earth beneath. This confession of the true God is amazingly full, and argues considerable light and information. But how had she this clear knowledge of the divine nature? 1. Possibly the knowledge of the true God was general in the earth at this time, though connected with much superstition and idolatry; the people believing that there was a god for every district, and for every people; for the mountains, and for the valleys; see 1 Kings xx. 23. 2. Or she received this instruction from the spies, with whom she appears to have had a good deal of conversation; or 3. She had it from a supernatural influence of God upon her own soul. She probably made a better use of the light she had received than the rest of her countrymen, and God increased that light.

Verse 12. Swear unto me by the Lord. This is a farther mother, and my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they have, and deliver our lives from death.

14 And the men answered her, Our life <sup>m</sup> for yours, if ye utter not this our business. And it shall be, when the LORD hath given us the land, that <sup>n</sup> we will deal kindly and truly with thee.

15 Then she <sup>o</sup> let them down by a cord through the window: for her house was upon the town wall, and she dwelt upon the wall.

16 And she said unto them, Get you to the mountain, lest the pursuers meet you; and hide yourselves there three days, until the pursuers be returned: and afterward may ye go your way.

17 And the men said unto her, We will be <sup>p</sup> blameless of this thine oath which thou hast made us swear;

18 <sup>q</sup> Behold, when we come into the land, thou shalt bind this line of scarlet thread in the window which thou didst let us down by: <sup>r</sup> and thou shalt <sup>s</sup> bring thy father, and thy mother, and thy brethren, and all thy father's household, home unto thee.

19 And it shall be, that whosoever shall go out of the doors of thy house into the street, his blood shall be upon his head, and we will be guiltless: and whosoever shall be with thee in the house, <sup>t</sup> his blood shall be on our head, if any hand be upon him.

20 And if thou utter this our business, then we will be quit of thine oath which thou hast made us to swear.

21 And she said, According to your words, so be proof that this woman had received considerable instruction in the Jewish faith; she acknowledged the true God by his essential character Jehovah; and knew that an oath in his name was the deepest and most solemn obligation under which a Jew could possibly come.

Verse 13. Deliver our lives from death. She had learnt, either from the spies or otherwise, that all the inhabitants of the land were doomed to destruction, and therefore she obliges them to enter unto a covenant with her for the preservation of herself and her household.

Verse 14. Our life for yours. "May our life be destroyed if we suffer yours to be injured!" This is what was anciently called in our country pledging—staking a man's life for that of his neighbour or friend.

Verse 15. Then she let them down by a cord, &c. The natural place of this verse is after the first clause of ver. 21; for it is certain that she did not let them down in the basket till all those circumstances marked from ver. 16 to 20 inclusive had taken place.

She dwelt upon the wall. That is, either the wall of the city made a part of her house, or her house was built close to the wall, so that the top or battlements of it were above the wall, with a window that looked out to the country. As the city gates were now shut there was no way for the spies to escape but through this window.

Verse 16. Hide yourselves there three days. They were to travel by night, and hide themselves in the day-time; otherwise they might have been discovered by the pursuers who were in search of them.

Verse 18. This line of scarlet thread. Probably this may mean, this piece of scarlet cloth, or, this cloth (made) of scarlet thread. When the Israelites took the city this piece of red cloth seems to have been hung out of the window by way of flag; and this was the sign on which she and the spies had agreed.

Verse 20. If thou utter this our business. It was prudent to make her life depend on her secrecy; had it been otherwise she might have been tempted to give information, not only concerning the spies, but concerning the designs of the Israelites. But her life being at stake, added to every other

it. And she sent them away, and they departed: and she bound the scarlet line in the window.

22 And they went, and came unto the mountain, and abode there three days, until the pursuers were returned: *and the pursuers sought them throughout all the way, but found them not.

23 So the two men returned, and descended from motive, she kept the secret for the sake of her own personal safety and that of all her relatives.

Verse 23. So the two men returned] Having concealed themselves in the mountains that night, all the next day, and the night ensuing, on the third day they returned to Joshua.

Verse 24. Truly the Lord hath delivered unto our hands all the land] How different was this report from that brought by the spies on a former occasion! They found that all the inhabitants of the land were panic-struck. The people had heard of the great exploits of the Israelites on the other side of Jordan; and as they had destroyed the potent kings of the Amorites, they took it for granted that nothing could stand before them. This information was necessary to Joshua to guide him in forming the plan of his campaign.

1. It may be asked, did not Rahab lie in the account she gave to the officers of the king of Jericho (ver. 4, 5), There came men unto me, &c? I answer, She certainly did; and the inspired writer sets down the fact merely as it stood, without making the Spirit of God responsible for the dissimulation of the woman. But was she not rewarded, &c.? Yes; for her hospitality and faith, not for her lie. But could she have saved the spies without telling a lie? Yes, she the mountain, and passed over, and came to Joshua the son of Nun, and told him all things that befell them:

24 And they said unto Joshua, Truly <sup>b</sup> the Lord hath delivered into our hands all the land; for even all the inhabitants of the country do <sup>c</sup> faint because of us.

31. Ch. vi. 2. xxi. 44.—<sup>c</sup> Heb. melt. Ver. 9.

certainly might; but what notion could a woman of her occupation, though nothing worse than an inn-keeper, have of the nicer distinctions between truth and falsehood, living among a most profligate and depraved people, where truth could scarcely be known?

2. There is a lax morality in the world that recommends a lie rather than the truth, when the purposes of religion and humanity can be served by it. But when can this be? The religion of Christ is one eternal system of truth, and can neither be served by a lie nor admit of one.

3. Though the hand of God was evidently in every thing that concerned the Israelites, and they were taught to consider that by his might alone they were to be put in possession of the promised land; yet they were as fully convinced that if they did not use the counsel, prudence, and strength which they had received from him, they should not succeed. Hence, while they depended on the divine direction and power, they exercised their own prudence, and put forth their own strength; and thus they were workers together with him, and did not receive the grace of God in vain. The application of this maxim is easy; and we cannot expect any success, either in things spiritual or temporal, unless we walk by the same rule, and mind the same thing.

CHAPTER III.

The Israelitish camp removes from Shittim to Jordan, 1. The officers inform them how they are to pass the river, and the distance they are to keep from the ark, 2-4. Joshua directs the people, 5, 6; and the Lord gives directions to Joshua, 7, 8. He delivers the Lord's message to the people, and foretells the miraculous passage and division of Jordan, 9-13. The priests, bearing the ark, enter the river, and immediately the waters are cut off, and the priests stand on dry ground, in the bed of the river, till all the camp passes over, 14-17.

AND Joshua rose early in the morning; and they removed *from Shittim, and came to Jordan, he and all the children of Israel, and lodged there before they passed over.

2 And it came to pass <sup>b</sup> after three days, that the officers went through the host;

3 And they commanded the people, saying, *When ye see the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, *and the priests the Levites bearing it, then ye shall remove from your place, and go after it.

Verse 1. Joshua rose early] From Shittim, where they had lately been encamped, to Jordan, was about eight English miles.

Verse 2. After three days] The spies returned at the end of three days, or rather on the third day, and made their report. It was immediately on their return that he made the proclamation mentioned here; in consequence of which the people immediately struck their tents, and marched forward to Jordan.

Verse 4. About two thousand cubits] This distance they were to keep, 1. For the greater respect, because the presence of the ark was the symbol and pledge of the Divine Presence. 2. That the ark, which was to be their pilot over these waters, might be the more conspicuous, which it could not have been had the people crowded upon it.

4 * Yet there shall be a space between you and it, about two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it, that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way * heretofore.

5 And Joshua said unto the people, * Sanctify yourselves: for to-morrow the Lord will do wonders among you

Joshua spake unto the priests, saying, Take up the ark of the covenant, and pass over

xix. 10, 14, 15. Lev. xx. 7. Num. xi. 18. Ch. vii. 13. 1 Sam. xvi. 5. Joel ii. 18.—<sup>b</sup> Num. iv. 15.

Verse 5. Sanctify yourselves] They were to wash themselves and their garments, and abstain from every thing that might indispose their minds from a profitable attention to the miracle about to be wrought in their behalf.

Verse 6. Spake unto the priests, saying, Take up the ark] It is remarkable that the priests, not the Levites, whose ordinary business it was, were employed to carry the ark on this occasion. Calmet conjectures that this was because it was probably carried without being wrapped up in its curtains, as it always was when the Levites carried it. Though it was the business of the Levites, the sons of Kohath, to carry the ark; yet on festive occasions the priests alone performed this office.

In all their former marches the ark was carried in the centre of this immense camp; but now it was to proceed at before the people. And they took up the ark of the covenant, and went before the people.

7 And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day will I begin to magnify thee in the sight of all Israel, that they may know that, as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee.

8 And thou shalt command the priests that bear the ark of the covenant, saying, When ye are come to the brink of the water of Jordan, ye shall stand still in Jordan.

9 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, Come hither, and hear the words of the LORD your God.

10 And Joshua said, Hereby ye shall know that the living God is among you and that he will without fail drive out from before you the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Hivites, and the Perizzites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Jebusites.

11 Behold, the ark of the covenant of the LORD of all the earth passeth over before you into Jordan.

12 Now therefore take ye twelve men out of the tribes of Israel, out of every tribe a man:

13 And it shall come to pass, as soon as the soles of the feet of the priests that bear the ark of the LORD, the LORD of all the earth, shall rest in the waters of Jordan, that the waters of Jordan shall be cut off from the waters that come down from above; and they shall stand upon an heap.

14 And it came to pass, when the people removed from their tents, to pass over Jordan, and the priests bearing the ark of the covenant before the people;

15 And as they that bare the ark were come unto Jordan, and the feet of the priests that bare the ark were dipped in the brim of the water, (for Jordan overfloweth all his banks all the time of harvest,)

16 That the waters which came down from above stood and rose up upon an heap, very far from the city Adam, that is beside Zaretan: and those that came down toward the sea of the plain, even the salt sea, failed, and were cut off: and the people passed over right against Jericho.

17 And the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD stood firm on dry ground in the midst of Jordan, and all the Israelites passed over on dry ground, until all the people were passed clean over Jordan.

the head of the army, and to go before them, and at such a distance, about three quarters of a mile, that the whole camp might see it as their guide.

Verse 7. This day will I begin to magnify thee] By making him the instrument in this miraculous passage, he did him honour, and gave him high credit in the sight of the people; hence his authority was established, and obedience to him as their leader fully secured. His circumstantially foretelling how the waters should be cut off, as soon as the feet of the priests had touched them, ver. 14, demonstrated that the secret of the Lord was with him.

Verse 8. Ye shall stand still in Jordan.] The priests proceeded first with the ark, and entered into the bed of the river, the course of which was immediately arrested, the waters collecting above the place where the priests stood, while the stream fell off towards the Dead Sea; so that the whole channel below where the priests were standing became dry. The whole camp, therefore, passed over below where the priests were standing, keeping at the distance of two thousand cubits from the ark; this they could readily do, as the whole bed of the river was dry for many miles below the place where the priests entered.

Verse 10. Hereby ye shall know that the living God is among you] The Israelites were apt to be discouraged, and to faint at even the appearance of danger; it was necessary, therefore, that they should have the fullest assurance of the presence and assistance of God in the important enterprise on which they were now entering. They are to combat idolaters, who have nothing to trust in and help them but gods of wood, stone, and metal: whereas they are to have the living God in the midst of them—HE who is the author of life and being—who can give, or take it away, at his pleasure; and who by this miracle proved that he had undertaken to guide and defend them: and Joshua makes this manifestation of God the proof that he will drive out the Hittites, Hivites, &c., before them.

Verse 15. And the feet of the priests—were dipped in the brim of the water] Thus we find that every thing occurred exactly in the way in which Joshua had foretold it.

For Jordan overfloweth all his banks, &c.] It has often been remarked that there was no need of a miracle in crossing Jordan, as it is but an inconsiderable stream, easily fordable, being about twenty yards in breadth. But the circumstance marked here by the sacred historian proves that there was a time in the year, viz., in the harvest, that this said river overflowed its banks; and this is confirmed by another place in scripture, 1 Chron. xii. 15. As the miracle took place about the beginning of April, a time in which rivers in general are less than in winter, it may be asked how there could be such an increase of waters at this time? The simple fact is, that the Jordan has its origin at the foot of Mount Lebanon, which mountain is always covered with snow during the winter months; when the summer's sun has melted these snows, there is consequently a prodigious increase of waters, so that the old channel is not capable of containing them; this accounts for the statement in the text that the Jordan overfloweth his banks all the time of harvest; and this was the time which God chose they should pass over it, that a miraculous interposition might be necessary, and that by the miracle they should be convinced of his omnipotence.

Verse 16. Rose up upon an heap] That is, they continued to accumulate, filling up the whole of the channel towards the source, and the adjacent ground over which they were now spread, to a much greater depth, the power of God giving a contrary direction to the current. We need not suppose them to be gathered up like a mountain, instar montis, as the Vulgate expresses it, but that they continued to flow back in the course of the channel; and ere they could have reached the lake of Gennesareth, where they might have been easily accumulated, the whole Israelitish army would have all got safely to the opposite side.

Very far from the city Adam—beside Zaretan] Where these places were it is difficult to say. The city Adam is wholly unknown. From 1 Kings iv. 12 we learn that Zartanah was below Jezreel, near Bethshean, or Scythopolis, and not far from Succoth, 1 Kings vii. 46. And it appears from Gen. xxxiii. 17, Josh. xiii. 27, that Succoth lay on the east side of Jordan, not far from the lake of Gennesareth; and probably Adam was on the same side, to the north of Succoth. After all, it is extremely difficult to ascertain the exact situation of these places, as in the lapse of upwards of 3,000 years the face of the country must have been materially changed. Seas, rivers, and mountains, change not; and though we cannot ascertain the spot, it is sufficiently evident that we can come near to the place.

Right against Jericho.] It would be impossible for the whole camp to pass over in the space opposite to Jericho, as they must have taken up some miles in breadth, besides the 2,000 cubits which were left on the right between them and the ark; but the river was divided opposite to Jericho, and there the camp began to pass over.

Verse 17. The priests—stood firm on dry ground] They stood in the mid channel, and shifted not their position till the camp, consisting of nearly 600,000 effective men, besides women, children, &c., had passed over.

1. Is it not surprising that the Canaanites did not dispute this passage with the Israelites! It was not merely because they were panic struck that they did not dispute this passage, but because they must have supposed it impossible; and when they found the attempt was made, the passage was effected before they could prepare to prevent it.

2. GOD now appears in such a way, and works in such a manner, as to leave no doubt concerning his presence or his power, or of his love to Israel. After this, was it possible for his people ever to doubt his being or his bounty? This, with the miraculous passage of the Red Sea, were well calculated to have established their faith for ever; and those who did not yield to the evidence afforded by these two miracles were incapable of rational conviction.

3. In some respects the passage of the Jordan was more strikingly miraculous than that even of the Red Sea. In the latter God was pleased to employ an agent; the sea went back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, Exod. xiv. 21. Nothing of this kind appeared in the passage of the Jordan; a very rapid river (for so all travellers allow it to be) went back to its source without any kind of agency but the invisible hand of the invisible God.

4. Through the whole period of the Jewish history these miracles, so circumstantially related, were never denied by any; but on the contrary, conscientiously believed by all. Nor did any of them in their revolts from God, which were both foul and frequent, ever call these great facts in question, when even so full of enmity against God as to blaspheme his name, and give his glory to dumb idols! Is not this a manifest proof that these facts were incontestible? and that Jehovah had so done his marvellous works that they should be had in everlasting remembrance?

CHAPTER IV.

When the people are passed over, Joshua commands twelve men, one taken out of each tribe, to take up a stone on his shoulder out of the midst of the river, and carry it to the other side, to be set up as a memorial of this miraculous passage, 1-7. They do so, and set up the stones in the place where they encamp the first night, 8, 9. The priests stand in the river, till all the people are passed over, 10, 11. Of the tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh, 40,000 fighting men pass over with the other tribes, 12, 13. Joshua is magnified in the sight of the people, and they fear him as they did Moses, 14. The priests are commanded to come up out of the river, which, on their leaving it, immediately returns, and overflows its banks as before, 15-18. This miraculous passage takes place the tenth day of the first month, 19. The stones are set up in Gilgal, and Joshua teaches the people what use they are to make of them, 20-24.

AND it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed <sup>a</sup> over Jordan, that the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

2 <sup>b</sup> Take you twelve men out of the people, out of every tribe a man.

3 And command ye them, saying, Take you hence out of the midst of Jordan, out of the place where <sup>c</sup> the priests' feet stood firm, twelve stones, and ye shall carry them over with you, and leave them in <sup>d</sup> the lodging place, where ye shall lodge this night.

4 Then Joshua called the twelve men, whom he had prepared of the children of Israel, out of every tribe a man:

5 And Joshua said unto them, Pass over before the ark of the LORD your God into the midst of Jordan, and take you up every man of you a stone upon his shoulder, according unto the number of the tribes of the children of Israel;

6 That this may be a sign among you, that <sup>e</sup> when your children ask their fathers 'in time to come, saying, What mean ye by these stones?'

7 Then ye shall answer them, That <sup>f</sup> the waters of Jordan were cut off before the ark of the covenant of the LORD; when it passed over Jordan, the waters of Jordan were cut off: and these stones shall be for <sup>h</sup> a memorial unto the children of Israel for ever.

8 And the children of Israel did so, as Joshua commanded, and took up twelve stones out of the midst of Jordan, as the LORD spake unto Joshua, according to the number of the tribes of the children of Israel, and carried them over with them unto the place where they lodged, and laid them down there.

9 And Joshua set up twelve stones in the midst of Jordan, in the place where the feet of the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood: and they are there unto this day.

10 For the priests which bare the ark stood in the midst of Jordan, until every thing was finished that the LORD commanded Joshua to speak unto the people, according to all that Moses commanded Joshua: and the people hastened and passed over.

11 And it came to pass, when all the people were clean passed over, that the ark of the LORD passed over, and the priests, in the presence of the people.

12 And <sup>i</sup> the children of Reuben, and the children

Verse 2. Take you twelve men] From chap. iii. 12 it appears that the twelve men had been before appointed, one taken out of each of the twelve tribes; and now they are employed for that purpose for which they had been before selected.

Verse 3. Where ye shall lodge this night.] This was in the place that was afterwards called Gilgal.

Verse 6. This may be a sign] Stand as a continual memorial of this miraculous passage, and consequently a proof of their lasting obligation to God.

Verse 9. And Joshua set up twelve stones in the midst of Jordan] It seems from this chapter that there were two sets of stones erected as a memorial of this great event; twelve at Gilgal, ver. 20, and twelve in the bed of Jordan, ver. 9. The twelve stones in the bed of Jordan might have been so placed on a base of strong stone-work so high as always to be visible, and serve to mark the very spot where the priests stood with the ark. The twelve stones set up at Gilgal would stand as a monument of the place of the first encampment after this miraculous passage.

Verse 10. And the people hastened and passed over.] How very natural is this circumstance! The people seeing the waters divided, and Jordan running back, might be apprehensive that it would soon resume its wonted course; and this would naturally lead them to hasten to get over, with as much speed as possible.

of Gad, and half the tribe of Manassah, passed over armed before the children of Israel, as Moses spake unto them :

13 About forty thousand <sup>a</sup> prepared for war passed over before the LORD unto battle, to the plains of Jericho.

14 On that day the LORD <sup>b</sup> magnified Joshua in the sight of all Israel; and they feared him, as they feared Moses, all the days of his life.

15 And the LORD spake unto Joshua, saying,

16 Command the priests that bear <sup>c</sup> the ark of the testimony, that they come up out of Jordan.

17 Joshua therefore commanded the priests, saying, Come ye up out of Jordan.

18 And it came to pass, when the priests that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD were come up out of the midst of Jordan, and the soles of the priests' feet were <sup>d</sup> lifted up unto the dry land, that the waters of Jordan returned unto their place, Verse 18. The waters of Jordan returned unto their place] All this was done by the sovereign influence of that God whose presence was represented by the ark of the covenant.

Verse 19. On the tenth day of the first month] As the Israelites left Egypt on the fifteenth day of the first month, A. M. 2513 (see Exod. xiv.), and they entered into Canaan the tenth day of the first month, A. M. 2553, it is evident that forty years, wanting five days, had elapsed from the time of their exodus from Egypt to their entrance into the promised inheritance.

Encamped in Gilgal] That is, in the place that was afterwards called Gilgal, for here the name is given by anticipation. In Hebrew gal signifies to roll; and the doubling of the root, galgal or gilgal, signifies rolling round and round, or rolling off or away, because, in circumcising the children that had been born in the wilderness, Joshua rolled away, rolled off completely, the reproach of the people. From this time Gilgal became a place of considerable eminence in the sacred history. It was about ten furlongs from Jericho, and fifty from Jordan; Jericho being on the west, and Jordan on the east, Gilgal being between both.

Verse 20. Those twelve stones] Twelve such stones as a man could carry a considerable way on his shoulder, see ver. 5, could scarcely have made any observable altar, or pillar of memorial: but erected on a high base of mason-work they would be very conspicuous, and thus properly answer the end for which God ordered them to be set up.

19 And the people came up out of Jordan on the tenth day of the first month and encamped <sup>c</sup> in Gilgal, in the east border of Jericho.

20 And <sup>d</sup> those twelve stones, which they took out of Jordan, did Joshua pitch in Gilgal.

21 And he spake unto the children of Israel, saying, <sup>e</sup> When your children shall ask their fathers <sup>f</sup> in time to come, saying, What mean these stones?

22 Then ye shall let your children know, saying, <sup>g</sup> Israel came over this Jordan on dry land.

23 For the LORD your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as the LORD your God did to the Red Sea, <sup>h</sup> which he dried up from before us, until we were gone over.

24 <sup>i</sup> That all the people of the earth might know the hand of the LORD, that it is <sup>j</sup> mighty: that ye might <sup>k</sup> fear the LORD your God <sup>l</sup> for ever.

Verse 22. Then ye shall let your children know] The necessity of an early religious education is inculcated through the whole oracles of God. The parents who neglect it have an awful account to give to the Judge of quick and dead.

Verse 24. That all the people of the earth might know] It is very likely that this means simply, all the people of this land—all the Canaanitish nations, to whom, by the miracles wrought in behalf of his people, he intended to show his eternal power and Godhead, the excellence of his protection, and the unavailability of human might against his omnipotence.

1. God intends that his religion should be maintained and propagated in the earth; therefore he has given a revelation of himself to men, that it may be taught in the world; and he particularly requires that parents should be diligent and fervent in teaching their children the knowledge of his name.

2. This is one great use of the ordinances of the Gospel, and the rites of religion. They are all signifiers of sacred things, and point out matters of infinite importance beyond themselves. 3. A spirit of inquiry is common to every child: the human heart is ever panting after knowledge; and if not rightly directed when young, will, like that of our first mother, go astray after forbidden science. 4. If we wish our children to be happy, we should show them where happiness is to be found. If we wish them to be wise, we should lead them unto God by means of his word and ordinances.

CHAPTER V.

The effect produced on the minds of the Canaanites by the late miracle, 1. Joshua is commanded to circumcise the Israelites, 2. He obeys, 3. Who they were that were circumcised, and why it was now done, 4-7. They abide in the camp till they are whole, 8. The place is called Gilgal, and why, 9. They keep the passover in the same place, 10. They eat unleavened cakes and parched corn, on the morrow after the passover, 11. The manna ceases, 12. The captain of the Lord's host appears to Joshua, 13-15.

Verse 1. The Amorites, which were on the side of Jordan westward] It has already been remarked that the term Amorite is applied sometimes to signify all the nations or tribes of Canaan. It appears from this verse that there were people thus denominated that dwelt on both sides of the Jordan. Those on the east side had already been destroyed

Canaanites, <sup>a</sup> which were by the sea, <sup>b</sup> heard that the LORD had dried up the waters of Jordan from before the children of Israel, until we were passed in the war which the Israelites had with Sihon and Og; with those on the west side Joshua had not yet waged war. It is possible however that the Amorites, of whom we read in this verse, were the remains of those who dwelt on the east side of the Jordan, and who had taken refuge here on the defeat of Og and Sihon.

over, that their heart melted, *neither was there spirit in them any more, because of the children of Israel.

2 At that time the LORD said unto Joshua, Make thee <sup>b</sup>sharp <sup>c</sup>knives and circumcise again the children of Israel the second time.

3 And Joshua made him sharp knives, and circumcised the children of Israel at <sup>d</sup>the hill of the foreskins.

4 And this is the cause why Joshua did circumcise: <sup>e</sup>All the people that came out of Egypt, that were males, even all the men of war, died in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt.

5 Now all the people that came out were circumcised: but all the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they had not circumcised.

6 For the children of Israel walked <sup>f</sup>forty years in the wilderness, till all the people that were men of war, which came out of Egypt, were consumed, because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD: unto whom the LORD swore that <sup>g</sup>he would not show them the land which the LORD swore unto their fathers that he would give us, <sup>h</sup>a land that floweth with milk and honey.

7 And <sup>i</sup>their children, whom he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised: for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way.

8 And it came to pass, <sup>j</sup>when they had done circumcising all the people, that they abode in their places in the camp <sup>k</sup>till they were whole.

9 And the LORD said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away <sup>l</sup>the reproach of Egypt from off you. Wherefore the name of the place is called <sup>m</sup>Gilgal, <sup>n</sup>unto this day.

10 And the children of Israel encamped in Gilgal, and kept the passover <sup>o</sup>on the fourteenth day of the month at even, in the plains of Jericho.

11 And they did eat of the old corn of the land on the morrow after the passover, unleavened cakes, and parched corn in the selfsame day.

Verse 2. Make thee sharp knives] Knives of rock stone, or flint. Before the use of iron was common, all the nations of the earth had their edge tools made of stones, flints, &c. But we cannot suppose that at the time here referred to the Israelites were destitute of iron, and were therefore obliged to use knives made of stone or flint; their different manufactures in the wilderness prove that they must have had both iron and steel. Why then use knives made of stone? Probably it was unlawful to use metal of any kind in this religious rite; and indeed this seems likely from the circumstance of Zipporah (Exod. iv. 25) taking a sharp stone and circumcising her son; and we find, from the most ancient and authentic accounts, that the Egyptians considered it unlawful or profane to use any kind of metal to make incisions in the human body, when preparing it for embalming; see the note on Gen. i. 2, and on Exod. iv. 25. And as God commanded the people to make him an altar of unhewn stone on which no tool of iron had been lifted up, because this would pollute it (see Exod. xx. 25, and Deut. xxvii. 5), he might require that no instrument of iron should be used in a rite by which the body and soul of the person were in the most solemn and sacred manner dedicated to him to be his house and temple, the heart itself being the altar on which continual sacrifices to God must be offered. A physical reason has been given for preferring knives of stone in this operation, "the wound suffers less through inflammation, and is sooner healed."

Circumcise again the children of Israel the second time.] This certainly does not mean that they should repeat circumcision on those who had already received it. This would have been as absurd as impracticable. But the command implies that they were to renew the observance of a rite which had been neglected in their travels in the desert: this is sufficiently evident from the following verses.

Verse 4. This is the cause why Joshua did circumcise] The text here explains itself. Before the Israelites left Egypt all the males were circumcised; but after that time, during the whole of their stay in the wilderness, there were none circumcised till they entered into the promised land. Owing to their unsettled state, God appears to have dispensed, for the time being, with this rite; but as they were about to celebrate another passover, it was necessary that all the males should be circumcised; for without this they could not be considered within the covenant, and could not keep the passover, which was a seal of that covenant.

Verse 8. They abode—in the camp, till they were whole.] This required several days. Is it not strange that during this time they were not attacked by the inhabitants of the land, and utterly destroyed, which might have been easily effected? Joshua, as an able general, would at once perceive that this very measure must expose his whole host to the danger of being totally annihilated, but he knew that GOD could not err, and that it was his duty to obey; therefore in the very teeth of his enemies he reduced the major part of his army to a state of total helplessness, simply trusting for protection in the arm of Jehovah! The sequel shows that his confidence was not misplaced; during the whole time God did nor permit any of their enemies to disturb them. The path of duty is the path of safety; and it is impossible for any soul to be injured while walking in the path of obedience. But why did not God order them to be circumcised while they were on the east side of the Jordan in a state of great security? Because he chose to bring them into straits and difficulties where no counsel or might but his own could infallibly direct and save them; and this he did that they might see that the excellence of the power was of God, and not of man. For the same reason he caused them to pass the Jordan at the time that it overflowed its banks, and not at the time when it was low and easily fordable, that he might have the better opportunity to show them that they were under his immediate care and protection; and convince them of his almighty power, that they might trust in him for ever, and not fear the force of any adversaries. In both cases how apparent are the wisdom, power, and goodness of God!

Verse 9. The reproach of Egypt] Their being uncircumcised made them like the uncircumcised Egyptians; and the Hebrews ever considered all those who were uncircumcised as being in a state of the grossest impurity. Being now circumcised, the reproach of uncircumcision was rolled away. This is another proof that the Israelites did not receive circumcision from the Egyptians; for they could not have considered those in a state of abomination, from whom they received that rite by which they conceived themselves to be made pure.

Verse 10. Kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the month] If the ceremony of circumcision was performed on the eleventh day of the month, as many think; and if the sore was at the worst on the thirteenth, and the passover was celebrated on the fourteenth, the people being then quite recovered; it must have been rather a miraculous than a natural healing. Some suppose that they kept the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month, the preceding time having been employed in the business of the circumcision.

Verse 11. They did eat of the old corn of the land] The Hebrew word abar, which we translate old corn, occurs only in this place in such a sense, if that be legitimate. The noun, though of doubtful signification, is evidently derived from abar, to pass over, to go beyond; and here it may be translated simply the produce, that which passes from the land into the hands of the cultivator; or bought corn, what they purchased from the inhabitants of the land.

On the morrow after the passover] That is, on the fifteenth

12 And <sup>a</sup>the manna ceased on the morrow after they had eaten of the old corn of the land; neither had the children of Israel manna any more; but they did eat of the fruit of the land of Canaan that year.

13 And it came to pass, when Joshua was by Jericho, that he lifted up his eyes and looked, and behold, there stood <sup>b</sup>a man over against him, <sup>c</sup>with his sword drawn in his hand: and Joshua went unto day; for then the feast of unleavened bread began. But they could neither eat bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears, till the first-fruits of the harvest had been waved at the tabernacle (see Lev. xxiii. 9, &c.); and therefore in this case we may suppose that the Israelites had offered a sheaf of the barley-harvest, the only grain that was then ripe, before they ate of the unleavened cakes and parched corn.

Verse 12. And the manna ceased—after they had eaten of the old corn] This miraculous supply continued with them as long as they needed it. Now they are got into the promised land, the anathematized inhabitants of which either fall or flee before them, they find an old stock, and they are brought in just at the commencement of the harvest; hence, as there is an ample provision made in the ordinary way of Providence, there is no longer any need of a miraculous supply; therefore the manna ceased which they had enjoyed for forty years.

Verse 13. When Joshua was by Jericho] The sixth chapter should have commenced here, as this is an entirely new relation; or these two chapters should have made but one, as the present division has most unnaturally divided the communication which Joshua had from the angel of the Lord, and which is continued to ver. 5 of chap. vi. It is very likely that Joshua had gone out privately to reconnoitre the city of Jericho; and while contemplating the strength of the place, God, to encourage him, granted him this vision, and instructed him in the means by which the city should be taken.

There stood a man over against him] It has been a very general opinion, both among the ancients and moderns, that the person mentioned here was no other than the Lord Jesus in that form which, in the fulness of time, he was actually to assume for the redemption of man. That the appearance was supernatural is agreed on all hands; and as the name Jehovah is given him (chap. vi. 2), and he received from Joshua divine adoration, we may presume that no created angel is intended.

And Joshua went unto him] This is a very natural relation, and carries with it all the appearances and characteristics of a simple relation of fact. The whole history of Joshua shows him to have been a man of the most undaunted mind and intrepid courage—a genuine HERO. An ordinary person, seeing this man armed, with a drawn sword in his hand, him, and said unto him, Art thou for us, or for our adversaries.

14 And he said, Nay; but as <sup>a</sup>captain of the host of the LORD am I now come. And Joshua <sup>b</sup>fell on his face to the earth, and did worship, and said unto him, What saith my lord unto his servant?

15 And the captain of the LORD's host said unto Joshua, Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whercon thou standest is holy. And Joshua did so.

20. Dan. x. 13, 21. xii. 1. Rev. xii. 7. xix. 11, 14.—Gen. xvii. 3.—Exod. iii. 5. Acts vii. 33.

would have endeavoured to have regained the camp, and sought safety in flight; but Joshua, undismayed, though probably slightly armed, walks up to this terrible person and immediately questions him, Art thou for us or for our adversaries? probably at first supposing that he might be the Canaanitish general, coming to reconnoitre the Israelitish camp, as himself was come out to examine the city of Jericho.

Verse 14. But as captain of the host of the Lord, am I now come] By this saying Joshua was both encouraged and instructed. As if he had said, "Fear not: Jehovah hath sent from heaven to save thee and thy people from the reproach of them that would swallow thee up. Israel is the Lord's host; and the Lord of hosts is Israel's Captain. Thou thyself shalt only be captain under me, and I am now about to instruct thee relative to thy conduct in this war."

And Joshua—did worship] Nor was he reproached for offering divine worship to this person, which he would not have received had he been a created angel.

Verse 15. Loose thy shoe from off thy foot, &c.] These were the same words which the Angel, on Mount Sinai, spoke to Moses (see Exod. iii. 5-8); and from this it seems likely that it was the same person that appeared in both places: in the first, to encourage Moses to deliver the oppressed Israelites, and bring them to the promised land; in the second, to encourage Joshua in his arduous labour in expelling the ancient inhabitants, and establishing the people in the inheritance promised to their fathers.

We may draw two useful reflections from the subjects of this chapter:—

1. As the manna had now failed, the people, always greatly addicted to incredulity, might have been led to imagine that God had now given them up, and would be no longer in their armies, had he not given them this strong assurance, that the Angel of his presence should be with them as the guide and protector of the whole camp; for Joshua undoubtedly informed them of the encouragement he had received from the captain of the Lord's host.

2. By this vision he showed them that their help came from himself, and that it was not by human might or power, but by the Lord of hosts, they were to have the victory over all their adversaries; and he gave them the most convincing proof of this in the miraculous destruction of Jericho.

CHAPTER VI.

The inhabitants of Jericho close their gates, 1. Continuation of the discourse between the captain of the Lord's host and Joshua. He commands the people to march round the city six days, the seven priests blowing with their trumpets; and to give a general shout, while marching round it on the seventh, and promises that then the walls of the city shall fall down, 2-5. Joshua delivers these directions to the priests and to the people, 6, 7. The priests and people obey; the order of their procession, 8-16. He commands them to spare the house of Rahab, 17, and not to touch any part of the property of the city, the whole of which God had devoted to destruction, 18, 19. On the seventh day the walls fall down, and the Israelites take the city, 20, 21. The spies are ordered to take care of Rahab and her family—the city is burnt, but the silver, gold, brass, and iron, are put into the treasury of the house of the Lord, 22-24. Rahab dwells among the Israelites, 25; and the city is laid under a curse, 26.

NOW Jericho <sup>a</sup>was straitly shut up because of the children of Israel: none went out, and none came in.

2 And the LORD said unto Joshua, See, <sup>b</sup>I have given into thine hand Jericho, and the <sup>c</sup>king thereof, and the mighty men of valour.

3 And ye shall compass the city, all <sup>ye</sup> men of war, and go round about the city once. Thus shalt thou do six days.

4 And seven priests shall bear before the ark seven <sup>d</sup>trumpets of rams' horns: and the seventh day ye shall compass the city seven times, and <sup>e</sup>the priests shall blow with the trumpets.

5 And it shall come to pass, that when they make a long blast with the ram's horn, and when ye hear the sound of the trumpet, all the people shall shout with a great shout; and the wall of the city shall fall down <sup>f</sup>flat, and the people shall ascend up, every man straight before him.

6 And Joshua the son of Nun called the priests, and said unto them, Take up the ark of the covenant, and let seven priests bear seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD.

7 And he said unto the people, Pass on and compass the city, and let him that is armed pass on before the ark of the LORD.

8 And it came to pass, when Joshua had spoken unto the people, that the seven priests bearing the seven trumpets of rams' horns passed on before the LORD, and blew with the trumpets: and the ark of the covenant of the LORD followed them.

9 And the armed men went before the priests

Verse 1. Now Jericho was straitly shut up] The king of Jericho, finding that the spies had escaped, though the city was always kept shut by night, took the most proper precaution to prevent every thing of the kind in future, by keeping the city shut both day and night, having, no doubt laid in a sufficiency of provisions to stand a siege, being determined to defend himself to the uttermost.

Verse 2. And the Lord said unto Joshua] This is the same person who in the preceding chapter is called the captain or prince of the Lord's host, the discourse being here continued that was begun at the conclusion of the preceding chapter, from which the first verses of this are unnaturally divided.

I have given into thine hand Jericho, &c.] From ver. 11 of chap. xxiv. it seems as if there had been persons of all the seven Canaanitish nations then in Jericho, who might have come together at this time to help the king of Jericho against the invading Israelites.

Verse 3. Ye shall compass the city] In what order the people marched round the city does not exactly appear from the text. Some think they observed the same order as in their ordinary marches in the desert; others that the soldiers marched first, then the priests who blew the trumpets, then those who carried the ark, and lastly the people.

Verse 4. Seven trumpets of rams' horns] The Hebrew word yobelim does not signify rams' horns; nor do any of the ancient Versions, the Chaldee excepted, give it this meaning. The instruments used on this occasion were evidently of the same kind with those used on the jubilee, and were probably made of horn or of silver; and the text in this place may be translated, And seven priests shall bear before the ark the seven jubilee trumpets, for they appear to have been the same kind as those used on the jubilee.

Seven times] The time was thus lengthened out that the besiegers and besieged might be the more deeply impressed with that supernatural power by which alone the walls fell.

Verse 5. The wall of the city shall fall down flat] Several commentators, both Jews and Christians, have supposed that the ground under the foundation of the walls opened, and the wall sunk into the chasm, so that there remained nothing but plain ground for the Israelites to walk over. Of this the text says nothing: literally translated it is, The that blew with the trumpets, <sup>a</sup>and the <sup>b</sup>rereward came after the ark, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

10 And Joshua had commanded the people, saying, Ye shall not shout, nor <sup>c</sup>make any noise with your voice, neither shall any word proceed out of your mouth, until the day I bid you shout; then shall ye shout.

11 So the ark of the LORD compassed the city, going about it once: and they came into the camp, and lodged in the camp.

12 And Joshua rose early in the morning, <sup>d</sup>and the priests took up the ark of the LORD.

13 And seven priests bearing seven trumpets of rams' horns before the ark of the LORD, went on continually, and blew with the trumpets: and the armed men went before them; but the rereward came after the ark of the LORD, the priests going on, and blowing with the trumpets.

14 And the second day they compassed the city once, and returned into the camp: so they did six days.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that they rose early about the dawning of the day, and compassed the city after the same manner seven times: only on that day they compassed the city seven times.

16 And it came to pass at the seventh time, when the priests blew with the trumpets, Joshua said unto the people, Shout; for the LORD hath given you the city,

17 And the city shall be <sup>e</sup>accursed, even it, and

wall of the city shall fall down under itself; which appears to mean no more than, The wall shall fall down from its very foundations.

Verse 9. The rereward came after the ark] The word measseph, from asaph, to collect or gather up, may signify either the rereward, as our translation understands it, or the people who carried the baggage of the army.

Verse 14. So they did six days] It is not likely that the whole Israelitish host went each day round the city. This would have been utterly impossible. The fighting men alone amounted to nearly 600,000, independently of the people, who must have amounted at least to two or three millions; we may therefore safely assert that only a select number, such as was deemed necessary for the occasion, were employed. Jericho could not have been a large city; and to reduce it could not have required a hundredth part of the armed force under the command of Joshua.

Verse 15. The seventh day—they rose early] Because on this day they had to encompass the city seven times, a proof that the city could not have been very extensive, else this going round it seven times, and having time sufficient left to sack and destroy it, would have been impossible.

It is evident that in the course of these seven days there must have been a sabbath, and that on this sabbath the host must have encompassed the city as on the other days. But it does not appear that there could be any breach in the sabbath by the people simply going round the city, the ark in company, and the priests sounding the sacred trumpets. This was a mere religious procession, performed at the command of God, in which no servile work was done. Therefore Marcion's objection, that the God of the Hebrews showed a changeableness of disposition in commanding the sabbath to be kept sacred at one time, and then to be broken at another, is without foundation. But if even a breach were to be conceded, it is a sufficient answer to all such cavils, that the God who commanded the sabbath to be set apart for rest and religious purposes, has always authority to suspend for a season the operation of merely ceremonial laws, or to abrogate them entirely, when the purpose of their institution is fulfilled. The Son of Man is lord even of the sabbath.

Verse 17. The city shall be accursed] That is, it shall be all that are therein, to the LORD: only Rahab the harlot shall live, she and all that are with her in the house, because <sup>a</sup>she hid the messengers that we sent.

18 And ye, <sup>b</sup>in any wise keep yourselves from the accursed thing, lest ye make yourselves accursed, when ye take of the accursed thing, and make the camp of Israel a curse, <sup>c</sup>and trouble it.

19 But all the silver, and gold, and vessels of brass and iron, are <sup>d</sup>consecrated unto the LORD: they shall come into the treasury of the LORD.

20 So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that <sup>e</sup>the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.

21 And they <sup>f</sup>utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both man and woman, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword.

22 But Joshua had said unto the two men that had spied out the country, Go into the harlot's house, devoted to destruction; ye shall take no spoils, and put all that resist to the sword. Though this may be the meaning of the word cherem in some places, yet here it seems to imply the total destruction of all the inhabitants, see ver. 21; but it is likely that peace was offered to this city, and that the extermination of the inhabitants was in consequence of the rejection of this offer.

Verse 20. The people shouted with a great shout, that the wall fell down] The whole relation evidently supposes a supernatural interference; as the blowing of the trumpets, and the shouting of the people, were too contemptible to be used even as instruments in this work, with the expectation of accomplishing it in a natural way.

Verse 21. They utterly destroyed—both man and woman, &c.] As this act was ordered by God himself, who is the Maker and Judge of all men, it must be right: for the Judge of all the earth cannot do wrong.

Verse 23. Brought out Rahab, and her father, &c.] Rahab having been faithful to her vow of secrecy, the Israelites were bound by the oath of the spies, who acted as their representatives in this business, to preserve her and her family alive.

And left them without the camp] They were considered as persons unclean, and consequently left without the camp (see Lev. xiii. 46; Num. xii. 14).

Verse 24. Only the silver, and the gold—they put into the treasury, &c.] The people were to have no share of the spoils, because they had no hand in the conquest. God alone overthrew the city; and into his treasury only the spoils were brought.

Verse 25. And she dwelleth in Israel even unto this day] This is one proof that the book was written in the time to which it is commonly referred.

Verse 26. And Joshua adjured them at that time] The ruins of this city continuing would be a permanent proof, not only of God's displeasure against idolatry, but of the miracle which he had wrought in behalf of the Israelites; and for these reasons God willed that it should not be rebuilt: nevertheless he left men to the operation of their own free will, and recorded the penalty which those must pay who should disobey him.

He shall lay the foundation thereof, &c.] This is a strange execration; but it may rather be considered in the light of a prediction. It seems to intimate that he who should attempt to rebuild this city, should lose all his children in the interim, from laying the foundation to the completion of the walls; which the author of 1 Kings xvi. 34 and bring out thence the woman, and all that she hath, <sup>a</sup>as ye sware unto her.

23 And the young men that were spies went in, and brought out Rahab, <sup>b</sup>and her father, and her mother, and her brethren, and all that she had; and they brought out all her <sup>c</sup>kindred, and left them without the camp of Israel.

24 And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: <sup>d</sup>only the silver, and the gold, and the vessels of brass, and of iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the LORD.

25 And Joshua saved Rahab the harlot alive, and her father's household, and all that she had; and <sup>e</sup>she dwelleth in Israel even unto this day; because she hid the messengers which Joshua sent to spy out Jericho.

26 And Joshua adjured them at that time, saying, <sup>f</sup>Cursed be the man before the LORD, that riseth up and buildeth this city Jericho: he shall lay the foundation thereof in his first-born, and in his youngest son shall he set up the gates of it.

27 <sup>g</sup>So the LORD was with Joshua; and <sup>h</sup>his fame was noised throughout all the country.

Heb. xi. 31.—<sup>a</sup> Ch. ii. 13.—<sup>b</sup> Heb. families.—<sup>c</sup> Ver. 19.—<sup>d</sup> See Mat. i. 5.—<sup>e</sup> 1 Kings xvi. 34.—<sup>f</sup> Ch. i. 5.—<sup>g</sup> Ch. ix. 1, 3.

says was accomplished in Hiel the Beth-elite, who rebuilt Jericho under the reign of Ahaz, and laid the foundation of it in Abiram, his first-born, and set up its gates in his youngest son Segub: this was 550 years after Joshua pronounced the curse. But we are not sure that this means that the children either died a natural or violent death on this occasion, for we may understand the history as relating to the slow progress of the work. Yet the first opinion is the most probable. We must not suppose that Jericho had been wholly neglected from its overthrow by Joshua to the days of Hiel; if it be the same with the city of palm-trees, mentioned Deut. xxiv. 3. We find it mentioned as an inhabited place in the beginning of Judg. i. 16, a short time after the death of Joshua; and this said city (if the same with the city of palm-trees) was taken from the Israelites by Eglon, king of Moab, Judg. iii. 13. The ambassadors of David were commanded to tarry at Jericho till their beards should grow, 2 Sam. x. 4, 5. [The prediction of Joshua was uttered, not against the man who should rebuild Jericho, but against him who should erect it as a fortress, which Hiel attempted to do.]

Verse 27. So the Lord was with Joshua] Giving him miraculous assistance in all his enterprises; and this was what he was naturally led to expect from the communication made to him by the captain of the Lord's host, chap. v. 14, &c.

1. Many attempts have been made either to deny the miracle in the fall of Jericho, or to account for it on natural causes. But to those who believe the divine authenticity of the New Testament, every objection is removed by the authority of the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, chap. xi. 30: By FAITH the walls of Jericho fell down after they had been compassed about seven days.

2. The same is said of Rahab: By FAITH the harlot Rahab perished not with them that believed not, when she had received the spies with peace, Heb. xi. 31. She believed that the true God was on the side of the Hebrews; and this faith led her to put herself under the Divine protection, and in virtue of it she escaped the destruction that fell on her countrymen. Thus God has ever chosen to put honour on faith, as the instrument by which he will perform his greatest miracles of justice and mercy.

3. In ancient history we have many instances of execrations against those who should rebuild those cities which had been destroyed in war, the revival of whose power and influence was dreaded; especially such cities as had been remarkable for oppression, insolence, or perfidy.

CHAPTER VII.

The trespass of the Israelites, 1. Joshua sends men to view the state of Ai, 2. They return with a favourable report, 3. Three thousand men are sent against it, who are defeated, and thirty-six killed, 4, 5. Joshua is greatly distressed, prostrates himself, and inquires of the Lord the reason why he has abandoned Israel to their enemies, 6-9. The Lord raises him, and informs him that, contrary to the command, some of the people had secreted some of the spoils of Jericho, 10-12. He is directed how to discover the delinquent, 13-15. Joshua inquires in what TRIBE the guilt is found, and finds it to be in the tribe of Judah; in what FAMILY, and finds it to be among the Zarahites; in what HOUSEHOLD, and finds it to be in that of Zabdi; in what INDIVIDUAL, and finds it to be Achan, son of Carmi, son of Zabdi, 16-18. Joshua exhorts him to confess his sin, 19. He does so, and gives a circumstantial account, 20, 21. Joshua sends for the stolen articles, 22, 23. And Achan and all that belonged to him are brought to the valley of Achor, stoned and burnt, 24-26.

BUT the children of Israel committed a trespass in the accursed thing: for * Achan, <sup>b</sup> the son of Carmi, the son of * Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the accursed thing: and the anger of the LORD was kindled against the children of Israel.

2 And Joshua sent men from Jericho to Ai, which is beside Beth-aven, on the east side of Beth-el, and spake unto them, saying, Go up and view the country. And the men went up and viewed Ai.

3 And they returned to Joshua, and said unto him, Let not all the people go up; but let <sup>d</sup> about two or three thousand men go up and smite Ai; and make not all the people to labour thither; for they are but few.

4 So there went up thither of the people about three thousand men: * and they fled before the men of Ai.

5 And the men of Ai smote of them about thirty and six men: for they chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim, and smote them ' in the going down: wherefore * the hearts of the people melted, and became as water.

6 And Joshua <sup>b</sup> rent his clothes, and fell to the earth upon his face before the ark of the LORD, until the eventide, he and the elders of Israel, and <sup>i</sup> put dust upon their heads.

7 And Joshua said, Alas, O LORD God, ' wherefore hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan, to deliver us into the hand of the Amorites, to destroy us? would to God we had been content, and dwelt on the other side Jordan!

8 O LORD, what shall I say, when Israel turneth their <sup>k</sup> backs before their enemies?

9 For the Canaanites and all the inhabitants of the land shall hear of it, and shall environ us round, and <sup>i</sup> cut off our name from the earth: and <sup>m</sup> what wilt thou do unto thy great name?

10 And the LORD said unto Joshua, Get thee up; wherefore <sup>n</sup> liest thou thus upon thy face?

Verse 1. The children of Israel committed a trespass] It is certain that one only was guilty; and yet the trespass is imputed here to the whole congregation; and the whole congregation soon suffered shame and disgrace on the account, as their armies were defeated, thirty-six persons slain, and general terror spread through the whole camp. Being one body, God attributes the crime of the individual to the whole till the trespass was discovered, and by a public act of justice inflicted on the culprit the congregation had purged itself of the iniquity. This was done to render every man extremely cautious, and to make the people watchful over each other, that sin might be no where tolerated or connived at, as one transgression might bring down the wrath of God upon the whole camp. See on ver. 12.

The accursed thing] A portion of the spoils of the city of Jericho, the whole of which God had commanded to be destroyed.

Verse 2. Sent men from Jericho to Ai] This is the place called Hai, Gen. xii. 8. It was in the east of Beth-el, north of Jericho, from which it was distant about ten or twelve miles. From verses 4 and 5 it appears to have been situated upon a hill, and belonged to the Amorites, as we learn from ver. 7. It is very likely that it was a strong place, as it chose to risk a siege, notwithstanding the extraordinary destruction of Jericho which it had lately witnessed.

Verse 4. About three thousand men] The spies sent to reconnoitre the place (ver. 3) reported that the town was meanly garrisoned, and that two or three thousand men would be sufficient to take it. These were accordingly sent up, and were repulsed by the Amorites.

Verse 5. They chased them from before the gate even unto Shebarim] They seem to have presumed that the men of Ai would have immediately opened their gates to them, and therefore they marched up with confidence; but the enemy appearing, they were put to flight, their ranks utterly broken, and thirty-six of them killed.

The hearts of the people melted] They were utterly discouraged; and by this was given an ample proof that without the supernatural assistance of God they could never have conquered the land.

Verse 6. Joshua rent his clothes, &c.] It was not in consequence of this slight discomfiture, simply considered in itself, that Joshua laid this business so much to heart; but 1. Because the people melted, and became as water, and there was little hope that they would make any stand against the enemy; and 2. Because this defeat evidently showed that God had turned his hand against them. Had it not been so their enemies could not have prevailed.

Put dust upon their heads] Rending the clothes, beating the breast, tearing the hair, putting dust upon the head, and falling down prostrate, were the usual marks of deep affliction and distress. Most nations have expressed their sorrow in a similar way.

Verse 7. Alas, O Lord God] Particles of exclamation and distress, or what are called interjections, are nearly the same in all languages: and the reason is because they are the simple voice of nature. The Hebrew word which we translate alas, is alah. The complaint of Joshua in this and the following verses seems principally to have arisen from his deep concern for the glory of God, and the affecting interest he took in behalf of the people; and his expostulations with his Maker, which have been too hastily blamed by some, as savouring of too great freedom and impatience, are founded on God's own words, Deut. xxxii. 26, 27, and on the practice of Moses himself, who had used similar expressions on a similar occasion; see Exod. v. 22, 23, Num. xiv. 18-18.

Verse 10. Wherefore liest thou thus upon thy face?] It

11 * Israel hath sinned, and they have also transgressed my covenant which I commanded them; <sup>b</sup> for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and <sup>c</sup> dissembled also, and they have put it even among their own stuff.

12 <sup>d</sup> Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because <sup>e</sup> they were accursed: neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you.

13 Up, <sup>f</sup> sanctify the people, and say, * Sanctify yourselves against to-morrow: for thus saith the LORD God of Israel, There is an accursed thing in the midst of thee, O Israel: thou canst not stand before thine enemies, until ye take away the accursed thing from among you.

14 In the morning therefore ye shall be brought according to your tribes: and it shall be that the tribe which <sup>h</sup> the LORD taketh shall come according to the families thereof; and the family which the LORD shall take shall come by households; and the household which the LORD shall take shall come man by man.

15 <sup>i</sup> And it shall be, that he that is taken with the accursed thing shall be burnt with fire, he and all that he hath: because he hath <sup>j</sup> transgressed the covenant of the LORD, and because he <sup>k</sup> hath wrought <sup>l</sup> folly in Israel.

16 So Joshua rose up early in the morning, and brought Israel by their tribes; and the tribe of Judah was taken:

17 And he brought the family of Judah; and he is plain there was nothing in Joshua's prayer or complaint that was offensive to God, for here there is no reprehension: Why hast thou thus? <sup>o</sup> This is no time for complaint; something else is indispensably necessary to be done.

Verse 11. Israel hath sinned] It is impossible that God should turn against his people, if they had not turned away from him. They have taken of the accursed thing, notwithstanding my severe prohibition. They have also stolen, supposing, if not seen by their brethren, I should either not see or not regard it. They have dissembled—pretended to have kept strictly the command I gave them; and have put it among their own stuff—considered it now as a part of their own property.

Verse 12. Because they were accursed] The inhabitants of Jericho and all that they had were accursed; therefore they and all their substance were to be destroyed. The Israelites took of the accursed thing, and therefore became accursed with it. This was certainly understood when the curse was pronounced: Every man who touches this property shall be involved in the same execration. Achan therefore was sufficiently aware of the risk he ran in taking any part of the anathematized thing; and when viewed in this light the punishment inflicted on him will appear to be perfectly just and proper.

Verse 13. Up, sanctify the people] Joshua, all the time that God spake, lay prostrate before the ark.

Verse 14. Ye shall be brought according to your tribes] It is most probable that the case was determined by the lot; and that God chose this method to detect the guilty tribe, next the family, thirdly the household, and lastly the individual. This was nearly the plan pursued in the election of Saul by Samuel, 1 Sam. x. 19, 20. The same mode was used to find out who it was that transgressed the king's command, when it was found that Jonathan had eaten a little honey, 1 Sam. xiv. 40-43. That this was a frequent mode of determining difficult questions, and appointed by God himself, is evident from Lev. xvi. 8; Ps. xxii. 18; Prov. xvi. 33; xviii. 18; <sup>p</sup> Acts i. 26.

Verse 19. My son, give—glory to the Lord God] Doubtless this was designed, not only for the edification of the took the family of the Zarahites: and he brought the family of the Zarahites man by man; and Zabdi was taken:

18 And he brought his household man by man; and Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah <sup>q</sup> was taken.

19 And Joshua said unto Achan, My son, <sup>r</sup> give, I pray thee, glory to the LORD God of Israel, <sup>s</sup> and make confession unto him; and <sup>t</sup> tell me now what thou hast done; hide it not from me.

20 And Achan answered Joshua, and said, Indeed I have sinned against the LORD God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done.

21 When I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a <sup>v</sup> wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight, then I coveted them, and took them; and, behold, they are hid in the earth in the midst of my tent, and the silver under it.

22 So Joshua sent messengers, and they ran unto the tent; and, behold, it was hid in his tent, and the silver under it.

23 And they took them out of the midst of the tent, and brought them unto Joshua, and unto all the children of Israel, and <sup>w</sup> laid them out before the LORD.

24 And Joshua, and all Israel with him, took Achan the son of Zerah, and the silver, and the garment, and the wedge of gold, and his sons, and his daughters, and his oxen, and his asses, and his sheep, and his tent, and all that he had, and they brought them unto <sup>x</sup> the valley of Achor.

people, and a vindication of the righteous judgment of God, but in reference to his own salvation; for as his life was now become forfeited to the law, there was the utmost necessity of humiliation before God that his soul might be saved. Give glory to God signifies the same as, Make a thorough confession as in the presence of God, and disguise no part of the truth. In this way and in these very words the Jews adured the man who had been born blind that he would truly tell who had healed him; for they pretended to believe that Christ was such a sinner that God would not work a miracle by him, John ix. 24.

Verse 20. I have sinned against the Lord God] This seems a very honest and hearty confession, and there is hope that this poor culprit escaped perdition.

Verse 21. A goodly Babylonish garment] A splendid or costly robe of Shinar; but as Babylon or Babel was built in the plain of Shinar, the word has in general been translated Babylon in this place. It is very probable that this was the robe of the king of Jericho, for the same word is used Jonah iii. 6, to express the royal robe of the king of Nineveh, which he laid aside in order to humble himself before God.

Babylonish robes were very splendid, and in high reputation.

Two hundred shekels of silver] At three shillings per shekel, amount to about £80 sterling.

A wedge of gold] A tongue of gold, what we commonly call an ingot of gold, a corruption of the word lingot, signifying a little tongue, of fifty shekels weight. These fifty shekels, in weight 29 oz. 15½ gr., at £2. 5s. 2½ d. per shekel, would be worth about £118 0s. 10½ d. [Or it may have been an ornament in the shape of a tongue.]

This verse gives us a notable instance of the progress of sin. It 1. enters by the eye; 2. sinks into the heart; 3. actuates the hand; and 4. leads to secrecy and dissimulation. I saw, &c. I coveted, &c. I took and hid them in the earth. Thus says St. James: "When lust (evil desire) is conceived it bringeth forth sin; and when sin is finished it bringeth forth death," chap. i. 15.

Verse 24. Joshua—took Achan—and all that he had] He and his cattle and substance were brought to the valley to be consumed; his sons and his daughters, probably, to witness the judgments of God inflicted on their disobedient parent.

Verse 25. Why hast thou troubled us? Here is a reference to the meaning of Achan's or Achar's name, meh Achar-tanu; and as achar is used here, and not achan, and the valley is called the valley of Achor, and not the valley of Achan, hence some have supposed that Achar was his proper name, as it is read in 1 Chron. ii. 7, and in some MSS. and ancient Versions.

And all Israel stoned him with stones, and burned them with fire, after they had stoned them with stones.] Can it be fairly proved from the text that the sons and daughters of Achan were stoned to death and burnt as well as their father? The text certainly leaves it doubtful, but seems rather to intimate that Achan alone was stoned, and that his substance was burnt with fire. The singular number being used in the first clause of the verse, and the plural in the last, leaves the matter doubtful. It is possible that Achan, his oxen, asses, sheep, tent, and all his household goods, were destroyed, but his sons and daughters left uninjured. But it may be asked, Why are they brought out into the valley with the rest? Why, that they might see and fear, and be for ever deterred by their father's punishment from imitating his example.

That Achan's life was forfeited to justice by his transgression, no one doubts; he sinned against a known and positive law. His children could not suffer with him, because of the law, Deut. xxiv. 16, unless they had been accomplices in his guilt; of this there is no evidence: and the text in question, which speaks of Achan's punishment, is extremely dubious as far as it relates to this point. One circumstance that strengthens the supposition that the children were not included, is the command of the Lord, ver. 15: "He that is taken with the accursed thing, shall be burnt with fire; he, and all that he hath. Now, all that he hath may certainly refer to his goods, and not to his children; and his punishment, and the destruction of his property, would answer every purpose of public justice, both as a punishment and preventive of the crime; and both mercy and justice require that the innocent shall not suffer with the guilty, unless in very extraordinary cases, where God may permit the righteous or the innocent to be involved in those public calamities by which the ungodly are swept away from the face of the earth; but in the case before us, no necessity of this kind urged it, and therefore I conclude that Achan alone suffered, and that his repentance and confession were genuine and sincere; and that, while justice required his life, mercy was extended to the salvation of his soul. [Many critics are of opinion that the children of Achan were stoned with their father, not because of actual participation in his crime, but because they shared in the corrupt nature and desires which had influenced him. And the law referred to (Deut. xxiv. 16) contemplated ordinary crimes only, whereas Achan and his family had fallen under the ban, Deut. xiii. 16, 17.]

Verse 26. They raised over him a great heap of stones] The burial-places, both of heroes and eminent culprits, were anciently thus distinguished; and transactions of this kind gave rise to those great piles of stones called cairns, that are so frequently to be met with, especially in northern countries.

From this account we may see the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and the great danger of not withstanding its first approaches. By covetousness many lives and many souls have been destroyed, and yet the living lay it not to heart! Who fears the love of money, provided he can get riches? God alone can tell, who sees all things, to how many private crimes, frauds, and dissimulations, the love of money gives birth; by which the wrath of God is brought down upon the community at large! Who is an enemy to his country? The sinner against his God. An open foe may be resisted and repelled, because he is known, but the covetous man, who, as far as his personal safety will admit, is outraging all the requisitions of justice, is an unseen pestilence, sowing the seeds of desolation and ruin in society. Achan's covetousness, which led him to break the law of God, had nearly proved the destruction of the Israelitish camp; nor would the Lord turn away from his displeasure till the evil was detected, and the criminal punished.

Reader, is the face of God turned against thee, because of some private transgression? Are not thy circumstances and family suffering in consequence of something in thy private life? O search and try thy ways, return to God, and humble thyself before him, lest thy iniquity instantly find thee out!

CHAPTER VIII.

The Lord encourages Joshua, and promises to deliver Ai into his hands, and instructs him how he is to proceed against it, 1, 2. Joshua takes thirty thousand of his best troops, and gives them instructions concerning his intention of taking Ai by stratagem, 3-8. The men dispose themselves according to these directions, 9-13. The king of Ai attacks the Israelites, who, feigning to be beaten, fly before him, in consequence of which all the troops of Ai issue out, and pursue the Israelites, 14-17. Joshua, at the command of God, stretches out his spear towards Ai, and then five thousand men that he had placed in ambush in the valley rise up, enter the city, and set it on fire, 18, 19. Then Joshua and his men turned against the men of Ai, and, at the same time, those who had taken the city sallied forth and attacked them in the rear; thus the men of Ai were defeated, their king taken prisoner, the city sacked, and twelve thousand persons slain, 20-26. The Israelites take the spoils, and hang the king of Ai, 27-29. Joshua builds an altar to God on Mount Ebal, and writes on it a copy of the law of Moses, 30-32. The elders, officers, and judges, stand on each side of the ark, one half over against Mount Gerizim, and the other against Mount Ebal, and read all the blessings and curses of the law, according to the command of Moses, 33-35.

AND the LORD said unto Joshua, "Fear not, neither be thou dismayed: take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to

Verse 1. Fear not] The iniquity being now purged away, because of which God had turned his hand against Israel, didst unto *Jericho and her king: only <sup>b</sup> the spoil thereof, and the cattle thereof, shall ye take for a prey unto yourselves: lay thee an ambush for the city behind it.

3 So Joshua arose, and all the people of war, to go up against Ai; and Joshua chose out thirty thousand mighty men of valour, and sent them away by night.

4 And he commanded them, saying, Behold, <sup>c</sup> ye shall lie in wait against the city, even behind the city: go not very far from the city, but be ye all ready:

5 And I, and all the people that are with me, will approach unto the city: and it shall come to pass, when they come out against us, as at the first, that <sup>d</sup> we will flee before them,

6 (For they will come up after us) till we have <sup>e</sup> drawn them from the city: for they will say, They flee before us, as at the first: therefore we will flee before them.

7 Then ye shall rise up from the ambush, and seize upon the city: for the LORD your God will deliver it into your hand.

8 And it shall be, when ye have taken the city, that ye shall set the city on fire: according to the commandment of the LORD shall ye do. <sup>f</sup> See, I have commanded you.

9 Joshua therefore sent them forth: and they went to lie in an ambush, and abode about Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of Ai: but Joshua lodged that night among the people.

Take all the people of war with thee] Several eminent commentators are of opinion that the whole Israelitish force was employed on this occasion, because of what is said in the first verse; but this is not at all likely. 1. It appears that but thirty thousand were chosen out of the whole camp for this expedition, the rest being drawn up in readiness should their co-operation be necessary. See verses 3 and 10. 2. That all the people were mustered in order to make this selection, ver. 1. 3. That these thirty thousand were sent off by night, ver. 3, Joshua himself continuing in the camp a part of that night, ver. 9, with the design of putting himself at the head of the army next morning. 4. That of the thirty thousand men, five thousand were directed to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side of the city, ver. 12; the twenty-five thousand having taken a position on the north side of the city, ver. 11. 5. That the whole of the troops employed against Ai on this occasion were those on the north and west, ver. 13, which we know from the preceding verses were composed of thirty thousand chosen men. 6. That Joshua went in the course of the night, probably before day-break, into the valley between Beth-el and Ai, where the ambuscade of five thousand men was placed, ver. 13, and gave them the proper directions how they were to proceed, and agreed on the sign he was to give them at the moment he wished them to act, see ver. 18; and that, after having done so, he put himself at the head of the twenty-five thousand men on the north side of the city; for we find him among them when the men of Ai issued out, ver. 15, though he was the night before in the valley on the west side, where the ambuscade lay, ver. 13. 7. That as Ai was but a small city, containing only twelve thousand inhabitants, it would have been absurd to have employed an army of several hundred thousand men against them. 8. This is confirmed by the opinion of the spies, chap. vii. 3, who, from the smallness of the place, the fewness of its inhabitants, and the panic-struck state in which they found them, judged that three thousand troops would be quite sufficient to reduce the place. 9. That it appears this judgment was correctly enough formed, as the whole population of the place amounted only to twelve thousand persons, as we have already seen, ver. 25. 10. That even a less force might have been sufficient for the reduction of this place, had they been supplied with battering-rams, and such like instruments, 10 And Joshua rose up early in the morning, and numbered the people, and went up, he and the elders of Israel before the people to Ai.

11 <sup>a</sup> And all the people, even the people of war that were with him, went up, and drew nigh, and came before the city, and pitched on the north side of Ai: now there was a valley between them and Ai.

12 And he took about five thousand men, and set them to lie in ambush between Beth-el and Ai, on the west side <sup>b</sup> of the city.

13 And when they had set the people, even all the host that was on the north of the city, and <sup>c</sup> their liars in wait on the west of the city, Joshua went that night into the midst of the valley.

14 And it came to pass, when the king of Ai saw it, that they hasted and rose up early, and the men of the city went out against Israel to battle, he and all his people, at a time appointed, before the plain; but he <sup>d</sup> wist not that there were liars in ambush against him behind the city.

15 And Joshua and all Israel <sup>e</sup> made as if they were beaten before them, and fled by the way of the wilderness.

16 And all the people that were in Ai were called together to pursue after them: and they pursued after Joshua, and were drawn away from the city.

17 And there was not a man left in Ai or Beth-el, that went not out after Israel: and they left the city open, and pursued after Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto Joshua, Stretch out the spear that is in thy hand toward Ai; for I will

which it does not appear the Israelites possessed. 11. That this is the reason why Joshua employed the stratagems detailed in this chapter: having no proper instruments or machines, he used the feigned flight, ver. 19, to draw the inhabitants from the city, that the ambush, ver. 12-15, might then enter, and take possession of it. 12. That had he advanced with a greater force against the city the inhabitants would have had no confidence in risking a battle, and consequently would have kept within their walls, which would have defeated the design of the Israelites, which was to get them to issue from their city. 13. That, all these circumstances considered, thirty thousand men, disposed as above, were amply sufficient for the reduction of the city, and were the whole of the Israelitish troops which were employed on the occasion.

Verse 8. Ye shall set the city on fire] Probably this means no more than that they should kindle a fire in the city, the smoke of which should be an indication that they had taken it. For as the spoils of the city were to be divided among the people, had they at this time set fire to the city itself all the property must have been consumed, for the five thousand men did not wait to save any thing, as they immediately issued out to attack the men of Ai in the rear.

Verse 10. Numbered the people] He visited the people—inspected their ranks to see whether every thing was in perfect readiness, that in case they should be needed, they might be led on to the attack.

Verse 17. There was not a man left in Ai or Beth-el] It is very likely that the principal strength of Beth-el had been previously brought into Ai as the strongest place to make a stand in; Beth-el being about three miles distant from Ai, and probably not greatly fortified. Therefore Ai contained on this occasion all the men of Beth-el—all the warriors of that city, as well as its own troops and inhabitants. Others think that the Beth-elites, seeing the Israelites fly, sallied out of their city as against a common enemy; but that, finding the men of Ai discomfited and the city taken, they returned to Beth-el, which Joshua did not think proper to attack at this time. From Judges i. 24 we find that Beth-el was then a walled city, in the hands of the Canaanites, and was taken by the house of Joseph.

Verse 18. Stretch out the spear] It is very probable that Joshua had a flag or ensign at the end of his spear, which give it into thine hand. And Joshua stretched out the spear that he had in his hand toward the city.

19 And the ambush arose quickly out of their place, and they ran as soon as he had stretched out his hand: and they entered into the city, and took it, and hastened and set the city on fire.

20 And when the men of Ai looked behind them, they saw, and, behold, the smoke of the city ascended up to heaven, and they had no power to flee this way or that way: and the people that fled to the wilderness turned back upon the pursuers.

21 And when Joshua and all Israel saw that the ambush had taken the city, and that the smoke of the city ascended, then they turned again, and slew the men of Ai.

22 And the other issued out of the city against them: so they were in the midst of Israel, some on this side, and some on that side: and they smote them, so that they <sup>b</sup>lot none of them remain or escape.

23 And the king of Ai they took alive, and brought him to Joshua.

24 And it came to pass, when Israel had made an end of slaying all the inhabitants of Ai in the field, in the wilderness wherein they chased them, and when they were all fallen on the edge of the sword, until they were consumed, that all the Israelites returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.

25 And so it was, that all that fell that day, both of men and women, were twelve thousand, even all the men of Ai.

26 For Joshua drew not his hand back, wherewith he stretched out his spear, until he had utterly destroyed all the inhabitants of Ai.

27 Only the cattle and the spoil of that city Israel took for a prey unto themselves, according unto the might be easily seen at a considerable distance; and that the unfurling or waving of this was the sign agreed on between him and the ambush; and on seeing this flag or ensign unfurled, the men who lay in ambush arose and entered the city, making the fire previously agreed on.

Verse 20. They had no power to flee this way or that way] They were in utter consternation; they saw that the city was taken; they found themselves in the midst of their foes; that their wives, children, and property had fallen a prey to their enemies, in consequence of which they were so utterly panic-struck as to be incapable of making any resistance.

Verse 24. Returned unto Ai, and smote it with the edge of the sword.] This must refer to the women, children, and old persons left behind; for it is likely that all the effective men had sallied out when they imagined the Israelites had fled.

Verse 26. Joshua drew not his hand back] He was not only the general, but the standard-bearer or ensign, of his own army, and continued in this employment during the whole of the battle. Some commentators understand this and ver. 18 figuratively, as if they implied that Joshua continued in prayer to God for the success of his troops; nor did he cease till the armies of Ai were annihilated, and the city taken and destroyed. The Hebrew word kidon, which we render spear, is rendered by the Vulgate clypeum, buckler; and it must be owned that it seems to have this signification in several passages of scripture (see 1 Sam. xvii. 6, 45, Job xxxix. 23): but it is clear enough also that it means a spear, or some kind of offensive armour, in other places; see Job xli. 29, Jer. vi. 28. I cannot therefore think that it has any metaphorical meaning, such as that attributed to the holding up of Moses's hands, Exod. xvii. 10-12.

Verse 27. Only the cattle and the spoil] In the case of word of the LORD which he commanded Joshua.

28 And Joshua burnt Ai, and made it an heap for ever, even a desolation unto this day.

29 And the king of Ai he hanged on a tree until eventide: and as soon as the sun was down, Joshua commanded that they should take his carcase down from the tree, and cast it at the entering of the gate of the city, and raise thereon a great heap of stones, that remaineth unto this day.

30 Then Joshua built an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in Mount Ebal.

31 As Moses the servant of the LORD commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, an altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron: and they offered thereon burnt-offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace-offerings.

32 And he wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses, which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel.

33 And all Israel, and their elders, and officers, and their judges, stood on this side the ark, and on that side, before the priests the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, as well the stranger, as he that was born among them; half of them over against Mount Gerizim, and half of them over against Mount Ebal: as Moses the servant of the LORD had commanded before, that they should bless the people of Israel.

34 And afterward he read all the words of the law, the blessings and cursings, according to all that is written in the book of the law.

35 There was not a word of all that Moses commanded, which Joshua read not before all the congregation of Israel, with the women, and the little ones, and the strangers that were conversant among them.

Jericho these were all consigned to destruction, and therefore it was criminal to take any thing pertaining to the city, as we have already seen; but in the case before us the cattle and spoils were expressly given to the conquerors by the order of God.

Verse 29. The king of Ai he hanged on a tree] Probably after having been strangled, or in some way deprived of life, for in those times it was not customary to hang people alive.

As soon as the sun was down] It was not lawful to let the bodies remain all night upon the tree. The Septuagint say the king of Ai was hanged upon a double tree, which probably means a forked tree, or something in the form of a cross. The tree on which criminals were hanged among the Romans was called arbor infelix, and lignum infelix, the unfortunate, ill-fated, or accursed tree.

Raise thereon a great heap of stones] This was a common custom through all antiquity in every country.

Verse 30. Then Joshua built an altar] This was done in obedience to the express command of God, Deut. xxvii. 4-8.

Verse 32. A copy of the law of Moses] That is, a copy of the blessings and curses, as commanded by Moses; not a copy of the Decalogue, as some imagine, nor of the book of Deuteronomy, as others think; much less of the whole Pentateuch.

Verse 35. With the women, and the little ones] It was necessary that all should know that they were under the same obligation to obey; even the women are brought forward, not only because of their personal responsibility, but because to them was principally intrusted the education of the children. The children also witness this solemn transaction, that a salutary fear of offending God might be early, diligently, and deeply impressed upon their hearts. Thus every precaution is taken to insure obedience to the divine precepts, and consequently to promote the happiness of the people; for this every ordinance of God is remarkable, as he over causes the interest and duty of his followers to go hand in hand.

1. It may be asked, Seeing God promised to deliver Ai into the hands of the Israelites, why needed they to employ so many men and so many stratagems in order to its reduction? To this it may be answered, that God will have man to put forth the wisdom and power with which he has endued him, in every important purpose of life; that he endued him with those powers for this very end; and that it would be inconsistent with his gracious design so to help man at any time as to render the powers he had given him useless.

2. It is only in the use of lawful means that we have any reason to expect God's blessing and help. One of the ancients has remarked, "Though God has made man without himself, he will not save him without himself;" and therefore man's own concurrence of will, and co-operation of power with God, are essentially necessary to his preservation and salvation. This co-operation is the grand condition, on which God will help or save. But is not this "endeavouring to merit salvation by our own works?" No: for this is impossible, unless we could prove that all the mental and corporeal powers which we possess came from and are of ourselves, and that we held them independently of the power and beneficence of our Creator; and that every act of these was of infinite value, to make it an equivalent for the heaven we wished to purchase. Putting forth the hand to receive the alms of a benevolent man, can never be considered a purchase-price for the bounty bestowed. For ever shall that word stand true in all its parts, Christ is the AUTHOR of eternal salvation to all them that OBEY him, Heb. v. 9.

CHAPTER IX.

All the kings of the Hittites, Amorites, Canaanites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, unite their forces against Joshua, 1, 2. The inhabitants of Gibeon, hearing what Joshua had done to Ai, sent ambassadors to him, feigning themselves to come from a very distant tribe, requesting a friendly alliance with him, 3-5. Their address to Joshua, and the means they used to deceive the Israelites, 6-13. The Israelitish elders are deceived, and make a league with them, which they confirm with an oath, 14, 15. After three days they are informed that the Gibeonites belong to the seven Canaanitish nations, yet they spare their cities, 16, 17. The congregation murmuring because of this, the elders excuse themselves because of their oath, 18, 19. They purpose to make the Gibeonites slaves to the congregation, 20, 21. Joshua calls them, and pronounces this sentence against them, 22, 23. They vindicate themselves, and submit to their lot, 24, 25. They are spared, and made hewers of wood and drawers of water to the congregation and to the altar, 26, 27.

AND it came to pass, when all the kings which were on this side Jordan, in the hills, and in the valleys, and in all the coasts of <sup>a</sup> the great sea, over against Lebanon, <sup>b</sup> the Hittite, and the Amorite, the Canaanite, the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite, heard thereof;

2 That they <sup>c</sup> gathered themselves together, to fight with Joshua and with Israel, with one <sup>d</sup> accord.

3 And when the inhabitants of <sup>e</sup> Gibeon <sup>f</sup> heard what Joshua had done unto Jericho and to Ai,

4 They did work wilily, and went and made as if they had been ambassadors, and took old sacks upon their asses, and wine bottles, old, and rent, and bound up;

5 And old shoes and clouted upon their feet, and old garments, upon them; and all the bread of their provision was dry and mouldy.

6 And they went to Joshua <sup>g</sup> unto the camp at Gilgal, and said unto him, and to the men of Israel, We be come from a far country: now therefore make ye a league with us.

7 And the men of Israel said unto the <sup>h</sup> Hivites,

<sup>a</sup> Num. xxiv. 6. — Exod. iii. 17. xxiii. 23. —
<sup>b</sup> Ps. lxxlii. 3, 5.

Verse 1. And it came to pass, when all the kings—heard thereof] From this account it appears that the capture and destruction of Jericho and Ai had been heard of to the remotest parts of the land, that a general fear of the Israelitish arms prevailed, and that the different dynasties or petty governments into which the land was divided, felt all their interests at stake, and determined to make the defence of their country a common cause. The Great Sea mentioned here is the Mediterranean Sea, the coasts of which were inhabited by the Phœnicians, Tyrians, Sidonians and Philistines. It is very likely that all these united with the Canaanites for their common safety.

Verse 3. The inhabitants of Gibeon heard] These alone did not join the confederation. Gibeon is supposed to have been the capital of the Hivites. In the division of the land it fell to the lot of Benjamin, chap. xviii. 25, and was afterwards given to the priests, chap. xxi. 17.

Verse 4. They did work wilily] Finesse of this kind is allowed by the conduct of all nations; and stratagems in war are all considered as legal. Much time and labour have been lost in the inquiry, "Did not the Gibeonites tell lies?" Certainly they did, and what is that to us? Does the word of God commend them for it? It does not. Are they held up to us as examples? Surely no. They did what any other nation would have done in their circumstances, and we have nothing to do with their example. Had they come to the Israelites, and simply submitted themselves without opposition and without fraud, they had certainly fared much better. Lying and hypocrisy always defeat their own purpose, and at best can succeed only for a short season. Truth and honesty never wear out.

Old sacks—and wine bottles, old, &c.] They pretended to have come from a very distant country, and that their sacks, and the goat-skins that served them for carrying their wine and water in, were worn out by the length of the journey.

Verse 5. Old shoes and clouted] Their sandals, they pretended, had been worn out by long and difficult travelling, and they had been obliged to have them frequently patched during the way; their garments also were worn thin; and what remained of their bread was mouldy—spotted with age, or, as our old Version has it, bored—pierced with many holes by the vermin which had bred in it, through the length of the time it had been in their sacks; and this is the most literal meaning of the original, which means spotted or pierced with many holes.

The old and clouted shoes have been a subject of some controversy: the Hebrew word baloth signifies worn out, from balah, to wear away; and metullaath, from tala, to spot or patch, i.e. spotted with patches. Our word clouted signifies seamed up, patched; from a clout, rag, or small piece of cloth used for piecing or patching.

Verse 6. Make ye a league with us.] Cut, or divide, the covenant sacrifice with us. From this it appears that heathenism at this time had its sacrifices, and covenants were ratified by sacrificing to and invoking the objects of their adoration.

Peradventure ye dwell among us; and * how shall we make a league with you?

8 And they said unto Joshua, <sup>b</sup> We are thy servants. And Joshua said unto them, Who are ye? and from whence come ye?

9 And they said unto him, * From a very far country thy servants are come, because of the name of the LORD thy God; for we have <sup>d</sup> heard the fame of him, and all that he did in Egypt,

10 And * all that he did to the two kings of the Amorites, that were beyond Jordan, to Sihon king of Heshbon, and to Og king of Bashan, which was at Ashtaroth.

11 Wherefore our elders and all the inhabitants of our country spake to us, saying, Take victuals * with you for the journey, and go to meet them, and say unto them, We are your servants: therefore now make ye a league with us.

12 This our bread we took for our provision, out of our houses, on the day we came forth to go unto you; but now, behold, it is dry, and it is mouldy:

13 And these bottles of wine, which we filled, were new; and, behold, they be rent: and these our garments, and our shoes, are become old by reason of the very long journey.

14 And * the men took of their victuals, <sup>b</sup> and asked not counsel at the mouth of the LORD.

15 And Joshua <sup>1</sup> made peace with them, and * Exod. xxiii. 32. Deut. vii. 2, xx. 16. Judg. i. 2.—<sup>b</sup> Deut. xx. 11. 2 Kings x. 5.—<sup>c</sup> Deut. xx. 15.—<sup>d</sup> Exod. xv. 14. See Judg. i. 1. 1 Sam. xxii. 10. xxiii. 10, 11. xxx. 8.

Verse 7. Peradventure ye dwell among us] It is strange that, having such a suspicion, they acted with so little caution.

Verse 8. We are thy servants.] This appears to have been the only answer they gave to the question of the Israelitish elders, and this they gave to Joshua, not to them, as they saw that Joshua was commander-in-chief of the host.

Who are ye? and from whence come ye?] To these questions, from such an authority, they felt themselves obliged to give an explicit answer; and they do it very artfully by a mixture of truth, falsehood, and hypocrisy.

Verse 9. Because of the name of the Lord thy God.] They pretend that they had undertaken this journey on a religious account.

We have heard the fame of him.] This was true: the wonders which God did in Egypt, and the discomfiture of Sihon and Og, had reached the whole land of Canaan; and it was on this account that the inhabitants of it were panic-struck.

Verse 11. Wherefore our elders, &c.] All this, and what follows to the end of ver. 13, was false, contrived merely for the purpose of deceiving the Israelites, and this they did to save their own lives; as they expected all the inhabitants of Canaan to be put to the sword.

Verse 14. The men took of their victuals.] This was done in all probability in the way of friendship; for, from time immemorial to the present day, eating together, in the Asiatic countries, is considered a token of unalterable friendship; and those who eat even salt together, feel themselves bound thereby in a perpetual covenant. But the marginal reading of this clause should not be hastily rejected. [Calvin's interpretation is that the people took of the victuals in the sense of a credulous acceptance of the story.]

And asked not counsel at the mouth of the Lord.] They made the covenant with the Gibeonites without consulting God by Urim and Thummim, which was highly reprehensible in them, as it was a state transaction in which the interests and honour of God their king were intimately concerned.

Verse 15. Joshua made peace with them.] As the same words are used here as in ver. 6, we may suppose that the covenant was made in the ordinary way, a sacrifice being offered on the occasion, and its blood poured out before the Lord.

made a league with them, to let them live: and the princes of the congregation swore unto them.

16 And it came to pass at the end of three days after they had made a league with them, that they heard that they were their neighbours, and that they dwelt among them.

17 And the children of Israel journeyed, and came unto their cities on the third day. Now their cities were <sup>1</sup> Gibeon, and Chephirah, and Becroth, and Kirjath-jearim.

18 And the children of Israel smote them not, <sup>k</sup> because the princes of the congregation had sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel. And all the congregation murmured against the princes.

19 But all the princes said unto all the congregation, We have sworn unto them by the LORD God of Israel: now therefore we may not touch them.

20 This we will do to them; we will even let them live, lest <sup>1</sup> wrath be upon us, because of the oath which we swore unto them.

21 And the princes said unto them, Let them live; but let them be <sup>m</sup> hewers of wood and drawers of water unto all the congregation; as the princes had <sup>n</sup> promised them.

22 And Joshua called for them, and he spake unto them, saying, Wherefore have ye beguiled us, saying, * We are very far from you; when <sup>p</sup> ye dwelt among us?

23 Now therefore ye are <sup>q</sup> cursed, and there shall Verse 16. At the end of three days] Gibeon is reputed to be only about eight leagues distant from Gilgal, and on this account the fraud might be easily discovered in the time mentioned above.

Verse 17. The children of Israel—came unto their cities] Some of the cities mentioned here were afterwards in great repute among the Israelites; and God choose to make one of them, Kirjath-jearim, the residence of the ark of the covenant for twenty years, in the reigns of Saul and David. There is no evidence that the preservation of the Gibeonites was displeasing to Jehovah.

Verse 18. All the congregation murmured] Merely because they were deprived of the spoils of the Gibeonites. They had now got under the full influence of a predatory spirit; God saw their proneness to this, and therefore, at particular times, totally interdicted the spoils of conquered cities, as in the case of Jericho.

Verse 19. We have sworn unto them] Although the Israelites were deceived in this business, and the covenant was made on a certain supposition which was afterwards proved to have had no foundation in truth, and consequently the whole engagement on the part of the deceived was hereby vitiated and rendered null and void; yet, because the elders had eaten with them, offered a covenant sacrifice, and sworn by Jehovah, they did not consider themselves at liberty to break the terms of the agreement, as far as the lives of the Gibeonites were concerned. That their conduct in this respect was highly pleasing to God is evident from this, that Joshua is nowhere reprehended for making this covenant, and sparing the Gibeonites; and that Saul, who four hundred years after this thought himself and the Israelites loosed from this obligation, and in consequence oppressed and destroyed the Gibeonites, was punished for the breach of this treaty, being considered as the violator of a most solemn oath and covenant engagement. See 2 Sam. xxi. 2-9, and Ezek. xvii. 18, 19.

All these circumstances laid together, prove that the command to destroy the Canaanite was not so absolute as is generally supposed; and should be understood as rather referring to the destruction of the political existence of the Canaanitish nations, than to the destruction of their lives.

Verse 21. Hewers of wood and drawers of water] Perhaps this is a sort of proverbial expression, signifying the lowest

* none of you be freed from being bondmen, and b hewers of wood and drawers of water for the house of my God.

24 And they answered Joshua, and said, Because it was certainly told thy servants, how that the LORD thy God c commanded his servant Moses to give you all the land, and to destroy all the inhabitants of the land from before you, therefore d we were sore afraid of our lives because of you, and have done this thing.

state of servitude, though it may also be understood literally.

Verse 23. Now therefore ye are cursed.] Does not this refer to what was pronounced by Noah, Gen. ix. 25, against Ham and his posterity? Did not the curse of Ham imply slavery, and nothing else?

Hewers of wood and drawers of water] The disgrace of this state lay not in the laboriousness of it, but in its being the common employment of the females; if the ancient customs among the same people were such as prevail now.

Verse 24. We were sore afraid of our lives] Self-preservation, which is the most powerful law of nature, dictated to them those measures which they adopted; and they plead this as the motive of their conduct.

Verse 25. As it seemeth good and right unto thee—do.] Whatever justice and mercy dictate to thee to do to us, that perform. They expect justice, because they deceived the Israelites; but they expect mercy also, because they were driven to use this expedient for fear of losing their lives.
 The appeal to Joshua is full of delicacy and cogent argument.

Verse 26. And so did he unto them] That is, he acted according to justice and mercy: he delivered them out of the hands of the people, so that they slew them not—here was mercy; and he made them hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation, and to the altar of God—here was justice. Thus Joshua did nothing but what was good and right, not only in his own eyes, but also in the eyes of the Lord.

How long the Gibeonites were preserved as a distinct people after this, we know not. They are not mentioned

25 And now, behold, we are e in thine hand: as it seemeth good and right unto thee to do unto us, do.

26 And so did he unto them, and delivered them out of the hand of the children of Israel, that they slew them not.

27 And Joshua f made them that day g hewers of wood and drawers of water for the congregation, and for the altar of the LORD, even unto this day,
 h in the place which he should choose.

after the captivity; and it is probable that they were nearly annihilated by the persecution raised up against them by Saul. Some suppose that the Gibeonites existed under the appellation of Nethinim; but of this there is no decisive proof; the Nethinim were probably slaves of a different race.

On what we meet with in this chapter, we may make the following observations.

1. The Gibeonites told lies, in order to save their lives.
 No expediency can justify this, nor are we called to attempt it. The Gibeonites were heathens, and we can expect nothing better from them.

2. They did not profit by their falsity: had they come in fairly, sought peace, and renounced their idolatry, they would have had life on honourable terms. As it was, they barely escaped with their lives, and were utterly deprived of their political liberty. Even the good that is sought by unlawful means has God's curse on it.

3. We need not be solicitous for the character of the Gibeonites here; they are neither our models, nor believers in the true God, and therefore pure religion is not concerned in their prevarication and falsity.

4. We see here of what solemn importance an oath was considered among the people of God; they swore to their own hurt, and changed not. When once they had bound themselves to their Maker, they did not believe that any changing circumstances could justify a departure from so awful an obligation. Thus, reader, shouldst thou fear a lie, and tremble at an oath.

CHAPTER X.

Adoni-zedec, king of Jerusalem, hearing of the capture of Ai, and that the Gibeonites had made peace with Israel, calls to his assistance four other kings to fight against Gibeon, 1-4. They join forces, and encamp against Gibeon, 5. The Gibeonites send to Joshua for succour, 6, who immediately marches to their relief, receives encouragement from God, and falls suddenly on the confederate forces, 7-9, and defeats them; they fly, and multitudes of them are slain by a miraculous shower of hail-stones, 10, 11. Joshua, finding that the day began to fail, prayed that the sun and moon might stand still, that they might have time to pursue and utterly destroy these confederate forces, 12. The sun and moon stand still, and make that day as long as two, 13, 14. Joshua and the people return to their camp at Gilgal, 15. The five kings having taken shelter in a cave at Makkedah, Joshua commanded the people to roll great stones against the mouth of the cave, and set a watch to keep it, while Israel were pursuing their enemies, 16-19. The Israelites return to Makkedah, bring forth the five kings, then slay and hang them on five trees, 20-27. The Israelites take and destroy Makkedah, 28, and Libnah, 29, 30, and Lachish, 31, 32, and defeat Horem king of Gezer, 33, and take Eglon, 34, 35, and Hebron, 36, 37, and Debir, 38, 39, and all the country of the hills, south, vale, and springs, and the whole country from Kadesh-Barnea to Gibeon, 40-42. They return to Gilgal, 43.

NOW it came to pass, when Adoni-zedec, king of Jerusalem, had heard how Joshua had taken Ai, and had utterly destroyed it; a as he had done to Jericho and her king, so he had done to b Ai and her king; and c how the inhabitants of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were among them;

d Exod. xv. 14, 15, 16. Deut. xi. 25.

Verse 1. Adoni-zedec] This name signifies the Lord of justice or righteousness; and it has been conjectured that the Canaanitish kings assumed this name in imitation of that of the ancient patriarchal king of this city, Melchizedek, whose name signifies king of righteousness, or my righteous king: a supposition that is not improbable, when the celebrity of Melchizedek is considered.

Jerusalem] This word has been variously explained; if it a great city, as one of the * royal cities, and because it was greater than Ai, and all the men thereof were mighty.

3 Wherefore Adoni-zedec king of Jerusalem sent unto Hoham king of Hebron, and unto Piram king of Jarmuth, and unto Japhia king of Lachish, and unto Debir king of Eglon, saying,

4 Come up unto me, and help me, that we may smite Gibeon: <sup>b</sup> for it hath made peace with Joshua, and with the children of Israel.

5 Therefore the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, <sup>c</sup> gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon, and made war against it.

6 And the men of Gibeon sent unto Joshua <sup>d</sup> to the camp to Gilgal, saying, Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the mountains are gathered together against us.

be compounded of shalam, peace, perfection, &c., and raah, he saw, it may signify the vision of peace—or, he shall see peace or perfection.

Verse 2. As one of the royal cities] Not a regal city, but great, well inhabited and well fortified, as those cities which served for the royal residence generally were. It does not appear that the Gibeonites had any king—they seem to have been a small but powerful republic, all the men thereof were mighty, merely governed by their elders.

Verse 3. Hoham king of Hebron] This city was situated in the mountains, southward of Jerusalem, from which it was about thirty miles distant. It fell to the tribe of Judah.

Piram king of Jarmuth] There were two cities of this name; one belonged to the tribe of Issachar, see chap. xxi. 29; that mentioned here fell to the tribe of Judah, see chap. xv. 35; it is supposed to have been about eighteen miles distant from Jerusalem.

Japhia king of Lachish] This city is celebrated in scripture; in that city Amasiah was slain by conspirators, 2 Kings xiv. 19. It was besieged by Sennacherib, 2 Kings xviii. 14-17; and without effect by the king of Assyria, as we learn from Isa. xxxvii. 8: it was also besieged by the army of Nebuchadnezzar, see Jer. xxxiv. 7: it also fell to the lot of Judah, chap. xv. 39.

Debir king of Eglon] Where this city was situated is very uncertain; but we learn from chap. xv. 39, that it fell to the lot of the tribe of Judah.

Verse 5. The five kings of the Amorites] This is a general name for the inhabitants of Canaan, otherwise called Canaanites; and it is very likely that they had this appellation because the Amorites were the most powerful tribe or nation in that country. The inhabitants of Jerusalem were Jebusites, chap. xv. 63; those of Hebron were Hittites, Gen. xxiii. 2, 3, xxv. 9, 10; and the Gibeonites were Hivites, Josh. ix. 7; and yet all these are called Amorites occasionally, probably for the reason already mentioned, viz., because that tribe was most numerous and powerful.

Verse 9. Joshua came unto them suddenly] This he did by a forced march during the night, for he went up from Gilgal all night; from Gilgal to Gibeon was about eighteen or twenty miles; and, having fallen so unexpectedly on these confederate kings, they were immediately thrown into confusion.

Verse 10. Slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon] Multitudes of them fell in the onset; after which they fled, and the Israelites pursued them by the way of Beth-horon. There were two cities of this name, the upper and lower, both in the tribe of Ephraim, and built by Sherah, the daughter of Ephraim, 1 Chron. vii. 24. The situation of these two cities is not exactly known.

To Azekah, and unto Makkedah.] These two cities were in the tribe of Judah, chap. xv. 35-41.

7 So Joshua ascended from Gilgal, he, and * all the people of war with him, and all the mighty men of valour.

8 And the LORD said unto Joshua, 'Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; <sup>a</sup> there shall not a man of them stand before thee.

9 Joshua therefore came unto them suddenly, and went up from Gilgal all night.

10 And the LORD <sup>b</sup> discomfited them before Israel, and slew them with a great slaughter at Gibeon, and chased them along the way that goeth up <sup>c</sup> to Beth-horon, and smote them to <sup>d</sup> Azekah, and unto Makkedah.

11 And it came to pass, as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, <sup>e</sup> that the LORD cast down great stones from heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died; <sup>f</sup> they were more which died with hailstones, than <sup>g</sup> they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword.

12 Then spake Joshua to the LORD in the day when the LORD delivered up the Amorites before Verse 11. The Lord cast down great stones from heaven upon them] Some have contended that stones, in the common acceptance of the word, are intended here; and that the term hail-stones is only used to point out the celerity of their fall, and their quantity. That stones have fallen from the clouds, if not from a greater height, is a most incontestable fact. That God might have cast down such stones as these on the Canaanites, there can be no doubt, because his power is unlimited; and the whole account proves that here there was a miraculous interference. But it is more likely that hail-stones, in the proper sense of the word, are meant as well as expressed in the text. That God on other occasions has made use of hail-stones to destroy both men and cattle, we have ample proof in the plague of hail that fell on the Egyptians. See the note on Exod. ix. 18.

But I am ready to grant that as a most stupendous miracle was in this instance wrought, in causing the sun and moon to stand still; there can be no doubt that the shower of stones, which was also miraculous, might have been of real stones or aerolites as well as hail-stones.

Verse 12. Then spake Joshua to the Lord] Finding that the day was drawing towards a close, he feared that he should not have time sufficient to complete the destruction of the confederate armies; in this moment, being suddenly inspired with divine confidence, he requested the Lord to perform the most stupendous miracle that had ever been wrought, which was no less than to arrest the sun in his course, and prolong the day till the destruction of his enemies had been completed!

Sun, stand thou still upon Gideon; and thou, Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.] To account for this miracle, and to ascertain the manner in which it was wrought, has employed the pens of the ablest divines and astronomers, especially of the two last centuries. The subject cannot be well explained without a dissertation; and a dissertation is not consistent with the nature of short notes, or a commentary on scripture. It is, however, necessary to attempt an explanation, and to bring that as much as possible within the apprehension of common readers; in order to this, I must beg leave to introduce a few preliminary observations, or propositions.

1. I take it for granted that a miracle was wrought as nearly as circumstances could admit, in the manner in which it is here recorded.

2. I consider the present accredited system of the universe to be genuine; that the SUN is in the centre of what is called the solar system; and that the earth and all the other planets, whether primary or secondary, move round him in certain periodical times, according to the quantity of their matter, and distance from him, their centre.

3. I consider the sun to have no revolution round any orbit, but to revolve round his own axis, and round the common centre of gravity in the planetary system, which centre the children of Israel, and he said in the sight of Israel, "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon; and thou Moon, in the valley of Ajalon.

*Isa. xxviii. 21. Hab. iii. 11. Eccles. xlvii. 4.

of gravity is included within his own surface; and in all other respects I consider him to be at rest in the system.

4. I consider the earth, not only as revolving round the sun in 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 48 seconds, but as revolving round its own axis, and making this revolution in 23 hours, 56 minutes, and 4 seconds.

5. I consider the solar influence to be the cause both of the annual and diurnal motion of the earth; and that, while that influence continues to act upon it according to the law which God originally impressed on both the earth and the sun, the annual and diurnal motions of the earth must continue; and that no power but the unlimited power of God can alter this influence, change or suspend the operation of this law; but that he is such an infinitely FREE AGENT, that HE can, when his unerring wisdom sees good, alter, suspend, or even annihilate all secondary causes and their effects.

6. I consider that the miracle wrought on this occasion served greatly to confirm the Israelites, not only in the belief of the being and perfections of God, but also in the doctrine of an especial providence, and in the nullity of the whole system of idolatry and superstition.

7. That no evil was done by this miraculous interference, nor any law or property of nature ultimately changed; on the contrary, a most important good was produced, which probably, to this people, could not have been brought about any other way; and that therefore the miracle wrought on this occasion was highly worthy of the wisdom and power of God.

8. I consider that the terms in the text employed to describe this miracle are not, when rightly understood, contrary to the well-established notions of the true system of the universe; and are not spoken, as some have contended, to the prejudices of the common people, much less do they favour the Ptolemaic or any other hypothesis that places the earth in the centre of the solar system.

Having laid down these preliminaries, some short observations on the words of the text may be sufficient.

Joshua's address is in a poetic form in the original, and makes the two following hemistichs:

Sun! upon Gibeon be dumb:

And the moon on the vale of Ajalon.

The effect of this command is related, ver. 13, in the following words:

And the sun was dumb or silent, and the moon stood still. And in the latter clause of this verse it is added: And the sun stood still in the midst of heaven, and hasted not to go down about a whole day.

It seems necessary here to answer the question, At what time of the day did this miracle take place? The expression, in the midst of heaven, seems to intimate that the sun was at that time on the meridian of Gibeon, and consequently had one-half of its course to run; and this sense of the place has been strongly contended for as essential to the miracle, for the greater display of the glory of God. To me there seems no solidity in this reason. Had the sun been arrested in the meridian, the miracle could scarcely have been noticed, and especially in the hurry and confusion of that time; but on the contrary, had the sun been about the setting, when both the pursuers and the pursued must be apprehensive of its speedy disappearance, its continuance for several hours above the horizon, so near the point when it might be expected to go down, must have been very observable and striking. The enemy must see, feel, and deplore it; as their hope of escape must, in such circumstances, be founded on the speedily entering in of the night, through which alone they could expect to elude the pursuing Israelites. And the Israelites themselves must behold with astonishment and wonder that the setting sun hasted not to go down about a whole day. It appears, therefore, much more reasonable that Joshua should require this miracle to be performed when daylight was about to fail, just as the sun was setting. But it may be asked, What is the meaning of bachatsi hashshamayim, which we translate in the midst of heaven. If, with Mr. Bate, we translate chatsah, to part, divide asunder, then it may refer to the horizon, which is 13 And the sun stood still, and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. <sup>a</sup>Is not this written in the book of the apparent division of the heavens into the upper and lower hemisphere; and thus the whole verse has been understood by some eminently learned men, who have translated the whole passage thus: And the sun stood still in the (upper) hemisphere of heaven, and hasted not to go down, when the day was complete; that is, though the day was then complete, the sun being on the horizon—the line that to the eye constituted the mid heaven, yet it hasted not to go down—was miraculously sustained in its then almost setting position; and this seems still more evident from the moon appearing at that time, which it is not reasonable to suppose could be visible in the glare of light occasioned by a noon-day sun.

But the main business, relative to the standing still of the sun, still remains to be considered.

I consider that the word dom in the text refers to the withholding or restraining the solar influence, so that the cessation of the earth's motion might immediately take place. The desire of Joshua was, that the sun might not sink below the horizon; but as it appeared now to be over Gibeon, and the moon to be over the valley of Ajalon, he prayed that they might continue in these positions till the battle should be ended; or in other words, that the day should be miraculously lengthened out.

Whether Joshua had a correct philosophical notion of the true system of the universe, is a subject that need not come into the present inquiry: but whether he spoke with strict propriety on this occasion is a matter of importance, because he must be considered as acting under the divine influence, in requesting the performance of such a stupendous miracle; and we may safely assert that no man in his right mind would have thought of offering such a petition had he not felt himself under some divine afflatus. Leaving therefore his philosophical knowledge out of the question, he certainly spoke as if he had known that the solar influence was the cause of the earth's rotation, and therefore, with the strictest philosophical propriety, he requested that the influence might be for a time restrained, that the diurnal motion of the earth might be arrested, through which alone the sun could be kept above the horizon, and day be prolonged. His mode of expression evidently considers the sun as the great ruler or master in the system; and all the planets (or at least the earth) moving in their respective orbits at his command. He therefore desires him, in the name and by the authority of his Creator, to suspend his mandate with respect to the earth's motion, and that of its satellite, the moon. Had he said, Earth, stand thou still, the cessation of whose diurnal motion was the effect of his command, it could not have obeyed him; as it is not even the secondary cause either of its annual motion round the sun, or its diurnal motion round its own axis.

The terms in this command are worthy of particular note: Joshua does not say to the sun, Stand still, as if he had conceived him to be running his race round the earth; but, Be silent or inactive, that is, as I understand it, Restrain thy influence—no longer act upon the earth, to cause it to revolve round its axis; a mode of speech which is certainly consistent with the strictest astronomical knowledge; and the writer of the account, whether Joshua himself or the author of the book of Jasher, in relating the consequence of this command, is equally accurate, using a word widely different when he speaks of the effect the retention of the solar influence had on the moon: in the first case the sun was silent or inactive, dom; in the latter the moon stood still, amad. The standing still of the moon or its continuance above the horizon would be the natural effect of the cessation of the solar influence, which obliged the earth to discontinue her diurnal rotation, which of course would arrest the moon; and thus both it and the sun were kept above the horizon, probably for the space of a whole day.

Persons who are no friends to divine revelation say "that the account given of this miracle supposes the earth to be in the centre of the system, and the sun moveable; and this is demonstrably a false philosophy, consequently the history was never dictated by the Spirit of truth." Others, in answer, say "that the Holy Spirit condescends to accommodate himself to the apprehensions of the vulgar. The Israelites 14 And there was <sup>b</sup>no day like that before it or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for <sup>c</sup>the LORD fought for Israel.

15 <sup>d</sup>And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

16 But these five kings fled, and <sup>e</sup>hid themselves in a cave at Makkedah.

17 And it was told Joshua, saying, The five kings are found hid in a cave at Makkedah.

18 And Joshua said, 'Roll great stones upon the mouth of the cave, and set men by it for to keep them:

19 And stay ye not, but pursue after your enemies, and <sup>f</sup>smite the hindmost of them; suffer them not to enter into their cities: for the LORD your God hath delivered them into your hand.

20 And it came to pass, when Joshua and the children of Israel had made an end of slaying them with a very great slaughter, till they were consumed, that the rest which remained of them entered into fenced cities.

would naturally have imagined that Joshua was deranged had he bid the earth stand still, which they grant would have been the most accurate and philosophical mode of command on this occasion." But with due deference both to the objectors and defenders, I must assert, that such a form of speech on such an occasion would have been utterly unphilosophic; and that the expressions found in the Hebrew text are such as Sir Isaac Newton himself might have denominated, every thing considered, elegant, correct, and sublime. Nor does it at all appear that the prejudices of the vulgar were consulted on this occasion; nor is there a word here, when properly understood, that is inconsistent with the purest axiom of the soundest philosophy, and certainly nothing that implies any contradiction. I grant that when the people have to do with astronomical and philosophical matters, then the terms of the science may be accommodated to their apprehensions; it is on this ground that Sir Isaac Newton himself speaks of the rising and of the setting of the sun, though all genuine philosophers know that these appearances are produced by the rotation of the earth on its own axis from west to east. But when matters of this kind are to be transacted between God and his prophets, as in the above case, then subjects relative to philosophy are conceived in their proper terms, and expressed according to their own nature. At the conclusion of the 13th verse a different expression is used when it is said, So the sun stood still, it is not dom, but amad; which expression, thus varying from that in the command of Joshua, may be considered as implying that in order to restrain his influence, which I have assumed to be the cause of the earth's motion, the sun himself became inactive, that is, ceased to revolve round his own axis, which revolution is probably one cause, not only of the revolution of the earth, but of all the other planetary bodies in our system, and might have affected all the planets at the time in question; but this neither could nor did produce any disorder in nature; and the delay of a few hours in the whole planetary motions dwindles away into an imperceptible point in the thousands of years of their revolutions. But the whole effect mentioned here might have been produced by the cessation of the diurnal motion of the earth, the annual being still continued; and I contend that this was possible to Omnipotence, and that such a cessation might have taken place without occasioning the slightest disturbance in the motions of any others of the planetary system. It is vain to cry out and say, "Such a cessation of motion in one planet could not take place without disordering the motions of all the rest;" this I deny, and those who assert it neither know the scripture nor the power of God; therefore they do greatly err. That the day was preternaturally lengthened

21 And all the people returned to the camp to Joshua at Makkedah in peace: <sup>a</sup>none moved his tongue against any of the children of Israel.

22 Then said Joshua, Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave.

23 And they did so, and brought forth those five kings unto him out of the cave, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, and the king of Eglon.

24 And it came to pass, when they brought out those kings unto Joshua, that Joshua called for all the men of Israel, and said unto the captains of the men of war which went with him, Come near, <sup>b</sup>put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them.

25 And Joshua said unto them, <sup>c</sup>Fear not, nor be dismayed, be strong, and of good courage: for <sup>d</sup>thus shall the LORD do to all your enemies against whom ye fight.

26 And afterward Joshua smote them, and slew them, and hanged them on five trees: and they <sup>e</sup>were hanging upon the trees until the evening.

is a scripture fact. That it was so by a miracle, is asserted; and whether that miracle was wrought as above stated, is a matter of little consequence; the thing is a scripture fact, whether we know the modus operandi or not. I need scarcely add that the command of Joshua to the sun is to be understood as a prayer to God (from whom the sun derived his being and his continuance) that the effect might be what is expressed in the command; and therefore it is said, ver. 14, that the LORD HEARKENED UNTO THE VOICE OF A MAN, for the LORD fought for Israel. [It would be impossible to condense in a note the many arguments which recent criticism has put forth for and against the popular interpretation of this passage. It is only fair, however, to add, that by a number of orthodox expositors, both of the English and German schools, the whole passage is considered as a poetical quotation from the Book of Jasher, and not as a literal recital of facts.]

Book of Jasher] The book of the upright. Probably this was a book which, in reference to Joshua and his transactions, was similar to the commentaries of Cæsar, on his wars with the Gauls. Critics and commentators are greatly divided in their sentiments relative to the nature of this book.

Verse 14. And there was no day like that] There was no period of time in which the sun was kept so long above the horizon as on that occasion.

Verse 15. And Joshua returned—unto the camp to Gilgal.] That the Israelitish army did not return to the camp at Gilgal till after the hanging of the five kings and the destruction of their cities, is sufficiently evident from the subsequent parts of this chapter. When all this business was done, and not before, they returned unto the camp to Gilgal; see ver. 43.

Verse 16. Had themselves in a cave] It is very likely that this cave was a fortified place among some rocks; for there were many such places in different parts of Palestine.

Verse 21. None moved his tongue] The whole transactions of this important day had been carried on so evidently under the direction of God that there was not the least murmuring, nor cause for it, among them, for their enemies were all discomfited.

Verse 24. Put your feet upon the necks of these kings.] This act was done symbolically, as a token, not only of the present complete victory, but of their approaching triumph over all their adversaries, which is the interpretation given of it by Joshua in the succeeding verse.

Verse 26. Smote—slew—and hanged them on five trees] Hanging alive seems a barbarous custom: among the Hebrews, criminals were first deprived of life; this was the debt required by justice: then they were hanged up, perhaps generally by the hands, not by the neck; this was done by way of example, to deter others from committing the crimes

27 And it came to pass at the time of the going down of the sun, that Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and cast them into the cave wherein they had been hid, and laid great stones in the cave's mouth, which remain until this very day.

28 And that day Joshua took Makkedah, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof he utterly destroyed, them, and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain: and he did to the king of Makkedah <sup>b</sup> as he did unto the king of Jericho.

29 Then Joshua passed from Makkedah, and all Israel with him, unto Libnah, and fought against Libnah:

30 And the LORD delivered it also, and the king thereof, into the hand of Israel; and he smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein; he let none remain in it; but did unto the king thereof as he did unto the king of Jericho.

31 And Joshua passed from Libnah, and all Israel with him, unto Lachish, and encamped against it, and fought against it:

32 And the LORD delivered Lachish into the hand of Israel, which took it on the second day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein, according to all that he had done to Libnah.

33 Then Horam king of Gezer came up to help Lachish; and Joshua smote him and his people, until he had left him none remaining.

34 And from Lachish Joshua passed unto Eglon and all Israel with him; and they encamped against it, and fought against it:

for which those had suffered: but they were never permitted to hang thus exposed all night, as this could have answered no purpose, either of justice or example, as they could not be seen in the night-season. One day also was deemed enough for their exposure, it being thought sufficient to show the public that justice had been executed; and to have exhibited them longer would have appeared to be a barbarous cruelty which attempted to extend punishment beyond the possible requisitions of justice.

Verse 28. That day Joshua took Makkedah] It is very possible that Makkedah was taken on the evening of the same day in which the miraculous solstice took place; but as to the other cities mentioned in this chapter, they certainly were subdued some days after, as it is not possible that an army, exhausted as this must have been with a whole night's march, and two days' hard fighting, could have proceeded further than Makkedah that night; the other cities were successively taken in the following days.

Verse 29. Fought against Libnah] This city was near Makkedah, see chap. xv. 42, and fell to the tribe of Judah, ver. 20, 42, and was given to the priests, chap. xxi. 13. Sennacherib besieged it, after he had been obliged to raise the siege of Lachish.

Verse 32. Lachish] It appears that this was anciently a very strong place; notwithstanding the people were panic-struck, and the Israelites flushed with success, yet Joshua could not reduce it till the second day, and the king of Assyria afterwards was obliged to raise the siege.

Verse 33. Horam king of Gezer] It is likely that Horam was in a state of alliance with the king of Lachish, and therefore came to his assistance as soon as it appeared that he was likely to be attacked. Joshua probably sent a detachment against him, before he was able to form a junction with the forces of Lachish; and utterly destroyed him and his army.

Gezer is supposed to have been situated near Azotus. It fell to the tribe of Ephraim, chap. xvi. 3, but was probably taken afterwards by some of the remnant of the Canaanitish 35 And they took it on that day, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and all the souls that were therein he utterly destroyed that day, according to all that he had done to Lachish.

36 And Joshua went up from Eglon, and all Israel with him, unto <sup>a</sup> Hebron; and they fought against it:

37 And they took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof, and all the souls that were therein; he left none remaining, according to all that he had done to Eglon; but destroyed it utterly, and all the souls that were therein.

38 And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, to <sup>c</sup> Debir; and fought against it:

39 And he took it, and the king thereof, and all the cities thereof; and they smote them with the edge of the sword, and utterly destroyed all the souls that were therein; he left none remaining: as he had done to Hebron so he did to Debir, and to the king thereof; as he had done also to Libnah, and to her king.

40 So Joshua smote all the country of the hills, and of the south, and of the vale, and of the springs, and all their kings: he left none remaining, but utterly destroyed all that breathed, as the LORD God of Israel <sup>d</sup> commanded.

41 And Joshua smote them from Kadesh-barnea, even unto <sup>e</sup> Gaza, <sup>f</sup> and all the country of Goshen, even unto Gibeon.

42 And all these kings and their land did Joshua take at one time, <sup>g</sup> because the LORD God of Israel fought for Israel.

43 And Joshua returned, and all Israel with him, unto the camp to Gilgal.

nations; for we find it was given by Pharaoh to his son-in-law Solomon, 1 Kings ix. 16, which proves that it had got out of the possession of the Israelites previously to the days of Solomon.

Verse 34. Eglon] It is likely that this town was not any great distance from Lachish.

Verses 36 and 37. Hebron—and the king thereof] From ver. 23 we learn that the king of Hebron was one of those five whom Joshua slew and hanged on five trees at Makkedah. How then can it be said that he slew the king of Hebron when he took the city, which was some days after the transactions at Makkedah? Either this slaying of the king of Hebron must refer to what had already been done, or the Hebronites, finding that their king fell in battle, had set up another in his place; which was the king Joshua slew, after he had taken the city and its dependencies, as is related ver. 37.

It appears that the city of Hebron had fallen back into the hands of the Canaanites, for it was again taken from them by the tribe of Judah, Judg. i. 10. Debir had also fallen into their hands, for it was reconquered by Othniel, the son-in-law of Caleb, ib. ver. 11-13.

Verse 39. Destroyed all the souls] Brought every person under an anathema; they either slew them, or reduced them to a state of slavery.

Verse 40. Destroyed all that breathed] Every person found in arms who continued to resist; these were all destroyed, those who submitted were spared; but many no doubt made their escape, and afterwards re-occupied certain parts of the land.

Verse 41. And all the country of Goshen] Calmet contends that this was the very same country in which the Hebrews dwelt before their departure from Egypt. It however appears plain that there was a city named Goshen in the tribe of Judah, see chap. xv. 51; and this probably gave name to the adjacent country, which may be that referred to above.

Verse 42. Did Joshua take at one time] That is, he defeated all those kings, and took all their cities in ONE campaign; this appears to be the rational construction of the Hebrew. But these conquests were so rapid and stupendous, that they cannot be attributed either to the generalship of Joshua, or the valour of the Israelites; and hence the author himself, disclaiming the merit of them, modestly and piously adds, because the Lord God of Israel fought for Israel.

1. If, as is generally believed, the sun and moon were objects of the Canaanitish adoration, the miracle related in this chapter was graciously calculated to check this superstition, and to show the Israelites, as well as the Canaanites, the vanity of such worship, and the folly of such dependence. Even their gods, at the command of a servant of JEHOVAH, were obliged to contribute to the destruction of their votaries.

This method of checking superstition and destroying idolatry, God adopted in the plagues which he inflicted upon the Egyptians; and by it at once showed his justice and his mercy.

2. The same God who appeared so signally in behalf of his people of old is still the governor of the heavens and the earth; and, if applied to, will do every thing essentially necessary for the extension of his truth and the maintenance of his religion among men. How is it that faith is so rarely exercised in his power and goodness? We have not, because we ask not. Our experience of his goodness is contracted, because we pray little and believe less. To holy men of old the object of faith was more obscurely revealed than to us, and they had fewer helps to their faith; yet they believed more, and witnessed greater displays of the power and mercy of their Maker.

CHAPTER XI.

The kings of Hazor, Madon, Shimron, and Achshaph, with those of the mountains, plains, &c., and various chiefs of the Canaanites and Amorites, confederate against Israel, 1-3. They pitch their tents at the waters of Merom, 4, 5. The Lord encourages Joshua, 6. He attacks and discomfits them, 7, 8. Houghs all their horses, and burns all their chariots, 9. Takes and burns several of their cities, 10-13. The Israelites take the spoils, 14, 15. An account of the country taken by Joshua, 16-18. The Gibeonites only make peace with Israel, 19. All the rest resist, and are overcome, 20. Joshua cuts off the Anakim, 21, 22. The conquered lands are given to Israel, and the war is concluded, 23.

AND it came to pass, when Jabin king of Hazor had heard those things, that he sent to Jobab king of Madon, and to the king<sup>b</sup> of Shimron, and to the king of Achshaph.

2 And to the kings that were on the north of the mountains, and of the plains south of<sup>c</sup> Chinneroth, and in the valley, and in the borders<sup>d</sup> of Dor on the west,

Verse 1. Jabin king of Hazor] It is probable that Jabin was the common name of all the kings of Hazor. That king, by whom the Israelites were kept in a state of slavery for twenty years, and who was defeated by Deborah and Barak, was called by this name; see Judg. iv. 2, 3, 23. The name signifies wise or intelligent. The city of Hazor was situated above the Lake Semechon, in Upper Galilee. It was given to the tribe of Naphtali, Josh. xix. 36, who it appears did not possess it long; for though it was burned by Joshua, ver. 11, it is likely that the Canaanites rebuilt it, and restored the ancient government, as we find a powerful king there about one hundred and thirty years after the death of Joshua, Judg. iv. 1. It was in ancient times the metropolitan city of all that district, and a number of petty kings or chieftains were subject to its king, see ver. 10; and it is likely that it was those tributary kings who were summoned to attend the king of Hazor on this occasion; for Joshua, having conquered the southern part of the promised land, the northern parts seeing themselves exposed made now a common interest, and, joining with Jabin, endeavoured to put a stop to the progress of the Israelites.

Jobab king of Madon] This royal city is nowhere else mentioned in scripture except in chap. xii. 19.

King of Shimron] This city is supposed to be the same with Symira, in Coele Syria, joined to Maron or Marath, by Pliny and Pomponius Mela. It cannot be Samaria, as that had its name long after by Omri king of Israel.

King of Achshaph] Calmet supposes this to have been the city Ecdippe, mentioned by Pliny, Ptolemy, Josephus, and Eusebius. The latter places it within ten miles of Ptolemais, on the road to Tyre. It belonged to the tribe of Asher.

Verse 2. On the north of the mountains] Or the mountain, probably Hermion, or some mountain not far from the lake of Gennesareth.

3 And to the Canaanite on the east and on the west, and to the Amorite, and to the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Jebusite in the mountains, and to the Hivite under<sup>e</sup> Hermion in the land of Mizpeh.

4 And they went out, they and all their hosts with them, much people, even as the sand that is upon the sea shore in multitude, with horses and chariots very many.

And of the plains] That is, the valleys of the above mountains, which had the sea of Chinneroth or Gennesareth on the south.

Chinneroth] This city is supposed by St. Jerome, and several others since his time, to be the same as was afterwards called Tiberias. From this city or village the sea of Chinneroth or Gennesareth probably had its name.

And in the borders of Dor] Dor was in the lot of the half tribe of Manassah, and was situated on the Mediterranean Sea, three leagues from Casarea, and seven from Ptolemais.

Verse 3. The Canaanite on the east, &c.] Those who dwell on the borders of Jordan, south of the sea of Tiberias.

On the west] Those were the Phœnicians who dwelt on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, from Dor northwards, on the way to Mount Libanus.

The Hivite under Hermion] Mount Hermion was to the east of Libanus and the fountains of Jordan; it is the same with Syrion and Baal Hermion in scripture.

The land of Mizpeh] There were several cities of this name: one in the tribe of Judah (chap. xv. 38); a second in the tribe of Benjamin (chap. xviii. 26); a third beyond Jordan, in the tribe of Gad; and a fourth beyond Jordan, in the tribe of Manasseh, which is that mentioned in the text.

Verse 4. Much people, even as the sand] This form of speech, by some called a hyperbole, conveys simply the idea of a vast or unusual number—a number of which no regular estimate could be easily formed.

That chariots were frequently used in war, all the records of antiquity prove; but it is generally supposed that among the Canaanites they were armed with iron scythes fastened to their poles and to the naves of their wheels. Terrible things are spoken of these, and the havoc made by them when furiously driven among the ranks of infantry. Of what sort the cavalry was, we know not; but from the

5 And when all these kings were <sup>a</sup>met together, they came and pitched together at the waters of Merom, to fight against Israel.

6 And the LORD said unto Joshua, <sup>b</sup>Be not afraid because of them: for to-morrow about this time will I deliver them up all slain before Israel: thou shalt <sup>c</sup>hough their horses, and burn their chariots with fire.

7 So Joshua came, and all the people of war with him against them by the waters of Merom suddenly; and they fell upon them.

8 And the LORD delivered them into the hand of Israel, who smote them, and chased them unto <sup>d</sup>great Zidon, and unto <sup>e</sup>‘Misrephoth-maim,’ and unto the valley of Mizpeh, eastward; and they smote them, until they left them none remaining.

9 And Joshua did unto them <sup>h</sup>as the LORD bade him: he houghed their horses, and burnt their chariots with fire.

10 And Joshua at that time turned back, and took Hazor, and smote the king thereof with the sword: for Hazor beforetime was the head of all those kingdoms.

11 And they smote all the souls that were therein with the edge of the sword, utterly destroying them: there was not <sup>i</sup>any left to breathe: and he burnt Hazor with fire.

12 And all the cities of those kings, and all the kings of them, did Joshua take, and smote them with the edge of the sword, and he utterly destroyed them, <sup>j</sup>as Moses the servant of the LORD commanded.

13 But <sup>k</sup>as for the cities that stood still <sup>l</sup>in their strength, Israel burned none of them, save Hazor only: <sup>m</sup>that did Joshua burn.

14 And all the spoil of these cities, and the cattle, the children of Israel took for a prey unto themselves; but every man they smote with the edge of the sword, until they had destroyed them, neither left they any to breathe.

15 <sup>n</sup>As the LORD commanded Moses his servant, so <sup>o</sup>did Moses command Joshua, and <sup>p</sup>so did Joshua; <sup>q</sup>he left nothing undone of all that the LORD commanded Moses.

16 So Joshua took all that land, <sup>r</sup>the hills, and all the south country, <sup>s</sup>and all the land of Goshen, and the valley, and the plain, and the mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same;

17 <sup>t</sup>Even from <sup>u</sup>the mount Halak, that goeth up to Seir, even unto Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon under Mount Hermon: and <sup>v</sup>all their kings he took, and smote them, and slew them.

18 <sup>w</sup>Joshua made war a long time with all those kings.

account here given we may see what great advantages these allies possessed over the Israelites, whose armies consisted of infantry only. [Chariots armed with scythes were not known until the time of Cyrus.]

Verse 5. The waters of Merom] Where these waters were, interpreters are not agreed. Whether they were the waters of the Lake Samechon, or the waters of Megiddo, mentioned Judg. v. 19, cannot be easily determined. The latter is the more probable opinion. [Recent criticism favours the former.]

Verse 6. Be not afraid—of them] This communication from God was highly necessary, in order to prevent the people from desponding on the eve of a conflict, in which their all was at stake.

Verse 7. By the waters of Merom suddenly] Joshua, being apprised of this grand confederation, lost no time, but marched to meet them; and before they could have supposed him at hand, fell suddenly upon them, and put them to the rout.

Verse 8. Great Zidon] If this were the same with the Sidon of the ancients, it was illustrious long before the Trojan war; and both it and its inhabitants are frequently mentioned by Homer as excelling in works of skill and utility, and abounding in wealth.

Misrephoth-maim] Or, Misrephoth of the waters. What this place was is unknown, but Calmet conjectures it to be the same with Sarepta, a city of Phœnicia, contiguous to Sidon. The word signifies the burning of the waters, or inflammation; probably it was a place noted for its hot springs; this idea seems to have struck Luther, as he translates it, the hot waters. [Gesenius renders it “smelting houses, by the side of the waters.”]

Verse 9. He houghed their horses] The Hebrew word akar, which we render to hough or hamstring, signifies to wound, cut, or lop off. It is very likely that it means here not only an act by which they were rendered useless, but by which they were destroyed; as God had purposed that his people should not possess any cattle of this kind, that a warlike and enterprising spirit might not be cultivated among them; and that when obliged to defend themselves and their country, they might be led to depend upon God for protection and victory. On the same ground, God had forbidden the kings of Israel to multiply horses, Deut. xvii. 16.

Burnt their chariots] As these could have been of no use without the horses.

Verse 13. The cities that stood still in their strength] The word tillam, which we translate their strength, and the margin, their heap, has been understood two ways. 1. As signifying those cities which had made peace with the Israelites, when conditions of peace were offered according to the command of the law; and consequently were not destroyed. The cities which were situated upon hills and mountains, which, when taken, might be retained with little difficulty. In this sense the place is understood by the Vulgate, as pointing out the cities “which were situated on hills and eminences.” [The rendering of J. D. Michaelis is better: “The cities that are standing even yet in their place.”]

Verse 14. All the spoils of these cities—Israel took] With the exception of those things which had been employed for idolatrous purposes; see Deut. vii. 25.

Verse 16. The mountain of Israel, and the valley of the same] This place has given considerable trouble to commentators; and it is not easy to assign such a meaning to the place as may appear in all respects satisfactory. 1. If we consider this verse and the 21st to have been added after the times in which the kingdoms of Israel and Judah were divided, the difficulty is at once removed. 2. The difficulty will be removed if we consider that mountain and valley are put here for mountains and valleys, and that these include all mountains and valleys which were not in the lot that fell to the tribe of Judah. Or 3. If by mountain of Israel we understand Beth-el, where God appeared to Jacob, afterwards called Israel, and promised him the land of Canaan, a part of the difficulty will be removed. But the first opinion seems best founded; for there is incontestable evidence that several notes have been added to this book since the days of Joshua. See the preface.

Verse 17. From the mount Halak] All the mountainous country that extends from the south of the land of Canaan towards Seir unto Baal-gad, which lies at the foot of Mount Libanus or Hermon, called by some the mountains of Separation, which serve as a limit between the land of Canaan and that of Seir; see chap. xii. 7. [Halak is not a proper name: it signifies bare.]

The valley of Lebanon] The whole extent of the plain which is on the south, and probably north, of Mount Libanus.

Verse 18. Joshua made war a long time] The whole of these conquests were not effected in one campaign: they probably required six or seven years.

19 There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel, save * the Hivites, the inhabitants of Gibeon: all other they took in battle.

20 For <sup>b</sup> it was of the LORD to harden their hearts, that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favour, but that he might destroy them, <sup>c</sup> as the LORD commanded Moses.

21 And at that time came Joshua, and cut off <sup>d</sup> the Anakims from the mountains, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, and from all the mountains

1. By protracting the war the Canaanites had time to repent, having sufficient opportunity to discern the hand of Jehovah. 2. Agriculture was carried on, and thus provision was made even for the support of the conquerors; for had the land been subdued and wasted at once, tillage must have been stopped, and famine would have ensued. 3. Wild beasts would have multiplied upon them, and the land have been desolated by their means. 4. Had these conquests been more rapid, the people would have been less affected and less instructed by miracles that had passed in such quick succession before their eyes; and they might have felt themselves less interested in the preservation of an inheritance, to obtain which they had been but at little trouble and little expense. What we labour under the divine blessing to acquire we are careful to retain; but what comes lightly generally goes lightly.

Verse 20. It was of the Lord to harden their hearts] They had sinned against all the light they had received, and God left them justly to the hardness, obstinacy, and pride of their own hearts; for as they chose to retain their idolatry, God was determined that they should be cut off.

Verse 21. Cut off the Anakims—from Hebron, from Debir] This is evidently a recapitulation of the military operations detailed chap. x. 36-41.

Destroyed—their cities] That is, those of the Anakim; for from ver. 13 we learn that Joshua preserved certain other cities.

Verse 22. In Gaza, in Gath, and in Ashdod] The whole race of the Anakim was extirpated in this war, except those who had taken refuge in the above cities, which belonged to the Philistines; and in which some of the descendants of Anak were found even in the days of David.

Verse 23. So Joshua took the whole land] All the country described here and in the preceding chapter. Besides the multitude that perished in this war, many of the Canaanites took refuge in the confines of the land, and in the neighbour-of Judah, and from all the mountains of Israel: Joshua destroyed them utterly with their cities.

22 There was none of the Anakims left in the land of the children of Israel: only in Gaza, in <sup>c</sup> Gath, <sup>d</sup> and in Ashdod, there remained.

23 So Joshua took the whole land, <sup>e</sup> according to all that the LORD said unto Moses; and Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel, <sup>f</sup> according to their divisions by their tribes. <sup>g</sup> And the land rested from war, ing nations. Some suppose that a party of these fugitive Canaanites made themselves masters of Lower Egypt, and founded a dynasty there, known by the name of the shepherd kings; but it is more probable that the shepherds occupied Egypt long before the time that Jacob went thither to sojourn. It is said they founded Tingris or Tangier, where, according to Procopius, they erected two white pillars, with an inscription in the Phœnician language, of which this is the translation: WE ARE THE PERSONS WHO HAVE FLED FROM THE FACE OF JOSHUA THE PLUNDERER, THE SON OF NAVE, or Nun. Many, no doubt, settled in different parts of Africa, in Asia Minor, in Greece, and in the different islands of the Ægean and Mediterranean Sea: it is supposed also that colonies of this people were spread over different parts of Germany and Sclavonia, &c., but their descendants are now so confounded with the nations of the earth, as no longer to retain their original name, or to be discernible.

And Joshua gave it for an inheritance unto Israel] He claimed no peculiar jurisdiction over it; his own family had no peculiar share of it, and himself only the ruined city of Tinnath-serah, in the tribe of Ephraim, which he was obliged to rebuild.

And the land rested from war] The whole territory being now conquered, which God designed the Israelites should possess at this time.

According to the apostle, Heb. iv. 8, &c., Joshua himself was a type of Christ; the promised land of the kingdom of heaven; the victories which he gained, of the victory and triumph of Christ; and the rest he procured for Israel, of the state of blessedness, at the right hand of God. In this light we should view the whole history in order to derive those advantages from it which, as a portion of the revelation of God, it was intended to convey.

CHAPTER XII.

A list of the kings on the east of Jordan, which were conquered by MOSES, with their territories, 1-6. A list of those on the west side of Jordan, conquered by JOSHUA, in number thirty-one, 7-24.

NOW these are the kings of the land, which the children of Israel smote, and possessed their land on the other side Jordan toward the rising of the sun, <sup>a</sup> from the river Arnon <sup>b</sup> unto Mount Hermon, and all the plain on the east:

Verse 1. From the river Arnon unto Mount Hermon] Arnon was the boundary of all the southern coast of the land occupied by the Israelites beyond Jordan: and the mountains of Hermon were the boundaries on the north. Arnon takes its rise in the mountains of Gilead, and having run a long way from north to south, falls into the Dead Sea, near the same place into which Jordan discharges itself.

And all the plain on the east] All the land from the plains of Moab to Mount Hermon.

Verse 2. From Aror] Aror was situated on the western side of the river Arnon, in the middle of the valley through which this river takes its course. The kingdom of Sihon extended from the river Arnon and the city of Aror on the south to the river Jabbok on the north.

3 And * from the plain to the sea of Chinneroth on the east, and unto the sea of the plain, even the Salt Sea on the east, <sup>b</sup> the way to Beth-jeshimoth; and from <sup>c</sup> the south, under <sup>d</sup> Ashdoth-pisgah <sup>e</sup> :

4 And <sup>f</sup> the coast of Og king of Bashan, which was of <sup>g</sup> the remnant of the giants, <sup>h</sup> that dwelt at Ashtaroth and at Edrei,

5 And reigned in <sup>i</sup> Mount Hermon, <sup>j</sup> and in Salcah, and in all Bashan, <sup>k</sup> unto the border of the Geshurites, and the Maachathites, and half Gilead, the border of Sihon the king of Heshbon.

6 <sup>l</sup> Them did Moses the servant of the LORD and the children of Israel smite: and <sup>m</sup> Moses the servant of the LORD gave it for a possession unto the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh.

7 And these are the kings of the country <sup>n</sup> which Joshua and the children of Israel smote on this side Jordan on the west, from Baal-gad in the valley of Lebanon even unto the mount Halak, that goeth up to <sup>o</sup> Seir; which Joshua <sup>p</sup> gave unto the tribes of Israel, for a possession according to their divisions.

And from half Gilead] The mountains of Gilead extended from north to south from Mount Hermon towards the source of the river Arnon, which was about the midst of the extent of the kingdom of Sihon: thus Sihon is said to have possessed the half of Gilead, that is, the half of the mountains and the country which bore the name of Gilead on the east of his territories.

River Jabbok] This river has its source in the mountains of Gilead; and, running from east to west, falls into Jordan. It bounds the territories of Sihon on the north, and those of the Ammonites on the south.

Verse 3. The sea of Chinneroth] Or Gennesareth, the same as the lake or sea of Tiberias.

The Salt Sea on the east] Understood by others to mean the sea of the city Melach. Where can we find any thing that can be called a salt sea on the east of the lake of Gennesareth? Some think that the lake Asphaltites, called also the Dead Sea, Sea of the Desert, Sea of Sodom, and Salt Sea, is here intended.

Beth-jeshimoth] A city near the Dead Sea in the plains of Moab.

Ashdoth-Pisgah] Supposed to be a city at the foot of Mount Pisgah. [Ashdoth may mean "cliffs."]

Verse 5. The border of the Geshurites] The country of Bashan, in the days of Moses and Joshua, extended from the river Jabbok on the south to the frontiers of the Geshurites and Maachathites on the north, to the foot of the mountains of Hermon.

Verse 13. The king of Geder] Probably the same with Gedor, chap. xv. 58; it was situated in the tribe of Judah.

Verse 14. The king of Hormah] Supposed to be the place where the Israelites were defeated by the Canaanites, see Num. xiv. 45: and which probably was called Hormah, chormah or destruction, from this circumstance.

Verse 15. Adullam] A city belonging to the tribe of Judah, chap. xv. 35. In a cave at this place David often secreted himself during his persecution by Saul; 1 Sam. xxi. 1.

Verse 17. Tappuah] There were two places of this name: one in the tribe of Judah, chap. xv. 34, and another in the tribe of Ephraim on the borders of Manasseh; but which of the two is meant here cannot be ascertained.

Hepher] The same, according to Calmet, as Ophrah in the tribe of Benjamin, chap. xviii. 23.

Verse 18. Aphek] There were several cities of this name: one in the tribe of Asher, chap. xix. 30; another in the tribe of Judah, 1 Sam. iv. 1, and xxix. 1; and a third in Syria, 1 Kings xx. 26, and 2 Kings xiii. 17. Which of the two former is here intended cannot be ascertained. [Probably the second.]

Lasharon] There is no city of this name known. Some consider the lamed in the word lasharon to be the sign of the genitive case; and in this sense it appears to have been understood by the Vulgate, which translates "the king of Sharon." This was rather a district than a city, and is celebrated in the scriptures for its fertility; Isa. xxxiii. 9, xxxv. 2. Some suppose it was the same with Saron, near Lydda, mentioned Acts ix. 35. [It has been demonstrated that the first letter is not a prefix.]

Verse 21. Taanach] A city in the half tribe of Manasseh, to the west of Jordan, not far from the frontiers of Zebulun, chap. xvii. 11.

Verse 22. Kedesh] There was a city of this name in the tribe of Naphtali, chap. xix. 37. It was given to the Levites, and was one of the cities of refuge, chap. xx. 7.

Jokneam of Carmel] This city is said to have been at the foot of Mount Carmel, near the river Belus, in the tribe of Zebulun, chap. xix. 11. It was given to the Levites, chap. xxi. 34.

Verse 23. The king of Dor] The city of this name fell to the lot of the children of Manasseh, chap. xvii. 11. Bochart observes that it was one of the oldest royal cities in Phœnicia. The Canaanites held it, Judg. i. 27. Antiochus Sydetes besieged it in after-times, but could not make himself master of it.

The king of the nations of Gilgal] This is supposed to mean the higher Galilee, surnamed Galilee of the Gentiles, or nations, as the Hebrew word goyim means. On this ground it should be read king of Galilee of the nations. Others suppose it is the same country with that of which Tidal was king; see Gen. xiv. 1. The place is very uncertain, and commentators have rendered it more so by their conjectures.

Verse 24. King of Tírzah] This city appears to have been for a long time the capital of the kingdom of Israel, and the residence of its kings. See 1 Kings xiv. 17, xv. 21, 33. Its situation cannot be exactly ascertained; but it is supposed to have been situated on a mountain about three leagues south of Samaria.

All the kings thirty and one.] The Septuagint say twenty-nine, and yet set down but twenty-eight, as they confound or omit the kings of Beth-el, Lasharon, and Madon.

So many kings in so small a territory, shows that their kingdoms must have been very small indeed. The kings of Beth-el and Ai had but about 12,000 subjects in the whole; but in ancient times all kings had very small territories.

CHAPTER XIII.

Joshua being old, the Lord informs him of the land yet remaining to be possessed, 1. Of the unconquered land among the Philistines, 2, 3. Among the Canaanites, Sidonians, and Amorites, 4, 5. The inhabitants of the hill country and the Sidonians to be driven out, 6. The land on the east side of Jordan, that was to be divided among the tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh, 7-12. The Geshurites and Maachathites not expelled, 13. The tribe of Levi receives no inheritance, 14. The possessions of REUBEN described, 15-23. The possessions of GAD, 24-28. The possessions of the half tribe of Manasseh, 29-31. Recapitulation of the subjects contained in this chapter, 32, 33.

NOW Joshua <sup>a</sup> was old and stricken in years; and the LORD said unto him, Thou art old, and stricken in years, and there remaineth yet very much land <sup>b</sup> to be possessed.

2 <sup>c</sup> This is the land that yet remaineth: <sup>d</sup> all the borders of the Philistines, and all <sup>e</sup> Geshuri,

Verse 1. Joshua was old] He is generally reputed to have been at this time about a hundred years of age: he had spent about seven years in the conquest of the land, and is supposed to have employed about one year in dividing it; and he died about ten years after, aged one hundred and ten years. It is very likely that he intended to subdue the whole land before he made the division of it among the tribes; but God did not think proper to have this done. So unfaithful were the Israelites that he appears to have purposed that some of the ancient inhabitants should still remain to keep them in check, and that the respective tribes should have some labour to drive out from their allotted borders the remains of the Canaanitish nations.

There remaineth yet very much land to be possessed.] That is, very much when compared with that on the other side Jordan, which was all that could as yet be said to be in the hands of the Israelites.

Verse 2. The borders of the Philistines, and all Geshuri] The borders of the Philistines may mean the land which they possessed on the sea-coast, south-west of the land of Canaan. There were several places named Geshuri, but that spoken of here was probably the region on the south of Canaan, towards Arabia, or towards Egypt.

Verse 3. From Sihor, which is before Egypt] Supposed by some to be the Pelusiac branch of the Nile, near to the Arabian Desert; called also the river of Egypt, Num. xxxiv. 5, Jer. ii. 18. [This supposition is doubtful.]

Ekron northward] Ekron was one of the five lordships of the Philistines, and the most northern of all the districts they possessed. Baal-zebub, its idol, is famous in scripture; see 2 Kings i. 2, &c. The five lordships of the Philistines were Gaza, Ashdod, Askalon, Gath, and Ekron. There is no proof that ever the Israelites possessed Ekron; though, from chap. xv. 11, some think it was originally given to Judah, but the text does not say so; it only states that the border of the tribe of Judah went out unto the side of Ekron. From chap. xix. 43 we learn that it was a part of the lot of Dan, but it does not appear to have been possessed by any of those tribes. [It is said to have been taken by Judah, Judg. i. 18. But see notes there.]

the Gazathites, and the Ashdodites, the Eshkalonites, the Gittites, and the Ekronites; also <sup>h</sup> the Avites;

4 From the south, all the land of the Canaanites, and <sup>i</sup> Mearah that is beside the Sidonians, <sup>j</sup> unto Aphek, to the borders of <sup>k</sup> the Amorites:

5 And the land of <sup>l</sup> the Giblites, and all Lebanon, toward the sun-rising, <sup>m</sup> from Baal-gad under Mount Hermon unto the entering into Hamath.

Counted to the Canaanite] It is generally allowed that the original possessors of this country were the descendants of Canaan, the youngest son of Ham. The Philistines sprang from Mizraim, the second son of Ham, and, having dispossessed the Avim from the places they held in this land, dwelt in their stead.

Five lords of the Philistines] These dynasties are famous in the scriptures for their successful wars against the Israelites, of whom they were almost the perpetual scourge.

Also the Avites] These must not be confounded with the Ilivites. The Avites seem to have been a very inconsiderable tribe, who dwelt in some of the skirts of Palestine. They had been originally deprived of their country by the Caphtorim; and though they lived as a distinct people, they had never afterwards arrived to any authority.

Verse 4. The land of the Canaanites] This lay on the south of the country of the Philistines, towards the sea-coast.

Mearah] Supposed to be the city Maratha, on the Mediterranean sea. Or the river Majora, which falls into the Mediterranean Sea, between Sidon and Berytus. [Mearah is not a proper name. It signifies "a cave."

To the borders of the Amorites] Though the term Amorite is sometimes used to designate the inhabitants in general of the land of Canaan, yet it must be considered in a much more restricted sense in this place.

Verse 5. The land of the Gblites] This people dwelt beyond the precincts of the land of Canaan, on the east of Tyre and Sidon. See Ezek. xxvii. 9, Psa. lxxxiii. 7; their capital was named Gabal.

Verse 6. Them will I drive out] That is, if the Israelites continued to be obedient; but they did not, and therefore they never fully possessed the whole of that land which, on this condition alone, God had promised them: the Sidonians were never expelled by the Israelites, and were only brought into a state of comparative subjection in the days of David and Solomon.

Some have taken upon them to deny the authenticity of divine revelation relative to this business. "because," say they, "God is stated to have absolutely promised that Joshua should conquer the whole land, and put the Israelites in 6 All the inhabitants of the hill country from Lebanon unto <sup>a</sup>Misrephoth-maim, and all the Sidonians, them <sup>b</sup>will I drive out from before the children of Israel: only <sup>c</sup>divide thou it by lot unto the Israelites for an inheritance, as I have commanded thee.

7 Now therefore divide this land for an inheritance unto the nine tribes, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

8 With whom the Reubenites and the Gadites have received their inheritance, <sup>d</sup>which Moses gave them, beyond Jordan eastward, even as Moses the servant of the Lord gave them;

9 From Aroer, that is upon the bank of the river Arnon, and the city that is in the midst of the river, <sup>e</sup>and all the plain of Medeba unto Dibon;

10 And <sup>f</sup>all the cities of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, unto the border of the children of Ammon;

11 <sup>g</sup>And Gilead, and the border of the Geshurites and the Maachathites, and all Mount Hermon, and all Bashan unto Salcah;

12 All the kingdom of Og in Bashan, which reigned in Ashtaroth and in Edrei, who remained of <sup>h</sup>the remnant of the giants: <sup>i</sup>for these did Moses smite, and cast them out.

13 Nevertheless the children of Israel expelled <sup>j</sup>not the Geshurites, nor the Maachathites: but the Geshurites and the Maachathites dwell among the Israelites until this day.

14 <sup>k</sup>Only unto the tribe of Levi he gave none inheritance; the sacrifices of the Lord God of Israel made by fire are their inheritance, <sup>l</sup>as he said unto them.

15 And Moses gave unto the tribe of the children of Reuben inheritance according to their families.

16 And their coast was <sup>m</sup>from Aroer, that is on the bank of the river Arnon, <sup>n</sup>and the city that is in the midst of the river, <sup>o</sup>and all the plain by Medeba;

17 Heshbon, and all her cities that are in the plain; Dibon, and <sup>p</sup>Bamoth-baal, and Beth-baal-meon.

18 <sup>q</sup>And Jahaza, and Kedemoth, and Mephaath,

19 <sup>r</sup>And Kirjathaim, and <sup>s</sup>Sibmah, and Zareth-shahar, in the mount of the valley,

21 <sup>v</sup>And all the cities of the plain, and all the kingdom of Sihon king of the Amorites, which reigned in Heshbon, <sup>w</sup>whom Moses smote <sup>x</sup>with the princes of Midian, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, which were dukes of Sihon, dwelling in the country.

22 <sup>y</sup>Balaam also the son of Beor, the <sup>z</sup>soothsayer, did the children of Israel slay with the sword among them that were slain by them.

23 And the border of the children of Reuben was Jordan, and the border thereof. This was the inheritance of the children of Reuben after their families, the cities and the villages thereof.

24 And Moses gave inheritance unto the tribe of Gad, even unto the children of Gad according to their families.

25 <sup>aa</sup>And their coast was Jazer, and all the cities of Gilead, <sup>bb</sup>and half the land of the children of Ammon, unto Aroer that is before <sup>cc</sup>Rabbah;

26 And from Heshbon unto Ramath-mizpeh, and Betonim; and from Mahanaim unto the border of Debir; possession of it." This is a total mistake. 1. God never absolutely, i. e. unconditionally, promised to put them in possession of this land. The promise of their possessing the whole was suspended on their fidelity to God. 2. God never said that Joshua should conquer the whole land, and give it to them; the promise was simply this: "Thou shalt bring them into the land, and thou shalt divide it among them:" both of which he did, and procured them footing by his conquests, sufficient to have enabled them to establish themselves in it for ever. 3. It was never said, Thou shalt conquer it all, and then divide it; no. Several of the tribes, after their quota was allotted them, were obliged to drive out the ancient inhabitants.

27 And in the valley, <sup>dd</sup>Beth-aram, and Beth-nimrah, <sup>ee</sup>and Succoth, and Zaphon, the rest of the kingdom of Sihon king of Heshbon, Jordan and his border, even unto the edge <sup>ff</sup>of the sea of Chinnereth on the other side Jordan eastward.

Verse 7. The nine tribes, and the half tribe of Manasseh] The other half tribe of Manasseh and the two tribes of Reuben and Gad had got their inheritance on the other side of Jordan, in the land formerly belonging to Og king of Bashan, and Sihon king of the Amorites.

Verse 17. Bamoth-baal] The high places of Baal, probably so called from altars erected on hills for the impure worship of this Canaanitish Priapus.

Verse 18. Jahaza] A city near Medeba and Dibon. It was given to the Levites, 1 Chron. vi. 78.

Kedemoth] Mentioned Deut. ii. 26; supposed to have been situated beyond the river Arnon.

Mephaath] Situated on the frontiers of Moab, on the eastern part of the desert. It was given to the Levites, chap. xxi. 37.

Verse 19. Kirjathaim] This city, according to Ensebius, was nine miles distant from Medeba, towards the east.

Sibmah] A place remarkable for its vines.

Zareth-shahar, in the mount of the valley] This probably means a town situated on or near to a hill, in some flat country.

Verse 20. Beth-peor] The house or temple of Peor, situated at the foot of a mountain of the same name.

Verse 21. The princes of Midian] See the history of this war, Num. xxxi. 1, &c.; and from that place this and the following verse seem to be borrowed, for the introduction of the death of Balaam here seems quite irrelevant.

Verse 23. The cities and the villages] By villages, chaserim, it is likely that moveable villages or tents are meant, such as are in use among the Bedouin Arabs; places where they were accustomed to feed and pen their cattle.

Verse 25. Half the land of the children of Ammon] This probably was land which had been taken from the Ammonites by Sihon, king of the Amorites, and which the Israelites possessed by right of conquest. For although the Israelites were forbidden to take the land of the Ammonites, Deut. ii. 37, yet this part, as having been united to the territories of Sihon, they might possess when they defeated that king and subdued his kingdom.

Verse 26. Ramath-mizpeh] The same as Ramoth-gilead. It was one of the cities of refuge, chap. x. 8, Deut. iv. 47.

Mahanaim] Or the two camps. Situated on the northern side of the brook Jabbok, celebrated for the vision of the two camps of angels which Jacob had there; see Gen. xxxii. 2.

Verse 27. Beth-aram] This city was rebuilt by Herod, and called Livias in honour of Livia, the wife of Augustus. Josephus calls it Julias, Julia being the name which the Greeks commonly give to Livia.

Succoth] A place between Jabbok and Jordan, where 28 This is the inheritance of the children of Gad after their families, the cities, and their villages.

29 And Moses gave inheritance unto the half tribe of Manasseh: and this was the possession of the half tribe of the children of Manasseh by their families.

30 And their coast was from Mahanaim, all Bashan, all the kingdom of Og king of Bashan, and all the towns of Jair, which are in Bashan, threescore cities.

31 And half Gilead, and <sup>b</sup>Ashtaroth, and Edrei, * Num. xxxii. 39, 40.

Jacob pitched his tents, from which circumstance it obtained its name; see Gen. xxxiii. 17.

Verse 29. The half tribe of Manasseh] When the tribes of Reuben and Gad requested to have their settlement on the east side of Jordan, it does not appear that any part of the tribe of Manasseh requested to be settled in the same place. But as this tribe was numerous, and had much cattle, Moses thought proper to appoint one-half of it to remain on the east of Jordan, and the other to go over and settle on the west side of that river.

CHAPTER XIV.

Eleazar, Joshua, and the heads of the fathers, distribute the land by lot to the people, 1-3. The Levites receive no land, but cities to dwell in, and suburbs for their cattle, 4, 5. Caleb requests to have Mount Hebron for an inheritance, because of his former services, 6-12. Joshua grants his request, 13-15.

AND these are the countries which the children of Israel inherited in the land of Canaan, which Eleazar the priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, and the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, distributed for inheritance to them.

2 <sup>b</sup> By lot was their inheritance, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses, for the nine tribes, and for the half tribe.

3 <sup>c</sup> For Moses had given the inheritance of two tribes and an half tribe on the other side Jordan:

* Num. xxxiv. 17, 18.—<sup>b</sup> Num. xxvi. 55. xxxiii. 54.
xxxiv. 13.

Verse 1. Eleazar the priest, &c.] ELEAZAR, as being the minister of GOD in sacred things, is mentioned first. JOSHUA, as having the supreme command in all things civil, is mentioned next. And the HEADS OF PRINCES of the twelve tribes, who in all things acted under Joshua, are mentioned last. These heads or princes were twelve, Joshua and Eleazar included; and the reader may find their names in Num. xxiv. 19-28. It is worthy of remark that no prince was taken from the tribes of Reuben and Gad, because these had already received their inheritance on the other side of Jordan, and therefore could not be interested in this division.

Verse 2. By lot was their inheritance] Concerning the meaning and use of the lot, see Num. xxxvi. 55; and concerning the manner of casting lots in the case of the scapegoat, see Lev. xvi. 8, 9.

How the lot was cast in this case cannot be particularly determined. It is probable, 1. That the land was geographically divided into ten portions. 2. That each portion was called by a particular name. 3. That the name of each portion was written on a separate slip of parchment, wood, &c. 4. That the names of the claimants were also written on so many slips. 5. The names of the portions, and of the tribes, were put into separate vessels. 6. Joshua, for example, put his hand into the vessel containing the names of the tribes, and took out one slip; while Eleazar took out one cities of the kingdom of Og in Bashan, were pertaining unto the children of Machir the son of Manasseh, even to the one half of the children of Machir by their families.

32 These are the countries which Moses did distribute for inheritance in the plains of Moab, on the other side Jordan, by Jericho, eastward.

33 But unto the tribe of Levi Moses gave not any inheritance: the Lord God of Israel was their inheritance, as he said unto them.

* Ver. 14. Ch. xviii. 7.—* Num. xviii. 20.
Deut. x. 9. xviii. 1, 2.

Verse 30. The towns of Jair] These were sixty cities; they are mentioned afterwards, and in 1 Chron. ii. 21, &c. They are the same with the Havoth-jair mentioned Num. xxxii. 41. Jair was son of Segub, grandson of Esron or Hezron, and great grandson of Machir by his grandmother's side, who married Hezron, of the tribe of Judah.

Verse 32. Which Moses did distribute] Moses had settled every thing relative to these tribes before his death, having appointed them to possess the territories of Og, king of Bashan, and Sihon, king of the Amorites.

but unto the Levites he gave none inheritance among them.

4 For the children of Joseph were two tribes, Manasseh and Ephraim: therefore they gave no part unto the Levites in the land, save cities to dwell in, with their suburbs for their cattle and for their substance.

5 As the Lord commanded Moses, so the children of Israel did, and they divided the land.

6 Then the children of Judah came unto Joshua in Gilgal: and Caleb the son of Jephunneh the from the other vessel, in which the names of the portions were put. 7. The name drawn, and the portion drawn, being read, it was immediately discerned what the district was which God had designed for such a tribe.

Verse 4. The children of Joseph were two tribes] This was ascertained by the prophetic declaration of their grandfather Jacob, Gen. xlviii. 5, 6; and as Levi was taken out of the tribes for the service of the sanctuary, one of these sons of Joseph came in his place, and Joseph was treated as the first-born of Jacob, in the place of Reuben, who had forfeited his right of primogeniture.

Verse 5. They divided the land] This work was begun some time before at Gilgal, and was finished some time after at Shiloh. It must have required a very considerable time to make all the geographical arrangements that were necessary for this purpose.

Verse 6. Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenazite] In the note on the parallel place, Num. xxxii. 12, it is said Kenaz was probably the father of Jephunneh, and that Jephunneh, not Caleb, was the Kenazite, but still, allowing this to be perfectly correct, Caleb might also be called the Kenazite, as it appears to have been a family name, for Othniel, his nephew and son-in-law, is called the son of Kenaz, chap. xv. 17, Judg. i. 18, and 1 Chron. iv. 13; and a grandson of Caleb is also called the son of Kenaz, 1 Chron. iv. 15. In 1 Chron. ii. 18 Caleb is called the son of Hezron, but this is only to be understood of his having Hebron for one of his ancestors; and son here may be considered the same as descendant.

9 And Moses swore on that day, saying, <sup>g</sup> Surely the land <sup>h</sup> whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance, and thy children's for ever, because thou hast wholly followed the LORD my God.

10 And now, behold, the LORD hath kept me alive, <sup>i</sup> as he said, these forty and five years, even since the LORD spake this word unto Moses, while the children of Israel <sup>j</sup> wandered in the wilderness: and now, lo, I am this day fourscore and five years old.

Thou knowest the thing that the Lord said.] In the place to which Caleb seems to refer, viz., Num. xiv. 24, there is not a word concerning a promise of Hebron to him and his posterity: nor in the place (Deut. i. 36) where Moses repeats what had been done at Kadesh-barnea: but it may be included in what is there spoken. God promises, because he had another spirit within him, and had followed God fully, therefore he should enter into the land whereinto he came, and his seed should possess it. Probably this relates to Hebron, and was so understood by all parties at that time. This seems tolerably evident from the pointed reference made by Caleb to this transmission.

Verse 7. As it was in mine heart.] Neither fear nor favour influenced him on the occasion; he told what he believed to be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Verse 9. The land whereon thy feet have trodden.] This probably refers to Hebron, which was no doubt mentioned on this occasion.

Verse 11. Even so is my strength now.] I do not ask this place because I wish to sit down now, and take my ease: on the contrary, I know I must fight, to drive out the Anakim, and I am as able and willing to do it as I was forty-five years ago, when Moses sent me to spy out the land.

Verse 12. I shall be able to drive them out.] He cannot mean Hebron merely, for that had been taken before by Joshua; but in the request of Caleb doubtless all the circumjacent country was comprised, in many parts of which the Anakim were still in considerable force.

Verse 13. Joshua blessed him.] As the word bless often signifies to speak good or well of to any person (see the note on Gen. ii. 8), here it may mean the praise bestowed on Caleb's intrepidity and faithfulness by Joshua, as well as a 11 <sup>k</sup> As yet I am as strong this day as I was in the day that Moses sent me; as my strength was then, even so is my strength now, for war, both <sup>l</sup> to go out, and to come in.

12 Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the LORD spake in that day; for thou heardest in that day how <sup>m</sup> the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced: <sup>n</sup> if so be the LORD will be with me, then <sup>o</sup> I shall be able to drive them out, as the LORD said.

13 And Joshua <sup>p</sup> blessed him, <sup>q</sup> and gave unto Caleb the son of Jephunneh Hebron for an inheritance.

14 <sup>r</sup> Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb the son of Jephunneh the Kenezite unto this day, because that he <sup>s</sup> wholly followed the LORD God of Israel.

15 And <sup>t</sup> the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba; which Arba was a great man among the Anakims. <sup>u</sup> And the land had rest from war.

prayer to God that he might have prosperity in all things; and especially that the Lord might be with him, as himself had expressed in the preceding verse.

Verse 14. Hebron therefore became the inheritance of Caleb.] Joshua admitted his claim, recognized his right, and made a full conveyance of Hebron and its dependencies to Caleb and his posterity; and this being done in the sight of all the elders of Israel, the right was publicly acknowledged, and consequently this portion was excepted from the general determination by lot; God having long before made the cession of this place to him and to his descendants.

Verse 15. And the name of Hebron before was Kirjath-arba.] That is, the city of Arba, or rather, the city of the four, for thus kirjath arba may be literally translated. It is very likely that this city had its name from four Anakim, gigantic or powerful men, probably brothers, who built or conquered it. It appears however from chap. xv. 13 that Arba was a proper name, as there he is called the father of Anak. No notice need be taken of the tradition that this city was called the city of the four because it was the burial-place of Adam, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Such traditions confute themselves.

The land had rest from war.] There were no more general wars; the inhabitants of Canaan collectively could make no longer any head, and when their confederacy was broken by the conquests of Joshua, he thought proper to divide the land, and let each tribe expel the ancient inhabitants that might still remain in its own territories.

The Jewish economy furnishes, not only a history of God's revelations to man, but also a history of his providence, and an ample, most luminous, and glorious comment on that providence. Is it possible that any man can seriously and considerably sit down to the reading even of this book without rising up a wiser and a better man?

CHAPTER XV.

The Lot of the tribe of Judah described, 1. Their south border, 2-4. Their east border, 5-11. Their west border, 12. Caleb's conquest, 13-15. Promises his daughter to the person who should take Kirjath-sopher, 16. Othniel his kinsman renders himself master of it, and gets Achsah to wife, 17. Her request to her father to get a well-watered land, which is granted, 18, 19. The cities of the tribe of Judah are enumerated, 20-63.

THIS then was the lot of the tribe of the children of Judah by their families; <sup>a</sup>even to the border of Edom the <sup>b</sup>wilderness of Zin southward was the uttermost part of the south coast.

2 And their south border was from the shore of the Salt Sea, from the <sup>c</sup>bay that looketh southward:

3 And it went out to the south side <sup>d</sup>to <sup>e</sup>Maaleh-acrabbin, and passed along to Zin, and ascended up on the south side unto Kadesh-barnea, and passed along to Hezron, and went up to Adar, and fetched a compass to Karkaa:

4 From thence it passed <sup>f</sup>toward Azmon, and went out unto the river of Egypt; and the goings out of that coast were at the sea: this shall be your south coast.

5 And the east border was the Salt Sea, even unto the end of Jordan. And their border in the north quarter was from the bay of the sea at the uttermost part of Jordan:

6 And the border went up to <sup>g</sup>Beth-hogla, and Verse 1. This then was the lot of the tribe of—Judah.] The geography of the sacred writings presents many difficulties, occasioned by the changes which the civil state of the promised land has undergone, especially for the last two thousand years. Many of the ancient towns and villages have had their names so totally changed, that their former appellations are no longer discernible; several lie buried under their own ruins, and others have been so long destroyed that not one vestige of them remains. On those accounts it is very difficult to ascertain the situation of many of the places mentioned in this and the following chapters. But however this may embarrass the commentator, it cannot affect the truth of the narrative. Some of the principal cities in the universe, cities that were the seats of the most powerful empires, are not only reduced to ruins, but so completely blotted out of the map of the world that their situation cannot be ascertained.

It is natural to suppose that the division mentioned here was made after an accurate survey of the land, which might have been made by proper persons accompanying the conquering army of the Israelites. Nine tribes and a half were yet to be accommodated, and the land must be divided into nine parts and a half. This was no doubt done with the utmost judgment and discretion, the advantages and disadvantages of each division being carefully balanced. These were the portions which were divided by lot; and it appears that Judah drew the first lot; and, because of the importance and pre-eminence of this tribe this lot is first described.

By their families] It is supposed that the family divisions were not determined by lot. These were left to the prudence and judgment of Joshua, Eleazar, and the ten princes, who appointed to each family a district in proportion to its number, &c., the general division being that alone which was determined by the lot.

To the border of Edom] The tribe of Judah occupied the most southerly part of the land of Canaan. Its limits extended from the extremity of the Dead Sea southward, along Idumea, possibly by the desert of Sin, and proceeding from east to west to the Mediterranean Sea, and the most eastern branch of the river Nile, or to what is called the river of Egypt.

Verse 2. From the bay that looketh southward] These were the southern limits of the tribe of Judah, which commenced at the extremity of the lake Asphaltites or Dead Sea, and terminated at Sihor or the river of Egypt, and Mediterranean Sea; though some think it extended to the Nile.

Verse 3. Maaleh-acrabbin] The ascent of the Mount of Scorpions, probably so called from the multitude of those animals found in that place.

Kadesh-barnea] This place was called En-misphat, Gen. xiv. 7. It was on the edge of the wilderness of Paran, and about twenty-four miles from Hebron. Here Miriam, the sister of Moses and Aaron, died; and here Moses and Aaron passed along by the north of Beth-arabah; and the border went up <sup>h</sup>to the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben:

7 And the border went up toward Debir from <sup>i</sup>the valley of Achor, and so northward, looking toward Gilgal, that is before the going up to Adummim, which is on the south side of the river: and the border passed toward the waters of En-shemesh, and the goings out thereof were at <sup>j</sup>En-rogel:

8 And the border went up <sup>k</sup>by the valley of the son of Hinnom unto the south side of the <sup>l</sup>Jebusite; the same is Jerusalem: and the border went up to the top of the mountain that lieth before the valley of Hinnom westward, which is at the end <sup>m</sup>of the valley of the giants northward:

9 And the border was drawn from the top of the hill unto <sup>n</sup>the fountain of the water of Nephtoah, and went out to the cities of Mount Ephron; and the border was drawn <sup>o</sup>to Baalah, which is <sup>p</sup>Kirjath-jearim.

10 And the border compassed from Baalah westrebelled against the Lord; hence the place was called Meribah-Kadesh, or the contention of Kadesh.

Karkaa] Supposed to be the Coracea of Ptolemy in Arabia Petraea.

Verse 4. Toward Azmon] This was the last city they possessed toward Egypt.

The river of Egypt] The most eastern branch of the river Nile. But there is much reason to doubt whether any branch of the Nile be meant, and whether the promised land extended to that river.

Verse 5. The east border was the Salt Sea] The Salt Sea is the same as the Dead Sea, lake Asphaltites, &c.

Verse 6. Beth-hogla] A place between Jericho and the Dead Sea, belonging to the tribe of Benjamin, chap. xviii. 21, though here serving as a frontier to the tribe of Judah.

Stone of Bohan] This must have been some remarkable place, probably like the stone of Jacob, which afterwards became Beth-el; but where it was situated is uncertain.

Verse 7. The valley of Achor] Debir mentioned in this verse is unknown. The valley of Achor had its name from the punishment of Achan.

En-shemesh] The fountain of the sun; it was eastward of Jerusalem, on the confines of Judah and Benjamin.

Verse 8. The valley of the son of Hinnom] Who Hinnom was is not known, nor why this was called his valley. It was situated on the east of Jerusalem; and is often mentioned in scripture. The image of the idol Molech appears to have been set up there; and there the idolatrous Israelites caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire in honour of that demon, 2 Kings xxiii. 10. It was also called Tophet, see Jer. vii. 32. When king Josiah removed the image of this idol from this valley, it appears to have been held in such universal execration, that it became the general receptacle of all the filth and impurities which were carried out of Jerusalem; and it is supposed that continual fires were there kept up to consume those impurities, and prevent infection. [Robinson says that there is no evidence of any other fires having been kept up in this valley than those of Molech.] From the Hebrew words gei ben Hinnom, the valley of the son of Hinnom, and by contraction, gei Hinnom, the valley of Hinnom, came the Gehenna, of the New Testament, called also the Gehenna of fire, which is the emblem of hell, or the place of the damned.

The same is Jerusalem] This city was formerly called Jebus, a part of it was in the tribe of Benjamin; Zion, called its citadel, was in the tribe of Judah.

Verse 9. Baalah, which is Kirjath-jearim] This place was rendered famous in scripture, in consequence of its being the residence of the ark, for twenty years after it was sent back by the Philistines; see 1 Sam. v. vi. and vii. 1, 2.

Verse 10. Beth-shemesh] The house or temple of the sun. It is evident that the sun was an object of adoration among the Canaanites; and hence fountains, hills, &c., were dediward unto Mount Seir, and passed along unto the side of Mount Jearim, which is Chesalon, on the north side, and went down to Beth-shemesh, and passed on to * Timnah :

11 And the border went out unto the side of <sup>b</sup> Ekron northward : and the border was drawn to Shicron, and passed along to Mount Baalah, and went unto Jabneel ; and the goings out of the border were at the sea.

12 And the west border was <sup>c</sup> to the great sea, and the coast thereof. This is the coast of the children of Judah round about according to their families.

13 <sup>d</sup> And unto Caleb the son of Jophunnah he gave a part among the children of Judah, according to the commandment of the Lord to Joshua, even <sup>e</sup> the <sup>f</sup> city of Arba the father of Anak, which city is Hebron.

14 And Caleb drove thence <sup>g</sup> the three sons of Anak, <sup>h</sup> Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai, the children of Anak.

15 And <sup>i</sup> he went up thence to the inhabitants of Debir : and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher.

16 <sup>j</sup> And Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.

17 And <sup>k</sup> Othniel the <sup>l</sup> son of Kenaz, the brother of Caleb, took it : and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

18 <sup>m</sup> And it came to pass, as she came unto him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field ; and <sup>n</sup> she lighted off her ass ; and Caleb said unto her, What wouldst thou ?

cated to him. Beth-shemesh is remarkable for the slaughter of its inhabitants, in consequence of their prying curiously, if not impiously, into the ark of the Lord, when sent back by the Philistines. See 1 Sam. vii.

Verse 15. Kirjath-sepher.] The city of the book. Why so named is uncertain. It was also called Debir, and Kirjath-sannah.

Verse 16. Will I give Achsah my daughter] In ancient times fathers assumed an absolute right over their children, especially in disposing of them in marriage ; and it was customary for a king or great man to promise his daughter in marriage to him who should take a city, kill an enemy, &c. See 1 Sam. xvii. 25.

Verse 18. As she came] As she was now departing from the house of her father to go to that of her husband.

She moved him.] Othniel, to ask of her father a field, one on which she had set her heart, as contiguous to the patrimony already granted.

She lighted off her ass] She hastily, suddenly alighted, as if she had forgotten something, or was about to return to her father's house. Which being perceived by her father he said, What wouldst thou ? What is the matter ? What dost thou want ?

Verse 19. Give me a blessing] Do me an act of kindness. Grant me a particular request.

Thou hast given me a south land] Which was probably dry, or very ill watered.

Give me also springs of water] Let me have some fields in which there are brooks or wells already digged,

The upper springs, and the nether springs] He gave her even more than she requested ; he gave her a district among the mountains and another in the plains well situated and well watered. [The "upper springs," &c., were proper names.]

20 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Judah, according to their families.

21 And the uttermost cities of the tribe of the children of Judah, toward the coast of Edom southward, were Kabzeel, and Eder, and Jagur,

22 And Kinah, and Dimonah, and Abadah,

23 And Kedesh ; and Hazor, and Ithnan,

24 Ziph, and Telem, and Bealoth,

25 And Hazor, Hadattah, and Kerioth, and Hazeron, which is Hazor, 26 Amam, and Shema, and Moladah,

30 And Eltolad, and Chesil, and Hormah,

31 And <sup>a</sup> Ziklag, and Madmannah, and Sansannah,

32 And Lebaoth, and Shilhim, and Ain, and Rimmon : all the cities are twenty and nine, with their villages :

33 And in the valley, <sup>b</sup> Eshtaol, and Zoreah, and Ashnah,

34 And Zanoah, and En-gannim, Tappuah, and Enam,

35 Jarmuth, and Adullam, Socoh, and Azekah,

36 And Sharaim, and Adithaim, and Gederah, and Gederothaim ; fourteen cities with their villages ;

37 Zenan, and Hadashah, and Migdal-gad,

38 And Dilcan, and Mizpeh, and Joktheel,

39 Lachish, and Bozkath, and Eglon,

40 And Cabbon, and Lahmam, and Kithlish,

41 And Gederoth, Beth-dagon, and Naamah and Makkedah ; sixteen cities with their villages :

43 And Jiphtah, and Ashnah, and Nezib,

Verse 24. Ziph] There were two cities of this name in the tribe of Judah, that mentioned here, and another ver. 55. One of those two is noted for the refuge of David when persecuted by Saul ; and the attempts made by its inhabitants to deliver him into the hands of his persecutor. See 1 Sam. xxiii. 14-24.

Verse 28. Beer-sheba] A city, famous in the book of Genesis as the residence of the patriarchs Abraham and Jacob, chap. xxii. 19 ; xxviii. 10 ; xlv. 1. It lay on the way between Canaan and Egypt, about forty miles from Jerusalem.

Verse 30. Hormah] A place rendered famous by the defeat of the Hebrews by the Canaanites. See Num. xiv. 45 ; Deut. i. 44.

Verse 31. Ziklag] The Philistines seem to have kept possession of this city till the time of David, who received it from Achish, king of Gath, 1 Sam. xxvii. 6 ; after which time it remained in the possession of the kings of Judah.

Verse 32. The cities are twenty and nine, with their villages] But on a careful examination we shall find thirty-eight ; but it is supposed that nine of these are excepted, which were afterwards given to the tribe of Simeon. This may appear satisfactory, but perhaps the truth will be this : Several cities in the promised land are expressed by compound terms ; not knowing the places, different translations combine what should be separated, and in many cases separate what should be combined. Through this we have cities formed out of epithets. On this ground we have thirty-eight cities as the sum here, instead of twenty-nine.

Verse 33. Eshtaol, and Zoreah] Here Sampson was buried, it being the burial-place of his fathers ; see Judges xvi. 31. These places, though first given to Judah, afterwards fell to the lot of Dan, chap. xix. 41.

Verse 41. Beth-dagon] The house or temple of Dagon.

44 And Keilah, and Achzib, and Mareshah; nine cities with their villages;
 45 Ekron, with her towns and her villages:
 46 From Ekron even unto the sea, all that lay * near Ashdod, with their villages:

 51 <sup>d</sup> And Goshen, and Holon, and Giloh; eleven cities with their villages:
 52 Arab, and Dumah, and Eshean,

This is a well known idol of the Philistines, and probably the place mentioned here was in some part of their territories; but the situation at present is unknown.

Verse 44. Keilah] This town was near Hebron, and is said to have been the burying-place of the prophet Habakkuk. David obliged the Philistines to raise the siege of it (see 1 Sam. xxiii. 1-13); but finding that its inhabitants had purposed to deliver him into the hands of Saul, who was coming in pursuit of him, he made his escape.

Mareshah] Called also Maresheth and Marasthi; it was the birth-place of the prophet Micah. Near this place was the famous battle between Asa, king of Judah, and Zerah, king of Cush or Ethiopia, who was at the head of one thousand thousand men, and three hundred chariots.

Verse 53. Beth-tappuah] The house of the apple or citron tree. Probably a place where these grow in great abundance and perfection.

Verse 55. Maon] In a desert to which this town gave name, David took refuge for a considerable time from the persecution of Saul; and in this place Nabal the Carmelite had great possessions.

Carmel] Not the celebrated mount of that name, but a village, the residence of Nabal. See 1 Sam. xxv. 2. It was near Maon, mentioned above, and was about ten miles eastward of Hebron. It is the place where Saul erected a trophy to himself after the defeat of the Amalekites; see 1 Sam. xv. 12.

Verse 57. Timnah] A frontier town of the Philistines; it was in this place that Samson got his wife, see Judg. xiv. and xv.

Verse 62. The city of Salt] Or of Melach. This city was Hebron, and Zior; nine cities with their villages:

 55 Maon, Carmel, and Ziph, and Juttah,
 56 And Jezreel, and Jokdeam, and Zanoah,
 57 Cain, Gibeah, and Timnah; ten cities with their villages:
 58 Halhul, Beth-zur, and Gedor,
 59 And Maarath, and Beth-anoth, and Eltekon;
 six cities with their villages:
 60 <sup>a</sup> Kirjath-baal, which is Kirjath-jearim, and Rabbah; two cities with their villages:
 61 In the wilderness, Beth-arabah, Middin, and Secacah, 62 And Nibshan, and the city of Salt, and Engedi; six cities with their villages.
 63 As for the Jebusites, the inhabitants of Jerusalem, <sup>b</sup> the children of Judah could not drive them out: <sup>c</sup> but the Jebusites dwell with the children of Judah at Jerusalem unto this day.

somewhere in the vicinity of the lake Asphaltites, the waters of which are the saltiest perhaps in the world. Some suppose that it is the same as Zoar, the place to which Lot escaped after the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah.

En-gedi] The well of the kid: it was situated between Jericho and the lake of Sodom or Dead Sea.

Verse 63. The Jebusites dwell—at Jerusalem unto this day.] The whole history of Jerusalem, previously to the time of David, is encumbered with many difficulties. Sometimes it is attributed to Judah, sometimes to Benjamin; and it is probable that, being on the frontiers of both those tribes, each possessed a part of it. If the Jebusites were ever driven out before the time of David, it is certain they recovered it again, or at least a part of it—what is called the citadel or strong hold of Zion (see 2 Sam. v. 7), which he took from them; after which the city fell wholly into the hands of the Israelites.

It is very likely, not only that many cities have by the lapse of time changed their names or been totally destroyed, but that the names of those in the preceding catalogue have been changed also, several of them repeated that should have been mentioned but once, and not a few confounded with the terms by which they are described. But besides this, villages are mentioned as being apparently in the tribe of Judah, which afterwards appear to have been in another tribe. The reason appears to be this: many towns are mentioned which were frontier towns, and when the limits of a tribe are pointed out, such places must necessarily be mentioned, though allotted to a different tribe. This consideration will serve to remove several difficulties which occur in the reading of this and the following chapters.

CHAPTER XVI.

Borders of the children of Joshua, 1-4. The borders of the Ephraimites, 5-9. The Canaanites dwell tributary among them, 10.

AND the lot of the children of Joseph <sup>a</sup> fell from Jordan by Jericho, unto the water of Jericho on the east, to the wilderness that goeth up from Jericho throughout Mount Beth-el, * Heb. went forth.—<sup>b</sup> Ch. xviii. 13. Judg. i. 28.

Verse 1. The children of Joseph] The limits of the tribe of Ephraim extended along the borders of Benjamin and Dan, from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean on the west.

Verse 2. From Bethel to Luz] It is very likely that the place where Jacob had the vision (Gen. xviii. 19), was not in Luz, but in some place within a small distance of that city or village, and that sometimes the whole place was called

2 And goeth out from Bethel to <sup>b</sup> Luz, and passeth along unto the borders of Archi to Ataroth.

3 And goeth down westward to the coast of Japhleti, <sup>c</sup> unto the coast of Beth-horon the nether, and to <sup>d</sup> Gezer: and the goings out thereof are at the sea.

* Ch. xviii. 13. 2 Chron. viii. 5.—<sup>d</sup> 1 Chron. vii. 28. 1 Kings ix. 15.

Beth-el, at other times Luz, and sometimes, as in the case above, the two places were distinguished.

Archi to Ataroth] Archi was the country of Hushai, the friend of David, 2 Sam. xv. 32, who is called Hushai the Archite. Ataroth, called Ataroth-addar, Ataroth the illustrious, ver. 5, and simply Ataroth, ver. 7, is supposed to have been about fifteen miles from Jerusalem.

Verse 8. Beth-horon the nether] This city was about 4 *So the children of Joseph, Manasseh and Ephraim, took their inheritance.

5 And the border of the children of Ephraim according to their families was thus: even the border of their inheritance on the east side was <sup>b</sup> Ataroth-addar, unto Beth-horon the upper;

6 And the border went out toward the sea to <sup>a</sup> Michmethah on the north side; and the border went about eastward unto Taanath-shiloh, and passed by it on the east to Janohah;

7 And it went down from Janohah to Ataroth, and to Naarath, and came to Jericho, and went out at Jordan.

* Ch. xvii. 14.—<sup>b</sup> Ch. xviii. 18.—<sup>c</sup> 2 Chron. viii. 5.—<sup>d</sup> Ch. xvii. 7.

twelve miles from Jerusalem, on the side of Nicopolis, formerly Emmaus.

Verse 5. Beth-horon the upper] The situation of this town is little known. It was eastward of Beth-horon the nether, and consequently not far from it.

Verse 8. Tappuah] This was a city in the tribe of Manasseh, and gave name to a certain district called the land of Tappuah.

The sea.] The Mediterranean, as before.

Verse 9. And the separate cities] That is, the cities that 8 The border went out from Tappuah westward unto the river Kanah; and the goings out thereof were at the sea. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Ephraim by their families.

9 And the separate cities for the children of Ephraim were among the inheritance of the children of Manasseh, all the cities with their villages.

10 <sup>b</sup> And they drave not out the Canaanites that dwelt in Gezer: but the Canaanites dwell among the Ephraimites unto this day, and serve under tribute.

were separated from the tribe of Manasseh to be given to Ephraim; see chap. xvii. 9.

Verse 10. The Canaanites that dwell in Gezer] It appears that the Canaanites were not expelled from this city till the days of Solomon, when it was taken by the king of Egypt, his father-in-law, who made it a present to his daughter, Solomon's queen. See 1 Kings ix. 16. The Ephraimites, however, had so far succeeded in subjecting these people as to oblige them to pay tribute, though they could not, or at least did not, totally expel them.

CHAPTER XVII.

The lot of the half-tribe of Manasseh, 1, 2. Case of the daughters of Zelophehad, 3-6. The borders of Manasseh described, 7-11. The Canaanites dwell among them, but are laid under tribute, 12, 13. The children of Joseph complain of the scantiness of their lot, 14-16. Joshua authorizes them to possess the mountainous wood country of the Perizzites, and gives them encouragement to expel them, though they were strong and had chariots of iron, 17, 18.

THERE was also a lot for the tribe of Manasseh; for he was the first-born of Joseph: to wit, for <sup>b</sup> Machir, the first-born of Manasseh, the father of Gilead: because he was a man of war, therefore he had <sup>c</sup> Gilead and Bashan.

3 But <sup>g</sup> Zelophehad, the son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, had no sons, but daughters: and these are the names of his daughters, Mahlah, and Noah, Hoglah, Milcah, and Tirzah.

Verse 1. There was also a lot for the tribe of Manasseh] It was necessary to mark this, because Jacob in his blessing (Gen. xlviii. 19, 20), did in a certain sense set Ephraim before Manasseh, though the latter was the first-born; but the place here shows that this preference did not affect the rights of primogeniture.

For Machir—because he was a man of war] It is not likely that Machir himself was now alive; if he were, he must have been nearly 200 years old. It is therefore probable that what is spoken here is spoken of his children, who now possessed the lot that was originally designed for their father, who it appears had signalized himself as a man of 4 And they came near before <sup>h</sup> Eleazar the priest, and before Joshua the son of Nun, and before the princes, saying, <sup>i</sup> The Lord commanded Moses to give us an inheritance among our brethren. Therefore, according to the commandment of the Lord, he gave them an inheritance among the brethren of their father.

5 And there fell ten portions to Manasseh, beside the land of Gilead and Bashan, which were on the other side Jordan;

6 Because the daughters of Manasseh had an inheritance among his sons: and the rest of Manasseh's sons had the land of Gilead.

7 And the coast of Manasseh was from Asher to <sup>j</sup> Michmethah, that lieth before Shechem: and the border went along on the right hand unto the inhabitants of En-tappuah.

8 Now Manasseh had the land of Tappuah: but skill and valour in some of the former wars, though the circumstances are not marked.

Verse 2. The rest of the children of Manasseh] That is, his grandchildren; for it is contended that Manasseh had no other son than Machir; and these were very probably the children of Gilead, the son of Machir.

Verse 5. There fell ten portions to Manasseh] The Hebrew word chabley, which we translate portions, signifies literally cords or cables, and intimates that by means of a cord, cable, or what we call a chain, the land was divided.

As there were six sons and five daughters among whom this division was to be made, there should be eleven por-

*Tappuah, on the border of Manasseh, belonged to the children of Ephraim :

9 And all the coast descended <sup>b</sup> unto the <sup>c</sup> river Kanah, southward of the river : <sup>d</sup> these cities of Ephraim are among the cities of Manasseh : the coast of Manasseh also was on the north side of the river, and the outgoings of it were at the sea :

10 Southward it was Ephraim's and northward it was Manasseh's, and the sea is his border ; and they met together in Asher on the north, and in Issachar on the east.

11 * And Manasseh had in Issachar and in Asher Beth-shean and her towns, and Ibleam and her towns, and the inhabitants of Dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of En-dor and her towns, and the inhabitants of Taanach and her towns, and the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns, even three countries.

12 Yet * the children of Manasseh could not drive out the inhabitants of those cities ; but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.

13 Yet it came to pass, when the children of Israel were waxen strong, that they put the Canaanites to <sup>b</sup> tribute ; but did not utterly drive them out.

tions ; but Zelophehad, son of Hephher, having left five daughters in his place, neither he nor Hephher are reckoned. The lot of Manasseh therefore was divided into ten parts ; five for the five sons of Gilead, and five for the five daughters of Zelophehad.

Verse 9. Unto the river Kanah] Literally, the river or valley of the reeds. The tribe of Manasseh appears to have been bounded on the north by this torrent or valley, and on the south by the Mediterranean Sea.

Verse 10. They met together in Asher on the north] The tribe of Asher extended from the Mediterranean Sea to Mount Carmel, chap. xix. 26, and the tribe of Manasseh extended to Dor and her towns (see the following verse), which were in the vicinity of Carmel ; and thus it appears that these two tribes formed a junction at the Mediterranean Sea. This may serve to remove the difficulties in this verse ; but still it does appear that in several cases the tribes were intermingled, for Manasseh had several towns both in Issachar and in Asher, see ver. 11. For in several cases towns seem to be interchanged or purchased by mutual consent, so that, in some instances, the possessions were intermingled without any confusion of the tribes or families.

Verse 11. Beth-shean] Called afterwards Scythopolis ; the city of the Scythians or Cuthites, those who were sent into the different Samaritan cities by the kings of Assyria.

Dor] On the Mediterranean Sea, about eight miles from Cæsarea, on the road to Tyre.

En-dor] The well or fountain of Dor, the place where Saul went to consult the witch, 1 Sam. xxviii. 7, &c.

Verse 12. Could not drive out, &c.] They had neither grace nor courage to go against their enemies, and chose rather to share their territories with those whom the justice of God had proscribed, than exert themselves to expel them.

Verse 15. If thou be a great people] Joshua takes them at their own word. Joshua would not reverse the decision of the lot ; but as there was much woodland country, he gave 14 <sup>a</sup> And the children of Joseph spake unto Joshua, saying, Why hast thou given me but <sup>a</sup> one lot and one portion to inherit, seeing I am <sup>a</sup> a great people, forasmuch as the LORD hath blessed me hitherto ;

15 And Joshua answered them, If thou be a great people, then get thee up to the wood country, and cut down for thyself there in the land of the Perizzites and of the <sup>b</sup> giants, if Mount Ephraim be too narrow for thee.

16 And the children of Joseph said, The hill is not enough for us : and all the Canaanites that dwell in the land of the valley have <sup>c</sup> chariots of iron, both they who are of Beth-shean and her towns, and they who are <sup>c</sup> of the valley of Jezreel.

17 And Joshua spake unto the house of Joseph, even to Ephraim and to Manasseh, saying, Thou art a great people, and hast great power : thou shalt not have one lot only :

18 But the mountain shall be thine ; for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down : and the outgoings of it shall be thine : for thou shalt drive out the Canaanites, <sup>d</sup> though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong.

them permission to clear away as much of it as they found necessary to extend themselves as far as they pleased.

Verse 16. The hill is not enough for us] The mountain of Gilboa being that which had fallen to them by lot.

Chariots of iron] We cannot possess the plain country, because that is occupied by the Canaanites ; and we cannot conquer them, because they have chariots of iron, that is, very strong chariots, and armed with scythes, as is generally supposed. [But see note chap. xi. 4.]

Verse 18. The outgoings of it shall be thine] Clear away the wood, occupy the mountain, and you shall soon be able to command all the valleys ; and, possessing all the defiles of the country, you shall drive out the Canaanites, though they have chariots of iron : your situation will be advantageous, your numbers very respectable, and the hand of God will be upon you for good.

1. From the above account we learn that the children of Joseph were much inclined to quarrel with Joshua, because they had not such a lot as they wished ; though they could not be ignorant that their lot, as that of the others, had been determined by the especial providence of God.

2. Joshua treats them with great firmness ; he would not attempt to alter the appointment of God, and he saw no reason to reverse or change the grant already made. They were both numerous and strong, and if they put forth their strength, under the direction of even the ordinary providence of God, they had every reason to expect success.

3. Slothfulness is natural to man ; it requires much training to induce him to labour for his daily bread ; if God should miraculously send it he will wonder and eat it, and that is the whole. Strive to enter in at the strait gate is an ungracious word to many ; they profess to trust in God's mercy, but labour not to enter into that rest : God will not reverse his purpose to meet their slothfulness ; they alone who overcome shall sit with Jesus upon his throne.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The tabernacle is set up at Shiloh, 1. Seven of the tribes having not yet received their inheritance, 2, Joshua orders three men from each tribe to be chosen, and sent to examine the land and divide it into seven parts, which should be distributed among them by lot, 3-7. The men go and do as commanded, and return to Joshua, 8, 9. Joshua casts lots for them, 10. The lot of Benjamin, how situated, 11. Its northern boundaries, 12-14. Its southern boundaries, 15-19. Its eastern boundary, 20. Its cities, 21-28.

AND the whole congregation of the children of Israel assembled together <sup>a</sup> at Shiloh, and <sup>b</sup> set up the tabernacle of the congregation there. And the land was subdued before them.

2 And there remained among the children of Israel seven tribes, which had not received their inheritance.

3 And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, <sup>c</sup> How long are ye slack to go to possess the land, which the LORD God of your fathers hath given you?

4 Give out from among you three men for each tribe: and I will send them, and they shall rise, and go through the land, and describe it according to the inheritance of them; they shall come again to me.

5 And they shall divide it into seven parts; <sup>d</sup> Judah shall abide in their coast on the south, and <sup>e</sup> the house of Joseph shall abide in their coasts on the north.

6 Ye shall therefore describe the land into seven parts, and bring the description hither to me, <sup>f</sup> that I may cast lots for you here before the LORD our God.

7 <sup>g</sup> But the Levites have no part among you; for the priesthood of the LORD is their inheritance: <sup>h</sup> and Gad, and Reuben, and half the tribe of Manasseh, have received their inheritance beyond Jordan on the east, which Moses the servant of the LORD gave them.

8 And the men arose, and went away: and Joshua charged them that went to describe the land, saying, Go and walk through the land, and describe it, and come again to me, that I may here cast lots for you before the LORD in Shiloh.

9 And the men went, and passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book, and came again to Joshua to the host at Shiloh.

10 And Joshua cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel according to their divisions.

11 And the lot of the tribe of the children of Benjamin came up according to their families: and the coast of their lot came forth between the children of Judah and the children of Joseph.

12 <sup>i</sup> And their border on the north side was from Jordan; and the border went up to the side of Jericho on the north side, and went up through the mountains westward; and the goings out thereof were at the wilderness of Beth-aven.

13 And the border went over from thence toward Luz, to the side of Luz, <sup>j</sup> which is Beth-el, southward; and the border descended to Ataroth-adar, near the hill that lieth on the south side <sup>k</sup> of the nether Beth-horon.

14 And the border was drawn thence, and compassed the corner of the sea southward, from the hill that lieth before Beth-horon southward; and the goings out thereof were at <sup>l</sup> Kirjath-baal, which is Kirjath-jearim, a city of the children of Judah: this was the west quarter.

15 And the south quarter was from the end of Kirjath-jearim, and the border went out on the west, and went out to <sup>m</sup> the well of waters of Nephtoah:

16 And the border came down to the end of the mountain that lieth before <sup>n</sup> the valley of the son of

Verse 1. Israel assembled together at Shiloh] This appears to have been a considerable town about fifteen miles from Jerusalem, in the tribe of Ephraim, and nearly in the centre of the whole land. To this place both the camp of Israel, and the ark of the Lord, were removed from Gilgal, after a residence there of seven years. Here the tabernacle remained one hundred and thirty years, as is generally supposed, being the most conveniently situated for access to the different tribes, and for safety, the Israelites having possession of the land on all sides.

Verse 3. How long are ye slack to go to possess the land] They had so long been supported by miracle, without any exertions of their own, that they found it difficult to shake themselves from their inactivity.

Verse 4. Three men for each tribe] Probably meaning only three from each of the seven tribes who had not yet received their inheritance.

They shall—describe it] It is likely they were persons well acquainted with geography and mensuration, without which it would have been impossible for them to have divided the land in the way necessary on this occasion.

Verse 5. Judah shall abide—on the south, and the house of Joseph—on the north.] Joshua does not mean that the tribe of Judah occupied the south, and the tribe of Ephraim and Manasseh the north of the promised land; this was not the fact: but being now at Shiloh, a considerable way in the territory of Ephraim, and not far from that of Judah, he speaks of them in relation to the place in which he then was.

Verse 7. The priesthood of the Lord is their inheritance] We have already seen that the priests and Levites had the sacrifices, oblations, tithes, first-fruits, redemption-money of the first-born, &c., for their inheritance; they had no landed possessions in Israel; the LORD was their portion.

Verse 9. And described it—in a book] This, as far as I can recollect, is the first act of surveying on record. We may suppose that the country was exactly described in a book, that is, a map pointing out the face of the country, accompanied with descriptions of each part.

Verse 11. And the lot—of Benjamin came up] There were probably two urns, one of which contained the names of the seven tribes, and the other that of the seven portions. They therefore took out one name out of the first urn, and one portion out of the second, and thus the portion was adjudged to that tribe.

Verse 12. The wilderness of Beth-aven.] This was the same as Beth-el; but this name was not given to it till Jeroboam had fixed one of his golden calves there. Its first name signifies the house of God; its second, the house of iniquity.

Verse 16. To the side of Jebusi] The mountain of Zion, that was near Jerusalem; for Jebusi, or Jebus, was the ancient name of this city.

Hinnom, and which is in the valley of the giants on the north, and descended to the valley of Hinnom, to the side of Jebusi on the south, and descended to *En-rogel,

17 And was drawn from the north, and went forth to En-shemesh, and went forth toward Geliloth, which is over against the going up of Adummim, and descended to <sup>b</sup> the stone of Bohan the son of Reuben,

18 And passed along toward the side over against *Arabah <sup>d</sup> northward, and went down unto Arabah : 19 And the border passed along to the side of Beth-hoglah northward : and the outgoings of the border were at the north *bay of the Salt Sea at the south end of Jordan : this was the south coast.

20 And Jordan was the border of it on the east side. This was the inheritance of the children of

Verse 17. En-shemesh] The fountain of the sun ; a proof of the idolatrous nature of the ancient inhabitants of this land.

Geliloth] As the word signifies borders or limits, it is probably not the proper name of a place : And went forth towards the borders which are over against the ascent to Adummim.

Verse 19. The north bay of the Salt Sea] As the word leshon signifies the tongue, it may here refer to the point of the Dead or Salt Sea. Of these tongues or points it had two, one on the north and the other on the south.

Verse 24. And Gaba] Supposed to be the same as Gibeah of Saul, a place famous for having given birth to the first king of Israel ; and infamous for the shocking act towards the Levite's wife, mentioned Judg. xix., which was the cause of a war in which the tribe of Benjamin was nearly exterminated.

Verse 25. Gibeon] This place is famous for the confederacy of the five kings, and their miraculous defeat. Ramah, a place about six or eight miles north of Jerusalem. Beeroth, i.e. wells ; one of the four cities which belonged to the Gibeonites, who made peace with the Israelites by stratagem.

Verse 26. And Mizpeh] This place is celebrated in the sacred writings. Here the people were accustomed to assemble often in the presence of the Lord, as in the deliberation concerning the punishment to be inflicted on the men of Gibeah, for the abuse of the Levite's wife ; Judg. xx. 1-3. Samuel assembled the people here to exhort them to renounce their idolatry, 1 Sam. vii. 5, 6. In this same place Saul was chosen to be king, 1 Sam. x. 17. It was deemed a sacred place among the Israelites ; for we find, from 1 Mac. iii. 46, that the Jews assembled here to seek God, when their enemies were in possession of the temple.

Verse 28. And Zelah] This was the burying-place of Saul, Jonathan, and the family of Kish. See 2 Sam. xxi. 14.

Jebusi, which is Jerusalem] We often meet with this name, and it is evident that it was the ancient name of Jerusalem, which is also called Salem ; and was probably the place in which Melchizedek reigned in the days of Abraham ; though some think a different place is meant ; for that there was another place of the same name is evident from John iii. 23. This place, called Salim by the Evangelist, is said to be near to Enon, and there John baptized, because there was much water in the place. This, however, must not be confounded with the Salem mentioned above ; for that this was a name of Jerusalem is evident from Ps. lxxvi. 1, 2. Whether Jebus or Jebusi had its name from the Jebusites, or the Jebusites from it, cannot be ascertained.

CHAPTER XIX.

The lot of Simeon, 1-9. Of Zebulun, 10-16. Of Issachar, 17-23. Of Asher, 24-31. Of Naphtali, 32-39. Of Dan, 40-48. Joshua's portion, 49, 50. The conclusion of the division of the land, 51.

AND the second lot came forth to Simeon, *even for the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families : * and their inheritance was within the inheritance of the children of Judah.*

2 And <sup>b</sup> they had in their inheritance Beersheba, Sheba, and Moladah,

3 And Hazar-shual, and Balah, and Azem,

* Ver. 9.

Verse 1. The second lot came forth to Simeon] In this appointment the providence of God may be especially remarked. For the iniquitous conduct of Simeon and Levi in the massacre of the innocent Shechemites, Gen. xxiv., Jacob, in the spirit of prophecy, foretold that they should be divided in Jacob, and scattered in Israel, Gen. xlix. 7. And this was most literally fulfilled in the manner in which God disposed of both these tribes afterwards. Levi was scattered through all Palestine, not having received any inheritance, only cities to dwell in, in different parts of the land ; and Simeon

5 And Ziklag, and Beth-marcaboth, and Hazar-susah,

6 And Beth-lebaoth, and Sharuhin ; thirteen cities and their villages ;

7 Ain, Remmon, and Ether, and Ashan ; four cities and their villages :

8 And all the villages that were round about these was dispersed in Judah, with what could scarcely be said to be their own, or a peculiar lot.

Verse 2. Beer-sheba] The well of the oath.

Verse 5. Beth-marcaboth] The house or city of chariots. Probably a place where their war-chariots and cavalry were laid up.

Verse 6. Beth-lebaoth] The house or city of lionesses. Probably so called from the numbers of those animals which bred there.

Verse 8. Baalath-beer] The well of the mistresses. Prob-cities to Baalath-beer, Ramath of the south. This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Simeon according to their families.

9 Out of the portion of the children of Judah was the inheritance of the children of Simeon: for the part of the children of Judah was too much for them: * therefore the children of Simeon had their inheritance within the inheritance of them.

10 And the third lot came up for the children of Zebulun according to their families: and the border of their inheritance was unto Sarid:

11 <sup>b</sup> And their border went up toward the sea, and Maralah, and reached to Dabbasheth, and reached to the river that is <sup>c</sup> before Jokneam.

12 And turned from Sarid eastward toward the sun-rising unto the border of Chisloth-tabor, and then goeth out to Daberah, and goeth up to Japhia.

13 And from thence passeth on along on the east to Gittah-hepher, to Itah-kazin, and goeth out to Remmon-<sup>d</sup>methoar to Neah;

14 And the border compasseth it on the north side to Hannathon: and the outgoings thereof are in the valley of Jiphtah-el:

15 And Kattath, and Nahallal, and Shimron, and Idalah, and Beth-lehem; twelve cities with their villages.

16 This is the inheritance of the children of Zebulun according to their families, these cities with their villages.

17 And the fourth lot came out to Issachar, for the children of Issachar according to their families.

18 And their border was toward Jezreel, and Chesulloth, and Shunem,

19 And Haphraim, and Shihon, and Anaharath,

20 And Rabbith, and Kishion, and Abez,

21 And Remeth, and En-gannim, and En-haddah, and Beth-pazzoz;

22 And the coast reacheth to Tabor, and Shahazimah, and Beth-shemesh; and the outgoings of their border were at Jordan: sixteen cities with their villages.

23 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Issachar, according to their families, the cities and their villages.

24 And the fifth lot came out for the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families, 25 And their border was Helkath, and Hali, and Beten, and Achshaph.

26 And Alammelech, and Amad, and Misheal; and reacheth to Carmel westward, and to Shihor-libnath;

27 And turneth toward the sun-rising to Beth-dagon, and reacheth to Zebulun, and to the valley of Jiphtah-el toward the north side of Beth-emeq, and Neiel, and goeth out to Cabul on the left hand,

28 And Hebron, and Rehob, and Hammon, and Kanah, <sup>e</sup> even unto great Zidon;

29 And then the coast turneth to Ramah, and to the strong city <sup>f</sup> Tyre; and the coast turneth to Hosah: and the outgoings thereof are at the sea from the coast to <sup>g</sup> Achzib:

30 Ummah also, and Aphek, and Rehob: twenty and two cities with their villages.

31 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Asher according to their families, these cities with their villages.

32 The sixth lot came out to the children of Naphtali, <sup>h</sup> even for the children of Naphtali according to their families.

ably so called from some superstitious or impure worship set up there.

Verse 13. Gittah-hepher] The same as Gath-hepher, the birth-place of the prophet Jonah.

Verse 15. Beth-lehem] The house of bread; a different place from that in which our Lord was born.

Verse 17. The fourth lot came out to Issachar] It is remarkable, that though Issachar was the eldest brother, yet the lot of Zebulun was drawn before his lot; and this is the order in which Jacob himself mentions them, Gen. xlix. 13, 14, though no reason appears, either here or in the place above, why this preference should be given to the younger; but that the apparently fortuitous lot should have distinguished them just as the prophetic Jacob did, is peculiarly remarkable.

Verse 18. Jezreel] This city was situated in an open country, having the town of Legion on the west, Bethshan on the east, on the south the mountains of Gilboa, and on the north those of Hermion.

Shunem] This city was rendered famous by being the occasional abode of the prophet Elisha, and the place where he restored the son of a pious woman to life; 2 Kings iv. 8. It was the place where the Philistines were encamped on that ruinous day in which the Israelites were totally routed at Gilboa, and Saul and his sons Jonathan, Abinadab, and Malchi-shua, killed; 1 Sam. xxviii. 4, xxxi. 1, &c.

Verse 22. Beth-shemesh] The house or temple of the sun; there were several cities or towns of this name in Palestine; an ample proof that the worship of this celestial luminary had generally prevailed in that idolatrous country.

Verse 26. Carmel] The vineyard of God; a place greatly celebrated in scripture, and especially for the miracles of Elijah; see 1 Kings xviii. The mountain of Carmel was so very fruitful as to pass into a proverb. There was another Carmel in the tribe of Judah (see chap. xv. 55), but this, in the tribe of Asher, was situated about one hundred and twenty furlongs south from Ptolemais, on the edge of the Mediterranean Sea.

Verse 27. To Cabul on the left hand] That is, to the north of Cabul, for so the left hand, when referring to place, is understood among the Hebrews.

We must not confound this town of Cabul with the twenty cities given by Solomon to Hiram, with which he was displeased, and which in contempt he called the land of Cabul, the dirty or paltry land, 1 Kings ix. 11-13: there was evidently a town of this name, widely different from the land so called, long before the time of Solomon, and therefore this cannot be adduced as an argument that the book of Joshua was written after the days of David.

Verse 28. Unto great Zidon] The city of Sidon and the Sidonians are celebrated from the remotest antiquity.

Verse 29. The strong city Tyre] I suspect this to be an improper translation. Our translators have here left the Hebrew, and followed the Septuagint and Vulgate, a fault of which they are sometimes guilty. The famous city of Tyre was not known till about A.M. 2760, about two hundred years after the days of Joshua.

The word Tzor or Tsar, which we translate or change into Tyre, signifies a rock or strong place; and as there were many rocks in the land of Judea, that with a little art were formed into strong places of defence, hence several places might have the name of Tzor or Tyre. The ancient and celebrated Tyre, so much spoken of both in sacred and profane history, was a rock or small island in the sea, about six or seven hundred paces from the main land. It is generally supposed that a town on the main land, opposite to this fortified rock, went by the same name.

Achzib] Called afterwards Ecdippe, and now called Zib; it is about nine miles' distance from Ptolemais, towards Tyre.

Verse 30. Twenty and two cities] There are nearly thirty cities in the above enumeration instead of twenty-two, but probably several are mentioned that were but frontier towns, and that did not belong to this tribe, their border only passing by such cities; and on this account, though they are named, yet they do not enter into the enumeration in this place. Perhaps some of the villages are named as well as the cities.

33 And their coast was from Heleph, from Allon to Zaanannim, and Adami, Nekeb, and Jabneel, unto Lakum; and the outgoings thereof were at Jordan:

34 And then <sup>a</sup>the coast turneth westward to Aznoth-tabor, and goeth out from thence to Hukkok, and reacheth to Zebulun on the south side, and reacheth to Asher on the west side, and to Judah upon Jordan toward the sun-rising.

35 And the fenced cities are Ziddim, Zer, and Hammath, Rakkath, and Chinnereth, 36 And Adamah, and Ramah, and Hazor,

37 And Kodosh, and Edrei, and En-hazor,

38 And Iron, and Migdal-el, Horem, and Beth-anath, and Beth-shemesh; nineteen cities with their villages.

39 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Naphtali according to their families, the cities and their villages.

40 And the seventh lot came out for the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families.

41 And the coast of their inheritance was Zorah, and Eshtaol, and Ir-shemesh, 42 And <sup>b</sup>Shaalabbin, and Ajalon, and Jethlah,

43 And Elon, and Thimnathah, and Ekron,

44 And Eltekeh, and Gibbethon, and Baulath,

45 And Jehud, and Bene-berak, and Gath-rimmon.

Verse 34. And to Judah upon Jordan] There is considerable difficulty in the text as it now stands; but if, with the Septuagint, we omit Judah, the difficulty vanishes, and the passage is plain: but this omission is supported by no MS. hitherto discovered. It is, however, very probable that some change has taken place in the words of the text.

Verse 38. Nineteen cities] But if these cities be separately enumerated they amount to twenty-three; this is probably occasioned by reckoning frontier cities belonging to other tribes, which are only mentioned here as the boundaries of the tribe.

Ir-shemesh] The city of the sun; another proof of the idolatry of the Canaanites. Some think this was the same as Beth-shemesh.

Verse 42. Shaalabbin] The fores. Of this city the Amorites kept constant possession. See Judg. i. 35.

Ajalon] There was a place of this name about two miles from Nicopolis or Emmaus, on the road to Jerusalem.

Verse 43. Thimnathah] Probably the same as Timnah. Ekron] A well-known city of the Philistines, and the metropolis of one of their five dynasties.

Verse 45. Jehud, and Bene-berak] Or Jehud of the children of Benak.

Verse 46. Japho.] The place since called Joppa, lying on the Mediterranean, and the chief sea-port in the possession of the twelve tribes.

Verse 47. Went out too little for them] This is certainly

47 And <sup>e</sup>the coast of the children of Dan went out too little for them: therefore the children of Dan went up to fight against Leshem, and took it, and smote it with the edge of the sword, and possessed it, and dwelt therein, and called Leshem, <sup>f</sup>Dan, after the name of Dan their father.

48 This is the inheritance of the tribe of the children of Dan according to their families, these cities with their villages.

49 When they had made an end of dividing the land for inheritance by their coasts, the children of Israel gave an inheritance to Joshua the son of Nun among them:

50 According to the word of the Lord they gave him the city which he asked, even <sup>g</sup>Timnath-<sup>h</sup>serah in mount Ephraim: and he built the city, and dwelt therein.

the meaning of the passage; but our translators have been obliged to add the words too little to make this sense apparent. It was on account of the straitness of their territory that they were obliged to go and fight against Leshem, and take and possess it.

And called Leshem, Dan] This city was situated near the origin of Jordan, at the utmost northern extremity of the promised land, as Beer-sheba was at that of the south; and as after its capture by the Danites, it was called Dan, hence arose the expression from Dan even to Beer-sheba, which always signified the whole extent of the promised land. It must be granted that the whole account given in this verse refers indisputably to a fact which did not take place till after the death of Joshua. It is another of the marginal or explicative notes which were added by some later hand.

Verse 50. Timnath-serah] Called Timnath-heres in Judg. ii. 9, where we find that the mountain on which it was built was called Gaash. It is generally allowed to have been a barren spot in a barren country.

Verse 51. At the door of the tabernacle] All the inheritances were determined by lot, and this lot was cast before the Lord—every thing was done in his immediate presence, as under his eye; hence there was no murmuring, each having received his inheritance as from the hand of God himself, though some of them thought they must have additional territory, because of the great increase of their families.

CHAPTER XX.

Joshua is commanded to appoint cities of refuge, 1, 2. The purpose of their institution, 3-6. Three cities are appointed in the promised land, 7; and three on the east side of Jordan, 8, 9.

THE LORD also spake unto Joshua, saying,

‘Appoint out for you cities of refuge, whereof
I spake unto you by the hand of Moses.
3 That the slayer that killeth any person unawares and unwittingly, may flee thither: and they shall be your refuge from the avenger of blood.

4 And when he that doth flee unto one of those cities, shall stand at the entering of <sup>b</sup>the gate of the city, and shall declare his cause in the ears of the elders of that city, they shall take him into the city unto them, and give him a place, that he may dwell among them.

5 * And if the avenger of blood pursue after him, then they shall not deliver the slayer up into his hand; because he smote his neighbour unwittingly, and hated him not beforetime.

6 And he shall dwell in that city, <sup>b</sup> until he stand before the congregation for judgment, and until the death of the high-priest that shall be in those days: then shall the slayer return, and come unto his own city, and unto his own house, unto the city from whence he fled.

Verse 2. Cities of refuge] On this subject, see the notes on Num. xxxv. 11 to the end.

Verse 7. They appointed Kedesh in Galilee] The cities of refuge were distributed through the land at proper distances from each other, that they might be convenient to every part of the land; and it is said they were situated on eminences that they might be easily seen at a distance, the roads leading to them being broad, even, and always kept in good repair.

Kedesh and Hebron were at the two extremities of the promised land; one was in Galilee, the other in the tribe of Judah, both in mountainous countries; and Shechem was in the tribe of Ephraim, nearly in the middle, between both.

Bezer was on the east side of Jordan, in the plain opposite to Jericho.

Ramoth was about the midst of the country occupied by the two tribes and half, about the middle of the mountains of Gilead.

Golan was the capital of a district called Gaulonitis in the land of Bashan, towards the southern extremity of the lot of Manasseh.

Verse 9. For all the children of Israel, and for the stranger] mount Naphtali, and * Shechem in mount Ephraim, and † Kirjath-arba, which is Hebron, in the ‡ mountain of Judah.

8 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho eastward, they assigned <sup>b</sup> Bezer in the wilderness upon the plain, out of the tribe of Reuben, and <sup>c</sup> Ramoth in Gilead out of the tribe of Gad, and <sup>d</sup> Golan in Bashan out of the tribe of Manasseh.

9 * These were the cities appointed for all the children of Israel, and for the stranger that sojourneth among them, that whosoever killeth any person at unawares might flee thither, and not die by the hand of the avenger of blood, † until he stood before the congregation.

Chron. vi. 78.—† Ch. xxi. 38. 1 Kings xxii. 3.—‡ Ch. xxi. 27.—§ Num. xxxv. 15.—|| Ver. 6.

As these typified the great provision which God was making for the salvation of both Jews and Gentiles, hence the stranger as well as the Israelites had the same right to the benefits of these cities of refuge. Is HE the God of the Jews only? Is HE not also the God of the Gentiles?

Until he stood before the congregation.] The judges and elders of the people, in trying civil and criminal causes, always sat; the persons who came for judgment, or who were tried, always stood; hence the expressions so frequent in scripture, STANDING before the Lord, the judges, the elders, &c.

It is worthy of remark that the cities of refuge were given to the Levites; see the following chapter. The sacrificial system alone afforded refuge; and while the suspected person was excluded from his family, &c., he had the advantage of being with those whose business it was to instruct the ignorant, and comfort the disconsolate. Thus he had the means constantly at hand, by a careful use of which he might grow wiser and better; secure the favour of his God, and a lot of blessedness in a better world. How wise, equal, and beneficent are all the institutions of God!

CHAPTER XXI.

The Levites apply to Eleazar, Joshua, and the elders, for the cities to dwell in which Moses had promised, 1, 2. Their request is granted, 3. The priests receive thirteen cities out of the tribes of Judah, Simeon, and Benjamin, 4. The Levites receive ten cities out of the tribes of Ephraim, Dan, and the half tribe of Manasseh, 5; and thirteen out of the other half tribe of Manasseh, and the tribes of Issachar, Asher, and Naphtali, 6. The children of Merari had twelve cities out of the tribes of Reuben, Gad, and Zebulun, 7. The names of the cities given out of the tribes of Judah and Simeon, 8-16. Those granted out of the tribe of Manasseh, 17-19. Out of Ephraim, 20-22. Those out of Dan, 23, 24. Those out of both the halves of the tribe of Manasseh, 25-27. Those out of the tribe of Issachar, 28, 29. Those out of Asher, 30, 31. Those out of Naphtali, 32. These were the cities of the Gershonites, 33. The cities of the Merarites, 34-40. The sum of the cities given to the Levites forty-eight, 41, 42. The exact fulfilment of all God's promises, 43-45.

THEN came near the heads of the fathers of the Levites unto * Eleazar the priest, and unto Joshua the son of Nun, and unto the heads of the fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel.

* Ch. xiv. 1. xvii. 4.

2 And they spake unto them at Shiloh, <sup>b</sup> in the land of Canaan, saying, <sup>c</sup> The LORD commanded, by the hand of Moses, to give us cities to dwell in, with the suburbs for our cattle.

intended that the different tribes were to furnish them with habitations; and this was according to a positive command of God, Num. xxxv. 2, &c.

Verse 3. And the children of Israel gave unto the Levites] They cheerfully obeyed the divine command, and cities for habitations were appointed to them out of the different tribes

Verse 1. The heads of the fathers of the Levites] The Levites were composed of three grand families, the Gershonites, Kohathites, and Merarites, independently of the family of Aaron, who might be said to form a fourth. To none of these had God assigned any portion in the division of the land. But in this general division it must have been evidently vites out of their inheritance, at the commandment of the LORD, these cities and their suburbs.

4 And the lot came out for the families of the Kohathites: and <sup>a</sup>the children of Aaron the priest, <sup>b</sup>which were of the Levites, <sup>c</sup>had by lot out of the tribe of Judah, and out of the tribe of Simeon, and out of the tribe of Benjamin, thirteen cities.

5 And <sup>a</sup>the rest of the children of Kohath <sup>b</sup>had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Ephraim, and out of the tribe of Dan, and out of the half tribe of Manasseh, ten cities.

6 And <sup>a</sup>the children of Gershon <sup>b</sup>had by lot out of the families of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the half tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

7 <sup>a</sup>The children of Merari by their families <sup>b</sup>had out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

8 <sup>a</sup>And the children of Israel gave by lot unto the Levites these cities with their suburbs, <sup>b</sup>as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses.

9 And they gave out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, these cities which are <sup>a</sup>here <sup>b</sup>mentioned by name,

10 <sup>a</sup>Which the children of Aaron, <sup>b</sup>being of the families of the Kohathites, <sup>c</sup>who were of the children of Levi, had: for theirs was the first lot.

11 <sup>a</sup>And they gave them <sup>b</sup>the city of Arba the father of <sup>c</sup>Anak, which city is Hebron, <sup>d</sup>in the hill country of Judah, with the suburbs thereof round about it.

12 But <sup>a</sup>the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, gave they to Caleb the son of Jephunnah for his possession.

Verse 4. Out of the tribe of Judah—Simeon, and—Benjamin, thirteen cities.] These tribes furnished more habitations to the Levites in proportion than any of the other tribes, because they possessed a more extensive inheritance. See Num. xxxv. 8. It is worthy of remark that the principal part of this tribe, whose business was to minister at the sanctuary, which sanctuary was afterwards to be established in Jerusalem, had their appointment nearest to that city; so that they were always within reach of the sacred work which God had appointed them.

Verse 5. And the rest of the children of Kohath.] That is, the remaining part of that family that were not priests, for those who were priests had their lot in the preceding tribes. Those, therefore, of the family of Kohath, who were simply Levites, and not of the priests or Aaron's family (see ver. 10), had their habitation in Ephraim, Dan, and the half tribe of Manasseh.

It has been asked, in what sense did the Levites possess those cities, seeing they had no inheritance? To which it may be answered, that it is not likely the Levites had the exclusive property of the cities in which they dwelt, for it is evident that the other Israelites dwelt among them. It appears, therefore, that they had no other property in those cities, than merely the right to certain houses, which they might sell, but always with the right of perpetual redemption, for they could finally alienate nothing; and if the possessor of such a house, having sold it, did not redeem it at the year of jubilee, it reverted to the Levites. And as to their lands for their cattle, which extended two thousand cubits without the city, these they were not permitted to sell: they were considered as the Lord's property. It is,

19 All the cities of the children of Aaron, the priests, were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

20 <sup>a</sup>And the families of the children of Kohath, the Levites which remained of the children of Kohath, even they had the cities of their lot out of the tribe of Ephraim.

21 For they gave them <sup>a</sup>Shechem with her suburbs in Mount Ephraim, <sup>b</sup>to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Gezer with her suburbs, 22 And Kibzaim with her suburbs, and Beth-horon with her suburbs; four cities.

23 And out of the tribe of Dan, Eltekeh with her suburbs, Gibbethon with her suburbs, 24 Aijalon with her suburbs, Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; four cities.

25 And out of the half tribe of Manasseh, Tanach with her suburbs, and Gath-rimmon with her suburbs; two cities.

26 All the cities were ten with their suburbs for the families of the children of Kohath that remained.

27 <sup>a</sup>And unto the children of Gershon, of the families of the Levites, out of the other half tribe of 48.—<sup>a</sup> Ch. xv. 50.—<sup>b</sup> 1 Chron. vi. 58, Nilen. Ch. xv. 51.—<sup>c</sup> Ch. xv. 49.—<sup>d</sup> 1 Chron. vi. 59, Ashan. therefore, very likely that, in the first instance, the Levites had simply the right to choose, in all the cities assigned them, the houses in which they were to dwell, and that those of the tribe to which the city belonged occupied all the other dwellings. There is also reason to believe that in process of time, when the families of the Levites increased, they had more dwellings assigned to them, which were probably built at the public expense.

We may also observe that the Levites were not absolutely bound to live in these and no other cities; for when the tabernacle was at Nob, priests and Levites dwelt there, see 1 Sam. xxi. 1, &c.; and when the worship of God was established at Jerusalem, multitudes both of priests and Levites dwelt there, though it was no Levitical city; as did the courses of priests afterwards at Jericho. This was a circumstance which Moses had foreseen, and for which he had provided.

Verse 12. The fields of the city—gave they to Caleb.] This was an exclusive privilege to him and his family, with which the grant to the Levites did not interfere. See the notes on chap. xiv. 14.

Verse 18. Anathoth.] Celebrated as the birth-place of Jeremiah, about three miles northward of Jerusalem, according to St. Jerome.

Verse 19. Thirteen cities with their suburbs.] At the time mentioned here, certainly thirteen cities were too large a proportion for the priests, as they and their families amounted to a very small number; but this ample provision was made in reference to their great increase in after times, when they formed twenty-four courses, as in the days of David.

Verse 22. Beth-horon.] There were two cities of this name, the upper and the nether; but which is intended here cannot be ascertained.

Manasseh they gave *Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Beeshterah with her suburbs; two cities.

28 And out of the tribe of Issachar, Kishon with her suburbs, Dabareh with her suburbs, 29 Jarmuth with her suburbs, En-gannim with her suburbs; four cities.

30 And out of the tribe of Asher, Mishal with her suburbs, Abdon with her suburbs, 31 Helkath with her suburbs, and Rehol with her suburbs; four cities.

32 And out of the tribe of Naphtali, <sup>b</sup>Kedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Hammoth-dor with her suburbs, and Kartan with her suburbs; three cities.

33 All the cities of the Gershonites according to their families were thirteen cities with their suburbs.

34 *And unto the families of the children of Merari, the rest of the Levites, out of the tribe of Zebulun, Jokneam with her suburbs, and Kartah with her suburbs,

Verse 35. Dimnah with her suburbs, &c.] It is well known to every Hebrew scholar that the two following verses are wholly omitted by the Masora; and are left out in some of the most correct and authentic Hebrew Bibles. Between critics there is no small controversy relative to the authenticity of these verses.

Those who deny their authenticity say they have been inserted here from 1 Chron. vi. 78, 79, where they are found it is true, in general, but not exactly as they stand here, and in Dr. Kennicott's Hebrew Bible.

Verse 41. Forty and eight cities] At the last census of the Hebrew people, related Num. xxvi., we find from ver. 62 that the tribe of Levi amounted only to 23,000; and it is supposed that forty-eight cities were too great a proportion for this tribe, the other tribes having so very few. But, 1. All the cities of the other tribes are not enumerated. 2. They had the circumjacent country as well as the cities. 3. The Levites had no other cities than those enumerated. 4. They had no country annexed to their cities, the 2,000 cubits for

38 And out of the tribe of Gad, *Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, to be a city of refuge for the slayer; and Mahanaim with her suburbs, 39 Heshbon with her suburbs, Jazer with her suburbs; four cities in all.

40 So all the cities for the children of Merari by their families, which were remaining of the families of the Levites, were by their lot twelve cities.

41 'All the cities of the Levites within the possession of the children of Israel were forty and eight cities with their suburbs.

42 These cities were every one with their suburbs round about them: thus were all these cities.

43 And the Lord gave unto Israel *all the land which he swore unto their fathers; and they possessed it, and dwelt therein.

44 <sup>b</sup>And the Lord gave them rest round about, according to all that he swore unto their fathers: and there stood not a man of all their enemies before them; the Lord delivered all their enemies into their hand.

45 <sup>c</sup>There failed not ought of any good thing which the Lord had spoken unto the house of Israel: all came to pass.

their cattle, &c., excepted. 5. Cities in those ancient times were very small, as most villages went under this appellation. 6. The Levites had now the appointment that was suited to their consequent increase.

Verse 43. And the Lord gave—all the land which he swore] All was now divided by lot unto them, and their enemies were so completely discomfited that there was not a single army of the Canaanites remaining to make head against them; and those which were left in the land served under tribute, and the tribute that they paid was the amplest proof of their complete subjugation.

So was the whole land of Canaan conquered, and its inhabitants subdued, though the whole of the ground was not occupied by the Israelites till the days of David and Solomon. In the most correct and literal sense it might be said, There failed not ought of any good thing which the Lord had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass. Nor shall one word of his ever fail to any of his followers while the sun and moon endure.

CHAPTER XXII.

Joshua assembles, commends, blesses, and then dismisses the two tribes of Reuben and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasseh, 1-8. They return and build an altar by the side of Jordan, 9, 10. The rest of the Israelites hearing of this, and suspecting that they had built the altar for idolatrous purposes, or to make a schism in the national worship, prepare to go to war with them, 11, 12; but first send a deputation to know the truth, 13, 14. They arrive and expostulate with their brethren, 15-20. The Reubenites, Gadites, and half tribe of Manasseh, make a noble defence, and show that their altar was built as a monument only, to prevent idolatry, 21-29. The deputation are satisfied, and return to the ten tribes, and make their report, 30-32. The people rejoice and praise God, 33; and the Reubenites and Gadites call the altar they had raised Ed, that it might be considered a witness between them and their brethren on the other side Jordan, 34.

THEN Joshua called the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half tribe of Manasseh,

2 And said unto them, Ye have kept *all

* Num. xxxii. 20. Deut. iii. 18.

Verse 1. Then Joshua called the Reubenites, &c.] They had now been about seven years absent from their respective families: and though there was only the river Jordan be-that Moses the servant of the Lord commanded you, <sup>b</sup>and have obeyed my voice in all that I commanded you:

8 Ye have not left your brethren these many days

tween the camp at Gilgal and their own inheritance, yet it does not appear that they had during that time ever revisited their own home, which they might have done any time in unto this day, but have kept the charge of the commandment of the LORD your God.

4 And now the LORD your God hath given rest unto your brethren, as he promised them: therefore now return ye, and get you unto your tents, and unto the land of your possession, <sup>a</sup> which Moses the servant of the LORD gave you on the other side Jordan.

5 But <sup>b</sup> take diligent heed to do the commandment and the law, which Moses the servant of the LORD charged you, <sup>c</sup> to love the LORD your God, and to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and to cleave unto him, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul.

6 So Joshua <sup>d</sup> blessed them, and sent them away: and they went unto their tents.

7 Now to the one half of the tribe of Manasseh, Moses had given possession in Bashan<sup>e</sup>: but unto the other half thereof gave Joshua among their brethren on this side Jordan westward. And when Joshua sent them away also unto their tents, then he blessed them;

8 And he spake unto them, saying, Return with much riches unto your tents, and with very much cattle, with silver, and with gold, and with brass, and with iron, and with very much raiment: <sup>f</sup> divide the spoil of your enemies with your brethren.

9 And the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh returned, and departed from the children of Israel out of Shiloh, which <sup>is</sup> in the land of Canaan, to go unto <sup>g</sup> the country of Gilead, to the land of their possession, wherof they were possessed, according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

10 And when they came unto the borders of Jordan, that <sup>are</sup> in the land of Canaan, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh built there an altar by Jordan, a great altar to see to.

11 And the children of Israel <sup>h</sup> heard say, Behold, the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh have built an altar over against the land of Canaan, in the borders of Jordan, at the passage of the children of Israel.

12 And when the children of Israel heard of it, <sup>i</sup> the whole congregation of the children of Israel gathered themselves together at Shiloh, to go up to war against them.

13 And the children of Israel <sup>j</sup> sent unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half tribe of Manasseh, into the land of Gilead, <sup>k</sup> Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, 14 And with him ten princes, of each <sup>l</sup> chief house a prince throughout all the tribes of Israel; and <sup>m</sup> each one <sup>was</sup> an head of the house of their fathers among the thousands of Israel.

15 And they came unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the half tribe of Manasseh, unto the land of Gilead, and they spake with them, saying,

16 Thus sayeth the whole congregation of the LORD, What trespass <sup>n</sup> is this that ye have committed against the God of Israel, to turn away this day from following the LORD, in that ye have builded you an altar, <sup>o</sup> that ye might rebel this day against the LORD?

17 <sup>p</sup> Is the iniquity of Peor too little for us, from which we are not cleansed until this day, although there was a plague in the congregation of the LORD.

18 But that ye must turn away this day from the year, the harvest excepted, as at all other times the river was easily fordable.

Verse 5. But take diligent heed, &c. Let us examine the force of this excellent advice; they must ever consider that their prosperity and continual possession of the land depended on their fidelity and obedience to God; to this they must take diligent heed.

Do the commandment] They must pay the strictest regard to every moral precept.

And the law] They must observe all the rites and ceremonies of their holy religion.

Love the Lord your God] Without an affectionate, filial attachment to their Maker, duty would be irksome, grievous, and impossible.

Walk in all his ways] They must not only believe and love, but obey; walk not in your own ways, but walk in those which God has pointed out.

Keep his commandments] They must love him with all their heart, soul, mind, and strength, and their neighbour as themselves.

Cleave unto him] They must be cemented to him in a union that should never be dissolved.

Serve him] They must consider him as their Master, having an absolute right to appoint them when, where, how, and in what measure they should do his work.

With all your heart] Having all the affections and passions sanctified and united to him.

And with all your soul] Giving up their whole life to him, and employing their understanding, judgment, and will in the contemplation and adoration of his perfections; that their love and obedience might increase in proportion to the cultivation and improvement of their understanding.

Verse 7. Then he blessed them] Spoke respectfully of their fidelity and exertions, wished them every spiritual and temporal good, prayed to God to protect and save them, and probably gave some gifts to those leaders among them that had most distinguished themselves in this seven years' war. In all the above senses the word bless is frequently taken in scripture.

Verse 8. Return with much riches] It appears they had their full proportion of the spoils that were taken from the Canaanites.

Divide the spoil—with your brethren] It was right that those who staid at home to defend the families of those who had been in the wars, and to cultivate the ground, should have a proper proportion of the spoils taken from the enemy.

Verse 10. The borders of Jordan, that are—in Canaan] It appears that when they came to the river they formed the purpose of building the altar; and when they had crossed it they executed their purpose.

A great altar to see to] A vast mass of earth, stones, &c., elevated to a great height, to serve as a memorial of the transactions that had already taken place. Probably it was intended also to serve as a kind of watch-tower.

Verse 12. To go up to war against them] Supposing that they had built this altar in opposition to that which Moses, by the command of God, had erected, and were consequently become rebels against God and the Israelitish constitution, and should be treated as such. Their great concern for the glory of God led them to take this step, which at first view might appear precipitate; but, that they might do nothing rashly, they first sent Phinehas and ten princes, one out of each tribe, to require an explanation of their motive in erecting this altar.

Verse 17. Is the iniquity of Peor too little] Phinehas takes it for granted that this altar was built in opposition to the altar of God erected by Moses, and that they intended to have a separate service, priesthood, &c., which would be rebellion against God, and bring down his curse on them and their posterity; and in order to show that God is jealous of following the LORD? and it will be, seeing ye rebel to day against the LORD, that to morrow <sup>a</sup> he will be wroth with the whole congregation of Israel.

19 Notwithstanding, if the land of your possession be unclean, then pass ye over unto the land of the possession of the LORD, <sup>b</sup> wherein the LORD's tabernacle dwelleth, and take possession among us, but rebel not against the LORD, nor rebel against us, in building you an altar beside the altar of the LORD our God.

20 <sup>c</sup> Did not Achan the son of Zerah commit a trespass in the accursed thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? and that man perished not alone in his iniquity.

21 Then the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the half tribe of Manasseh, answered, and said unto the heads of the thousands of Israel.

22 The LORD <sup>d</sup> God of gods, the LORD God of gods, he <sup>e</sup> knoweth, and Israel he shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD (save us not this day).

23 That we have built us an altar to turn from following the LORD, or if to offer thereon burnt-offering or meat-offering, or if to offer peace-offerings thereon, let the LORD himself <sup>f</sup> require it;

24 And if we have not rather done it for fear of this thing, saying, <sup>g</sup> In time to come your children might speak unto our children, saying, What have ye to do with the LORD God of Israel.

25 For the LORD hath made Jordan a border between us and you, ye children of Reuben and children of Gad; ye have no part in the LORD; so shall your children make our children cease from fearing the LORD.

26 Therefore we said, Let us now prepare to build us an altar; not for burnt-offering, nor for sacrifice;

27 But that it may be <sup>h</sup> a witness between us and you, and our generations after us, that we might <sup>i</sup> do the service of the LORD before him with our burnt-offerings, and with our sacrifices, and with our peace-offerings; that your children may not say to our children in time to come, Ye have no part in the LORD.

28 Therefore said we, that it shall be, when they should so say to us or to our generations in time to come, that we may say again, Behold the pattern of the altar of the LORD, which our fathers made, not for burnt-offerings, nor for sacrifices; but it is a witness between us and you.

29 God forbid that we should rebel against the LORD, to turn this day from following the LORD, <sup>j</sup> to build an altar for burnt-offerings, for meat-offerings, or for sacrifices, beside the altar of the LORD our God that is before his tabernacle.

30 And when Phinehas the priest, and the princes of the congregation and heads of the thousands of Israel which were with him, heard the words that the children of Reuben and the children of Gad and the children of Manasseh spake, <sup>k</sup> it pleased them.

31 And Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest said unto the children of Reuben, and to the children of Gad, and to the children of Manasseh, This day we perceive that the LORD is <sup>l</sup> among us, because ye have not committed this trespass against the LORD: <sup>m</sup> now ye have delivered the children of Israel out of the hand of the LORD.

his glory, he refers to the business of Baal-Peor, which took place in that very country they were now about to possess, the destructive consequences of which he, through his zeal for the glory of God, was the means of preventing.

Verse 19. If the land of your possessions be unclean] The generous mind of Phinehas led him to form this excuse for them. We will divide this land with you, and rather straiten ourselves than that you should conceive yourselves to be under any necessity of erecting a new altar besides the altar of the Lord our God.

Verse 20. Did not Achan the son of Zerah] Your sin will not be merely against yourselves; we may all be implicated in its criminality; let this and the dishonour which we apprehend is done to our God plead our excuse, and vindicate the necessity of the present warlike appearance which we make before you.

Verse 21. Then the children of Reuben—answered] Though conscious of their own innocence they permitted Phinehas to finish his discourse, though composed of little else than accusations; there was a decency in this, and such a full proof of good-breeding, as does them the highest credit. There are many public assemblies in the present day laying claim to the highest refinement, which might take a very useful lesson from these Reubenites and their associates.

Verse 22. The Lord God of gods] The original words are exceedingly emphatic, and cannot be easily translated. El Elohim Jehovah, are the three principal names by which the supreme God was known among the Hebrews, and may be thus translated, The Strong God, Elohim Jehovah, which is nearly the version of Luther, "The strong God the Lord." And the Reubenites, by using these in their very solemn appeal, expressed at once their strong unshaken faith in the God of Israel; and by this they fully showed the deputation from the ten tribes, that their religious creed had not been changed; and in the succeeding part of their defence they show that their practice corresponded with their creed. The repetition of these solemn names by the Reubenites, &c., shows their deep concern for the honour of God, and the anxiety to wipe off the reproach which they consider cast on them by the supposition that they had been capable of defection from the pure worship of God, or of disaffection to their brethren.

Save us not this day] This was putting the affair to the most solemn issue; and nothing but the utmost consciousness of their own integrity could have induced them to make such an appeal, and call for such a decision.

Verse 24. For fear of this thing] The motive that actuated us was directly the reverse of that of which we have been suspected.

Verse 26. An altar, not for burnt-offering, nor for sacrifice] Because this would have been in flat opposition to the law, Lev. xvii. 8, 9, Deut. xii. 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 13, 14. Therefore the altar built by the Reubenites, &c., was for no religious purpose, but merely to serve as a testimony that they were one people with those on the west of Jordan, having the same religious and civil constitution, and bound by the same interests to keep that constitution inviolate.

Verse 29. God forbid that we should rebel] These words not only express their strong abhorrence of this crime, but also show that without God they could do no good thing, and that they depended upon him for that strength by which alone they could abstain from evil.

Verse 31. We perceive that the Lord is among us] They rejoice to find them innocent, and that there is no ground of quarrel between the children of the same family. And from this they draw a very favourable conclusion, that as God was among them as the sole object of their religious worship, so he would abide with them as their protector and their portion; and as they were his friends, they take it for granted that he will deliver them from the hands of their enemies.

Verse 33. And did not intend to go up against them in battle] That is, they now relinquished the intention of going against them in battle, as this explanation proved there was no cause for the measure.

Verse 34. Called the altar Ed] The word ED, which signifies witness or testimony, is not found in the common editions of the Hebrew Bible, and is supplied in Italics by our translators, at least in our modern copies; for in the first edition of this translation it stands in the text without any note of this kind. It is very probable that an inscription was put on this altar, which pointed out the purposes for which it was erected.

From the contents of this chapter we learn that the Israelites were dreadfully alarmed at the prospect of a schism in their own body, both as it related to ecclesiastical and civil matters.

Schism in religion is a dangerous thing, and should be carefully avoided by all who fear God. But this word should be well understood. A departure from human institutions in religion is no schism, for this reason, that the word of God alone is the sufficient rule of the faith and practice of Christians; and as to human institutions, forms, modes, &c., those of one party may be as good as those of another.

When the majority of a nation agrees in some particular forms and modes in their religious service; no conscientious man will lightly depart from these; nor depart at all, unless he find that they are not only not authorized by the word of God, but repugnant to it. It is an object greatly to be desired, that a whole people, living under the same laws, may, as much as possible, glorify God, not only with one heart, but also with one mouth.

But there may be a dissent from established forms without schism; for if that dissent make no rent in the doctrines or practice of Christianity, as laid down in the New Testament, it is an abuse of terms to call it a schism; besides, there may be a dissent among religious people relative to certain points both in creed and practice, which, not affecting the essentials of Christianity, nor having any direct tendency to alienate the affections of Christians from each other, cannot be called a schism; but when professing Christians separate from each other, to set up one needless or non-essential form, &c., in the place of others which they call needless or non-essential, they are highly culpable. If Christians either cannot or will not think alike on all points, surely they can agree to disagree, and let each go to heaven his own way. "But should we take this advice, would it not lead to a total indifference about religion?" Not at all; for in the things which concern the essentials of Christianity, both in doctrine and practice, we should ever feel zealously affected, and earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Joshua, being old, calls for the rulers and different heads of the Israelites, 1, 2, to whom he relates how God had put them in possession of the promised land, 3, 4; from which all their remaining enemies should be expelled, 5. Exhorts them to be faithful to God, and to avoid all connexions with the idolatrous nations, 6-8. Encourages them with the strongest promises, that no enemy should ever be able to prevail against them, if they continued to love the Lord their God, 9-11. Lays also before them the consequences of disobedience, 12, 13. Shows them that as all God's promises had been fulfilled to them while they were obedient, so his threatenings should be fulfilled on them if they revolted from his service; and that if they did so, they should be utterly destroyed from off the good land, 14-16.

AND it came to pass a long time after that the LORD <sup>a</sup>had given rest unto Israel from all their enemies round about, that Joshua <sup>b</sup>waxed old and <sup>c</sup>stricken in age.

2 And Joshua <sup>d</sup>called for all Israel, and for their elders, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers, and said unto them, I am old and stricken in age:

Verse 1. A long time after that the Lord had given rest] This is supposed to have been in the last or one hundred and tenth year of the life of Joshua, about thirteen or fourteen years after the conquest of Canaan, and seven after the division of the land among the tribes.

Verse 2. Joshua called for all Israel] There are four degrees of civil distinction mentioned here: 1. Zekenim, the elders or senate, the PRINCES of the tribes. 2. Rashim, or rashey aboth, the CHIEFS or HEADS of families. 3. Shophetim, the JUDGES who interpreted and decided according to the law. 4. Shoterim, the OFFICERS, serjeants, &c., who executed the decisions of the judges. Whether this assembly was held at Tinnath-Serah, where Joshua lived, or at Shiloh, where the ark was, or at Shechem, as in chap. xxiv. 1, we cannot tell. Some think that the meeting here, and that mentioned in chap. xxiv., were the same, and if so, Shechem

3 And ye have seen all that the LORD your God hath done unto all these nations because of you; for the <sup>a</sup>LORD your God is he that hath fought for you.

was the place of assembling; but it is more likely that the two chapters treat of two distinct assemblies, whether held at the same place or not.

Verse 3. For the Lord your God is he that hath fought for you.] There is much both of piety and modesty in this address. It was natural for the Israelites to say, "Had we not had such a commander, we had never got possession of this good land." Joshua corrects this opinion, and shows them that the battle was the Lord's, and not his; and that God alone should have the glory.

Verse 4. I have divided—these nations that remain] The whole of the promised land had been portioned out, but in many districts the old inhabitants remained, more through the supineness of the Israelites than through their own bravery.

From Jordan—unto the great sea.] All the land that lay

7 That ye * come not among these nations, these that remain among you; neither <sup>d</sup> make mention of the name of their gods, nor cause to swear by them, neither serve them, nor bow yourselves unto them:

10 <sup>i</sup> One man of you shall chase a thousand: for the LORD your God, he it is that fighteth for you, <sup>j</sup> as he hath promised you.

between the river Jordan, from Phiala, where it rose, to the southern extremity of the Dead Sea, and to the Mediterranean Sea, through the whole extent of its coast, opposite to Jordan.

Verse 5. And drive them—out—and ye shall possess.] The same word is used here to signify to expel from an inheritance, and to succeed those thus expelled.

Verse 6. Be ye therefore very courageous to keep and to do, &c.] It requires no small courage to keep a sound creed in the midst of scoffers, and not less to maintain a goodly practice among the profane and profligate.

That is written in the book.] Nothing is to be received as an article of faith which God has not spoken.

Verse 7. Come not among these nations.] Have no civil or social contracts with them (see ver. 12), as these will infallibly lead to spiritual affinities, in consequence of which ye will make honourable mention of the name of their gods, swear by them as the judges of your motives and actions, serve them in their abominable rites, and bow yourselves unto them as your creators and preservers; and all this will follow from simply coming among them. He who walks in the counsel of the ungodly will soon stand in the way of sinners, and shortly sit in the seat of the scornful. "No man rises to the highest stages of iniquity but by degrees."

Verse 10. One man of you shall chase a thousand.] The Lord shall drive out nations great and strong; and under his direction and influence one of you shall chase a thousand.

Verse 11. Take good heed—unto yourselves, that ye love the Lord.] Take heed to YOUR SOULS, literally; but nephesh signifies the whole self, as well as soul and life.

Verse 12. Else if ye do—go back.] These were the Lord's soldiers, and if they drew back they drew back unto perdition, their lives being forfeited by their infidelity.

Verse 18. They shall be snares.] A net or gin, set by the artful fowler to catch heedless birds.

remain among you, and shall <sup>a</sup> make marriages with them, and go in unto them, and they to you.

13 Know for a certainty that <sup>b</sup> the LORD your God will no more drive out any of these nations from before you; <sup>c</sup> but they shall be snares and traps unto you, and scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes, until ye perish from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

14 And, behold, this day <sup>d</sup> I am going the way of all the earth: and ye know in all your hearts, and in all your souls, that <sup>e</sup> not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass upon you, and not one thing hath failed thereof.

15 <sup>f</sup> Therefore it shall come to pass, that as all good things are come upon you, which the LORD your God promised you; so shall the LORD bring upon you <sup>g</sup> all evil things, until he have destroyed you from off this good land which the LORD your God hath given you.

16 When ye have transgressed the covenant of the LORD your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and served other gods, and bowed yourselves to them; then shall the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and ye shall perish quickly from off the good land which he hath given unto you.

Scourges in your sides, and thorns in your eyes.] Nothing can be conceived more vexatious and distressing than a continual goad in the side, or thorn in the eye.

Verse 14. The way of all the earth.] I am about to die; I am going into the grave.

Not one thing hath failed, &c.] God had so remarkably and literally fulfilled his promises, that not one of his enemies could state that even the smallest of them had not had its most literal accomplishment.

Verse 15. So shall the Lord bring upon you all evil things.] His faithfulness in fulfilling his promises is a proof that he will as faithfully accomplish his threatenings, for the veracity of God is equally pledged for both.

In all this exhortation, we see how closely Joshua copies the example of his great master Moses. He was tenderly concerned for the welfare of the people, and with a deeply affected heart he spoke to their hearts. No people ever were more fairly and fully warned, and no people profited less by it. The threatenings pronounced here were accomplished in the Babylonish captivity, but more fully in their general dispersion since the crucifixion of our Lord. And should not every Christian fear when he reads, If God spared not the natural branches, take heed that he spare not thee? Surely a worldly, carnal, and godless Christian has no more reason to expect indulgence from the justice of God than a profligate Jew. We have a goodly land, but the justice of God can decree a captivity from it, or a state of bondage in it. The privileges that are abused are thereby forfeited. And this is as applicable to the individual as to the whole system.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Joshua gathers all the tribes together at Shechem, 1; and gives them a history of God's gracious dealings with Abraham, 2, 3; Isaac, Jacob, and Esau, 4; Moses and Aaron, and their fathers in Egypt, 5, 6. His judgments on the Egyptians, 7. On the Amorites, 8. Their deliverance from Balak and Balaam, 9, 10. Their conquests in the promised land, and their establishment in the possession of it, 11-13. Exhorts them to abolish idolatry, and informs them of his and his family's resolution to serve Jehovah, 14, 15. The people solemnly promise to serve the Lord alone, and mention his merciful dealings towards them, 16-18. Joshua shows them the holiness of God, and the danger of apostasy, 19, 20. The people again promise obedience, 21. Joshua calls them to witness against themselves, that they had promised to worship God alone, and exhorts them to put away the strange gods, 22, 23. They promise obedience, 24. Joshua makes a covenant with the people, writes it in a book, sets up a stone as a memorial of it, and dismisses the people, 25-28. Joshua's death, 29, and burial, 30. The people continue faithful during that generation, 31. They bury the bones of Joseph in Shechem, 32. Eleazar, the high-priest, dies also, 33.

AND Joshua gathered all the tribes of Israel to <sup>a</sup>Shechem, and <sup>b</sup>called for the elders of Israel, and for their heads, and for their judges, and for their officers; and they <sup>c</sup>presented themselves before God.

2 And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, <sup>a</sup>Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah the father of Abraham, and the father of Nachor: and <sup>c</sup>they served other gods.

3 And <sup>d</sup>I took your father Abraham from the other side of the flood, and led him throughout all the land of Canaan, and multiplied his seed, and <sup>e</sup>gave him Isaac.

4 And I gave unto Isaac <sup>b</sup>Jacob and Esau: and I gave unto <sup>f</sup>Esau Mount Seir, to possess it; <sup>g</sup>but Jacob and his children went down into Egypt.

5 <sup>h</sup>I sent Moses also and Aaron, and <sup>i</sup>I plagued Egypt, according to that which I did among them: and afterward I brought you out.

6 And I <sup>j</sup>brought your fathers out of Egypt: and <sup>k</sup>ye came unto the sea; <sup>l</sup>and the Egyptians pursued after your fathers with chariots and horsemen unto the Red Sea.

7 And when they <sup>m</sup>cried unto the Lord, <sup>n</sup>he put darkness between you and the Egyptians, <sup>o</sup>and brought the sea upon them, and covered them; and <sup>p</sup>your eyes have seen what I have done in Egypt: and ye dwelt in the wilderness <sup>q</sup>a long season.

8 And I brought you into the land of the Amorites, which dwell on the other side Jordan; <sup>r</sup>and they fought with you: and I gave them into your hand, that ye might possess their land; and I destroyed them from before you.

9 Then <sup>s</sup>Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab, arose and warred against Israel, and <sup>t</sup>sent and called Balaam the son of Beor to curse you:

10 <sup>u</sup>But I would not hearken unto Balaam; <sup>v</sup>therefore he blessed you still: so I delivered you out of his hand.

11 And <sup>w</sup>ye went over Jordan, and came unto Jericho: and <sup>x</sup>the men of Jericho fought against you, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Canaanites, and the Hittites, and the Girgashites, the Hivites, and the Jebusites; and I delivered them into your hand.

12 And <sup>yy</sup>I sent the hornet before you, which drave them out from before you, even the two kings of the Amorites; but <sup>zz</sup>not with thy sword, nor with thy bow.

13 And I have given you a land for which ye did not labour, and <sup>aa</sup>cities which ye built not, and ye dwell in them; of the vineyards and oliveyards which ye planted not, ye eat.

14 <sup>bb</sup>Now therefore fear the Lord, and serve him in <sup>cc</sup>sincerity and in truth: and <sup>dd</sup>put away the gods which your fathers served on the other side of the flood, and <sup>ee</sup>in Egypt; and serve ye the Lord.

Verse 1. Joshua gathered all the tribes] This must have been a different assembly from that mentioned in the preceding chapter, though probably held not long after the former.

To Shechem] As it is immediately added that they presented themselves before God, this must mean the tabernacle; but at this time the tabernacle was not at Shechem, but at Shiloh. Many suppose that Shiloh is the original reading. Perhaps there is more of imaginary than real difficulty in the text. As Joshua was now old and incapable of travelling, he certainly had a right to assemble the representatives of the tribes wherever he found most convenient, and to bring the ark of the covenant to the place of assembling; and this was probably done on this occasion. Shechem is a place famous in the patriarchal history. Here Abraham settled on his first coming into the land of Canaan, and here the patriarchs were buried. And as Shechem lay between Ebal and Gerizim, where Joshua had before made a covenant with the people, the very circumstance of the place would be undoubtedly friendly to the solemnity of the present occasion. [The phrase, "they presented themselves before God" may indicate only the religious character of the ceremony.]

Verse 2. On the other side of the flood] The river Euphrates.

They served other gods.] Probably Abraham as well as Terah his father was an idolater, till he received the call of God to leave that land.

Verse 9. Then Balak—arose and warred against Israel] Probably the warring here mentioned means no more than his attempts to destroy them by the curses of Balaam, and the wiles of the Midianitish women.

Verse 11. The men of Jericho fought against you] The people of Jericho are said to have fought against the Israelites, because they opposed them by shutting their gates, &c., though they did not attempt to meet them in the field.

Verse 14. Fear the Lord] Reverence him as the sole object of your religious worship.

15 And if it seem evil unto you to serve the LORD, *choose you this day whom ye will serve; whether <sup>b</sup>the gods which your fathers served that were on the other side of the flood, or <sup>c</sup>the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: <sup>d</sup>but as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD.

16 And the people answered and said, God forbid that we should forsake the LORD, to serve other gods;

17 For the LORD our God, he is it that brought us up and our fathers out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage, and which did those great signs in our sight, and preserved us in all the way wherein we went, and among all the people through whom we passed:

18 And the LORD drove out from before us all the people, even the Amorites which dwelt in the land: therefore will we also serve the LORD: for he is our God.

19 And Joshua said unto the people, *Ye cannot serve the Lord: for he is an <sup>e</sup>holy God; he is <sup>f</sup>a jealous God; <sup>g</sup>he will not forgive your transgressions nor your sins.

20 <sup>h</sup>If ye forsake the LORD, and serve strange gods, <sup>i</sup>then he will turn and do you hurt, and consume you, after that he hath done you good.

21 And the people said unto Joshua, Nay; but we will serve the LORD.

22 And Joshua said unto the people, Ye are witnesses against yourselves that <sup>k</sup>ye have chosen you the LORD, to serve him. And they said, We are witnesses.

23 Now therefore <sup>l</sup>put away, said he, the strange gods which are among you, and incline your heart unto the LORD God of Israel.

24 And the people said unto Joshua, The LORD our God will we serve, and his voice will we obey.

25 So Joshua <sup>m</sup>made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance <sup>n</sup>in Shechem.

26 And Joshua <sup>o</sup>wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took <sup>p</sup>a great stone, and <sup>q</sup>set it up there <sup>r</sup>under an oak, that was by the sanctuary of the LORD.

27 And Joshua said unto all the people, Behold, this stone shall be <sup>s</sup>a witness unto us; for <sup>t</sup>it hath heard all the words of the LORD which he spake unto us: it shall be therefore a witness unto you, lest ye deny your God.

28 So <sup>u</sup>Joshua let the people depart, every man unto his inheritance.

29 <sup>v</sup>And it came to pass after these things, that Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, being an hundred and ten years old.

30 And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in <sup>w</sup>Timmath-serah, which is in Mount Ephraim, on the north side of the hill of Gaash.

Serve him] Perform his will by obeying his commands.
In sincerity] Having your whole heart engaged in his worship.

And in truth] According to the directions he has given you in his infallible word.

Put away the gods, &c.] From this exhortation of Joshua we learn of what sort the gods were, to the worship of whom these Israelites were still attached. 1. Those which their fathers worshipped on the other side of the flood: i.e. the gods of the CHALDEANS, fire, light, the sun. 2. Those of the EGYPTIANS, Apis, Anubis, the ape, serpents, vegetables, &c. 3. Those of the CANAANITES, MOABITES, &c., Baal-peor or Priapus, Astarte or Venus, &c., &c.

How astonishing that there should still be found among them both idols and idolaters! But what excuse can be made for such stupid, not to say brutish, blindness? Probably they thought they could the better represent the divine nature by using symbols and images, and perhaps they professed to worship God through the medium of these. At least this is what has been alleged in behalf of a gross class of Christians who are notorious for image worship.

Verse 15. Choose you this day whom ye will serve] He calls upon the people to make their choice, for God himself would not force them—they must serve him with all their heart if they served him at all. As to himself and family, he shows them that their choice was already fixed, for they had taken JEHOVAH for their portion.

Verse 16. God forbid that we should forsake the Lord] That they were now sincere cannot be reasonably doubted, for they served the Lord all the days of Joshua, and the elders that outlived him, ver. 31; but afterwards they turned aside, and did serve other gods.

Verse 19. Ye cannot serve the Lord: for he is an holy God] If we are to take this literally, we cannot blame the Israelites for their defection from the worship of the true God. The meaning of the place must be, "Ye cannot serve the Lord, for he is holy and jealous, unless ye put away the gods which your fathers served beyond the flood."

Verse 21. And the people said—Nay; but we will serve, &c.] So they understood the words of Joshua to imply no moral impossibility on their side.

Verse 22. Ye are witnesses against yourselves] Ye have been sufficiently apprised of the difficulties in your way; and now ye deliberately make your choice. Remember then, that ye are witnesses against yourselves, and your own conscience will be witness, judge, and executioner.

Verse 23. Now therefore put away] A man's promise to serve God soon loses its moral hold of his conscience, if he do not instantaneously begin to put it in practice.

Verse 25. Joshua made a covenant] Literally, Joshua cut the covenant, alluding to the sacrifice offered on the occasion.

And set them a statute and an ordinance] He made a solemn and public act of the whole, which was signed and witnessed by himself and the people, in the presence of Jehovah; and having done so, he wrote the words of the covenant in the book of the law of God, probably in some part of the skin constituting the great roll, on which the laws of God were written, and of which there were some blank columns to spare. Having done this, he took a great stone and set it up under an oak—that this might be ed or witness that, at such a time and place, this covenant was made, the terms of which might be found written in the book of the law, which was laid up beside the ark.

Verse 27. This stone—hath heard all the words] That is, the stone itself, from its permanency, shall be in all succeeding ages as competent and as substantial a witness as one who had been present at the transaction, and heard all the words which on both sides were spoken on the occasion.

Verse 29. Joshua the son of Nun—died] This event probably took place shortly after this public assembly; for he was old and stricken in years when he held the assembly mentioned chap. xxii. 2; and as his work was now all done, and his soul ripened for a state of blessedness, God took him to himself, being one hundred and ten years of age; exactly the same age as that of the patriarch Joseph.

Verse 30. And they buried him—in Timmath-serah] This was his own inheritance, as we have seen chap. xix. 50. It is very strange that there is no account of any public mourning for the death of this eminent general; probably, as he was buried in his own inheritance, he had forbidden all funeral pomp, and it is likely was privately interred.

Joshua, and all the days of the elders that <sup>a</sup>overlived Joshua, and which had <sup>b</sup>known all the works of the LORD, that he had done for Israel.

32 And <sup>c</sup>the bones of Joseph, which the children of Israel brought up out of Egypt, buried they in Shechem, in a parcel of ground <sup>d</sup>which Jacob bought

Verse 31. And Israel served the Lord, &c.] Though there was private idolatry among them, for they had strange gods, yet there was no public idolatry all the days of Joshua and of the elders that overlived Joshua; most of whom must have been advanced in years at the death of this great man.

Verse 32. And the bones of Joseph] This burying of the bones of Joseph probably took place when the conquest of the land was completed, and each tribe had received its inheritance; for it is not likely that this was deferred till after the death of Joshua.

Verse 33. And Eleazar—died] Probably about the same time as Joshua, or soon after; though some think he outlived him six years. Thus, nearly all the persons who had witnessed the miracles of God in the wilderness were gathered to their fathers; and their descendants left in possession of the great inheritance, with the law of God in their hands, and the bright example of their illustrious ancestors before their eyes.

A hill that pertained to Phinehas his son] This grant was probably made to Phinehas as a token of the respect of the whole nation, for his zeal, courage, and usefulness: for the priests had properly no inheritance.

It does not appear that Joshua was ever married, or that he had any children. That he was high in the estimation of God, we learn from his being chosen to succeed Moses in the government of the people. He is called the servant of God, as was Moses; and was, of all men of that generation, next in eminence to that great Legislator.

Like his great master, he neither provided for himself nor his relatives; though he had it constantly in his power so to do. His countrymen, it is true, gave him an inheritance among them, chap. xix. 50. This, we might suppose, was of the sons of Hamor the father of Shechem for an hundred <sup>a</sup>pieces of silver: and it became the inheritance of the children of Joseph.

33 And Eleazar the son of Aaron died; and they buried him in a hill that pertained to <sup>b</sup>Phinehas his son, which was given him in Mount Ephraim.

in consideration of his eminent services, and this, we might naturally expect, was the best inheritance in the land! No! they gave him Timnath-Serah, in the barren mountains of Ephraim, and even this he asked, chap. xix. 50. But was not this the best city in the land? No—it was even no city; evidently no more than the ruins of one that had stood in that place; and hence it is said, he builded the city and dwelt therein—he, with some persons of his own tribe, revived the stones out of the rubbish, and made it habitable.

Joshua believed there was a God; he loved him, acted under his influence, and endeavoured to the utmost of his power to promote the glory of his Maker, and the welfare of man; and he expected his recompence in another world.

Like HIM of whom he was an illustrious type, he led a painful and laborious life, devoting himself entirely to the service of God and the public good. How unlike was Joshua to those men who, for certain services, get elevated to the highest honours: but not content with the recompence thus awarded them by their country, use their new influence for the further aggrandizement of themselves and dependents, at the expense and often to the ruin of their country!

Joshua retires only from labour when there is no more work to be done, and no more dangers to be encountered. He was the first in the field, and the last out of it; and never attempted to take rest till all the tribes of Israel had got their possessions, and were settled in their inheritances!

Behold this man retiring from office and from life without any kind of emolument! the greatest man of all the tribes of Israel; the most patriotic, and the most serviceable; and yet the worst provided for. That man alone who truly fears and loves God, credits his revelation, and is made a partaker of his Spirit, is capable of performing disinterested services to his country and to mankind!

PREFACE TO THE BOOK

J U D G E S.

THE persons called Judges, Shophetim, from shaphat, to judge, discern, regulate, and direct, were the heads or chiefs of the Israelites who governed the Hebrew Republic from the days of Moses and Joshua till the time of Saul. The word judge is not to be taken here in its usual signification, i.e. one who determines controversies, and denounces the judgment of the law in criminal cases, but one who directs and rules a state or nation with sovereign power, administers justice, makes peace or war, and leads the armies of the people over whom he presides. But they were neither hereditary governors, nor were they chosen by the people: they were properly vice-gerents or lieutenants of the supreme God; and were always, among the Israelites, chosen by Him in a supernatural way. They had no power to make or change the laws; they were only to execute them under the direction of the Most High. God, therefore, was king in Israel: the government was a theocracy; and the judges were His deputies. The office, however, was not continual, as there appear intervals in which there was no judge in Israel. And, as they were extraordinary persons, they were only raised up on extraordinary occasions to be instruments in the hands of God of delivering their nation from the oppression and tyranny of the neighbouring powers. They had neither pomp nor state; nor, probably, any kind of emoluments.

The Chronology of the Book of Judges is extremely embarrassed and difficult; and there is no agreement among learned men concerning it. When the deliverances, and consequent periods of rest, so frequently mentioned in this Book, took place, cannot be satisfactorily ascertained.

Who the author of the Book of Judges was, is not known; some suppose that each Judge wrote his own history, and that the Book has been compiled from those separate accounts; which is very unlikely. Others ascribe it to Phinehas, to Samuel, to Hezekiah, and some to Ezra. But it is evident that it was the work of one individual, and of a person who lived posterior to the time of the Judges (see ch. ii. 10, &c.), and most probably of Samuel.

The duration of the government of the Israelites by Judges, from the death of Joshua to the commencement of the reign of Saul, was about three hundred and thirty-nine years. But as this Book does not include the government of Eli, nor that of Samuel, but ends with the death of Samson, which occurred in A. M. 2887; consequently, it includes only three hundred and seventeen years.

I have my doubts whether the author of this book ever designed to produce the subject in a strict chronological series. The book, in several places, appears to have been composed of historical memoranda having very little relation to each other, or among themselves; and particularly what is recorded in the beginning and the end. There is, however, one light in which the whole book may be viewed, which renders it invaluable; it is a most remarkable history of the long-suffering of God towards the Israelites, in which we find the most signal instances of his justice and his mercy alternately displayed; the people sinned, and were punished; they repented, and found mercy. Something of this kind we meet in every page. And these things are written for our warning. None should presume, for God is JUST: none need despair, for God is MERCIFUL.

CHAPTER I.

After the death of Joshua the Israelites purpose to attack the remaining Canaanites; and the tribe of Judah is directed to go up first, 1, 2. Judah and Simeon unite, attack the Canaanites and Perizzites, kill one thousand of them, take Adoni-bezek prisoner, cut off his thumbs and great toes, and bring him to Jerusalem, where he dies, 3-7. Jerusalem conquered, 8. A new war with the Canaanites under the direction of Caleb, 9-11. Kirjath-sepher taken by Othniel, on which he receives, as a reward, Achsah, the daughter of Caleb, and with her a south land with springs of water, 12-15. The Kenites dwell among the people, 16. Judah and Simeon destroy the Canaanites in Zephath, Gaza, &c., 17-19. Hebron is given to Caleb, 20. Of the Benjaminites, house of Joseph, tribe of Manasseh, &c., 21-27. The Israelites put the Canaanites to tribute, 28. Of the tribes of Ephraim, Zebulun, Asher, and Naphtali, 29-33. The Amorites force the children of Dan into the mountains, 34-36.

NOW after the death of Joshua it came to pass, that the children of Israel <sup>a</sup>asked the LORD, saying, Who shall go up for us against the Canaanites first, to fight against them?

2 And the LORD said, <sup>b</sup>Judah shall go up: behold, I have delivered the land into his hand.

3 And Judah said unto Simeon his brother, Come up with me into my lot, that we may fight against the Canaanites; <sup>c</sup>and I likewise will go with thee into thy lot. So Simeon went with him.

Verse 1. Now after the death of Joshua] How long after the death of Joshua this happened we cannot tell; it is probable that it was not long. The enemies of the Israelites, finding their champion dead, would naturally avail themselves of their unsettled state, and make incursions on the country.

Who shall go up?] Joshua had left no successor, and every thing relative to the movements of this people must be determined either by caprice, or an especial direction of the Lord.

Verse 2. The Lord said, Judah shall go up] They had inquired of the Lord by Phinehas the high-priest; and he had communicated to them the divine counsel.

Verse 3. Come up with me into my lot] It appears that the portions of Judah and Simeon had not been cleared of the Canaanites, or that these were the parts which were now particularly invaded.

Verse 5. And they found Adoni-bezek] The word matsa is used to express a hostile encounter between two parties; to attack, surprise, &c. This is probably its meaning here. Adoni-bezek is literally the lord of Bezek. It is very probable that the different Canaanitish tribes were governed by a sort of chieftains, similar to those among the clans of the ancient Scottish Highlanders. Bezek is said by some to have been in the tribe of Judah. Eusebius and St. Jerome mention two villages of this name, not in the tribe of Judah, but about seventeen miles from Shechem.

4 And Judah went up; and the LORD delivered the Canaanites and the Perizzites into their hand: and they slew of them in <sup>d</sup>Bezek ten thousand men.

5 And they found Adoni-bezek in Bezek: and they fought against him, and they slew the Canaanites and the Perizzites.

6 But Adoni-bezek fled; and they pursued after him, and caught him, and cut off his thumbs and his great toes.

7 And Adoni-bezek said, Threescore and ten kings, having <sup>e</sup>their thumbs and their great toes

Verse 6. Cut off his thumbs] That he might never be able to draw his bow or handle his sword; and great toes, that he might never be able to pursue or escape from an adversary.

Verse 7. Threescore and ten kings] Chieftains, heads of tribes, or military officers. For the word king cannot be taken here in its proper and usual sense.

Gathered their meat under my table] That this was an ancient mode of treating enemies we learn from Ælian, who tells us, Var. Hist. l. ii., c. 9, that "the Athenians, at the instigation of Cleon, son of Cleænetus, made a decree that all the inhabitants of the island of Ægina should have the thumb cut off from the right hand, so that they might ever after be disabled from holding a spear, yet might handle an oar." It was a custom among those Romans who did not like a military life, to cut off their own thumbs, that they might not be capable of serving in the army. Sometimes the parents cut off the thumbs of their children, that they might not be called into the army.

Gathered their meat under my table] I think this was a proverbial mode of expression, to signify reduction to the meanest servitude; for it is not at all likely that seventy kings, many of whom must have been contemporaries, were placed under the table of the king of Bezek, and there fed; as in the houses of poor persons the dogs are fed with crumbs and offal, under the table of their owners.

So God hath requited me.] The king of Bezek seems to cut off, <sup>a</sup>gathered their meat under my table: <sup>b</sup>as I have done, so God hath requited me. And they brought him to Jerusalem, and there he died.

8 Now <sup>c</sup>the children of Judah had fought against Jerusalem, and had taken it, and smitten it with the edge of the sword, and set the city on fire.

9 <sup>d</sup>And afterward the children of Judah went down to fight against the Canaanites, that dwelt in the mountain, and in the south, and in the <sup>e</sup>valley.

10 And Judah went against the Canaanites that dwelt in Hebron: (now the name of Hebron before was <sup>f</sup>Kirjath-arba:) and they slew Sheshai, and Ahiman, and Talmai.

11 <sup>g</sup>And from thence he went against the inhabitants of Debir: and the name of Debir before was Kirjath-sepher:

12 <sup>h</sup>And Caleb said, He that smiteth Kirjath-sepher, and taketh it, to him will I give Achsah my daughter to wife.

13 And Othniel the son of Kenaz, <sup>i</sup>Caleb's younger brother, took it: and he gave him Achsah his daughter to wife.

14 <sup>j</sup>And it came to pass, when she came to him, that she moved him to ask of her father a field: and she lighted from off <sup>k</sup>her ass; And Caleb said unto her, What wilt thou?

15 And she said unto him, <sup>l</sup>give me a blessing: for thou hast given me a south land; Give me also springs of water. And Caleb gave her the upper springs and the nether springs.

16 <sup>m</sup>And the children of the Kenite, Moses' father in law, went up out <sup>n</sup>of the city of palm-trees with the children of Judah into the wilderness of Judah, which <sup>o</sup>lieth in the south of <sup>p</sup>Arad; <sup>q</sup>and they went and dwelt among the people.

17 <sup>r</sup>And Judah went with Simeon his brother, and they slew the Canaanites that inhabited Zephath, and utterly destroyed it. And the name of the city was called <sup>s</sup>Hormah.

18 Also Judah took <sup>t</sup>Gaza with the coast thereof, and Askelon with the coast thereof, and Ekron with the coast thereof.

19 And <sup>u</sup>the Lord was with Judah; and <sup>v</sup>he drave out <sup>w</sup>the inhabitants of the mountains; but could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had <sup>x</sup>chariots of iron.

20 <sup>y</sup>And they gave Hebron unto Caleb, as Moses said: and he expelled thence the three sons of Anak.

21 <sup>z</sup>And the children of Benjamin did not drive out the Jebusites that inhabited Jerusalem; but the Jebusites dwell with the children of Benjamin in Jerusalem unto this day.

22 And the house of Joseph, they also went up against Beth-el: <sup>aa</sup>and the Lord <sup>ab</sup>was with them.

23 And the house of Joseph <sup>ac</sup>sent to descry Beth-el. (Now the name of the city before was <sup>ad</sup>Luz.)

have had the knowledge of the true God, and a proper notion of a divine providence. He now feels himself reduced to that state to which he had cruelly reduced others. Those acts in him were acts of tyrannous cruelty; the act towards him was an act of retributive justice.

And there he died.] How long he lived after his disgrace we know not.

Verse 8. Had fought against Jerusalem] We read this verse in a parenthesis, because we suppose that it refers to the taking of this city by Joshua. It is possible, however, that the Jebusites, who had been discomfited by Joshua, had again become sufficiently strong to possess themselves of Jerusalem; and that they were now defeated, and the city itself set on fire: but that they still were able to keep possession of their strong fort on Mount Zion, which appears to have been the citadel of Jerusalem.

Verse 9. The Canaanites, that dwell in the mountain] The territories of the tribe of Judah lay in the most southern part of the promised land, which was very mountainous, though towards the west it had many fine plains. In some of these the Canaanites had dwelt; and the expedition marked here was for the purpose of finally expelling them. But probably this is a recapitulation of what is related, Josh. x. 36, xi. 21, xv. 13.

Verse 16. The city of palm-trees] This seems to have been some place near Jericho, which city is expressly called the city of palm-trees, Deut. xxxiv. 8; and though destroyed by Joshua, it might have some suburbs remaining where these harmless people had taken up their residence.

The Kenites, the descendants of Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, were always attached to the Israelites: they received a lot with the tribe of Judah, and remained in the city of palm-trees during the life of Joshua; but after his death, not contented with their portion, or molested by the original inhabitants, they united with the tribe of Judah, and went with them to attack Arad. After the conquest of that country the Kenites established themselves there, and remained in it till the days of Saul, mingled with the Amalekites. When this king received a commandment from God to destroy the Amalekites, he sent a message to the Kenites to depart from among them, as God would not destroy them with the Amalekites. From them came Hemath, who was the father of the house of Rechab, 1 Chron. ii. 55, and the Rechabites, of whom we have a remarkable account, Jer. xxxv. 1, &c.

Verse 17. The city was called Hormah.] This appears to be the same transaction mentioned Num. xxi. 1, &c.

Verse 18. Judah took Gaza—and Askelon—and Ekron] There is a most remarkable variation here in the Septuagint. "But Judah did not possess Gaza, nor the coasts thereof; neither Askelon, nor the coasts thereof; neither Ekron, nor the coasts thereof; neither Azotus nor its adjacent places: and the Lord was with Judah." The whole history shows that these cities were not in the possession of the Israelites but of the Philistines; and if the Israelites did take them at this time, as the Hebrew text states, they certainly lost them in a very short time after.

Verse 19. And the Lord was with Judah, and he drave out the inhabitants of the mountain; but could not drive out the inhabitants of the valley, because they had chariots of iron.] Strange! were the iron chariots too strong for Omnipotence? The whole of this verse is improperly rendered. The first clause, The Lord was with Judah, should terminate the 18th verse, and this gives the reason for the success of this tribe: The Lord was with Judah, and therefore he slew the Canaanites that inhabited Zephath, &c., &c. Here then is a complete period: the remaining part of the verse either refers to a different time, or to the rebellion of Judah against the Lord, which caused him to withdraw his support.

Verse 21. The Jebusites dwell with the children of Benjamin] Jerusalem was situated partly in the tribe of Judah, and partly in the tribe of Benjamin, the northern part belonging to the latter tribe, the southern to the former. The Jebusites had their strongest position in the part that belonged to Benjamin, and from this place they were not wholly expelled till the days of David. What is said here of Benjamin is said of Judah, Josh. xv. 63. There must be an interchange of the names in one or other of these places.

Unto this day.] As the Jebusites dwelt in Jerusalem till the days of David, by whom they were driven out, and the author of the book of Judges states them to have been in possession of Jerusalem when he wrote; therefore this book was written before the reign of David.

Verse 22. The house of Joseph, they also went up against Beth-el] That is, the tribe of Ephraim and the half tribe of 24 And the spies saw a man come forth out of the city, and they said unto him, Shew us, we pray thee, the entrance into the city, *and we will shew thee mercy.

25 And when he shewed them the entrance into the city, they smote the city with the edge of the sword; but they let go the man and all his family.

26 And the man went into the land of the Hittites, and built a city, and called the name thereof Luz: which is the name thereof unto this day.

27 <sup>b</sup> Neither did Manasseh drive out the inhabitants of Beth-shean and her towns, nor Taanach and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Dor, and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Ibleam and her towns, nor the inhabitants of Megiddo and her towns: but the Canaanites would dwell in that land.

28 And it came to pass, when Israel was strong, that they put the Canaanites to tribute, and did not utterly drive them out.

29 <sup>c</sup> Neither did Ephraim drive out the Canaanites that dwelt in Gezer; but the Canaanites dwelt in Gezer among them.

30 Neither did Zebulun drive out the inhabitants of Kitron, nor the <sup>d</sup> inhabitants of Nahalol; but the Canaanites dwelt among them, and became tributaries.

31 <sup>e</sup> Neither did Asher drive out the inhabitants of Acccho, nor the inhabitants of Zidon, nor of Ahlab, nor of Achzib, nor of Helbah, nor of Aphik, nor of Rehob;

32 But the Asherites <sup>f</sup> dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land: for they did not drive them out.

33 <sup>g</sup> Neither did Naphtali drive out the inhabitants of Beth-she mesh, nor the inhabitants of Beth-anath; but he <sup>h</sup> dwelt among the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land: nevertheless the inhabitants of Beth-she mesh, and of Beth-anath <sup>i</sup> became tributaries unto them.

34 And the Amorites forced the children of Dan into the mountain: for they would not suffer them to come down to the valley:

35 But the Amorites would dwell in Mount Heres <sup>j</sup> in Ajalon, and in Shaalbim: yet the hand of the house of Joseph <sup>k</sup> prevailed, so that they became tributaries.

36 And the coast of the Amorites was <sup>l</sup> from <sup>m</sup> the going up to Akkrabbim, from the rock, and upward.

Manasseh, who dwelt beyond Jordan. Beth-el was not taken by Joshua, though he took Ai, which was nigh to it.

Verse 24. Shew us—the entrance into the city] Taken in whatever light we choose, the conduct of this man was execrable. He was a traitor to his country, and he was accessory to the destruction of the lives and property of his fellow-citizens, which he most sinfully betrayed in order to save his own. According to the rules and laws of war, the children of Judah might avail themselves of such men and their information; but this does not lessen, on the side of this traitor, the turpitude of the action.

Verse 26. The land of the Hittites] Probably some place beyond the land of Canaan, in Arabia, whither this people emigrated when expelled by Joshua. The man himself appears to have been a Hittite, and to perpetuate the name of his city he called the new one which he now founded Luz, this being the ancient name of Beth-el.

Verse 27. Beth-shean] Called by the Septuagint Scythopolis, or the city of the Scythians.

Verse 31. Acccho] Supposed to be the city of Ptolemais, near to Mount Carmel.

Verse 34. The Amorites forced the children of Dan, &c.] Just as the ancient Britons were driven into the mountains of Wales by the Romans; and the native Indians driven back into the woods by the British settlers in America.

Verse 35. The Amorites would dwell in Mount Heres] They perhaps agreed to dwell in the mountainous country, being unable to maintain themselves on the plain, and yet were so powerful that the Danites could not totally expel them; they were, however, laid under tribute, and thus the house of Joseph had the sovereignty.

Verse 36. Akrabbim] Of scorpions; probably so called from the number of those animals in that place.

From the rock, and upward.] The Vulgate understand by a rock, the city Petra, which was the capital of Arabia Petraea.

The whole of this chapter appears to be designed as a sort of supplement to those places in the Book of Joshua, which are referred to in the notes and in the margin; nor is there anything in it worthy of especial remark.

CHAPTER II.

An angel comes to the Israelites at Bochim, and gives them various reproofs, at which they are greatly affected, 1-5. They served the Lord during the days of Joshua, and the elders who succeeded him, 6, 7. Joshua having died, and all that generation, the people revolted from the true God and served idols, 8-13. The Lord, being angry, delivered them into the hands of spoilers, and they were greatly distressed, 14, 15. A general account of the method which God used to reclaim them, by sending them judges whom they frequently disobeyed, 16-19. Therefore God left the various nations of the land to plague and punish them, 20-23.

AND an <sup>a</sup> angel of the LORD came up from Gilgal <sup>b</sup> to Bochim, and said, I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I swore unto your

Verse 1. An angel of the Lord] This chapter, and the first eight verses of the next, may be considered as an epitome of the whole book, in which we see on one hand, the crimes of the Israelites; and on the other the punishments inflicted on them by the Lord; their repentance, and fathers: and <sup>c</sup> I said, I will never break my covenant with you.

2 And <sup>d</sup> ye shall make no league with the inhabitants of this land; <sup>e</sup> ye shall throw down their return to their allegiance; and the long-suffering and mercy of God, shown in pardoning their backslidings, and delivering them out of the hands of their enemies.

The angel of the Lord mentioned here, is variously interpreted; some think it was Phinehas, the high-priest, which altars: *but ye have not obeyed my voice: why have ye done this?

3 Wherefore I also said, I will not drive them out from before you; but they shall be <sup>b</sup>as thorns in your sides, and <sup>c</sup>their gods shall be a <sup>d</sup>snare unto you.

4 And it came to pass, when the angel of the LORD spake these words unto all the children of Israel, that the people lifted up their voice, and wept.

5 And they called the name of that place <sup>e</sup>Bochim: and they sacrificed there unto the LORD.

6 And when <sup>f</sup>Joshua had let the people go, the children of Israel went every man unto his inheritance to possess the land.

7 <sup>g</sup>And the people served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders that <sup>h</sup>out-lived Joshua, who had seen all the great works of the LORD, that he did for Israel.

8 And <sup>i</sup>Joshua, the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died, <sup>j</sup>being an hundred and ten years old.

9 <sup>k</sup>And they buried him in the border of his inheritance in <sup>l</sup>Timnath-heres, in the mount of Ephraim, on the north side of the hill Gaash.

10 And also all that generation were gathered unto their fathers: and there arose another generation after them, which <sup>m</sup>knew not the LORD nor yet the works which he had done for Israel.

11 And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD, and served Baalim:

12 And they <sup>n</sup>forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them out of the land of Egypt, and followed <sup>o</sup>other gods, of the gods of the people that <sup>p</sup>were round about them, and <sup>q</sup>bowed themselves unto them, and provoked the LORD to anger.

13 And they forsook the LORD, <sup>r</sup>and served Baal and Ashtaroth.

14 <sup>s</sup>And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel, and he <sup>t</sup>delivered them into the hands of spoilers that spoiled them, and <sup>u</sup>he sold them into the hands of their enemies round about, so that they <sup>v</sup>could not any longer stand before their enemies.

15 Whithersoever they went out, the hand of the LORD was against them for evil, as the LORD had said, and <sup>w</sup>as the LORD had sworn unto them: and they were greatly distressed.

16 Nevertheless <sup>x</sup>the LORD raised up judges, which <sup>y</sup>delivered them out of the hand of those that spoiled them.

17 And yet they would not hearken unto their judges, but they <sup>z</sup>went a whoring after other gods, and bowed themselves unto them: they turned quickly out of the way which their fathers walked in, obeying the commandments of the LORD; but they did not so.

18 And when the LORD raised them up judges, then <sup>aa</sup>the LORD was with the judge, and delivered them out of the hand of their enemies all the days of the judge: <sup>ab</sup>for it repented the LORD because of their groanings, by reason of them that oppressed them and vexed them.

is possible; others, that it was a prophet, sent to the place where they were now assembled with an extraordinary commission from God, to reprove them for their sins, and to show them the reason why God had not rooted out their enemies from the land; this is the opinion of the Chaldee paraphrast, consequently of the ancient Jews; others think that an angel, properly such, is intended; and several are of opinion that it was the Angel of the Covenant, the Captain of the Lord's host, which had appeared unto Joshua, chap. v. 14, and no less than the Lord Jesus Christ himself. I think it more probable that some extraordinary human messenger is meant, as such messengers, and indeed prophets, apostles, &c., are frequently termed angels, that is, messengers of the Lord. The person here mentioned appears to have been a resident at Gilgal, and to have come to Bochim on this express errand. [The best authorities favour the view that the angel was no other than the Lord. In simple historical narrative no prophet or messenger is ever called Malach Jehova.]

I will never break my covenant] Nor did God ever break it. A covenant is never broken but by him who violates the conditions of it: when any of the contracting parties violates any of the conditions, the covenant is then broken, and by that party alone; and the conditions on the other side are null and void.

Verse 8. I will not drive them out from before you] Their transgressions, and breach of the covenant, were the reasons why they were not put in entire possession of the promised land.

Verse 5. They called the name of that place Bochim] The word bochim signifies weepings or lamentations; and it is supposed that the place derived its name from these lamentations of the people. Some think the place itself, where the people were now assembled, was Shiloh, now named Bochim, because of the above circumstance. [This is improbable.] It should be observed, that the angel speaks here in the person of God, by whom he was sent; as the prophets frequently do.

Verse 6. When Joshua had let the people go] The author of this book is giving here a history of the people from the division of the land by Joshua to the time in which the angel speaks.

Verse 11. Served Baalim] The word baalim signifies lords. Their false gods they considered supernatural rulers or governors, each having his peculiar district and office; but when they wished to express a particular baal, they generally added some particular epithet, as Baal-zephon, Baal-peor, Baal-zebub, Baal-shamayim, &c., as Calmet has well observed. The two former were adored by the Moabites; Baal-zebub, by the Ephraimites. Baal-berith was honoured at Shechem; and Baal-shamayim, the lord or ruler of the heavens, was adored among the Phœnicians, Syrians, Chaldeans, &c. And whenever the word baal is used without an epithet, this is the god that is intended; and probably, among all these people, it meant the sun.

Verse 12. Which brought them out of the land of Egypt] This was one of the highest aggravations of their offence; they forsook the God who brought them out of Egypt; a place in which they endured the most grievous oppression, and from which they never could have rescued themselves; and they were delivered by such a signal display of the power, justice, and mercy of God, as should never have been forgotten, because the most stupendous that had ever been exhibited.

Verse 13. Served Baal and Ashtaroth.] In a general way, probably, Baal and Ashtaroth mean the sun and moon; but in many cases Ashtaroth seems to have been the same among the Canaanites as Venus was among the Greeks and Romans, and to have been worshipped with the same obscene rites.

Verse 14. The hands of spoilers] Probably marauding parties of the Canaanites, making frequent incursions in their lands, carrying away cattle, spoiling their crops, &c.

Verse 15. The hand of the Lord was against them] They not only had not God with them but they had God against them.

Verse 16. The Lord raised up judges] That is, leaders, generals, and governors, raised up by an especial appointment of the Lord, to deliver them from, and avenge them on, their adversaries.

Verse 17. Went a whoring after other gods] Idolatry, or 19 And it came to pass, <sup>a</sup>when the judge was dead, that they returned, and <sup>b</sup>corrupted themselves more than their fathers, in following other gods to serve them, and to bow down unto them; they <sup>c</sup>ceased not from their own doings, nor from their stubborn way.

20 <sup>d</sup>And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel: and he said, Because that this people hath <sup>e</sup>transgressed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened unto my voice; the worship of strange gods, is frequently termed adultery, fornication, whoredom, in the sacred writings. As many of their idolatrous practices were accompanied with impure rites, the term was not only metaphorically but literally proper.

Verse 18. The Lord was with the judge] God himself was king, and the judge was his representative.

It repented the Lord] He changed his purpose towards them; he purposed to destroy them because of their sin; they repented and turned to him, and he changed this purpose.

Verse 19. When the judge was dead] It appears that in general the office of the judge was for life.

Their stubborn way] Their hard or difficult way. Most sinners go through great tribulation, in order to get to eternal perdition; they would have had less pain in their way to heaven.

Verse 20. The anger of the Lord was hot] They were as fuel by their transgressions; and the displeasure of the Lord was as a fire about to kindle and consume that fuel.

21 <sup>f</sup>I also will not henceforth drive out any from before them of the nations which Joshua left when he died:

22 <sup>g</sup>That through them I may <sup>h</sup>prove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD to walk therein, as their fathers did keep it, or not.

23 Therefore the LORD <sup>i</sup>left those nations, without driving them out hastily; neither delivered he them into the hand of Joshua.

Verse 21. I will not henceforth drive out] As a people, they never had personal courage, discipline, or valour, sufficient to stand before their enemies; the advantages they gained were by the peculiar interference of God.

Verse 22. That through them I may prove Israel] There appeared to be no other way to induce this people to acknowledge the true God, but by permitting them to fall into straits from which they could not be delivered but by his especial providence. These words are spoken after the manner of men; and the metaphor is taken from the case of a master or father, who distrusts the fidelity or obedience of his servant or son, and places him in such circumstances that, by his good or evil conduct, he may justify his suspicions, or give him proofs of his fidelity.

Verse 23. Without driving them out hastily] Had God expelled all the ancient inhabitants at once, we plainly see, from the subsequent conduct of the people, that they would soon have abandoned his worship, and in their prosperity forgotten their deliverer.

CHAPTER III.

An account of the nations that were left to prove Israel, 1-4. How the people provoked the Lord, 5-7. They are delivered into the power of the king of Mesopotamia, by whom they are enslaved eight years, 8. Othniel is raised up as their deliverer; he discomfits the king of Mesopotamia, delivers Israel, and the land enjoys peace for forty years, 9-11. They again rebel, and are delivered into the hand of the king of Moab, by whom they are enslaved eighteen years, 12-14. They are delivered by Ehud, who kills Eglon king of Moab, and slays ten thousand Moabites, and the land rests fourscore years, 15-30.

NOW these are <sup>a</sup>the nations which the LORD left, to prove Israel by them, even as many of Israel as had not known all the wars of Canaan:

2 Only that the generations of the children of Israel might know, to teach them war, at the least such as before knew nothing thereof;

3 Namely, <sup>b</sup>five lords of the Philistines, and all the Canaanites, and the Sidonians, and the Hivites that dwelt in Mount Lebanon, from Mount Bala-hermon unto the entering in of Hamath.

4 <sup>c</sup>And they were to prove Israel by them, to

Verse 1. Now these are the nations] Those who were left to be proved were those Israelites that had not seen all the wars of Canaan.

Verse 2. That—Israel might know, to teach them war] This was another reason why the Canaanites were left in the land, that the Israelites might not forget military discipline, but habituate themselves to the use of arms. Had they been faithful to God, they would have had no need of learning the art of war; but now arms became a sort of necessary substitute for that spiritual strength which had departed from them. Thus God in his judgments leaves one iniquitous nation to harass and torment another. Were all to turn to God, men need learn war no more.

know whether they would hearken unto the commandments of the LORD, which he commanded their fathers by the hand of Moses.

5 <sup>d</sup>And the children of Israel dwelt among the Canaanites, Hittites, and Amorites, and Perizzites, and Hivites, and Jebusites;

6 And <sup>e</sup>they took their daughters to be their wives, and gave their daughters to their sons, and served their gods.

7 <sup>f</sup>And the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD, and forgot the LORD their God, <sup>g</sup>and served Baalim and <sup>h</sup>the groves.

Verse 4. To know whether they would hearken] This would be the consequence of the Canaanites being left among them; if they should be faithful to God, their enemies would not be able to enslave them; should they be rebellious, the Lord would abandon them to their foes.

Verse 6. And they took their daughters] They formed matrimonial alliances with those proscribed nations, served their idols, and thus became one with them in politics and religion.

Verse 7. Served Baalim and the groves] No groves were ever worshipped, but the deities who were supposed to be resident in them; and in many cases temples and altars were built in groves, and the superstition of consecrating groves

8 Therefore the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel, and he sold them into the hand of Chushan-rishathaim king of Mesopotamia: and the children of Israel served Chushan-rishathaim eight years.

9 And when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD, the LORD raised up a deliverer to the children of Israel, who delivered them, even Othniel the son of Kenaz, Caleb's younger brother.

10 And the Spirit of the LORD came upon him, and he judged Israel, and went out to war: and the LORD delivered Chushan-rishathaim king of Mesopotamia into his hand; and his hand prevailed against Chushan-rishathaim.

11 And the land had rest forty years. And Othniel the son of Kenaz died.

12 And the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the LORD: and the LORD strengthened Eglon the king of Moab against Israel, because they had done evil in the sight of the LORD.

13 And he gathered unto him the children of Ammon and Amalek, and went and smote Israel, and possessed the city of palm-trees.

and woods to the honour of the deities was a practice very usual with the ancients.

Verse 8. King of Mesopotamia] King of Aram naharayim, "Syria of the two rivers;" translated Mesopotamia by the Septuagint and Vulgate. It was situated between the Tigris and Euphrates.

Served Chushan—eight years.] He overran their country, and forced them to pay a very heavy tribute.

Verse 9. Raised up—Othniel, the son of Kenaz] This noble Hebrew was of the tribe of Judah, and nephew and son-in-law to Caleb, whose praise stands without abatement in the sacred records. Othniel had already signalized his valour in taking Kirjath-sepher, which appears to have been a very hazardous exploit. By his natural valour, experience in war, and the peculiar influence of the Divine Spirit, he was well qualified to inspire his countrymen with courage, and to lead them successfully against their oppressors.

Verse 10. His hand prevailed.] "We are not told of what nature this war was, but it was most decisive; and the consequence was an undisturbed peace of forty years, during the whole life of Othniel. As he was judge, and had many offices to fulfil besides that of a general, he had need of the Spirit of God, in the proper sense of the word, to enable him to guide and govern this most refractory and fickle people; and his receiving it for these purposes, shows that the political state of the Jews was still a theocracy. No man attempted to do any thing in that state without the immediate inspiration of God, the pretension to which was always justified by the event. [It does not follow that Othniel lived through the forty years of rest.]

Verse 12. The children of Israel did evil.] They forgot the Lord and became idolaters, and God made those very people, whom they had imitated in their idolatrous worship, the means of their chastisement.

The Lord strengthened Eglon the king of Moab] The success he had against the Israelites was by the especial appointment and energy of God.

Eglon is supposed to have been the immediate successor of Balak. Some great men have borne names which, when reduced to their grammatical meaning, appear very ridiculous: the word Eglon signifies a little calf!

Verse 13. The city of palm-trees.] This the Targum renders the city of Jericho; but Jericho had been destroyed by Joshua, and certainly was not rebuilt till the reign of Ahab, long after this, 1 Kings xvi. 34. However, as Jericho is expressly called the city of palm-trees, Deut. xxxiv. 8, the city in question must have been in the vicinity or plain of Jericho, and the king of Moab had seized it as a frontier town, contiguous to his own estates. [The city of Jericho had certainly been rebuilt, but not as a fortress.]

14 So the children of Israel served Eglon the king of Moab eighteen years.

15 But when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD, the LORD raised them up a deliverer, Ehud the son of Gera, a Benjamite, a man left-handed: and by him the children of Israel sent a present unto Eglon the king of Moab.

16 But Ehud made him a dagger which had two edges, of a cubit length; and he did gird it under his raiment upon his right thigh.

17 And he brought the present unto Eglon king of Moab: and Eglon was a very fat man.

18 And when he had made an end to offer the present, he sent away the people that bare the present.

19 But he himself turned again from the quarries that were by Gilgal, and said, I have a secret errand unto thee, O king; who said, Keep silence. And all that stood by him went out from him.

20 And Ehud came unto him; and he was sitting in a summer parlour, which he had for himself alone. And Ehud said, I have a message from God unto thee. And he arose out of his seat.

[1 Sam. xii. 9.—Ch. v. 14.—Ch. i. 16.—Deut. xxviii. 40.—Ver. 9. Ps. lxxviii. 34.—Or, the son of Geraim.—Heb. shut of his right hand. Ch. x. 18. 1 Chron. xii. 2.—Josh. iv. 20.—Or, graven images.—Heb. a parlour of cooling. See Amos iii. 15.]

Verse 15. Ehud the son of Gera—a man left-handed] A man lame in his right hand, and therefore obliged to use his left. Sent a present unto Eglon] This is generally understood to be the tribute money which the king of Moab had imposed on the Israelites.

Verse 16. A dagger which had two edges, of a cubit length] The word which we translate cubit, is of very doubtful signification. As the root seems to signify contracted, it probably means an instrument made for the purpose shorter than usual, and something like the Italian stiletto.

Verse 18. Made an end to offer the present] Presents, tribute, &c., in the eastern countries were offered with very great ceremony; and to make the more parade several persons, ordinarily slaves, sumptuously dressed, and in considerable number, were employed to carry what would not be a burden even to one. This appears to have been the case in the present instance.

Verse 19. He turned—from the quarries] Some of the Versions understand this word as meaning idols or graven images, or some spot where the Moabites had a place of idolatrous worship. As pascal signifies to cut, hew, or engrave, it may be applied to the images thus cut, or to the place or quarry whence they were digged: but it is most likely that idols are meant. Some think that trenches are meant, and that pesilim here may mean the boundaries of the two countries; and when Ehud had got thus far, he sent away the people that were with him, under pretence of having a secret message to Eglon, and so got rid of his attendants, in presence of whom he could not have executed his scheme, nor could have secured his escape afterwards. [Stone-quarries is the better rendering.]

Verse 20. He was sitting in a summer parlour] This was a chamber, with some contrivance to mitigate the heat, which was the more necessary, as he appears to have kept his court at Jericho, ver. 13, 28, where the heat is so excessive as sometimes to prove fatal. [The "room of cooling" was placed upon the flat roof of the house, which was open to currents of air.]

I have a message from God unto thee] A word of the gods to me, unto thee. It is very likely that the word elohim is used here to signify idols. Ehud, having gone so far as this place of idolatry, might feign he had there been worshipping, and that the pesilim had inspired him with a message for the king; and this was the reason why the king commanded silence, why every man went out, and why he rose from his seat or throne, that he might receive it with the 21 And Ehud put forth his left hand, and took the dagger from his right thigh, and thrust it into his belly.

22 And the haft also went in after the blade: and the fat closed upon the blade, so that he could not draw the dagger out of his belly; and the dirt came out.

23 Then Ehud went forth through the porch, and shut the doors of the parlour upon him, and locked them.

24 When he was gone out, his servants came; and when they saw that, behold, the doors of the parlour were locked, they said, Surely he covereth his feet in his summer chamber.

25 And they tarried till they were ashamed: and, behold, he opened not the doors of the parlour; therefore they took a key, and opened them: and, behold, their lord was fallen down dead on the earth.

26 And Ehud escaped while they tarried, and greater respect. This, being an idolater, he would not have done to any message coming from the God of Israel. [It is very unlikely that Ehud used the word Elohim in any other sense than that of God.]

Verse 22. The haft also went in after the blade] As the instrument was very short, and Eglon very corpulent, this might readily take place.

And the dirt came out.] This is variously understood: either the contents of the bowels issued through the wound, or he had an evacuation in the natural way through the fright and anguish.

Verse 24. He covereth his feet] He has lain down on his sofa in order to sleep; when this was done they dropped their slippers, lifted up their feet, and covered them with their long loose garments. But the Versions, in general, seem to understand it as implying a certain natural act.

Verse 26. Passed beyond the quarries] Beyond the Pesilim, which appear to have been the Moabish borders, where they had set up those hewn stones as landmarks, or sacred boundary stones. [But see above on ver. 19.]

Verse 28. Took the fords of Jordan] It is very likely that the Moabites, who were on the western side of Jordan, hearing of the death of Eglon, were panic-struck, and endeavoured to escape over Jordan at the fords near Jericho, when Ehud blew his trumpet in the mountains of Ephraim, and thus to get into the land of the Moabites, which lay on the east of Jordan; but Ehud and his men, seizing the only pass by which they could make their escape, slew ten thousand of them in their attempt to cross at those fords.

Verse 29. All lusty, and all men of valour] Picked, chosen troops, which Eglon kept among the Israelites, to reduce and overawe them.

Verse 30. The land had rest fourscore years.] This is usually reckoned from the deliverance under Othniel, that being a term from which they dated every transaction, as in other cases they dated from the exodus, from the building of Solomon's temple, &c.; and as other nations did from particular events: the ROMANS, from the building of the city; the MOHAMMEDANS, from the Hijrah, or flight of Mohammed to Medina; the CHRISTIANS, from the birth of Christ, &c., &c.

Verse 31. Slew—six hundred men with an ox-goad] This instrument is differently understood by the Versions: the Vulgate has plough-share, a dreadful weapon in the hand of a man endowed with so much strength; the Septuagint has plough-share of the oxen; the Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic understand it of the goad, as does our translation.

It appears that Shamgar was merely a labouring man; that the Philistines were making an inroad on the Israelites passed beyond the quarries and escaped unto Seirath.

27 And it came to pass, when he was come, that he blew a trumpet in the mountain of Ephraim, and the children of Israel went down with him, from the mount, and he before them.

28 And he said unto them, Follow after me: for the Lord hath delivered your enemies the Moabites into your hand. And they went down after him, and took the fords of Jordan toward Moab, and suffered not a man to pass over.

29 And they slew of Moab at that time about ten thousand men, all lusty, and all men of valour; and there escaped not a man.

30 So Moab was subdued that day under the hand of Israel. And the land had rest fourscore years.

31 And after him was Shamgar the son of Anath, which slew of the Philistines six hundred men with an ox goad: and he also delivered Israel.

19, 22. It seems to concern only the country next to the Philistines. — 1 Sam. xvii. 47, 50. — Ch. ii. 16. — So part is called Israel. Ch. iv. 1, 3, &c. x. 7, 17. xi. 4, &c. 1 Sam. iv. 1.

when the latter were cultivating their fields; that Shamgar and his neighbours successfully resisted them; that they armed themselves with their more portable agricultural instruments; and that Shamgar, either with a plough-share or an ox-goad, slew six hundred of those marauders.

The case of Ehud killing Eglon is a very serious one; and how far he was justified in this action is with all a question of importance, and with not a few a question of difficulty. "Is it right to slay a tyrant?" I, without hesitation, answer, No individual has a right to slay any man, except it be in his own defence, when a person attacks him in order to take away his life. "But may not any of his oppressed subjects put an end to the life of a tyrant?" No. The state alone can judge whether a king is ruling contrary to the laws and constitution of that state; and if that state have provided laws for the punishment of a ruler who is endeavouring to destroy or subvert that constitution, then let him be dealt with according to those laws. But no individual or number of individuals in that state has any right to dispose of the life of the ruler but according to law. To take his life in any other way is no less than murder. It is true God, the author of life and the judge of all men, may commission one man to take away the life of a tyrant. But the pretension to such a commission must be strong, clear, and unequivocal; in short, if a man think he have such a commission, to be safe, he should require the Lord to give him as full an evidence of it as he did to Moses; and when such a person comes to the people, they should require him to give as many proofs of his divine call as the Hebrews did Moses, before they should credit his pretensions. "But had not Ehud a divine call?" I cannot tell. If he had, he did not murder Eglon; if he had not, his act, however it succeeded, was a murderous act; and if he had no message from God (and there is no proof that he had), then he was a most base and hypocritical assassin.

The life of any ruler can only be at the disposal of the constitution, or that system of rules, laws, and regulations, by which the people he rules should be governed; if he rule not according to these, he is, ipso facto, deposed from his government. If he break the constitution, to the great injury or ruin of his subjects, then he is to be judged by those laws according to which he must have pledged himself to govern. If a king be deposed on any other account, it is rebellion. If his life be taken away by any means but those provided by the constitution, it is murder. No pretended or proved tyranny can justify his being taken off in any other way, or on any other account. And what constitution in the civilized world provides for the death of the supreme magistrate?

CHAPTER IV.

The Israelites again rebel against God, and they are delivered into the hands of Jabin, king of Canaan, 1, 2. They cry unto God, and he raises up Deborah and Barak to deliver them, 3-10. Some account of Heber the Kenite, 11. Barak attacks Sisera, captain of Jabin's army, at the river Kishon, and gives him a total overthrow, 12-16. Sisera leaves his chariot, and flies away on foot; enters the tent of Jael, the wife of Heber, by whom he is slain, while secreting himself in her apartment, 17-24.

AND * the children of Israel again did evil in the sight of the LORD, when Ehud was dead.

2 And the LORD <sup>b</sup> sold them into the hand of Jabin king of Canaan, that reigned in <sup>c</sup> Hazor; the captain of whose host was <sup>d</sup> Sisera, which dwelt in <sup>e</sup> Harosheth of the Gentiles.

3 And the children of Israel cried unto the LORD: for he had nine hundred <sup>f</sup> chariots of iron; and twenty years <sup>g</sup> he mightily oppressed the children of Israel.

4 And Deborah, a prophetess, the wife of Lapidoth, she judged Israel at that time.

5 <sup>h</sup> And she dwelt under the palm-tree of Deborah, between Ramah and Beth-el in Mount Ephraim: and the children of Israel came up to her for judgment.

6 And she sent and called <sup>i</sup> Barak the son of Abinoam out of Kedesh-naphtali, and said unto him, Hath not the LORD God of Israel commanded, saying, Go and draw toward Mount Tabor, and take with thee ten thousand men of the children of Naphtali and of the children of Zebulun?

7 And <sup>j</sup> I will draw unto thee, to the <sup>k</sup> river Kishon, Sisera, the captain of Jabin's army, with his chariots and his multitude; and I will deliver him into thine hand.

8 And Barak said unto her, If thou wilt go with me, then I will go: but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go.

9 And she said, I will surely go with thee: notwithstanding the journey that thou takest shall not be for thine honour; for the LORD shall <sup>l</sup> sell Sisera into the hand of a woman. And Deborah arose, and went with Barak to Kadesh.

10 And Barak called <sup>m</sup> Zebulun and Naphtali to Kadesh; and he went up with ten thousand men <sup>n</sup> at his feet: and Deborah went up with him.

11 Now Heber <sup>o</sup> the Kenite, which was of the children of <sup>p</sup> Hobab the father in law of Moses, had severed himself from the Kenites, and pitched his tent unto the plain of Zaanaïm, <sup>q</sup> which is by Kadesh.

12 And they shewed Sisera that Barak the son of Abinoam was gone up to Mount Tabor.

13 And Sisera <sup>r</sup> gathered together all his chariots, even nine hundred chariots of iron, and all the people that were with him, from Harosheth of the Gentiles unto the river of Kishon.

14 And Deborah said unto Barak, Up; for this is the day in which the LORD hath delivered Sisera into thine hand; <sup>s</sup> is not the LORD gone out before thee? So Barak went down from Mount Tabor, and ten thousand men after him.

15 And <sup>t</sup> the LORD discomfited Sisera, and all his chariots, and all his host, with the edge of the sword before Barak; so that Sisera lighted down off his chariot, and fled away on his feet.

16 But Barak pursued after the chariots, and after the host, unto Harosheth of the Gentiles: and all the host of Sisera fell upon the edge of the sword; and there was not <sup>u</sup> a man left.

17 Howbeit Sisera fled away on his feet to the tent of Jael the wife of Heber the Kenite: for there was peace between Jabin the king of Hazor and the house of Heber the Kenite.

18 And Jael went out to meet Sisera, and said

Verse 1. When Ehud was dead.] Why not when Shamgar was dead? Does this not intimate that Shamgar was not reckoned in the number of the judges?

Verse 2. Jabin king of Canaan.] Probably a descendant of the Jabin mentioned, Josh. xi. 1, &c., who had gathered together the wrecks of the army of that Jabin defeated by Joshua.

Verse 3. Nine hundred chariots of iron.] Chariots armed with iron scythes, as is generally supposed; they could not have been made all of iron, but they might have been shod with iron, or had iron scythes projecting from the axle on each side, by which infantry might be easily cut down or thrown into confusion. The ancient Britons are said to have had such chariots. [These chariots were simply tipped with iron, the use of scythes being unknown.]

Verse 4. Deborah, a prophetess.] One on whom the Spirit of God descended, and who was the instrument of conveying to the Israelites the knowledge of the divine will, in things sacred and civil.

She judged Israel.] That is, I believe, the first instance of female government on record. Deborah seems to have been supreme both in civil and religious affairs; and Lapidoth, her husband, appears to have had no hand in the government. But the original may as well be translated a woman of Lapidoth, as the wife of Lapidoth.

Verse 6. She sent and called Barak.] She appointed him to be general of the armies on this occasion; which shows that she possessed the supreme power in the state.

Mount Tabor.] This mountain is very difficult of ascent; with its grand area on the summit, it made a very proper place for the rendezvous of Barak's army. Antiochus used it for the same purpose in his wars; and Josephus appears to have fortified it; and Placidus, one of Vespasian's generals, was sent to reduce it.

Verse 9. The Lord shall sell Sisera into the hand of a woman.] Does not this mean, If I go with thee, the conquest shall be attributed to me, and thou wilt have no honour? Or, is it a prediction of the exploit of Jael? In both these senses the words have been understood. It seems, however, more likely that Jael is intended.

Verse 10. Ten thousand men at his feet.] Ten thousand footmen. He had no chariots; his army was all composed of infantry. ["At his feet," means simply, "in his train."]

Verse 14. Up; for this is the day.] She told him the precise time in which he was to make the attack: Up; for this is the day in which the Lord hath delivered Sisera into thine hand.

Went down from Mount Tabor.] He had probably encamped his men on and near the summit of this mount.

Verse 15. The Lord discomfited Sisera.] CONFOUNDED, *threw them all into confusion, drove them pell-mell—*caused chariots to break and overthrow chariots, and threw universal disorder into all their ranks. There is no doubt all this was done by a supernatural agency; God sent his angel and confounded them.

Verse 18. Jael went out to meet Sisera.] He preferred the 19 And he said unto her, Give me, I pray thee, a little water to drink; for I am thirsty. And she opened <sup>b</sup>a bottle of milk, and gave him drink, and covered him.

20 Again he said unto her, Stand in the door of the tent, and it shall be, when any man doth come and inquire of thee, and say, Is there any man here? that thou shalt say, No.

21 Then Jael Heber's wife <sup>c</sup>took a nail of the tent, and <sup>d</sup>took an hammer in her hand, and went softly unto him, and smote the nail into his temples, woman's tent because of secrecy: for, according to the etiquette of the eastern countries, no person ever intrudes into the apartments of the women. And in every dwelling the women have a separate apartment.

Verse 19. She opened a bottle of milk] She gave more than he requested; and her friendship increased his confidence and security.

Verse 20. Stand in the door of the tent] As no man would intrude into the woman's apartment without permission, her simply saying, There is no man in my tent, would preclude all search.

Verse 21. A nail of the tent] One of the spikes by which they fasten to the ground the cords which are attached to the cloth or covering.

He was fast asleep and weary.] As he lay on one side, and was overwhelmed with sleep through the heat and fatigues of the day, the piercing of his temples must have in a moment put him past resistance.

Verse 22. Behold, Sisera lay dead] What impression this made on the victorious Barak is not said; it could not give him much pleasure, especially when he learned the circumstances of his death.

Verse 24. The hand of the children of Israel prospered] It went, going—they followed up this victory, and the consequence was, they utterly destroyed Jabin and his kingdom.

It will naturally be expected that something should be said to justify the conduct of Jael; it must be owned that she slew Sisera in circumstances which cause the whole transaction to appear exceedingly questionable. They are the following:

1. There was peace between her family and the king of Canaan.

2. That peace was no doubt made with a sacrifice and an oath.

3. Sisera, knowing this, came to her tent with the utmost confidence.

4. She met him with the most friendly greetings and assurances of safety.

5. Having asked for water, to show her friendship and respect she gave him cream, and that in a vessel suitable to his dignity.

and fastened it into the ground: for he was fast asleep and weary. So he died.

22 And, behold, as Barak pursued Sisera, Jael came out to meet him, and said unto him, Come, and I will shew thee the man whom thou seekest. And when he came into her tent, behold, Sisera lay dead, and the nail was in his temples.

23 So <sup>e</sup>God subdued on that day Jabin the king of Canaan before the children of Israel.

24 And the hand of the children of Israel <sup>f</sup>prospered, and prevailed against Jabin the king of Canaan, until they had destroyed Jabin king of Canaan.

* Ps. xviii. 47.—<sup>f</sup> Heb. going, went, and was hard.

6. She put him in the secret part of her own tent, and covered him in such a way as to evidence her good faith, and to inspire him with the greater confidence.

7. She agreed to keep watch at the door, and deny his being there to any that might enquire.

8. She was bound by the rules of Asiatic hospitality to have defended his life, even at the risk of her own.

9. Notwithstanding, she took the advantage of his weariness and deep sleep, and took away his life!

10. She exulted in her deed, met Barak, and showed him in triumph what she had done.

Now do we not find in all this bad faith, deceit, deep hypocrisy, lying, breach of treaty, contempt of religious rites, breach of the laws of hospitality, deliberate and unprovoked murder? But what can be said in her justification? All that can be said, and all that has been said, is simply this: "She might have been sincere at first, but was afterwards divinely directed to do what she did." If this was so, she is sufficiently vindicated by the fact, and probably the cup of Sisera's iniquity was full, and his life already forfeited to the justice of God. But does it appear that she received any such direction from God. There is no sufficient evidence of it: it is true that Deborah, a prophetess, declares her blessed above women; and this seems to intimate that her conduct was pleasing to God. But we do not find one word from Jael herself, stating how she was led to do an act repugnant to her feelings as a woman, contrary to good faith, and a breach of the rules of hospitality. Nor does the sacred penman say one word to explain the case; as in the case of Elud, he states the fact, and leaves his readers to form their own opinion.

To say, as has been said in the case of Eglon, that "Sisera was a public enemy, and any of the people whom he oppressed might be justified in taking away his life," is a very dangerous position, as it refers one of the most solemn acts of judgment and justice to the caprice, or prejudice, or enthusiastic feeling of every individual who may persuade himself that he is not only concerned in the business, but authorized by God to take vengeance by his own hand. While justice and law are in the world, God never will, as he never did, abandon cases of this kind to the caprice, prejudice, or party feeling, of any man.

CHAPTER V.

The triumphant song of Deborah and Barak, after the defeat of Sisera, captain of the armies of Jabin, king of Canaan.

sion to the giving of the law, and the manifestation of God's power and glory at that time; and as this was the most signal display of his majesty and mercy in behalf of their forefathers, Deborah very properly begins her song with a commemoration of this transaction.

Verse 6. The highways were unoccupied] The land was full of anarchy and confusion, being every where infested with banditti. No public road was safe; and in going from place to place, the people were obliged to use unfrequented paths.

Verse 7. The villages ceased] The people were obliged to live together in fortified places; or in great numbers, to protect each other against the incursions of bands of spoilers.

Verse 8. They chose new gods] This was the cause of all their calamities; they forsook Jehovah, and served other gods; and then was war in their gates—they were hemmed up in every place, and besieged in all their fortified cities; and they were defenceless, they had no means of resisting their adversaries; for, even among forty thousand men, there was neither spear nor shield to be seen.

Verse 10. Ye that ride on white asses] Perhaps it should be rendered sleek or well-fed asses; shining asses, in the Vulgate.

Ye that sit in judgment] Some have rendered this, ye who dwell in Middin. This was a place in the tribe of Judah, and is mentioned Josh. xv. 61. [Better rendering is, "Ye who sit on carpets," i.e. the rich and prosperous.]

And walk by the way.] Persons who go from place to place for the purposes of traffic.

Verse 11. In the places of drawing water] As wells were very scarce in every part of the East, and travellers in such hot countries must have water, robbers and banditti generally took their stations near tanks, pools, and springs, in order that they might suddenly fall upon those who came to drink: and when the country was badly governed, annoyances of this kind were very frequent. Instead of such danger and insecurity, Deborah intimates that they may sit down at the places of drawing water, and there rehearse the righteous acts of the Lord; the land being now every where in peace, order and good government being restored.

Go down to the gates.] They may go down to the gates to receive judgment and justice as usual. It is well known that the gate was the place of judgment in the East.

Verse 12. Lead thy captivity captive] Make those captives who have formerly captivated us.

12 *Awake, awake, Deborah: awake, awake, utter a song: arise, Barak, and <sup>a</sup> lead thy captivity captive, thou son of Abinoam.

13 Then he made him that remaineth <sup>b</sup> have dominion over the nobles among the people: the LORD made me have dominion over the mighty.

Verse 13. Made him that remaineth] This appears to be spoken of Barak, who is represented as being only a remnant of the people.

Verse 14. Out of Ephraim—a root of them] Deborah probably means that out of Ephraim and Benjamin came eminent warriors. Joshua, who was of the tribe of Ephraim, routed the Amalekites, a short time after the Israelites came out of Egypt, Exod. xvii. 10. Ehud, who was of the tribe of Benjamin, slew Eglon, and defeated the Moabites, the friends and allies of the Ammonites and Amalekites. Machir, in the land of Gilad, produced eminent warriors: and Zebulun produced eminent statesmen, and men of literature. Probably Deborah speaks here of the past wars, and not of any thing that was done on this occasion; for we know that no persons from Gilad were present in the war between Jabin and Israel.

Verse 15. The princes of Issachar] They were at hand, and came willingly forth, at the call of Deborah, to this important war.

Barak—was sent on foot] I have no doubt that this should be translated with his footmen or infantry.

For the divisions of Reuben] Either the Reubenites were divided among themselves into factions, which prevented their co-operation with their brethren, or they were divided in their judgment concerning the measures now to be pursued which prevented them from joining with the other tribes till the business was entirely settled. [A better translation of this obscure passage is possible. Some render it: "At the brooks of Reuben were great resolutions of heart."] The thoughts of heart, and searchings of heart, might refer to the doubts and uneasiness felt by the other tribes, when they found the Reubenites did not join them; for they might have conjectured that they were either unconcerned about their liberty, or were meditating a coalition with the Canaanites.

Verse 17. Gilad abode beyond Jordan] That is, the Gadites, who had their lot in those parts, and could not well come to the aid of their brethren at a short summons. But the words of Deborah imply a criminal neglect on the part of the Danites; they were intent upon their traffic, and trusted in their ships. Joppa was one of their seaports.

Asher continued on the sea shore] The lot of Asher extended along the Mediterranean Sea; and being contiguous to Zebulun and Naphtali, they might have easily succoured their brethren; but they had the pretence that their posts were unguarded, and they abode in their breaches, in order to defend them.

Verse 18. Zebulun and Naphtali—jeopardied their lives] The original is very emphatic, they desolated their lives to death—they were determined to conquer or die, and therefore plunged into the thickest of the battle.

Verse 19. The kings came and fought] It is conjectured that Jabin and his confederates had invaded Manasseh, as both Taanach and Megiddo were in that tribe; and that they were discomfited by the tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali at Taanach and Megiddo; while Barak defeated Sisera at Mount Tabor.

They took no gain of money.] They expected much booty in the total rout of the Israelites; but they were defeated, and got no prey; or, if applied to the Israelites, They fought for liberty, not for plunder.

Verse 20. They fought from heaven] The angels of God came to the assistance of Israel: and the stars in their orbits fought against Sisera; probably some thunder storm, or great inundation from the river Kishon, took place at that time, which in poetic language was attributed to the stars.

Perhaps it means no more than this: the time which was measured and ruled by the heavenly bodies seemed only to exist for the destruction of the Canaanites. There may be also a reference to the sun and moon standing still in the days of Joshua.

Verse 21. The river of Kishon swept them away] This gives plausibility to the above conjecture, that there was a storm at this time which produced an inundation in the river Kishon, which the routed Canaanites attempting to ford were swept away.

Verse 22. Then were the horsehoofs broken] In very ancient times horses were not shod; nor are they to the present day in several parts of the East. Sisera had iron chariots when his hosts were routed; the horses that drew these, being strongly urged on by those who drove them, had their hoofs broken by the roughness of the roads: in consequence of which they became lame, and could not carry off their riders. This is marked as one cause of their disaster.

Verse 23. Curse ye Meroz] Where Meroz was is not known; some suppose it was the same as Merom, nigh to Dothan. It was certainly some city or district, the inhabitants of which would not assist in this war.

Curse ye bitterly] Curse with cursing—use the most awful execrations.

Said the angel of the LORD] That is, Barak, who was Jehovah's angel or messenger in this war; the person sent by God to deliver his people. [But see above chap. ii. 1.]

To the help of the LORD] That is, to the help of the people of the Lord.

Against the mighty.] "With the heroes;" that is, Barak and his men, together with Zebulun and Naphtali: these hand to the workmen's hammer: and * with the hammer she smote Sisera, she smote off his head, when she had pierced and stricken through his temples.

28 The mother of Sisera looked out at a window, and cried through the lattice, Why is his chariot so long in coming? why tarry the wheels of his chariots?

29 Her wise ladies answered her, yea, she returned * answer to herself,

30 * Have they not sped? have they not divided the prey; * to every man a damsel or two; to Sisera a prey of divers colours, a prey of divers colours of needlework, of divers colours of needlework on both sides, meet for the necks of them that take the spoil?

31 * So let all thine enemies perish, O LORD: but let them that love him be * as the sun * when he goeth forth in his might. And the land had rest forty years.

were the mighty men, or heroes, with whom the inhabitants of Meroz would not join.

Verse 24. Blessed above women shall Jael—be] She shall be highly celebrated as a most heroic woman; all the Israelitish women shall glory in her. I do not understand these words as expressive of the divine approbation towards Jael. The word bless, both in Hebrew and Greek, often signifies to praise, to speak well of, to celebrate. This is most probably its sense here.

Verse 25. She brought forth butter] As the word chemah, here translated butter, signifies disturbed, agitated, &c., it is probable that buttermilk is intended. The Arabs form their buttermilk by agitating the milk in a leathern bag, and the buttermilk is highly esteemed because of its refreshing and cooling quality; but there is no reason why we may not suppose that Jael gave him cream: Sisera was not only thirsty, but was also exhausted with fatigue; and nothing could be better calculated to quench his thirst, and restore his exhausted strength, than a bowl of cream. It is evident that Deborah wishes to convey the idea that Jael was more liberal and kind than Sisera had requested. He asked for water, and she brought him cream; and she brought it to him, not in an ordinary pitcher, but in the most superb dish or bowl which she possessed.

Verse 26. She smote off his head] The original does not warrant this translation; nor is it supported by fact. She smote his head, and transfixed him through the temples. It was his head that received the death wound, and the place where this wound was inflicted was the temples.

Verse 27. At her feet he bowed] "Between her feet." After having stunned him she probably sat down, for the greater convenience of driving the nail through his temples.

He bowed—he fell] He probably made some struggles after he received the blow on the head, but could not recover his feet.

Verse 28. Cried through the lattice] This is very natural: in the women's apartments in the East the windows are latticed, to prevent them from sending or receiving letters, &c. The latticing is the effect of the jealousy which universally prevails in those countries.

Why is his chariot so long in coming?] Literally, Why is his chariot ashamed to come?

From this song, as well as from that of Moses, Dent. xxxii., we see that the first, as also the best, poets of antiquity were found among the Hebrews; and that the art of poetry was highly cultivated among them many hundreds of years before Greece, or any other country of the world, could boast of ode, or epic, or any kind of poetic composition. The idolizers of Greece and Italy should not forget this: to Hebrew models both Greeks and Romans owe much of their perfection. Why are not these more studied? Why do not we go to the "fountain head."

CHAPTER VI.

The Israelites again do evil, and are delivered into the hands of the Midianites, by whom they are oppressed seven years, 1, 2. Different tribes spoil their harvests, and take away their cattle, 3-5. They cry unto the Lord, and he sends them a prophet to reprehend and instruct them, 6-10. An angel appears unto Gideon, and gives him commission to deliver Israel, and works several miracles, to prove that he is divinely appointed to this work, 11-23. Gideon builds an altar to the Lord, under the name of Jehovah-Shalom; and throws down the altar of Baal, 24-27. His townsmen conspire against him; he expostulates with them, and they are pacified, 28-32. The Midianites and Amalekites gather together against Israel; Gideon summons Manasseh, Asher, Zebulun, and Naphtali, who join his standard, 33-35. The miracle of the fleece of wool, 36-40.

AND <sup>a</sup>the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the LORD: and the LORD delivered them into the hand <sup>b</sup>of Midian seven years.

2 And the hand of Midian <sup>c</sup>prevailed against Israel: and because of the Midianites the children of Israel made them <sup>d</sup>the dens which are in the mountains, and caves, and strong holds.

3 And so it was, when Israel had sown, that the Midianites came up, and <sup>e</sup>the Amalekites, <sup>f</sup>and the children of the East, even they came up against them;

4 And they encamped against them, and <sup>g</sup>destroyed the increase of the earth, till thou come unto Gaza, and left no sustenance for Israel, neither <sup>h</sup>sheep, nor ox, nor ass.

5 For they came up with their cattle and their tents, and they came <sup>i</sup>as grasshoppers for multitude; for both they and their camels were without number: and they entered into the land to destroy it.

6 And Israel was greatly impoverished because of the Midianites; and the children of Israel <sup>j</sup>cried unto the LORD.

Verse 1. Delivered them into the hand of Midian] The Midianites were among the most ancient and inveterate of the enemies of Israel. They joined with the Moabites to seduce them to idolatry, and were nearly extirpated by them: Num. xxxi. The Midianites dwelt on the eastern borders of the Dead Sea, and their capital was Arnon.

Verse 2. Made them the dens which are in the mountains] Nothing can give a more distressing description of the state of the Israelites than what is here related. They durst not reside in the plain country, but were obliged to betake themselves to dens and caves of the mountains, and live like wild beasts, and were hunted like them by their adversaries.

Verse 3. Children of the East] Probably those who inhabited Arabia Deserta, Ishmaelites.

Verse 4. Encamped against them] Wandering hordes of Midianites, Amalekites, and Ishmaelites came in the times of harvest, and autumn, and carried away their crops, their fruit, and their cattle. And they appear to have come early, encamped in the plains, and watched the crops till they were ready to be carried off. This is frequently the case even to the present day.

Till thou come unto Gaza] That is, the whole breadth of the land, from Jordan to the coast of the Mediterranean Sea. Thus the whole land was ravaged, and the inhabitants deprived of the necessities of life.

Verse 5. They came up with their cattle and their tents] All this proves that they were different tribes of wanderers, who had no fixed residence; but, like their descendants the Bedouins or wandering Arabs, removed from place to place to get prey for themselves and forage for their cattle.

Verse 6. The Lord sent a prophet] The Jews say that this was Phinehas; but it is more likely that it was some prophet or teacher raised up by the Lord to warn and instruct them.

Verse 11. There came an angel of the Lord] The prophet came to teach and exhort; the angel comes to confirm the 7 And it came to pass, when the children of Israel cried unto the LORD because of the Midianites,

8 That the LORD sent <sup>k</sup>a prophet unto the children of Israel, which said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I brought you up from Egypt, and brought you forth out of the house of bondage;

9 And I delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all that oppressed you, and <sup>l</sup>drove them out from before you, and gave you their land;

10 And I said unto you, I am the LORD your God; <sup>m</sup>fear not the gods of the Amorites, in whose land ye dwell: but ye have not obeyed my voice.

11 And there came an angel of the LORD, and sat under an oak which was in Ophrah, that pertained unto Joash <sup>n</sup>the Abi-ezrite: and his son <sup>o</sup>Gideon threshed wheat by the winepress, <sup>p</sup>to hide it from the Midianites.

12 And the <sup>q</sup>angel of the LORD appeared unto him, and said unto him, The LORD is <sup>r</sup>with thee, thou mighty man of valour.

words of the prophet, to call and commission him who was intended to be their deliverer, and to work miracles. In order to inspire him with supernatural courage and a confidence of success.

Ophrah] Or Ephra, was a city, or village rather, in the half tribe of Manasseh, beyond Jordan.

His son Gideon threshed wheat] This is not the only instance in which a man taken from agricultural employments was made general of an army, and the deliverer of his country. Shamgar was evidently a ploughman, and with his ox-goad he slew many Philistines, and became one of the deliverers of Israel. Cincinnatus was taken from the plough, and was made dictator and commander-in-chief of the Roman armies. There is a great similarity between his case and that of Gideon.

Threshed wheat by the wine-press] This was a place of privacy; he could not make a threshing-floor in open day as the custom was, and bring either the wheel over the grain, or tread it out with the feet of the oxen, for fear of the Midianites, who were accustomed to come and take it away as soon as threshed. He got a few sheaves from the field, and brought them home to have them privately threshed [or "knocked out" with a stick] for the support of the family. As there could be no vintage among the Israelites in their present distressed circumstances, the winepress would never be suspected by the Midianites to be the place of threshing corn.

Verse 12. The Lord is with thee] It appears that Gideon had proved himself, on former occasions, to be a man of courage and personal prowess; and this would naturally excite the confidence of his countrymen. God chooses for his work those instruments which, in the course of his operations in nature and providence, he has qualified for his purpose. The instruments thus chosen are generally unlikely, but they will ever be found the best qualified for the divine employment.

13 And Gideon said unto him, Oh my LORD, if the LORD be with us, why then is all this befallen us? and "where be all his miracles? which our fathers told us of, saying, Did not the LORD bring us up from Egypt? but now the LORD hath forsaken us, and delivered us into the hands of the Midianites.

14 And the LORD looked upon him, and said, "Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites: "have not I sent thee?

15 And he said unto him, Oh, my LORD, where-with shall I save Israel? behold, "my "family is poor in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house.

16 And the LORD said unto him, "Surely I will be with thee, and thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man.

17 And he said unto him, If now I have found grace in thy sight, then "shew me a sign that thou talkest with me.

18 "Depart not hence, I pray thee, until I come unto thee, and bring forth my "present, and set it before thee. And he said, I will tarry till thou come again.

19 "And Gideon went in, and made ready "a kid, and unleavened cakes of an ophah of flour: the flesh he put in a basket, and he put the broth in a pot, and brought it out unto him under the oak, and presented it.

20 And the angel of the LORD said unto him, Take the flesh and the unleavened cakes, and "lay them upon this rock, and "pour out the broth. And he did so.

21 Then the angel of the LORD put forth the end of the staff that was in his hand, and touched the flesh and the unleavened cakes; and "there rose up fire out of the rock, and consumed the flesh and the unleavened cakes. Then the angel of the LORD departed out of his sight.

22 And when Gideon perceived that he was an angel of the LORD, Gideon said, Alas, O LORD God! "for because I have seen an angel of the LORD face to face.

23 And the LORD said unto him, "Peace be unto thee; fear not: thou shalt not die.

24 Then Gideon built an altar there unto the LORD, and called it "Jehovah-shalom: unto this day it is yet "in Ophrah of the Abi-ezrites.

25 And it came to pass the same night, that the Verse 13. And Gideon said unto him] This speech is remarkable for its energy and simplicity; it shows indeed a measure of despondency, but not more than the circumstances of the case justified.

Verse 14. Go in this thy might] What does the angel mean? He had just stated that Jehovah was with him; and he now says, Go in this thy might, i.e. in the might of Jehovah, who is with thee.

Verse 15. Wherewith shall I save Israel?] I have neither men nor money.

Behold, my family is poor in Manasseh] Behold, my thousand is impoverished. Tribes were anciently divided into tens, and fifties, and hundreds, and thousands; the thousands therefore marked grand divisions, and consequently numerous families; Gideon here intimates that the families of which he made a part were very much diminished. But if we take alpey for the contracted form of the plural, which is frequently in Hebrew nouns joined with a verb in the singular, then the translation will be, "The thousands in Manasseh are thinned;" i.e. this tribe is greatly reduced, and can do little against their enemies.

Verse 16. Thou shalt smite the Midianites as one man.] Thou shalt as surely conquer all their host as if thou hadst but one man to contend with; or, Thou shalt destroy them to a man.

Verse 17. Shew me a sign] Work a miracle, that I may know that thou hast wisdom and power sufficient to authorize and qualify me for the work.

Verse 18. And bring forth my present] My minchah; generally an offering of bread, wine, oil, flour, and such like. It seems from this that Gideon supposed the person to whom he spoke to be a divine person. Nevertheless, what he prepared and brought out appears to be intended simply as an entertainment to refresh a respectable stranger.

Verse 19. Make ready a kid—the flesh he put in a basket, and he put the broth in a pot] May we not suppose that Gideon, presenting some slight refreshment to the supposed prophet, according to the present Arab mode, desired him to stay till he could provide something more substantial; that he immediately killed a kid, seethed part of it, and when ready brought out the stewed meat in a pot, with unleavened cakes of bread which he had baked; and the other part, the kab-ab, in a basket, for him to carry with him for some after-repast in his journey?

Brought it out unto him under the oak] Probably where he had a tent, which, with the shade of the oak, sheltered them from the heat of the sun, and yet afforded the privilege of the refreshing breeze. Under a shade in the open air, the Arabs to the present day are accustomed to receive their guests.

Verse 20. Take the flesh, &c.] The angel intended to make the flesh and bread an offering to God, and the broth a libation.

Verse 21. The angel—put forth the end of the staff] He appeared like a traveller, with a staff in his hand: this he put forth, and having touched the flesh, fire rose out of the rock and consumed it. Here was the most evident proof of supernatural agency.

Then the angel—departed out of his sight.] Though the angel vanished out of his sight, yet God continued to converse with him either by secret inspiration in his own heart, or by an audible voice.

Verse 22. Alas, O Lord God! for because I have seen] This is an elliptical sentence, a natural expression of the distressed state of Gideon's mind: as if he had said, Have mercy on me, O Lord God! else I shall die; because I have seen an angel of Jehovah face to face. We have frequently seen that it was a prevalent sentiment, as well before as under the law, that if any man saw God, or his representative angel, he must surely die. On this account Gideon is alarmed, and prays for his life.

Verse 23. Fear not; thou shalt not die.] Here the discovery is made by God himself: Gideon is not curiously prying into forbidden mysteries, therefore he shall not die.

Verse 24. Gideon built an altar—and called it Jehovah-shalom] The words Jehovah shalom signify The Lord is my peace, or The peace of Jehovah; and this name he gave the altar, in reference to what God had said, ver. 23, Peace be unto thee, shalom lecha, "Peace to thee;" which implied, not only a wish, but a prediction of the prosperous issue of the enterprise in which he was about to engage. It is likely that this is the altar which is mentioned in verse 26, and is spoken of here merely by anticipation.

Verse 25. Take thy father's young bullock, even the second bullock] There is some difficulty in this verse, for, according to the Hebrew text, two bullocks are mentioned here; but there is only one mentioned in verses 26 and 28. But what was this second bullock? Some think that it was a bullock that was fattened in order to be offered in sacrifice to Baal. This is very probable, as the second bullock is so particularly distinguished from another which belonged to Gideon's father. As the altar was built upon the ground of Joash, yet appears to have been public property (see verses 29, 30), so this second ox was probably reared and fattened at the expense

LORD said unto him, Take thy father's young bullock, * even the second bullock of seven years old, and throw down the altar of Baal that thy father hath, and <sup>b</sup> cut down the grove that is by it:

26 And build an altar unto the LORD thy God upon the top of this <sup>c</sup> rock <sup>d</sup> in the ordered place, and take the second bullock, and offer a burnt-sacrifice with the wood of the grove which thou shalt cut down.

27 Then Gideon took ten men of his servants, and did as the LORD had said unto him: and so it was, because he feared his father's household, and the men of the city, that he could not do it by day, that he did it by night.

28 And when the men of the city arose early in the morning, behold, the altar of Baal was cast down, and the grove was cut down that was by it, and the second bullock was offered upon the altar that was built.

29 And they said one to another, Who hath done this thing? And when they inquired and asked, they said, Gideon the son of Joash hath done this thing.

30 Then the men of the city said unto Joash, Bring out thy son, that he may die: because he hath cast down the altar of Baal, and because he hath cut down the grove that was by it.

31 And Joash said unto all that stood against him, Will ye plead for Baal? will ye save him? he that will plead for him, let him be put to death whilst it is yet morning: if he be a god, let him plead for himself, because one hath cast down his altar.

of the men of that village, else why should they so particularly resent its being offered to Jehovah? [Probably there was but one bullock, that one the second of his father's herd.]

Verse 26. With the wood of the grove] It is probable that Asherah here signifies Astarte; and that there was a wooden image of this goddess on the altar of Baal. Baal-peor was the same as Priapus, Astarte as Venus; these two impure idols were proper enough for the same altar. In early times and among rude people, the images of the gods were made of wood. [This was probably a wooden pillar.]

Verse 27. He feared his father's household] So it appears that his father was an idolater: but as Gideon had ten men of his own servants whom he could trust in this matter, it is probable that he had preserved the true faith, and had not bowed his knee to the image of Baal.

Verse 28. The second bullock was offered] It appears that the second bullock was offered, because it was just seven years old, ver. 25, being calved about the time that the Midianitish oppression began; and it was now to be slain to indicate that their slavery should end with its life.

Verse 29. Gideon the son of Joash hath done this thing.] They fixed on him the more readily because they knew he had not joined with them in their idolatrous worship.

32 Therefore on that day he called him * Jerubbaal, saying, Let Baal plead against him, because he hath thrown down his altar.

33 Then all <sup>a</sup> the Midianites and the Amalekites and the children of the east were gathered together and went over, and pitched in <sup>b</sup> the valley of Jezreel.

34 But <sup>c</sup> the Spirit of the LORD <sup>d</sup> came upon Gideon, and he <sup>e</sup> blew a trumpet; and Abi-ezer <sup>f</sup> was gathered after him.

35 And he sent messengers throughout all Manassah; who also was gathered after him: and he sent messengers unto Asher, and unto Zebulun, and unto Naphtali; and they came up to meet them.

36 And Gideon said unto God, If thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said, 37 <sup>a</sup> Behold, I will put a fleece of wool in the floor; and if the dew be on the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth beside, then shall I know that thou wilt save Israel by mine hand as thou hast said.

38 And it was so; for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl full of water.

39 And Gideon said unto God, <sup>a</sup> Let not thine anger be hot against me, and I will speak but this once: let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece; let it now be dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew.

40 And God did so that night: for it was dry upon the fleece only, and there was dew on all the ground.

Verse 30. The men of the city said] They all felt an interest in the continuance of rites in which they had often many sensual gratifications.

Verse 31. Will ye plead for Baal?] The words are very emphatic: "Will ye plead in earnest for Baal? Will ye really save him? If he be God, Elohim, let him contend for himself, seeing his altar is thrown down." Joash could not slay his son; but he was satisfied he had insulted Baal: if Baal were the true God, he would avenge his own injured honour. This was a sentiment among the heathens.

Verse 32. He called him Jerubbaal] That is, Let Baal contend; changed, 2 Sam. xi. 21, into Jerubbesheth, he shall contend against confusion or shame; thus changing baal, lord, into bosheth, confusion or ignominy.

Verse 33. Then all the Midianites] Hearing of what Gideon had done, and apprehending that this might be a forerunner of attempts to regain their liberty, they formed a general association against Israel.

Verse 34. The Spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon] He was endued with preternatural courage and wisdom.

Verse 36. If thou wilt save Israel] Gideon was very bold, and God was very condescending. But probably the request itself was suggested by the Divine Spirit.

CHAPTER VII.

The Lord commands Gideon to make a selection of a small number of his men to go against the Midianites. Three hundred only are selected; and into the hands of these God promises to deliver the whole Midianitish host, 1-8. Gideon is directed to go down unto the host in the night, that he may be encouraged on hearing what they say, 9-12. He obeys, and hears a Midianite tell a remarkable dream unto his fellow, which predicted the success of his attack, 13-15. He takes encouragement, divides his men into three companies, and gives each a trumpet with a lighted lamp concealed in a pitcher, with directions how to use them, 16-18. They come to the Midianitish camp at night, when all suddenly blowing their trumpets and exposing their lamps, the Midianites are thrown into confusion, fly, and are stopped by the Ephraimites at the passage of Jordan, and slain, 19-24. Oreb and Zeeb, two Midianitish princes, are slain, 25.

THEN <sup>a</sup> Jerubbaal, who is Gideon, and all the people that were with him, rose up early, and pitched beside the well of Harod; so that the host of the Midianites were on the north side of them, by the hill of Moreh, in the valley.

2 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people that are with thee are too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel <sup>b</sup> vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me.

3 Now therefore go to, proclaim in the ears of the people, saying, <sup>c</sup> Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return and depart early from Mount Gilead. And there returned of the people twenty and two thousand; and there remained ten thousand.

4 And the LORD said unto Gideon, The people are yet too many; bring them down unto the water, and I will try them for thee there: and it shall be, that of whom I say unto thee, This shall go with thee, the same shall go with thee; and of whomsoever I say unto thee, This shall not go with thee, the same shall not go.

5 So he brought down the people unto the water: and the LORD said unto Gideon, Every one that lappeth of the water with his tongue, as a dog lappeth, him shalt thou set by himself; likewise every one that boweth down upon his knees to drink.

6 And the number of them that lapped, putting their hand to their mouth, were three hundred men: but all the rest of the people bowed down upon their knees to drink water.

7 And the LORD said unto Gideon, <sup>d</sup> By the three hundred men that lapped will I save you, and deliver the Midianites into thine hand: and let all the other people go every man unto his place.

8 So the people took victuals in their hand, and their trumpets: and he sent all the rest of Israel every man unto his tent, and retained those three hundred men: and the host of Midian was beneath him in the valley.

9 And it came to pass the same <sup>e</sup> night, that the LORD said unto him, Arise, get thee down unto the host: for I have delivered it into thine hand.

10 But if thou fear to go down, go thou with Phurah thy servant down to the host:

11 And thou shalt hear what they say: and afterward shall thine hands be strengthened to go down unto the host. Then went he down with Phurah his servant unto the outside of the <sup>f</sup> armed men that were in the host:

12 And the Midianites and the Amalekites and <sup>g</sup> all the children of the east lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude; and their camels were without number, as the sand by the sea-side for multitude.

13 And when Gideon was come, behold, there was a man that told a dream unto his fellow, and said, Verse 1. Then Jerubbaal, who is Gideon] It appears that Jerubbaal was now a surname of Gideon, from the circumstance mentioned chap. vi. 32.

The well of Harod] If this was a town or village it is nowhere else mentioned. Probably, as charad signifies to shake or tremble through fear, the fountain in question may have had its name from the terror and panic with which the Midianitish host was seized at this place.

Verse 2. The people that are with thee are too many] Had he led up a numerous host against his enemies, the excellence of the power by which they were discomfited might have appeared to be of man and not of God. By the manner in which this whole transaction was conducted, both the Israelites and Midianites must see that the thing was of God. This would inspire the Israelites with confidence, and the Midianites with fear.

Verse 3. Whosoever is fearful and afraid, let him return—from Mount Gilead] Gideon was certainly not at Mount Gilead at this time, but rather near Mount Gilboa. Gilead was on the other side of Jordan. There must either have been two Gileads, which does not from scripture appear to be the case, or the Hebrew text is here corrupted, and for Gilead we should read Gilboa.

There returned of the people twenty and two thousand] Gideon's army was at this time thirty-two thousand strong, and after the above address twenty-two thousand went away. How astonishing, that in thirty-two thousand men there should be found not less than twenty-two thousand poltroons, who would neither fight for God nor their oppressed country! A state of slavery debases the mind of man, and renders it incapable of being influenced by the pure principles of patriotism or religion.

Verse 5. Every one that lappeth of the water—as a dog] The original word yalok is precisely the sound which a dog makes when he is drinking.

Verse 6. The number of them that lapped] From this account it appears that some of the people went down on their knees, and, putting their mouths to the water, sucked up what they needed; the others stooped down, and, taking up water in the hollow of their hands, applied it to their mouth.

Verse 8. So the people took victuals] The three hundred men that he reserved took the victuals necessary for the day's expenditure, while the others were dismissed to their tents and their houses as they thought proper.

Verse 9. I have delivered it into thine hand] I have determined to do it, and it is as sure as if it were done.

Verse 11. Unto the outside of the armed men] No doubt the vast multitudes of Midianites, &c., which came merely for plunder were wholly unarmed; but they had a guard of armed men, as all the caravans have, and those guards were on the outside of the multitudes; it was to those that Gideon and his servant came.

Verse 13. Told a dream] Both the dream and the interpretation were inspired by God for the purpose of increasing the confidence of Gideon, and appalling his enemies.

Behold, I dreamed a dream, and, lo, a cake of barley bread tumbled into the host of Midian, and came unto a tent, and smote it that it fell, and overturned it, that the tent lay along.

14 And his fellow answered and said, This is nothing else save the sword of Gideon the son of Josah, a man of Israel: for into his hand hath God delivered Midian, and all the host.

15 And it was so, when Gideon heard the telling of the dream, and the interpretation thereof, that he worshipped, and returned into the host of Israel, and said, Arise; for the LORD hath delivered into your hand the host of Midian.

16 And he divided the three hundred men into three companies, and he put a trumpet in every man's hand, with empty pitchers, and lamps within the pitchers.

17 And he said unto them, Look on me, and do likewise: and, behold, when I come to the outside of the camp, it shall be that, as I do, so shall ye do.

18 When I blow with a trumpet, I and all that are with me, then blow ye the trumpets also on every side of all the camp, and say, The sword of the LORD, and of Gideon.

19 So Gideon, and the hundred men that were with him, came unto the outside of the camp in the beginning of the middle watch; and they had but newly set the watch: and they blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers, that were in their hands.

20 And the three companies blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers, and held the lamps in their left hands, and the trumpets in their right hands to blow withal: and they cried, The sword of the LORD, and of Gideon.

21 And they stood every man in his place round about the camp: and all the host ran, and cried, and fled.

22 And the three hundred blew the trumpets, and the LORD set every man's sword against his fellow, even throughout all the host: and the host fled to Beth-shittah in Zererath, and to the border of Abel-meholah, unto Tabbath.

23 And the men of Israel gathered themselves together out of Naphtali, and out of Asher, and out of all Manasseh, and pursued after the Midianites.

24 And Gideon sent messengers throughout all Mount Ephraim, saying, Come down against the Midianites, and take before them the waters unto Beth-barah and Jordan. Then all the men of Ephraim gathered themselves together, and took the waters unto Beth-barah and Jordan.

25 And they took two princes of the Midianites, Oreb and Zeeb; and they slew Oreb upon the rock Oreb, and Zeeb they slew at the winepress of Zeeb, and pursued Midian, and brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon, on the other side Jordan.

See 2 Cor. iv. 7.—<sup>i</sup> Ps. lxxxi. 9. Isa. ix. 4.—<sup>j</sup> 1 Sam. xiv.

Verse 14. Into his hand hath God delivered Midian] This is a full proof that God had inspired both the dream and its interpretation.

Verse 16. He divided the three hundred men] Though the victory was to be from the Lord, yet he knew that he ought to use prudential means; and those which he employed on this occasion were the best calculated to answer the end. If he had not used these means, it is not likely that God would have delivered the Midianites into his hands. Sometimes, even in working a miracle, God will have natural means used: Go, dip thyself seven times in the river Jordan. Go, wash in the pool Siloam.

Verse 18. The sword of the Lord and of Gideon] The word chereb, "sword," is not found in this verse, though it is necessarily implied, and is found in verse 20.

Verse 20. Blew the trumpets, and brake the pitchers] How astonishing must the effect be, in a dark night, of the sudden glare of three hundred torches, darting their splendour in the same instant on the half-awakened eyes of the terrified Midianites, accompanied with the clangour of three hundred trumpets, alternately mingled with the thundering shout of "A sword for the Lord and for Gideon!"

Verse 21. They stood every man in his place] Each of the three companies kept its station, and continued to sound their trumpets. The Midianites seeing this, and believing that they wore the trumpets of a numerous army which had then penetrated their camp, were thrown instantly into confusion; and supposing that their enemies were in the midst of them, they turned their swords against every man they met, while at the same time they endeavoured to escape for their lives. No stratagem was ever better imagined, better executed, or more completely successful.

Verse 22. Fled to Beth-shittah] This is nowhere else mentioned in scripture.

Zererath] This and Tabbath are nowhere else to be found. Abel-meholah] This was the birth-place of the prophet Elisha, 1 Kings xix. 16. It was beyond Jordan, in the tribe of Manasseh, 1 Kings iv. 12. The Zartanah mentioned in this last quoted verse, was probably the same as Zererath. Its situation corresponds well with Abel-meholah.

Verse 23. The men of Israel gathered] It is very likely that these were some persons whom Gideon had sent home the day before, who, now hearing that the Midianites were routed, went immediately in pursuit.

Verse 24. Take before them the waters unto Beth-barah] This is probably the same place as that mentioned John i. 28, where the Hebrews forded Jordan under the direction of Joshua. To this place the Midianites directed their flight that they might escape into their own country; and here, being met by the Ephraimites, they appear to have been totally overthrown, and their two generals taken.

Verse 25. They slew Oreb upon the rock Oreb] These two generals had taken shelter, one in the cavern of the rock, the other in the vat of a wine-press; both of which places were, from this circumstance, afterwards called by their names.

Brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to Gideon] Oreb signifies a raven, and Zeeb a wolf. In all ancient nations we find generals and princes taking their names from both birds and beasts; the Romans had their Gracchi, jackdaws; Corvini, crows; Aquilini, eagles, &c. Among barbarous nations the head of the conquered chief was often brought to the conqueror. Pompey's head was brought to Cæsar; Cicero's head, to Mark Antony; the heads of Ahab's children, to Jehu; &c.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Ephraimites are angry with Gideon because he did not call them particularly to his assistance: he pacifies them, 1-3. Gideon and his three hundred men pass over Jordan, pursuing the Midianites; and, being faint, ask victuals from the princes of Succoth, but are refused, 4-7. They make the like application to the people of Penuel, and are also refused, 8, 9. Gideon defeats Zebah and Zalmunna, the two kings of Midian, and takes them prisoners, 10-12. He chastises the men of Succoth and Penuel, 13-17. He slays Zebah and Zalmunna, who had killed his brethren, 18-21. The Israelites offer him the kingdom, which he refuses, 22, 23. He requires from them the gold rings which they had taken from the Ishmaelites, and makes an ephod, which he sets up at Ophrah; and it became an instrument of idolatry, 24-27. The land enjoys peace forty years; Gideon dies, having seventy-one sons, 28-32. The Israelites fall into idolatry, and forget their obligations to Gideon's family, 33-35.

AND <sup>a</sup>the men of Ephraim said unto him, <sup>b</sup>Why hast thou served us thus, that thou calledst us not, when thou wentest to fight with the Midianites? And they did chide with him <sup>c</sup>sharply.

2 And he said unto them, What have I done now in comparison of you? Is not the gleanings of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abiezer?

3 <sup>d</sup>God hath delivered into your hands the princes of Midian, Oreb and Zeeb: and what was I able to do in comparison of you? Then their <sup>e</sup>anger <sup>f</sup>was abated toward him, when he had said that.

4 And Gideon came to Jordan, and passed over, he, and the three hundred men that were with him, faint, yet pursuing them.

5 And he said unto the men of <sup>g</sup>Succoth, Give, I pray you, loaves of bread unto the people that follow me; for they be faint, and I am pursuing after Zebah and Zalmunna, kings of Midian.

6 And the princes of Succoth said, <sup>h</sup>Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that <sup>i</sup>we should give bread unto thine army?

7 And Gideon said, Therefore, when the Lord hath delivered Zebah and Zalmunna into mine hand, <sup>j</sup>then I will <sup>k</sup>tear your flesh with the thorns of the wilderness and with briars.

8 And he went up thence <sup>l</sup>to Penuel, and spake

Verse 1. The men of Ephraim said.] This account is no doubt displaced; for what is mentioned here could not have taken place till the return of Gideon from the pursuit of the Midianites; for he had not yet passed Jordan, ver. 4. And it was when he was beyond that river that the Ephraimites brought the heads of Oreb and Zeeb to him, chap. vii. 25.

Verse 2. Is not the gleanings, &c.] That is, The Ephraimites have performed more important services than Gideon and his men; and he supports the assertion by observing that it was they who took the two Midianitish generals, having discomfited their hosts at the passes of Jordan.

Verse 3. Then their anger was abated.] A soft answer turneth away wrath. He might have said that he could place but little dependance on his brethren when, through faint-heartedness, 22,000 left him at one time; but he passed this by, and took a more excellent way.

Verse 4. Faint, yet pursuing.] The Vulgate paraphrases this, "And, through fatigue, unable to pursue the fugitives."

Verse 5. Give, I pray you, loaves of bread.] As Gideon was engaged in the common cause of Israel, he had a right to expect succour from the people at large.

Verse 6. Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand?] They feared to help Gideon, lest, if he should be overpowered, the Midianites would revenge it upon them; and they dared not trust God.

Verse 7. I will tear your flesh.] What this punishment unto them likewise: and the men of Penuel answered him as the men of Succoth had answered him.

9 And he spake also unto the men of Penuel, saying, When I <sup>m</sup>come again in peace, <sup>n</sup>I will break down this tower.

10 Now Zebah and Zalmunna were in Karkor, and their hosts with them, about fifteen thousand men, all that were left of <sup>o</sup>all the hosts of the children of the East: for there fell <sup>p</sup>an hundred and twenty thousand men that drew sword.

11 And Gideon went up by the way of them that dwelt in tents on the east of <sup>q</sup>Nobah and Joghchah, and smote the host: for the host was <sup>r</sup>secure.

12 And when Zebah and Zalmunna fled, he pursued after them, and <sup>s</sup>took the two kings of Midian, Zebah and Zalmunna, and <sup>t</sup>discomfited all the host.

13 And Gideon the son of Joash returned from battle before the sun was up, 14 And caught a young man of the men of Succoth, and inquired of him; and he <sup>u</sup>described unto him the princes of Succoth, and the elders thereof; even threescore and seventeen men.

15 And he came unto the men of Succoth, and said, Behold Zebah and Zalmunna, with whom ye did <sup>v</sup>upbraid me, saying, Are the hands of Zebah and Zalmunna now in thine hand, that we should give bread unto thy men that are weary?

consisted in, I cannot say; it must mean a severe punishment; as if he had said, I will thresh your flesh with briars and thorns, as corn is threshed out with threshing instruments; or, Ye shall be trodden down under the feet of my victorious army, as the corn is trodden out with the feet of the ox.

Succoth was beyond Jordan, in the tribe of Gad. Penuel was also in the same tribe, and not far distant from Succoth.

Verse 9. I will break down this tower.] Probably they had not only denied him, but insultingly pointed to a tower in which their chief defence lay; and intimated to him that he might do his worst, for they could amply defend themselves.

Verse 10. Zebah and Zalmunna were in Karkor.] If this were a place, it is nowhere else mentioned in scripture. Some contend that karkor signifies rest; and thus the Vulgate understood it: Zebah and Zalmunna rested, with all their army. And this seems the most likely, for it is said, ver. 11, that Gideon smote the host, for the host was secure.

Verse 13. Returned from battle before the sun was up.] This should be rendered from the ascent of Chares: this is the reading of the Septuagint, the Syriac, and the Arabic.

Verse 14. He described unto him the princes of Succoth.] The young man probably gave him the names of seventy of the wilderness and briars, and with them he taught the men of Succoth.

17<sup>b</sup> And he beat down the tower of <sup>c</sup> Penuel, and slew the men of the city.

18 Then said he unto Zebah and Zalmunna, What manner of men were they whom ye slew at <sup>d</sup> Tabor? And they answered, As thou art, so were they; each one <sup>e</sup> resembled the children of a king.

19 And he said, They were my brethren, even the sons of my mother: as the Lord liveth, if ye had saved them alive, I would not slay you.

20 And he said unto Jether his first-born, Up, and slay them. But the youth drew not his sword: for he feared, because he was yet a youth.

21 Then Zebah and Zalmunna said, Rise thou, and fall upon us: for as the man is, so is his strength. And Gideon arose, and slew Zebah and Zalmunna, and took away the <sup>f</sup> ornaments that were on their camels' necks.

22 Then the men of Israel said unto Gideon, Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son also: for thou hast delivered us from the hand of Midian.

23 And Gideon said unto them, I will not rule over you, neither shall my son rule over you: <sup>h</sup> the Lord shall rule over you.

24 And Gideon said unto them, I would desire a request of you, that ye would give me every man the ear-rings of his prey. (For they had golden ear-rings, <sup>i</sup> because they were Ishmaelites.)

25 And they answered, We will willingly give them. And they spread a garment, and did cast therein every man the ear-rings of his prey.

26 And the weight of the golden ear-rings that he requested was a thousand and seven hundred shekels of gold; beside ornaments, and <sup>j</sup> collars, and purple raiment that was on the kings of Midian, and beside the chains that were about their camels' necks.

27 And Gideon <sup>k</sup> made an ephod thereof, and put it in his city, even <sup>l</sup> in Ophrah: and all Israel <sup>m</sup> went thither a whoring after it: which thing became <sup>n</sup> a snare unto Gideon, and to his house.

28 Thus was Midian subdued before the children of Israel, so that they lifted up their heads no more. <sup>o</sup> And the country was in quietness forty years in the days of Gideon.

29 And Jerubbaal the son of Joash went and dwelt in his own house.

persons, the chief men of Succoth, who were those who were most concerned in refusing him and his men the refreshment he requested.

Verse 16. He taught the men of Succoth.] Instead of he taught, Houbigant reads he tore; and this is not only agreeable to what Gideon had threatened, ver. 7, but is supported by the Vulgate, Septuagint, Chaldee, Syriac, and the Arabic. The Hebrew text might have been easily corrupted in this place by the change of two letters very similar to each other. [There is no ground for this criticism.]

Verse 18. What manner of men were they whom ye slew at Tabor?] We have no antecedent to this question; and are obliged to conjecture one: it seems as if Zebah and Zalmunna had massacred the family of Gideon, while he was absent on this expedition. Gideon had heard some confused account of it, and now questions them concerning the fact. They boldly acknowledge it, and describe the persons whom they slew, by which he found they were his own brethren. This determines him to avenge their death by slaying the Midianitish kings, whom he otherwise was inclined to save. He might have heard that his brethren had been taken prisoners, and might have hoped to have exchanged them for the kings now in his hand; but when he found they had been all slain, he decrees the death of their murderers.

Verse 20. He said unto Jether his first-born.] By the ancient laws of war, prisoners taken in war might be either slain, sold, or kept for slaves. To put a captive enemy to death no executioner was required. Gideon slays Zebah and Zalmunna with his own hand. So Samuel is said to have hewn Agag in pieces, 1 Sam. xv. 33. Benaiah slew Joab, 1 Kings ii. 25. Saul orders his guards to slay the priests who had contributed to the escape of David, 1 Sam. xxii. 17; and David caused one of his attendants to slay the Amalekite who pretended to have slain Saul, 2 Sam. i. 15.

Verse 21. Then Zebah and Zalmunna said, Rise thou, and fall upon us.] It was disgraceful to fall by the hands of a child; and the death occasioned by the blows of such a person must be much more lingering and tormenting. Some have even employed children to despatch captives.

The ornaments that were on their camels' necks.] The heads, necks, bodies, and legs of camels, horses, and elephants, are highly ornamented in the eastern countries; and indeed this was common, from the remotest antiquity in all countries.

Instead of ornaments, the Septuagint translate the crescents or half-moons; and this is followed by the Syriac and Arabic. The worship of the moon was very ancient, and, with that of the sun, constituted the earliest idolatry of mankind.

Verse 22. Rule thou over us, both thou, and thy son, and thy son's son.] That is, Become our king, and let the crown be hereditary in thy family. What a weak, foolish, and inconstant people were these! As yet their government was a theocracy; and now, dazzled with the success of a man who was only an instrument in the hands of God to deliver them from their enemies, they wish to throw off the divine yoke, and shackle themselves with an unlimited hereditary monarchy! An unlimited monarchy is a curse; a limited monarchy may be a blessing: the latter may be an appointment of God; the former never can. Those who cast off their allegiance to their Maker, are guilty of folly and extravagance of every kind.

Verse 23. The Lord shall rule over you.] Few with such power at their command would have acted as Gideon. His speech calls them back to their first principles, and should have excited in them both shame and contrition.

Verse 24. Give me every man the ear-rings of his prey.] The spoils taken from their enemies in this warfare. This is a transaction very like to that of the Israelites and Aaron; when they brought him their golden ear-rings, out of which he made the molten calf, Exod. xxxii. 2, &c. Whether Gideon designed this ephod for an instrument of worship, or merely as a trophy, is not very clear. It is most likely that he had intended to establish a place of worship at Ophrah; and he took this occasion to provide the proper sacerdotal vestments.

Verse 26. The weight of the golden ear-rings—was a thousand and seven hundred shekels of gold.] Taking the shekel at half an ounce weight, the sum of the gold collected in ear-rings was seventy pounds ten ounces; and worth, as gold now rates, about £3,100 sterling.

Verse 27. Gideon made an ephod thereof.] That is, he made an ephod out of this mass of gold; but he could not employ it all in making this one garment, for it is not likely that any man could wear a coat of nearly one hundred pounds' weight. It is likely that he made a whole tabernacle service in miniature out of this gold. [Or, better still, he spent the gold in the making of this ephod. It was garnished probably with precious stones.]

All Israel went thither a whoring after it.] This form of speech often occurs, and has been often explained. All Israel paid idolatrous worship to the ephod or sacerdotal establishment made by Gideon at Ophrah, and this is called going a whoring after it; see on ver. 33.

Verse 28. Forty years in the days of Gideon.] The Midianites were so completely humbled that they could make head no more against Israel during the forty years in which the government of Gideon lasted.

30 And Gideon had <sup>a</sup>threescore and ten sons <sup>b</sup>of his body begotten: for he had many wives.

31 <sup>c</sup>And his concubine that was in Shechem, she also bare him a son, whose name he <sup>d</sup>called Abimelech.

32 And Gideon the son of Joash died <sup>e</sup>in a good old age, and was buried in the sepulchre of Joash his father, <sup>f</sup>in Ophrah of the Abiezrites.

33 And it came to pass, <sup>g</sup>as soon as Gideon was Verse 31. His concubine] A lawful but secondary wife, whose children could not inherit.

Whose name he called Abimelech.] That is, my father is king, or my father hath reigned. This name was doubtless given by the mother, and so it should be understood here; she wished to raise her son to the supreme government, and therefore gave him a name which might serve to stimulate him to seek that which she hoped he should enjoy in his father's right.

Verse 32. Gideon—died in a good old age] Supposed to have been A.M. 2799, B.C. 1205.

Verse 33. A whoring after Baalim] This term has probably a different meaning here from what it has, ver. 7; for it is very likely that in most parts of the pagan worship there were many impure rites, so that going a whoring after Baalim may be taken in a literal sense.

Baal-berith] Literally, the lord of the covenant; the same as Jupiter fœderis, or Mercury, among the Romans; the deity whose business it was to preside over compacts, leagues, treaties, covenants, &c.

Verse 34. Remembered not the Lord their God] They attributed their deliverance to some other cause, and did not give him the glory of their salvation.

Verse 35. Neither shewed they kindness to the house of—Gideon] They were both unthankful and unlovely. Though they had the clearest proofs of God's power and goodness before their eyes, yet they forgot him. And although they were under the greatest obligations to Gideon, and were once so sensible of them that they offered to settle the kingdom on him and his family, yet they forgot him also; for becoming foes to God, they could not be friends to MAN.

dead, that the children of Israel turned again, and <sup>a</sup>went a whoring after Baalim, <sup>b</sup>and made Baal-berith their god.

34 And the children of Israel <sup>c</sup>remembered not the Lord their God, who had delivered them out of the hands of all their enemies on every side:

35 <sup>d</sup>Neither shewed they kindness to the house of Jerubbaal, namely, Gideon, according to all the goodness which he had shewed unto Israel.

19.—<sup>b</sup> Ch. ii. 17.—<sup>c</sup> Ch. ix. 4, 46.—<sup>d</sup> Ps. lxxviii. 11, 42. cvi. 13, 21.—<sup>e</sup> Ch. ix. 16, 17, 18. Eccles. ix. 14, 15.

Jerubbaal, namely, Gideon.—This is improper; it should be Jerubbaal Gideon, as we say Simon Peter, or call any man by his Christian name and surname.

Of Gideon the most we can say is that which the angel said, he was a mighty man of valour.

He was also a true patriot; he loved his country and hazarded his life for it; and yet he would not stir till he had the most incontestable proofs that God would, by supernatural assistance, make him victorious.

He was most evidently disinterested, and void of ambition; he refused the kingdom when it was offered to him, and to his heirs after him. But consistently with the belief he had in God, he could not accept it, as this would have been a complete alteration of the Jewish constitution, which acknowledged no ruler but God himself.

His motive in making the ephod is not well understood; probably it was done with no reprehensible design. But the act was totally wrong; he had no divine authority to make such an innovation in the religious worship of his country. The ark was at Shechem; and there was the proper and only accredited priest. The act therefore can never be excused, whatever may be said of his motive.

His private character does not appear to have been very exemplary; he had many wives, and seventy sons by them, besides one by a concubine, which he kept at Shechem, where he was often obliged to go as judge, for the purpose of administering justice. In short, there is scarcely a trait in his character, worthy to be compared with any thing in the conduct of the Redeemer of mankind, to whom many of the Fathers have likened him.

CHAPTER IX.

Abimelech is made king; and, to secure himself in the kingdom, slays his brethren; Jotham, the youngest, only escapes, 1-6. Jotham reproves him and the Shechemites by a curious and instructive parable, 7-21. Abimelech having reigned three years, the Shechemites, headed by Gaal the son of Ebed, conspire against him, 22-29. Zebul, governor of the city, apprises Abimelech of the insurrection, who comes with his forces, and discomfits Gaal, 30-40. Abimelech assaults the city, takes, beats it down, and sows it with salt, 41-45. Several of the Shechemites take refuge in the temple of Baal-berith; Abimelech sets fire to it, and destroys in it about one thousand men and women, 46-50. He afterwards besieges and takes Thebez; but while he is assaulting the citadel, a woman threw a piece of a mill-stone upon his head, and killed him. Thus God requited him and the men of Shechem for their wickedness, and their ingratitude to the family of Gideon, 51-57.

AND Abimelech the son of Jerubbaal went to Shechem unto <sup>a</sup>his mother's brethren, and communed with them, and with all the family of the house of his mother's father, saying,

2 Speak, I pray you, in the ears of all the men

Verse 1. Abimelech—went to Shechem] Shechem was the residence of his mother, and of all her relatives.

Verse 2. Whether is better for you, either that all the sons] This was a powerful argument: Whether will you have seventy tyrants, or only one? For as he had no right to the government, and God alone was king at that time in of Shechem, <sup>b</sup>Whether is better for you, either that all the sons of Jerubbaal, which are <sup>c</sup>threescore and ten persons, reign over you, or that one reign over you? remember also that I am <sup>d</sup>your bone and your flesh.

3 And his mother's brethren spake of him in the Israel; so he must support his usurped rule by whatever means were most likely to effect it: a usurped government is generally supported by oppression and the sword.

ears of all the men of Shechem all these words: and their hearts inclined * to follow Abimelech; for they said, He is our <sup>b</sup> brother.

4 And they gave him threescore and ten pieces of silver out of the house of <sup>c</sup> Baal-berith, wherewith Abimelech hired <sup>d</sup> vain and light persons which followed him.

5 And he went unto his father's house <sup>e</sup> at Ophrah, and <sup>f</sup> slew his brethren the sons of Jerubbaal, being threescore and ten persons, upon one stone; notwithstanding yet Jotham the youngest son of Jerubbaal was left; for he hid himself.

6 And all the men of Shechem gathered together, and all the house of Millo, and went and made Abimelech king, <sup>g</sup> by the plain of the pillar that was in Shechem.

7 And when they told it to Jotham, he went and stood in the top of <sup>h</sup> Mount Gerizim, and lifted up his voice, and cried, and said unto them, Hearken unto me, ye men of Shechem, that God may hearken unto you.

Verse 4. Threescore and ten pieces of silver] Probably shekels; and this was the whole of his exchequer. As he was now usurping the government of God, he begins with a contribution from the idol temple. A work begun under the name and influence of the devil is not likely to end to the glory of God, or to the welfare of man.

Hired vain and light persons] Persons who were living on the public, and had nothing to lose. Such was the foundation of his Babel government. By a cunning management of such rascals most revolutions have been brought about.

Verse 5. Slew his brethren] His brothers by the father's side, chap. viii. 30. This was a usual way of securing an ill-gotten throne; the person who had no right destroying all those that had right, that he might have no competitors.

Yet Jotham—was left] That is, all the seventy were killed except Jotham, if there were not seventy besides Jotham.

Verse 6. And all the house of Millo] If Millo be the name of a place, it is nowhere else mentioned in the sacred writings. But it is probably the name of a person of note and influence in the city of Shechem—the men of Shechem, and the family of Millo. [It is more probably the name of the citadel of Shechem.]

Verse 7. Stood in the top of Mount Gerizim] Gerizim and Ebal were mounts very near to each other; the former lying to the north, the latter to the south, and at the foot of them Shechem.

That God may hearken unto you.] It appears that Jotham received this message from God, and that he spoke on this occasion by divine inspiration.

Verse 8. The trees went forth on a time] This is the oldest, and without exception the best, fable or apologue in the world.

It is not to be supposed that a fable, if well formed, requires much illustration; every part of this, a few expressions excepted, illustrates itself, and tells its own meaning.

To anoint a king] Hence it appears that anointing was usual in the installation of kings, long before there was any king in Israel; for there is much evidence that the Book of Judges was written before the days of Saul and David.

The olive-tree] The olive was the most useful of all the trees in the field or forest, as the bramble was the meanest and the most worthless.

Verse 9. Wherewith—they honour God and man] I believe the word elohim here should be translated gods, for the parable seems to be accommodated to the idolatrous state of the Shechemites.

Verse 11. But the fig-tree said—Should I forsake my sweetness] The fruit of the fig-tree is the sweetest or most luscious of all fruits. A full ripe fig, in its own climate, has an indescribable sweetness; so much so that it is almost impossible to eat it, till a considerable time after it is gathered from the trees, and has gone through an artificial preparation.

Verse 13. Which cheereth God and man] I believe elohim

8 <sup>1</sup> The trees went forth on a time to anoint a king over them; and they said unto the olive-tree, <sup>2</sup> Reign thou over us.

9 But the olive-tree said unto them, Should I leave my fatness, <sup>3</sup> wherewith by me they honour God and man, and <sup>4</sup> go to be promoted over the trees?

10 And the trees said to the fig-tree, Come thou, and reign over us, 11 But the fig-tree said unto them, Should I forsake my sweetness, and my good fruit, and go to be promoted over the trees?

12 Then said the trees unto the vine, Come thou, and reign over us.

13 And the vine said unto them, Should I leave my wine, <sup>5</sup> which cheereth God and man, and go to be promoted over the trees?

14 Then said all the trees unto the <sup>6</sup> bramble, Come thou, and reign over us.

15 And the bramble said unto the trees, if in truth ye anoint me king over you, then come and here is to be taken in the same sense proposed on ver. 9. Vast libations of wine, as well as much oil, were used in heathenish sacrifices and offerings; and it was their opinion that the gods actually partook of, and were delighted with, both the wine and oil. It is not reasonable to suppose that Jotham makes any reference here to the sacrifices, oblations, and perfumes offered to the true God. This language the idolatrous Shechemites could scarcely understand. And it is not very likely that Jotham himself was well acquainted with the sacred rites of the Mosaic religion, as they had been little preached in his time.

Verse 14. Then said all the trees unto the bramble] The word alad, which we translate bramble, is supposed to mean the rhamnus, which is the largest of thorns, producing dreadful spikes, similar to darts.

There is much of the moral of this fable contained in the different kinds of trees mentioned. 1. The olive; the most profitable tree to its owner, having few equals either for food or medicine. 2. The fig-tree; one of the most fruitful of trees, and yielding one of the most delicious fruits, and superior to all others for sweetness. 3. The vine, which alone yields a liquor that, when properly prepared, and taken in strict moderation, is friendly both to the body and mind of man, having a most direct tendency to invigorate both.

4. The bramble or thorn, which, however useful as a hedge, is dangerous to come near; and is here the emblem of an impious, cruel, and oppressive king. As the olive, fig, and vine are said in this fable to refuse the royalty, because in consequence, they intimate, they should lose their own privileges, we learn that to be invested with power for the public good can be no privilege to the sovereign. If he discharge the office faithfully, it will plant his pillow with thorns, fill his soul with anxious cares, rob him of rest and quiet, and, in a word, will be to him a source of distress and misery. In short, we see from this most sensible fable, that the beneficent, benevolent, and highly illuminated mind, is ever averse from the love of power; and that those who do seek it are the thoughtless, the vain, the ambitious, and those who wish for power merely for the purpose of self-gratification; persons who have neither the disposition nor the knowledge to use power for the advantage of the community; and who, while they boast great things, and make great pretensions and promises, are the tyrants of the people; and often through their ambition, like the bramble in the fable, kindle a flame of foreign or domestic war, in which their subjects are consumed.

Verse 15. Come and put your trust in my shadow] The vain boast of the would-be sovereign; and of the man who is seeking to be put into power by the suffrages of the people. All promise, no performance.

Let fire come out of the bramble] A strong catachresis. The bramble was too low to give shelter to any tree; and so far from being able to consume others, that the smallest fire will reduce it to ashes, and that in the shortest time. Hence put your trust in my <sup>a</sup>shadow: and if not, <sup>b</sup>let fire come out of the bramble, and devour the <sup>c</sup>cedars of Lebanon.

16 Now therefore, if ye have done truly and sincerely, in that ye have made Abimelech king, and if ye have dealt well with Jerubbaal and his house, and have done unto him <sup>d</sup>according to the deserving of his hands;

17 (For my father fought for you, and <sup>e</sup>adventured his life far, and delivered you out of the hand of Midian:

18 'And ye are risen up against my father's house this day, and have slain his sons, threescore and ten persons, upon one stone, and have made Abimelech, the son of his maid-servant, king over the men of Shechem, because he is your brother;)

19 If ye then have dealt truly and sincerely with Jerubbaal and with his house this day, then <sup>f</sup>rejoice ye in Abimelech, and let him also rejoice in you:

20 But if not, <sup>h</sup>let fire come out from Abimelech, and devour the men of Shechem, and the house of Millo; and let fire come out from the men of Shechem, and from the house of Millo, and devour Abimelech.

21 And Jotham ran away, and fled, and went to Beer, and dwelt there, for fear of Abimelech his brother.

22 When Abimelech had reigned three years over Israel,

23 Then <sup>i</sup>God sent an evil spirit between Abimelech and the men of Shechem; and the men of Shechem <sup>k</sup>dealt treacherously with Abimelech:

24 <sup>l</sup>That the cruelty done to the threescore and ten sons of Jerubbaal might come, and their blood be laid upon Abimelech their brother, which slew them; and upon the men of Shechem, which <sup>m</sup>aided him in the killing of his brethren.

25 And the men of Shechem set liers in wait for him in the top of the mountains, and they robbed all that came along that way by them: and it was told Abimelech.

26 And Gaal the son of Ebed came with his brethren, and went over to Shechem: and the men of Shechem put their confidence in him.

27 And they went out into the fields, and gathered their vineyards, and trode the grapes, and made <sup>n</sup>merry, and went into <sup>o</sup>the house of their god, and did eat and drink, and cursed Abimelech.

28 And Gaal the son of Ebed said, <sup>p</sup>Who is Abimelech, and who is Shechem, that we should serve him? is not he the son of Jerubbaal? and Zebul his officer? serve the men of <sup>q</sup>Hamor the father of Shechem: for why should we serve him?

29 And <sup>r</sup>would to God this people were under my hand! then would I remove Abimelech. And he said to Abimelech, Increase thine army, and come out.

30 And when Zebul the ruler of the city heard the words of Gaal the son of Ebed, his anger was <sup>s</sup>kindled.

31 And he sent messengers unto Abimelech <sup>t</sup>privily, saying, Behold, Gaal the son of Ebed and his brethren be come to Shechem; and, behold, they fortify the city against thee.

32 Now therefore up by night, thou and the people that is with thee, and lie in wait in the field:

33 And it shall be, that in the morning, as soon as the sun is up, thou shalt rise early, and set upon the city: and, behold, when he and the people that is with him come out against thee, then mayest thou do to them <sup>u</sup>as thou shalt find occasion.

34 And Abimelech rose up, and all the people that were with him, by night, and they laid wait against Shechem in four companies.

35 And Gaal the son of Ebed went out and stood in the entering of the gate of the city: and Abimelech rose up, and the people that were with him, from lying in wait.

the very transitory mirth of fools is said to be like the crackling of thorns under a pot. Abimelech was the bramble; and the cedars of Lebanon, all the nobles and people of Israel. Could they therefore suppose that such a low-born, uneducated, cruel, and murderous man could be a proper protector, or a humane governor? He who could imbrue his hands in the blood of his brethren in order to get into power, was not likely to stop at any means to retain that power when possessed. If, therefore, they took him for their king, they might rest assured that desolation and blood would mark the whole of his reign.

The condensed moral of the whole fable is this: Weak, worthless, and wicked men will ever be foremost to thrust themselves into power; and, in the end, to bring ruin upon themselves, and on the unhappy people over whom they preside.

Verse 20. Let fire come out from Abimelech] As the thorn or bramble may be the means of kindling other wood, because it may be easily ignited; so shall Abimelech be the cause of kindling a fire of civil discord among you, that shall consume the rulers and great men of your country. A prophetic declaration of what would take place.

Verse 23. God sent an evil spirit] He permitted jealousies to take place which produced factions; and these factions produced insurrections, civil contentions, and slaughter.

Verse 25. The men of Shechem set liers in wait] It pleased God to punish this bad man by the very persons who had contributed to his iniquitous elevation. So God often makes the instruments of men's sins the means of their punishment. It is likely that although Abimelech had his chief residence at Shechem, yet he frequently went to Ophrah, the city of his father; his claim to which there was none to oppose, as he had slain all his brethren. It was probably in his passage between those two places that the Shechemites had posted cut-throats, in order to assassinate him: as such men had no moral principle, they robbed and plundered all who came that way.

Verse 26. Gaal the son of Ebed] Of this person we know no more than is here told. He was probably one of the descendants of the Canaanites, who hoped from the state of the public mind, and their disaffection to Abimelech, to cause a revolution, and thus to restore the ancient government as it was under Hamor the father of Shechem.

Verse 28. Zebul his officer] His overseer; probably governor of Shechem in his absence.

Verse 29. Would to God this people were under my hand] The very words and conduct of a sly hypocritical demagogue. Increase thine army, and come out.] When he found his party strong, and the public feeling warped to his side, then he appears to have sent a challenge to Abimelech, to come out and fight him.

Verse 31. They fortify the city against thee.] Under pretence of repairing the walls and towers, they were actually putting the place in a state of defence, intending to seize on the government as soon as they should find Abimelech coming against them. Fortifying the city may mean seducing the inhabitants from their loyalty to Abimelech.

Verse 35. Stood in the entering of the gate] Having probably got some intimation of the designs of Zebul and Abimelech.

36 And when Gaal saw the people, he said to Zebul, Behold, there come people down from the top of the mountains. And Zebul said unto him, Thou seest the shadow of the mountains as if they were men.

37 And Gaal spake again and said, See, there come people down by the <sup>a</sup> middle of the land, and another company come along by the plain of <sup>b</sup> Meonenim.

38 Then said Zebul unto him, Where is now thy mouth, wherewith thou <sup>c</sup> saidst, who is Abimelech, that we should serve him? is not this the people that thou hast despised? go out, I pray now, and fight with them.

39 And Gaal went out before the men of Shechem, and fought with Abimelech.

40 And Abimelech chased him, and he fled before him, and many were overthrown and wounded, even unto the entering of the gate.

41 And Abimelech dwelt at Arumah: and Zebul thrust out Gaal and his brethren, that they should not dwell in Shechem.

42 And it came to pass on the morrow that the people went out into the field; and they told Abimelech.

43 And he took the people and divided them into three companies, and laid wait in the field and looked, and behold, the people were come forth out of the city: and he rose up against them, and smote them.

44 And Abimelech, and the company that was with him rushed forward, and stood in the entering of the gate of the city: and the two other companies ran upon all the people that were in the fields, and slew them.

45 And Abimelech fought against the city all that day; and <sup>d</sup> he took the city, and slew the people that was therein, and <sup>e</sup> beat down the city, and sowed it with salt.

46 And when all the men of the tower of Shechem heard that, they entered into an hold of the house <sup>f</sup> of the god Berith.

47 And it was told Abimelech, that all the men of the tower of Shechem were gathered together.

48 And Abimelech gat him up to Mount <sup>g</sup> Zalmon, he and all the people that were with him; and Abimelech took an axe in his hand, and cut down a bough from the trees, and took it, and laid it on his shoulder, and said unto the people that were with him, What ye have seen <sup>h</sup> me do, make haste, and do as I have done.

49 And all the people likewise cut down every man his bough, and followed Abimelech, and put them to the hold, and set the hold on fire upon them; so that all the men of the tower of Shechem died also, about a thousand men and women.

50 Then went Abimelech to Thebez, and encamped against Thebez, and took it.

51 But there was a strong tower within the city, and thither fled all the men and women, and all they of the city, and shut it to them, and gat them up to the top of the tower, 52 And Abimelech came unto the tower, and fought against it, and went hard unto the door of the tower to burn it with fire.

53 And a certain woman <sup>i</sup> cast a piece of a millstone upon Abimelech's head, and all to break his skull.

54 Then <sup>j</sup> he called hastily unto the young man his armour-bearer, and said unto him, Draw thy sword, and slay me, that men say not of me, A woman slew him. And his young man thrust him through, and he died.

55 And when the men of Israel saw that Abimelech was dead, they departed every man unto his place.

56 <sup>k</sup> Thus God rendered the wickedness of Abimelech, which he did unto his father, in slaying his seventy brethren:

57 And all the evil of the men of Shechem did God render upon their heads: and upon them came <sup>l</sup> the curse of Jotham the son of Jerubbaal.

Verse 37. By the plain of Meonenim.] Some translate by the way of the oaks, or oaken groves; others, by the way of the magicians, or regards of the times, as in our margin. Probably it was a place in which augurs and soothsayers dwelt.

Verse 45. And sowed it with salt.] Intending that the destruction of this city should be a perpetual memorial of his achievements. The salt was not designed to render it barren, as some have imagined; for who would think of cultivating a city? but as salt is an emblem of incorruption and perpetuity, it was no doubt designed to perpetuate the memorial of this transaction, and as a token that he wished this desolation to be eternal. The sowing a place with salt was a custom in different nations to express permanent desolation and abhorrence.

Verse 46. An hold of the house of the god Berith.] This must mean the precincts of the temple, as we find there were a thousand men and women together in that place.

Verse 53. A piece of a millstone.] A piece of a chariot wheel; but the word is used in other places for upper millstones, and is so understood here by the Vulgate, Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic.

And all to break his skull.] A most nonsensical version of vattarits eth gulgotto, which is literally, And she brake, or fractured, his skull.

Verse 54. Draw thy sword, and slay me.] It was a disgrace to be killed by a woman; Abimelech was also afraid that if he fell thus mortally wounded into the hands of his enemies, they might treat him with cruelty and insult.

Verse 56. Thus God rendered, &c.] Both the fratricide Abimelech, and the unprincipled men of Shechem, had the iniquity visited upon them of which they had been guilty. Man's judgment may be avoided; but there is no escape from the judgments of God.

CHAPTER X.

Tola judges Israel twenty-three years, 1, 2. Jair is judge twenty-two years, 3-5. After him the Israelites rebel against God, and are delivered into the hands of the Philistines and Ammonites eighteen years, 6-9. They humble themselves, and God reproves them, 10-14. They put away their strange gods, and gather together against the Ammonites, 15-17. The chiefs of Gilead inquire concerning a captain, to head them against the Ammonites, 18.

AND after Abimelech there <sup>a</sup>arose to <sup>b</sup>defend Israel Tola the son of Puah, the son of Dodo, a man of Issachar; and he dwelt in Shamir in Mount Ephraim.

2 And he judged Israel twenty and three years, and died, and was buried in Shamir.

3 And after him arose Jair, a Gileadite, and judged Israel twenty and two years.

4 And he had thirty sons that <sup>d</sup>rode on thirty ass colts, and they had thirty cities, <sup>e</sup>which are called <sup>f</sup>Havoth-jair unto this day, which are in the land of Gilead.

5 And Jair died, and was buried in Camon.

6 And <sup>g</sup>the children of Israel did evil again in the sight of the LORD, and <sup>h</sup>served Baalim, and Ashtaroth, and <sup>i</sup>the gods of Syria, and the gods of <sup>j</sup>Zidon, and the gods of Moab, and the gods of the children of Ammon, and the gods of the Philistines, and forsook the LORD, and served not him.

7 And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel, and he <sup>k</sup>sold them into the hands of the Philistines, and into the hands of the children of Ammon.

8 And that year they vexed and <sup>l</sup>oppressed the children of Israel eighteen years, all the children of Israel that were on the other side Jordan in the land of the Amorites, which is in Gilead.

9 Moreover the children of Ammon passed over Jordan to fight also against Judah, and against Benjamin, and against the house of Ephraim; so that Israel was sore distressed.

Verse 1. Tola the son of Puah] As this Tola continued twenty-three years a judge of Israel after the troubles of Abimelech's reign, it is likely that the land had rest, and that the enemies of the Israelites had made no hostile incursions into the land during his presidency and that of Jair; which, together, continued forty-five years.

Verse 4. He had thirty sons, &c.] It appears that there was both peace and prosperity during the time that Jair governed Israel; he had, it seems, provided for his family, and given a village to each of his thirty sons; which were, in consequence, called Havoth Jair, or the villages of Jair. Their riding on thirty ass colts seems to intimate that they were persons of consideration, and kept up a certain dignity in their different departments.

Verse 6. And served Baalim] They became universal idolaters, adopting every god of the surrounding nations. Baalim and Ashtaroth may signify gods and goddesses in general. These are enumerated: 1. The gods of Syria; Bel and Saturn, or Jupiter and Astarte. 2. Gods of Zidon; Ashtaroth, Astarte or Venus. 3. The gods of Moab; Chemosh. 4. Gods of the children of Ammon; Milcom. 5. Gods of the Philistines; Dagon.

Verse 7. The anger of the Lord was hot] This divine displeasure was manifested in delivering them into the hands of the Philistines and the Ammonites. The former dwelt on the western side of Jordan; the latter, on the eastern; and it appears that they joined their forces on this occasion to distress and ruin the Israelites, though the Ammonites were the most active.

10 <sup>u</sup>And the children of Israel cried unto the LORD, saying, We have sinned against thee, both because we have forsaken our God, and also served Baalim.

11 And the LORD said unto the children of Israel, Did not I deliver you <sup>v</sup>from the Egyptians, and <sup>w</sup>from the Amorites, <sup>x</sup>from the children of Ammon, <sup>y</sup>and from the Philistines?

12 <sup>z</sup>The Zidonians also, <sup>a</sup>and the Amalekites, and the Moabites, <sup>b</sup>did oppress you; and ye cried to me, and I delivered you out of their hand.

13 <sup>c</sup>Yet ye have forsaken me, and served other gods: wherefore I will deliver you no more.

14 Go and <sup>d</sup>cry unto the gods which ye have chosen; let them deliver you in the time of your tribulation.

15 And the children of Israel said unto the LORD, We have sinned: <sup>e</sup>do thou unto us whatsoever <sup>f</sup>seemeth good unto thee; deliver us only, we pray thee, this day.

16 <sup>g</sup>And they put away the <sup>h</sup>strange gods from among them, and served the LORD: and <sup>i</sup>his soul <sup>jj</sup>was grieved for the misery of Israel.

17 Then the children of Ammon were <sup>kk</sup>gathered together, and encamped in Gilead. And the children of Israel assembled themselves together, and encamped in <sup>ll</sup>Mizpeh.

18 And the people and princes of Gilead said one to another, What man is he that will begin to fight against the children of Ammon? he shall <sup>mm</sup>be head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

Verse 11. And the Lord said] By what means these reproofs were conveyed to the Israelites, we know not: it must have been by an angel, a prophet, or some holy man inspired for the occasion.

Verse 15. We have sinned] The reprehension of this people was kind, pointed, and solemn; and their repentance, deep. And they gave proofs that their repentance was genuine, by putting away all their idols: but they were ever fickle and uncertain.

Verse 16. And his soul was grieved for the misery of Israel.] What a proof of the philanthropy of God! Here his compassions moved on a small scale; but it was the same principle that led him to give his Son Jesus Christ to be a sacrifice for the sins of the whole world. God grieves for the miseries to which his creatures are reduced by their own sins.

Verse 17. The children of Ammon were gathered together] Literally, they cried against Israel—they sent out criers in different directions to stir up all the enemies of Israel; and when they had made a mighty collection, they encamped in Gilead.

Verse 18. What man is he that will begin to fight] It appears that, although the spirit of patriotism had excited the people at large to come forward against their enemies, yet they had no general, none to lead them forth to battle. God, however, who had accepted their sincere repentance, raised them up an able captain in the person of Jephthah; and in him the suffrages of the people were concentrated, as we shall see in the following chapter.

In those ancient times much depended on the onset; a war was generally terminated in one battle; the first impression was therefore of great consequence, and it required a person skilful, valorous, and strong, to head the attack. Jephthah was a person in whom all these qualifications appear to have met. When God purposes to deliver, he, in the course of his providence, will find out, employ, and direct the proper means.

CHAPTER XI.

The history of Jephthah, and his covenant with the Gileadites, 1-10. He is elected by the people, 11. Sends an embassy to the king of the Ammonites, to inquire why they invaded Israel; and receives an answer, to which he sends back a spirited reply, 12-27. This is disregarded by the Ammonites, and Jephthah prepares for battle, 28, 29. His vow, 30, 31. He attacks and defeats them, 32, 33. On his return to Mizpeh he is met by his daughter, whom, according to his vow, he dedicates to the Lord, 34-40.

NOW *Jephthah the Gileadite was <sup>b</sup>a mighty man of valour, and he was the son of <sup>c</sup>an harlot: and Gilead begat Jephthah.

2 And Gilead's wife bare him sons; and his wife's sons grew up, and they thrust out Jephthah, and said unto him, Thou shalt not inherit in our father's house; for thou art the son of a strange woman.

3 Then Jephthah fled <sup>d</sup>from his brethren, and dwelt in the land of Tob: and there were gathered <sup>e</sup>vain men to Jephthah, and went out with him.

4 And it came to pass <sup>f</sup>in process of time, that the children of Ammon made war against Israel.

5 And it was so, that when the children of Ammon made war against Israel, the elders of Gilead went to fetch Jephthah out of the land of Tob:

6 And they said unto Jephthah, Come, and be our captain, that we may fight with the children of Ammon.

7 And Jephthah said unto the children of Gilead, <sup>g</sup>Did not ye hate me, and expel me out of my father's house? and why are ye come unto me now when ye are in distress?

8 <sup>h</sup>And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, Therefore we <sup>i</sup>turn again to thee now, that thou mayest go with us, and fight against the children of Ammon, and be <sup>j</sup>our head over all the inhabitants of Gilead.

9 And Jephthah said unto the elders of Gilead, If ye bring me home again to fight against the children of Ammon, and the LORD deliver them before me, shall I be your head?

10 And the elders of Gilead said unto Jephthah, <sup>k</sup>The LORD <sup>l</sup>be witness between us, if we do not so according to thy words.

11 Then Jephthah went with the elders of Gilead, and the people made him <sup>m</sup>head and captain over them: and Jephthah uttered all his words <sup>n</sup>before the LORD in Mizpeh.

12 And Jephthah sent messengers unto the king of the children of Ammon, saying, What hast thou to do with me that thou art come against me to fight in my land?

13 And the king of the children of Ammon answered unto the messengers of Jephthah, <sup>o</sup>Because Israel took away my land, when they came up out of Egypt, from Arnon even unto <sup>p</sup>Jabbok, and unto Jordan: now therefore restore those lands again peaceably.

14 And Jephthah sent messengers again unto the king of the children of Ammon:

15 And said unto him, Thus saith Jephthah, <sup>q</sup>Israel took not away the land of Moab, nor the land of the children of Ammon:

16 But when Israel came up from Egypt, and <sup>r</sup>walked through the wilderness unto the Red Sea, and <sup>s</sup>came to Kadesh;

17 Then <sup>t</sup>Israel sent messengers unto the king

Verse 1. Now Jephthah—was the son of an harlot] I think the word zonah, which we here render harlot, should be translated, as is contended for on Josh. ii. 1, viz., a hostess, keeper of an inn, or tavern. She was very probably a Canaanite, as she is called ver. 2 a strange woman, a woman of another race; and on this account his brethren drove him from the family, as he could not have a full right to the inheritance, his mother not being an Israelite.

Verse 3. There were gathered vain men to Jephthah] Empty men—persons destitute of good sense, and profligate in their manners. The word may however mean in this place poor persons, without property and without employment. The Versions in general consider them as plunderers.

Verse 4. The children of Ammon made war] They had invaded the land of Israel, and were now encamped in Gilead.

Verse 6. Come, and be our captain] The Israelites were assembled in Mizpeh, but were without a captain to lead them against the Ammonites.

Verse 8. Therefore we turn again to thee now] We are convinced that we have dealt unjustly by thee, and we wish now to repair our fault, and give thee this sincere proof of our regret for having acted unjustly, and of our confidence in thee.

Verse 11. Jephthah went with the elders] The elders had chosen him for their head; but, to be valid, this choice must be confirmed by the people; therefore, it is said, the people made him head. But even this did not complete the business; God must be brought in as a party to this transaction; and therefore Jephthah uttered all his words before the Lord—the terms made with the elders and the people, on which he had accepted the command of the army; and, being sure of the divine approbation, he entered on the work with confidence.

Verse 12. Jephthah sent messengers] He wished the Ammonites to explain their own motives for undertaking a war against Israel; as then the justice of his cause would appear more forcibly to the people.

Verse 13. From Arnon even unto Jabbok, and unto Jordan] That is, all the land that had formerly belonged to the Amorites, and to the Moabites, who it seems were confederates on this occasion.

of Edom, saying, Let me, I pray thee, pass through thy land: * but the king of Edom would not hearken thereto. And in like manner they sent unto the king of Moab: but he would not consent: and Israel <sup>b</sup>abode in Kadesh.

18 Then they went along through the wilderness, and <sup>c</sup>compassed the land of Edom, and the land of Moab, and <sup>d</sup>came by the east side of the land of Moab, <sup>e</sup>and pitched on the other side of Arnon, but came not within the border of Moab: for Arnon was the border of Moab.

19 And <sup>f</sup>Israel sent messengers unto Sihon king of the Amorites, the king of Heshbon; and Israel said unto him, <sup>g</sup>Let us pass, we pray thee, through thy land into my place.

20 <sup>h</sup>But Sihon trusted not Israel to pass through his coast: but Sihon gathered all his people together, and pitched in Jahaz, and fought against Israel.

21 And the Lord God of Israel delivered Sihon and all his people into the hand of Israel, and they <sup>i</sup>smote them: so Israel possessed all the land of the Amorites, the inhabitants of that country.

22 And they possessed <sup>j</sup>all the coasts of the Amorites, from Arnon even unto Jabbok, and from the wilderness even unto Jordan.

23 So now the Lord God of Israel hath dispossessed the Amorites from before his people Israel, and shouldst thou possess it?

24 Wilt not thou possess that which <sup>k</sup>Chemosh thy god giveth thee to possess? So whomsoever <sup>l</sup>the Lord our God shall drive out from before us, them will we possess.

Verse 22. From the wilderness even unto Jordan.] From Arabia Deserta on the east to Jordan on the west.

Verse 23. The Lord God of Israel hath dispossessed the Amorites.] Jephthah shows that the Israelites did not take the land of the Moabites or Ammonites, but that of the Amorites, which they had conquered from Sihon their king, who had, without cause or provocation, attacked them; and although the Amorites had taken the lands in question from the Ammonites, yet the title by which Israel held them was good, because they took them not from the Ammonites, but conquered them from the Amorites.

So now the Lord—hath dispossessed the Amorites.—The circumstances in which the Israelites were when they were attacked by the Amorites, plainly proved that, unless Jehovah had helped them, they must have been overcome. God defeated the Amorites, and made a grant of their lands to the Israelites; and they had, in consequence, possessed them for three hundred years. ver. 23.

Verse 24. Wilt not thou possess that which Chemosh thy god giveth thee?] You suppose that the land which you possess was given you by your god Chemosh; and therefore you will not relinquish what you believe you hold by a divine right. Now, we know that Jehovah, our God, has given the Israelites the land of the Amorites; and therefore we will not give it up. The ground of Jephthah's remonstrance was sound and good. The present pretensions of Ammon were unsupported and unjustifiable.

Verse 27. The Lord the Judge be judge—between the children of Israel.] If you be right, and we be wrong, then Jehovah, who is the sovereign and incorruptible Judge, shall determine in your favour; and to Him I submit the righteousness of my cause.

Verse 29. Then the Spirit of the Lord came upon Jephthah.] The Lord qualified him for the work he had called him to do, and thus gave him the most convincing testimony that his cause was good.

Verse 31. Shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt-offering.] The text is, vehayah layhovah, 25 And now art thou any thing better than <sup>m</sup>Balak the son of Zippor, king of Moab? did he ever strive against Israel, or did he ever fight against them,

26 While Israel dwelt in <sup>n</sup>Heshbon and her towns, and in <sup>o</sup>Aroer and her towns, and in all the cities that be along by the coasts of Arnon, three hundred years? why therefore did ye not recover them within that time?

27 Wherefore I have not sinned against thee, but thou doest me wrong to war against me: the Lord <sup>p</sup>the Judge <sup>q</sup>be judge this day between the children of Israel and the children of Ammon.

28 Howbeit the king of the children of Ammon hearkened not unto the words of Jephthah which he sent him.

29 Then <sup>r</sup>the Spirit of the Lord came upon <sup>s</sup>Jephthah, and he passed over Gilead, and Manasse, and passed over Mizpeh of Gilead, and from Mizpeh of Gilead he passed over unto the children of Ammon.

30 And Jephthah <sup>t</sup>vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands, 31 Then it shall be that <sup>u</sup>whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, <sup>v</sup>shall surely be the Lord's, <sup>w</sup>and <sup>x</sup>I will offer it up for a burnt-offering.

32 So Jephthah passed over unto the children of Ammon to fight against them; and the Lord delivered them into his hands.

33 And he smote them from Aroer, even till thou come to <sup>y</sup>Mimith, even twenty cities, and unto <sup>z</sup>the vehaalithahu olah, the translation of which, according to the most accurate Hebrew scholars, is this: I will consecrate it to the Lord, or I will offer it for a burnt-offering; that is, "If it be a thing fit for a burnt-offering, it shall be made one; if fit for the service of God, it shall be consecrated to him." [This use of the conjunction is rare.] That conditions of this kind must have been implied in the vow, is evident enough; to have been made without them, it must have been the vow of a heathen or a madman. If a day had met him, this could not have been made a burnt-offering; and if his neighbour or friend's wife son, or daughter, &c., had been returning from a visit to his family, his vow gave him no right over them. Besides, human sacrifices were ever an abomination to the Lord; and this was one of the grand reasons why God drove out the Canaanites, &c., because they offered their sons and daughters to Molech in the fire, i.e. made burnt-offerings of them, as is generally supposed. That Jephthah was a deeply pious man, appears in the whole of his conduct; and that he was well acquainted with the law of Moses, which prohibited all such sacrifices, and stated what was to be offered in sacrifice, is evident enough from his expostulation with the king and people of Ammon, ver. 14-27. Therefore it must be granted that he never made that rash vow which several suppose he did; nor was he capable, if he had, of executing it in that most shocking manner which some Christian writers ("tell it not in Gath.") have contended for. He could not commit a crime which himself had just now been an executor of God's justice to punish in others.

Those who assert that Jephthah did sacrifice his daughter, attempt to justify the opinion from the barbarous usages of those times: but in answer to this it may be justly observed, that Jephthah was now under the influence of the Spirit of God, ver. 29: and that Spirit could not permit him to imbrue his hands in the blood of his own child; and especially under the pretence of offering a pleasing sacrifice to that God who is the Father of mankind, and the Fountain of love, mercy, and compassion. [It is only right to add plain of the vineyards, with a very great slaughter. Thus the children of Ammon were subdued before the children of Israel.

34 And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances: and she was his only child; beside her he had neither son nor daughter.

35 And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: for I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and I cannot go back.

36 And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the LORD, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth: forasmuch as the LORD hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon.

37 And she said unto her father, Let this thing be done for me; let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and bewail my virginity, I and my fellows.

38 And he said, Go. And he sent her away for two months: and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains.

39 And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man. And it was a custom in Israel.

40 That the daughters of Israel went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.

that the opinion so strongly expressed by Dr. Clarke is not held by scholars of unchallenged reputation as critics and Christians. The argument in favour of the popular interpretation has much weight, and in modern times has won many advocates.]

Verse 33. Twenty cities] That is, he either took or destroyed twenty cities of the Ammonites, and completely routed their whole army.

Verse 34. With timbrels and with dances] From this instance we find that it was an ancient custom for women to go out to meet returning conquerors with musical instruments, songs, and dances; and that it was continued afterwards is evident from the instance given, 1 Sam. xviii. 6, where David was met, on his return from the defeat of Goliath and the Philistines, by women from all the cities of Israel, with singing and dancing, and various instruments of music.

Verse 35. Thou hast brought me very low] He was greatly distressed to think that his daughter, who was his only child, should be, in consequence of his vow, prevented from continuing his family in Israel; for it is evident that he had not any other child, for beside her, says the text, he had neither son nor daughter, ver. 34.

Verse 36. And she said unto him] What a pattern of filial piety and obedience! She was at once obedient, pious, and patriotic. A woman to have no offspring was considered to be in a state of the utmost degradation among the Hebrews; but she is regardless of all this, seeing her father is in safety, and her country delivered.

Verse 37. I and my fellows.] Whether she meant the young women of her own acquaintance, or those who had been consecrated to God in the same way, though on different accounts, is not quite clear; but it is likely she means her own companions: and her going up and down upon the mountains may signify no more than her paying each of them a visit at their own houses, previously to her being shut up at the tabernacle; and this visiting of each at their own home might require the space of two months. This, I am inclined to think, is the meaning of this difficult clause.

Verse 39. And she knew no man.] She continued a virgin all the days of her life.

Verse 40. To lament the daughter of Jephthah] I am satisfied that this is not a correct translation of the original. Houbigant translates the whole verse thus: "But this custom prevailed in Israel, that the virgins of Israel went at different times, four days in the year, to the daughter of Jephthah, that they might comfort her." This verse also gives evidence that the daughter of Jephthah was not sacrificed: nor does it appear that the custom or statute referred to here lasted after the death of Jephthah's daughter.

CHAPTER XII.

The Ephraimites are incensed against Jephthah, because he did not call them to the war against the Ammonites; and threaten his destruction, 1. He vindicates himself, 2, 3; and arms the Gileadites against the men of Ephraim; they fight against them, and kill forty-two thousand Ephraimites at the passages of Jordan, 4-6. Jephthah dies, having judged Israel six years, 7. Ibzan judge seven years, 8. His posterity and death, 9, 10. Elon judge ten years, and dies, 11, 12. Abdon judge eight years, 13. His posterity and death, 14, 15.

AND the men of Ephraim gathered themselves together, and went northward, and said unto Jephthah, Wherefore passedest thou over to fight against the children of Ammon, and didst not call us to go with thee? we will burn thine house upon thee with fire.

2 And Jephthah said unto them, I and my people were at great strife with the children of Ammon;

Verse 1. The men of Ephraim gathered themselves together] They called each other to arms; summoning all their tribe and friends to arm themselves to destroy Jephthah and the Gileadites, being jealous lest they should acquire too much power.

and when I called you, ye delivered me not out of their hands.

3 And when I saw that ye delivered me not, I put my life in my hands, and passed over against the children of Ammon, and the LORD delivered them into my hand: wherefore then are ye come up unto me this day, to fight against me?

4 Then Jephthah gathered together all the men

Verse 3. I put my life in my hands] I exposed myself to the greatest difficulties and dangers. This phrase occurs in some other places of scripture; see 1 Sam. xix. 5, xxviii. 21.

Verse 4. And fought with Ephraim] Some commentators suppose that there were two battles in which the Ephraim-of Gilead, and fought with Ephraim: and the men of Gilead smote Ephraim, because they said, Ye Gileadites are fugitives of Ephraim among the Ephraimites, and among the Manassites.

5 And the Gileadites took <sup>b</sup> the passages of Jordan before the Ephraimites: and it was so, that when those Ephraimites which were escaped said, Let me go over; that the men of Gilead said unto him, Art thou an Ephraimite? If he said, Nay,

6 Then said they unto him, Say now Shibboleth: and he said Sibboleth: for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him, and slew him at the passages of Jordan: and there fell at that time of the Ephraimites forty and two thousand.

7 And Jephthah judged Israel six years. Then died Jephthah the Gileadite, and was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

8 And after him <sup>d</sup> Ibzan of Beth-lehem judged Israel.

ites were defeated: the first mentioned in the above clause; and the second occasioned by the taunting language mentioned in the conclusion of the verse, Ye Gileadites are fugitives of Ephraim. Where the point of this reproach lies, or what is the reason of it, cannot be easily ascertained.

Verse 6. Say now Shibboleth; and he said Sibboleth] The original differs only in the first letter samech, instead of sheen. The difference between seen, without a point, which when pointed is pronounced sheen, and samech, is supposed by many to be imperceptible. But there can be no doubt there was, to the ears of a Hebrew, a most sensible distinction. It is likely that the Ephraimites were, in reference to the pronunciation of sh, as different from the Gileadites as the people in some parts of the north of England are, in the pronunciation of the letter r, from all the other inhabitants of the land. The sound of th cannot be pronounced by the Persians in general; and yet it is a common sound among the Arabians.

Though the Ephraimites had not a different dialect, they had, it appears, a different pronunciation, which confounded, to others, letters of the same organ, and thus produced, not only a different sound, but even an opposite meaning. This was a sufficient test to find out an Ephraimite; and he who 9 And he had thirty sons and thirty daughters, whom he sent abroad, and took in thirty daughters from abroad for his sons. And he judged Israel seven years.

10 Then died Ibzan, and was buried at Beth-lehem.

11 And after him <sup>a</sup> Elon, a Zebulonite, judged Israel; and he judged Israel ten years.

12 And Elon the Zebulonite died, and was buried in Ajalon in the country of Zebulun.

13 And after him <sup>a</sup> Abdon the son of Hillel, a Pirathonite, judged Israel.

14 And he had forty sons and thirty <sup>a</sup> nephews, that <sup>b</sup> rode on threescore and ten ass colts: and he judged Israel eight years.

spoke not as he was commanded, at the fords of Jordan spoke against his own life.

Verse 8. And after him Ibzan] It appears that during the administration of Jephthah—six years, Ibzan—seven years, Elon—ten years, and Abdon—eight years (in the whole thirty-one years), the Israelites had peace in all their borders; and we shall find by the following chapter that in this time of rest they corrupted themselves, and were afterwards delivered into the power of the Philistines.

1. We find that Ibzan had a numerous family, sixty children; and Abdon had forty sons and thirty grandsons; and that they lived splendidly, which is here expressed by their riding on seventy young asses.

2. It does not appear that any thing particular took place in the civil state of the Israelites during the time of these latter judges; nothing is said concerning their administration, whether it was good or bad: nor is anything mentioned of the state of religion. It is likely that they enjoyed peace without, and their judges were capable of preventing discord and sedition within. Yet, doubtless, God was at work among them, though there were none to record the operations either of his hand or his Spirit; but the people who feared him no doubt bore testimony to the word of his grace.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Israelites corrupt themselves, and are delivered into the hands of the Philistines forty years, 1. An Angel appears to the wife of Manoah, foretells the birth of her son, and gives her directions how to treat both herself and her child, who was to be a deliverer of Israel, 2-5. She informs her husband of this transaction, 6, 7. Manoah prays that the Angel may re-appear; he is heard, and the Angel appears to him and his wife, and repeats his former directions concerning the mother and the child, 8-14. Manoah presents an offering to the Lord, and the Angel ascends in the flame, 15-20. Manoah is alarmed, but is comforted by the judicious reflections of his wife, 21-23. Samson is born, and begins to feel the influence of the Divine Spirit, 24, 25.

Verse 1. Delivered them into the hand of the Philistines] It does not appear that after Shamgar, to the present time, the Philistines were in a condition to oppress Israel, or God had not permitted them to do it; but now they have a commission, the Israelites having departed from the Lord. Nor is it evident that the Philistines had entirely subjected the

2 And there was a certain man of <sup>a</sup> Zorah, of the family of the Danites, whose name was Manoah; and his wife was barren, and bare not.

3 And the <sup>a</sup> angel of the LORD appeared unto the Israelites, as there still appears to have been a sort of commerce between the two people.

Verse 2. A certain man of Zorah] A town in the tribe of Judah, but afterwards given to Dan.

Verse 3. The angel of the Lord] Generally supposed to have been the same that appeared to Moses, Joshua, Gideon, woman, and said unto her, Behold now, thou art barren, and bearest not: but thou shalt conceive, and bear a son.

4 Now therefore beware, I pray thee, and drink not wine nor strong drink, and eat not any unclean thing:

5 For, lo, thou shalt conceive and bear a son; and no razor shall come on his head: for the child shall be a Nazarite unto God from the womb: and he shall begin to deliver Israel out of the hand of the Philistines.

6 Then the woman came and told her husband, saying, A man of God came unto me, and his countenance was like the countenance of an angel of God, very terrible: but I asked him not whence he was, neither told he me his name:

7 But he said unto me, Behold, thou shalt conceive, and bear a son; and now drink no wine nor strong drink, neither eat any unclean thing: for the child shall be a Nazarite to God from the womb to the day of his death.

8 Then Manoah entreated the Lord, and said, O my Lord, let the man of God which thou didst send come again unto us, and teach us what we shall do unto the child that shall be born.

9 And God hearkened to the voice of Manoah; and the angel of God came again unto the woman as she sat in the field: but Manoah her husband was not with her.

10 And the woman made haste, and ran, and shewed her husband, and said unto him, Behold, the man hath appeared unto me, that came unto me the other day.

11 And Manoah arose, and went after his wife, and came to the man, and said unto him, Art thou the man that spakest unto the woman? And he said, I am.

12 And Manoah said, Now let thy words come to pass. How shall we order the child, and how shall we do unto him?

13 And the angel of the Lord said unto Manoah, Of all that I said unto the woman, let her beware.

14 She may not eat of any thing that cometh of the vine, neither let her drink wine or strong drink, nor eat any unclean thing: all that I commanded her let her observe.

15 And Manoah said unto the angel of the Lord, I pray thee, let us detain thee, until we shall have made ready a kid for thee.

16 And the angel of the Lord said unto Manoah, Though thou detain me, I will not eat of thy bread: and if thou wilt offer a burnt-offering, thou must offer it unto the Lord. For Manoah knew not that he was an angel of the Lord.

17 And Manoah said unto the angel of the Lord, What is thy name, that when thy sayings come to pass we may do thee honour?

18 And the angel of the Lord said unto him, Why askest thou thus after my name, seeing it is secret?

19 So Manoah took a kid with a meat-offering, and offered it upon a rock unto the Lord: and the angel did wondrously; and Manoah and his wife looked on.

20 For it came to pass, when the flame went up toward heaven from off the altar, that the angel of the Lord ascended in the flame of the altar. And Manoah and his wife looked on it, and fell on their faces to the ground.

21 But the angel of the Lord did no more appear to Manoah and to his wife. Then Manoah knew that he was an angel of the Lord.

22 And Manoah said unto his wife, We shall surely die, because we have seen God.

23 But his wife said unto him, If the Lord were pleased to kill us, he would not have received a burnt-offering and a meat-offering at our hands; neither would he have shewed us all these things, nor would as at this time have told us such things as these.

24 And the woman bare a son, and called his name Samson: and the child grew, and the Lord blessed him.

25 And the Spirit of the Lord began to move him at times in the camp of Dan between Zorah and Eshtaol.

&c., and no other than the Second Person of the ever-blessed Trinity.

Verse 4. Beware—drink not wine] As Samson was designed to be a Nazarite from the womb, it was necessary that, while his mother carried and nursed him, she should live the life of a Nazarite, neither drinking wine, nor any inebriating liquor, nor eating any kind of forbidden meat.

Verse 5. He shall begin to deliver Israel] Samson only began this deliverance, for it was not till the days of David that the Israelites were completely redeemed from the power of the Philistines.

Verse 9. The angel of God came again] This second appearance of the Angel was probably essential to the peace of Manoah, who might have been jealous of his wife had he not had this proof that the thing was of the Lord.

Verse 15. Until we shall have made ready a kid] Not knowing his quality, Manoah wished to do this as an act of hospitality.

Verse 16. I will not eat of thy bread] As I am a spiritual being, I subsist not by earthly food.

And if thou wilt offer a burnt-offering] Neither shall I receive that homage which belongs to God; thou must therefore offer thy burnt-offering to Jehovah.

Verse 18. Seeing it is secret] It was because it was secret that they wished to know it. The Angel does not say that it was secret, but it is WONDERFUL; the very character that is given to Jesus Christ, Isa. ix. 6; and it is supposed by some that the Angel gives this as his name, and consequently that he was our blessed Lord.

Verse 19. The angel did wondrously] He acted according to his name; he, being wonderful, performed wonderful things; probably causing fire to arise out of the rock and consume the sacrifice, and then ascending in the flame.

Verse 23. If the Lord were pleased to kill us, &c.] This is excellent reasoning, and may be of great use to every truly religious mind in cloudy and dark dispensations of Divine Providence. It is not likely that God, who has preserved thee so long, borne with thee so long, and fed and supported thee all thy life long, girding thee when thou knewest him not, is less willing to save and provide for thee and thine now than he was, when, probably, thou trustedst less in him. He who freely gave his Son to redeem thee, can never be indifferent to thy welfare; and if he give thee power to pray and trust in him, is it at all likely that he is now seeking an occasion against thee, in order to destroy thee? Add to this the very sight that shows thee thy wretchedness, ingratitude, and disobedience, is in itself a proof that he is waiting to be gracious to thee; and the penitential pangs thou feelest, and thy bitter regret for thy unfaithfulness, argue that the light and fire are of God's own kindling, and are sent to direct and refine, not to drive thee out of the way and destroy thee. Nor would he have told thee such things of his love, mercy, and kindness, and unwillingness to destroy sinners, as he has told thee in his sacred word, if he had been determined not to extend his mercy to thee.

Verse 24. And called his name Samson] The original shimshon, which is from the root shamash, to serve, probably means either a little sun, or a little servant; and this latter is so likely a name to be imposed on an only son, by maternal fondness, that it leaves but little doubt of the propriety of the etymology. [Others derive the name from a root which involves the idea of strength.]

And the Lord blessed him.] Gave evident proofs that the child was under the peculiar protection of the Most High; causing him to increase daily in stature and extraordinary strength.

Verse 25. The Spirit of the Lord began to move him] He felt the degrading bondage of his countrymen, and a strong desire to accomplish something for their deliverance. These feelings and motions he had from the Divine Spirit.

Camp of Dan] Probably the place where his parents dwelt; for they were Danites, and the place is supposed to have its name from its being the spot where the Danites stopped when they sent some men of their company to rob Micah of his teraphim, &c.

As he had these influences between Zorah and Eshtaol, it is evident that this was while he dwelt at home with his parents. Thus God began, from his infancy, to qualify him for the work to which he had called him.

CHAPTER XIV.

Samson marries a wife of the Philistines, 1-4. Slays a young lion at Timnath, in the carcase of which he afterwards finds a swarm of bees, 5-9. He makes a feast; they appoint him thirty companions, to whom he puts forth a riddle, which they cannot expound, 10-14. They entice his wife to get the interpretation from him; she succeeds, informs them, and they tell the explanation, 15-18. He is incensed, and slays thirty of the Philistines, 19-20.

AND Samson went down <sup>a</sup>to Timnath, and <sup>b</sup>saw a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines.

2 And he came up, and told his father and his mother, and said, I have seen a woman in Timnath of the daughters of the Philistines: now therefore <sup>c</sup>get her for me to wife.

3 Then his father and his mother said unto him, Is there never a woman among the daughters of <sup>d</sup>thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the <sup>e</sup>uncircumcised Philistines? And Samson said unto his father, Get her for me; for <sup>f</sup>she-pleaseth me well.

4 But his father and his mother knew not that it was <sup>g</sup>of the LORD, that he sought an occasion against the Philistines: for at that time <sup>h</sup>the Philistines had dominion over Israel.

5 Then went Samson down, and his father and his mother, to Timnath, and came to the vineyards of Timnath: and, behold, a young lion roared <sup>i</sup>against him.

Verse 1. Went down to Timnath] A frontier town of the Philistines, at the beginning of the lands belonging to the tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 67; but afterwards given up to Dan, Josh. xix. 43. David took this place from the Philistines, but they again got possession of it in the reign of Ahaz, 2 Chron. xxviii. 18.

Verse 3. Is there never a woman] To marry with any that did not belong to the Israelitish stock, was contrary to the law, Exod. xxiv. 16, Deut. vii. 3. But this marriage of Samson was said to be of the Lord, ver. 4; that is, God permitted it (for in no other sense can we understand the phrase), that it might be a means of bringing about the deliverance of Israel.

For she pleaseth me well.] She is right in my eyes. This is what is supposed to be a sufficient reason to justify either man or woman in their random choice of wife or husband.

When the will has sufficient power, its determinations are its own rule of right. That will should be pure and well directed that says, It shall be so, because I WILL it should be so.

Verse 5. A young lion roared against him.] Came fiercely out upon him, ready to tear him in pieces.

Verse 6. He rent him as he would have rent a kid] Now it is not intimated that he did this by his own natural

6 And <sup>j</sup>the Spirit of the LORD came mightily upon him, and he rent him as he would have rent a kid, and he had nothing in his hand; but he told not his father or his mother what he had done.

7 And he went down, and talked with the woman; and she pleased Samson well.

8 And after a time he returned to take her, and he turned aside to see the carcase of the lion: and, behold, there was a swarm of bees and honey in the carcase of the lion.

9 And he took thereof in his hands, and went on eating, and came to his father and mother, and he gave them, and they did eat: but he told not them that he had taken the honey out of the carcase of the lion.

10 So his father went down unto the woman: and Samson made there a feast; for so used the young men to do.

11 And it came to pass, when they saw him, that they brought thirty companions to be with him.

12 And Samson said unto them, I will now <sup>k</sup>put strength, but by the Spirit of the Lord coming mightily upon him: so that his strength does not appear to be his own, nor to be at his command; his might was, by the will of God, attached to his hair and to his Nazirate.

Verse 7. And talked with the woman] That is, concerning marriage; thus forming the espousals.

Verse 8. And after a time] Probably about one year; as this was the time that generally elapsed between espousing and wedding.

A swarm of bees and honey in the carcase] By length of time the flesh had been entirely consumed off the bones, and a swarm of bees had formed their combs within the region of the thorax: nor was it an improper place; nor was the thing unfrequent, if we may credit ancient writers; the carcases of slain beasts becoming a receptacle of wild bees. [Probably it was not in the skeleton, but in the carcase, dried by the heat of the sun.]

Verse 10. Samson made there a feast] The marriage-feast, when he went to marry his espoused wife.

Verse 11. They brought thirty companions] These are called in scripture children of the bride-chamber, and friends of the bridegroom.

Verse 12. I will now put forth a riddle] Probably this forth a riddle unto you : if ye can certainly declare it me <sup>a</sup> within the seven days of the feast, and find it out, then I will give you thirty <sup>b</sup> sheets and thirty <sup>c</sup> change of garments :

13 But if ye cannot declare it me, then shall ye give me thirty sheets and thirty change of garments. And they said unto him, Put forth thy riddle, that we may hear it.

14 And he said unto them, Out of the eater came forth meat, and out of the strong came forth sweetness. And they could not in three days expound the riddle.

15 And it came to pass on the seventh day that they said unto Samson's wife, <sup>d</sup> Entice thy husband, that he may declare unto us the riddle, <sup>e</sup> lest we burn thee and thy father's house with fire : have ye called us <sup>f</sup> to take that we have ? is it not so ?

16 And Samson's wife wept before him, and said, <sup>g</sup> Thou dost but hate me, and lovest me not : thou hast put forth a riddle unto the children of my people, and hast not told it me. And he said unto her, Behold, I have not told it my father nor my mother, and shall I tell it thee ?

17 And she wept before him <sup>h</sup> the seven days, while their feast lasted : and it came to pass on the seventh day, that he told her, because she lay sore upon him : and she told the riddle to the children of her people.

18 And the men of the city said unto him on the seventh day before the sun went down, What is sweeter than honey ? and what is stronger than a lion ? And he said unto them, If ye had not ploughed with my heifer, ye had not found out my riddle.

19 And <sup>i</sup> the Spirit of the Lord came upon him, and he went down to Ashkelon, and slew thirty men of them, and took their <sup>j</sup> spoil, and gave change of garments unto them which expounded the riddle. And his anger was kindled, and he went up to his father's house.

20 But Samson's wife <sup>k</sup> was given to his companion, whom he had used as <sup>l</sup> his friend.

was one part of the amusements at a marriage feast ; each in his turn proposing a riddle, to be solved by any of the rest on a particular forfeit ; the proposer forfeiting, if solved, the same which the company must forfeit if they could not solve it.

Thirty sheets] I have no doubt that the Arab hayk, or hyke, is here meant ; a dress in which the natives of the East wrap themselves, as a Scottish highlander does in his plaid. When an Arab does not choose to wrap himself in the hayk, he throws it over his left shoulder, where it hangs till the weather, &c., obliges him to wrap it round him. The hayk is either mean or elegant, according to the quality of the cloth, and of the person who wears it. By the changes of garments, it is very likely that the kumja and caftan are meant, or at least the caftan ; but most likely both : for the Hebrew has changes or succession of garments.

Verse 14. And he said unto them] This was scarcely a fair riddle ; for unless the fact to which it refers were known, there is no rule of interpretation by which it could be found out. It was a custom among the ancient Greeks to propose at their festivals, what were called griphoi, riddles, enigmas, or very obscure sayings, both curious and difficult ; and to give a recompence to those who found them out, which generally consisted in either a festive crown, or a goblet full of wine. Those who failed to solve them were condemned to drink a large portion of fresh water, or of wine mingled with sea-water, which they were compelled to take down at one draught, without drawing their breath, their hands being tied behind their backs. Sometimes they gave the crown to the deity in honour of whom the festival was made : and if none could solve the riddle, the reward was given to him who proposed it.

Verse 17. And she wept before him] Not through any love to him, for it appears she had none, but to oblige her paramours ; and of this he soon had ample proof.

Verse 18. If ye had not ploughed with my heifer] If my wife had not been unfaithful to my bed, she would not have been unfaithful to my secret ; and, you being her paramours, your interest was more precious to her than that of her husband. She has betrayed me through her attachment to you.

Calmet has properly remarked that to plough with one's heifer, or to plough in another man's ground, are delicate turns of expression used both by the Greeks and Latins, as well as the Hebrews, to point out a wife's infidelities.

Verse 19. The Spirit of the Lord came upon him] He was inspired with unusual courage, and he felt strength proportioned to his wishes.

He—slew thirty men—and took their spoil] He took their hayks, their kumjas, and caftans, and gave them to the thirty persons who, by unfair means, had solved his riddle ; thus they had what our version calls thirty-sheets, and thirty changes of raiment.

Verse 20. But Samson's wife was given to his companion] This was the same kind of person who is called the friend of the bridegroom, John iii. 29. And it is very likely that she loved this person better than she loved her husband, and went to him as soon as Samson had gone to his father's house at Zorah. She might, however, have thought herself abandoned by him, and therefore took another ; this appears to have been the persuasion of her father, chap. xv. 2. But her betraying his secret and his interests to his enemies was a full proof he was not very dear to her ; though, to persuade him to the contrary, she shed many crocodile tears ; see ver. 16. He could not keep his own secret, and he was fool enough to suppose that another would be more faithful to him than he was to himself. If a man never let his secret out of his own bosom, it is impossible that he should ever be betrayed.

CHAPTER XV.

Samson, going to visit his wife, finds her bestowed on another, 1, 2. He is incensed, vows revenge, and burns the corn of the Philistines, 3-5. They burn Samson's wife and her father, 6. He is still incensed, makes a great slaughter among them, 7, 8. The Philistines gather together against Israel ; and to appease them, the men of Judah bind Samson, and deliver him into their hands, 9-13. The Spirit of the Lord comes upon him ; he breaks his bonds, finds the jawbone of an ass, and therewith kills a thousand men, 14-16. He is sorely fatigued ; and being thirsty, God miraculously produces water from an opening of the ground in Lehi, and he is refreshed, 17-19. He judges Israel in the time of the Philistines twenty years, 20.

BUT it came to pass within a while after, in the time of wheat harvest, that Samson visited his wife with a kid; and he said, I will go in to my wife into the chamber. But her father would not suffer him to go in.

2 And her father said, I verily thought that thou hadst utterly hated her; therefore I gave her to thy companion: is not her younger sister fairer than she? take her, I pray thee, instead of her.

3 And Samson said concerning them, Now shall I be more blameless than the Philistines, though I do them a displeasure.

4 And Samson went and caught three hundred foxes, and took firebrands, and turned tail to tail, and put a firebrand in the midst between two tails.

5 And when he had set the brands on fire, he let them go into the standing corn of the Philistines, and burnt up both the shocks, and also the standing corn, with the vineyards and olives.

6 Then the Philistines said, Who hath done this? And they answered, Samson the son in law of the Timnite, because he had taken his wife, and given her to his companion. And the Philistines came up and burnt her and her father with fire.

7 And Samson said unto them, Though ye have done this, yet will I be avenged of you, and after that I will cease.

<sup>a</sup> Ch. xiv. 2.—<sup>b</sup> Ch. xiv. 16.—<sup>c</sup> Ch. xiv. 20.—<sup>d</sup> Heb. let her be thine.
• Or, Now shall I be blameless from the Philistines, though, &c.—Or,

Verse 1. Visited his wife with a kid] On her betraying him, he had, no doubt, left her in great disgust. After some time his affection appears to have returned; and, taking a kid, or perhaps a fawn, as a present, he goes to make reconciliation, and finds her given to his bridegroom; probably the person to whom she betrayed his riddle.

Verse 2. Thou hadst utterly hated her] As he was conscious she had given him great cause to do so.

Her younger sister] The father appears to have been perfectly sincere in this offer.

Verse 4. Went and caught three hundred foxes] There has been much controversy concerning the meaning of the term shualim, some supposing it to mean foxes or jackals, and others handfuls or sheaves of corn. Much of the force of the objection against the common version will be diminished by the following considerations:—

1. Foxes, or jackals, are common and gregarious in that country.

2. It is not hinted that Samson collected them alone; he might have employed several hands in this work.

3. It is not said he collected them all in one day; he might have employed several days as well as many persons, to furnish him with these means of vengeance.

4. In other countries, where ferocious beasts were less numerous, great multitudes have been exhibited at once.

That foxes, or the creature called shual, abounded in Judea, is evident from their frequent mention in Scripture, and from several places bearing their name. 1. It appears they were so numerous that even their cubs ruined the vineyards; see Cant. ii. 15. Jeremiah complains that the foxes had occupied the mountains of Judea, Lam. v. 18. They are mentioned as making incursions into inclosures, &c., Neh. iv. 3. Ezekiel compares the numerous false prophets to these animals, chap. xiii. 4. In Josh. xv. 28, we find a place called Hazel Shual, "the court of the foxes;" and in chap. xix. 42 a place called Shaalabbin, "the foxes;" no doubt from the number of those animals in that district. And mention is made of the land of Shual, or of the fox, 1 Sam. xiii. 17.

The creature called shual is represented by travellers and naturalists who have been in Judea as an animal between a wolf and a fox. They are frequent in the East, and often destroy infirm persons and children.

I see no improbability in the common version.

Turned tail to tail] Had he put a firebrand to each, the creature, naturally terrified at fire, would have instantly taken to cover: and thus the design of Samson would have been frustrated. But, tying two of them together by their 8 And he smote them hip and thigh with a great slaughter: and he went down and dwelt in the top of the rock Etam.

9 Then the Philistines went up, and pitched in Judah, and spread themselves in Lehi.

10 And the men of Judah said, Why are ye come up against us? And they answered, To bind Samson are we come up, to do to him as he hath done to us.

11 Then three thousand men of Judah went to the top of the rock Etam, and said to Samson, Knowest thou not that the Philistines are rulers over us? what is this that thou hast done unto us? And he said unto them, As they did unto me, so have I done unto them.

12 And they said unto him, We are come down to bind thee, that we may deliver thee into the hand of the Philistines. And Samson said unto them, Swear unto me, that ye will not fall upon me yourselves.

13 And they spake unto him, saying, No; but we will bind thee fast, and deliver thee into their hand: but surely we will not kill thee. And they bound him with two new cords, and brought him up from the rock.

14 And when he came unto Lehi, the Philistines shouted against him: and the Spirit of the Lord tails, they would frequently thwart each other in running, pull hither and thither, and thus make the greater devastation.

Verse 6. Burnt her and her father] This was probably done to appease Samson: as they saw he had been unjustly treated both by his wife and her father; therefore they destroyed them both, that they might cause his wrath to cease from them. And this indeed seems intimated in the following verse: And Samson said—Though ye have done this, yet will I be avenged of you; that is, I am not yet satisfied: ye have done me great wrongs, I must have proportionate redress; then I shall rest satisfied.

Verse 8. He smote them hip and thigh] This also is variously understood; but the general meaning seems plain; he appears to have had no kind of defensive weapon, therefore he was obliged to grapple with them, and, according to the custom of wrestlers, trip up their feet, and then bruise them to death. Some translate heaps upon heaps; others, he smote horsemen and footmen; others, he wounded them from their legs to their thighs, &c., &c. Some think in their running away from him he kicked them down, and then trod them to death; thus his leg or thigh was against their hip; hence the expression. [No doubt the expression is proverbial, signifying unsparing slaughter.]

The top of the rock Etam.] It is very likely that this is the same place as that mentioned 1 Chron. iv. 32; it was in the tribe of Simeon, on the borders of Dan, and probably a fortified place.

Verse 10. To bind Samson are we come up] It seems they did not wish to come to an open rupture with the Israelites, provided they would deliver up him who was the cause of their disasters.

Verse 11. Three thousand men of Judah went] It appears evidently from this that Samson was strongly posted, and they thought that no less than three thousand men were necessary to reduce him.

Verse 12. That ye will not fall upon me yourselves.] He could not bear the thought of contending with and slaying his own countrymen; for there is no doubt that he could have as easily rescued himself from their hands as from those of the Philistines.

Verse 13. They bound him with two new cords] Probably his hands with one and his legs with the other.

Verse 14. When he came unto Lehi] This was the name of the place to which they brought him, either to put him to death, or keep him in perpetual confinement.

Shouted against him] His capture was a matter of public rejoicing.

came mightily upon him, and the cords that were upon his arms became as flax that was burnt with fire, and his bands were loosed from off his hands.

15 And he found a new jawbone of an ass, and put forth his hand, and took it, and slew a thousand men therewith.

16 And Samson said, With the jawbone of an ass, I have slain a thousand men.

17 And it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking, that he cast away the jawbone out of his hand, and called that place Ramath-lehi.

Verse 15. He found a new jawbone of an ass] I rather think that the word teriyah, which we translate new, and the margin moist, should be understood as signifying the tabid or putrid state of the ass from which this jawbone was taken. He found there a dead ass in a state of putrefaction; on which account he could the more easily separate the jaw from its integuments; this was a circumstance proper to be recorded by the historian, and a mark of the providence of God. But were we to understand it of a fresh jawbone, very lately separated from the head of an ass, the circumstance does not seem worthy of being recorded.

Verse 16. With the jawbone of an ass, heaps upon heaps] I cannot see the propriety of this rendering of the Hebrew words. I believe they should be translated thus:

“With the jawbone of this ass, an ass (the foal) of two asses; With the jawbone of this ass I have slain a thousand men.”

This appears to have been a triumphal song on the occasion; and the words are variously rendered both by the Versions, and by expositors.

18 And he was sore athirst, and called on the Lord, and said, ‘Thou hast given this great deliverance into the hand of thy servant: and now shall I die for thirst, and fall into the hand of the uncircumcised?’

19 But God clave an hollow place that was in the jaw, and there came water thereout; and when he had drunk, his spirit came again, and he revived: wherefore he called the name thereof En-hakkore, which is in Lehi unto this day.

called or cried. Ps. xxxiv. 6. — j He seems to have judged South-west Israel during twenty years of their servitude of the Philistines. — k Ch. xiii. 1.

Verse 17. Ramath-lehi.] The lifting up or casting away of the jawbone. Lehi was the name of the place before, Ramath was now added to it here; he lifted up the jawbone against his enemies, and slew them.

Verse 18. I die for thirst] The natural consequence of the excessive fatigue he had gone through in this encounter.

Verse 19. God clave an hollow place that was in the jaw] That was in Lehi; that is, there was a hollow place in this Lehi, and God caused a fountain to spring up in it. Because the place was hollow it was capable of containing the water that rose up in it, and thus of becoming a well.

En-hakkore] The well of the implorer; this name he gave to the spot where the water rose, in order to perpetuate the bounty of God in affording him this miraculous supply.

Which is in Lehi unto this day.] Consequently not in the jawbone of the ass, a most unfortunate rendering.

Verse 20. He judged Israel—twenty years.] Instead of twenty years, the Jerusalem Talmud has forty years; but this reading is not acknowledged by any MS. or Version.

CHAPTER XVI.

Samson comes to Gaza; they lay wait for him; he rises by night, and carries away the city gates, 1-3. Falls in love with Delilah, 4. The lords of the Philistines promise her money if she will obtain from Samson the secret in which his strength lay, 5. By various artifices, she at last obtains this; and communicates it to the Philistines, who seize and bind him, put out his eyes, and cause him to grind in the prison-house, 6-21. At a public festival to Dagon he is brought out to make sport; when, being weary, he requests to be placed between the two pillars which supported the roof of the house, on which three thousand men and women were stationed to see him make sport, 22-27. He prays to God to strengthen him, and pulls down the pillars; by which (the house falling) both himself, the lords of the Philistines, and a vast multitude of the people, are slain, 28-30. His relatives come and take away his body, and bury it, 31.

TH went Samson to Gaza, and saw there an harlot, and went in unto her.

Verse 1. Then went Samson to Gaza, and saw there an harlot] Perhaps the word zonah is to be taken here in its double sense; one who keeps a house for the entertainment of travellers, and who also prostitutes her person.

Gaza was situated near the Mediterranean Sea, and was one of the most southern cities of Palestine. It has been supposed by some to have derived its name from the treasures deposited there by Cambyzes, king of the Persians; because they say Gaza, in Persian, signifies treasure; so Pomponius Mela, and others. But it is more likely to be a Hebrew word, and that this city derived its name azzah from azas, to be strong, it being a strong or well-fortified place, Ps. cxviii. 10, 11, 12. Acts ix. 24. — c Heb. silent.

The Hebrew ain in this word is, by the Septuagint, the Arabic, and the Vulgate, rendered G; hence, instead of azzah, with a strong guttural breathing, we have Gaza, a name by which this town could not be recognized by an ancient Hebrew.

Verse 2. They compassed him in] They shut up all the avenues, secured the gates, and set persons in ambush near them, that they might attack him on his leaving the city early the next morning.

Verse 3. Took the doors of the gate] Though Samson was a very strong man, yet we do not find that he was a giant; consequently, we may conjecture that the gates of the city city, and the two posts, and went away with them, <sup>a</sup>bar and all, and put them upon his shoulders, and carried them up to the top of an hill that is before Hebron.

4 And it came to pass afterward, that he loved a woman <sup>b</sup>in the valley of Sorek, whose name was Delilah.

5 And the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and said unto her, <sup>c</sup>Entice him, and see where in his great strength lieth, and by what means we may prevail against him, that we may bind him to <sup>d</sup>afflict him: and we will give thee every one of us eleven hundred pieces of silver.

6 And Delilah said to Samson, Tell me, I pray thee, wherein thy great strength lieth, and where-with thou mightest be bound to afflict thee.

7 And Samson said unto her, If they bind me with seven <sup>e</sup>green withs that were never dried, then shall I be weak, and be as <sup>f</sup>another man.

8 Then the lords of the Philistines brought up to her seven green withs which had not been dried, and she bound him with them.

9 Now there were men lying in wait, abiding with her in the chamber. And she said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he brake the withs, as a thread of tow is broken when it <sup>g</sup>toucheth the fire. So his strength was not known.

10 And Delilah said unto Samson, Behold, thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: now tell me, I pray thee, wherewith thou mightest be bound.

11 And he said unto her, If they bind me fast with new ropes <sup>h</sup>that never were occupied, then shall I be weak, and be as another man.

were not very large, as he took at once the doors, the two posts, and the bar, with him. The cities of those days would appear to disadvantage among modern villages.

A hill—before Hebron.] Possibly there were two Hebrons; it could not be the city generally understood by the word Hebron, as that was about twenty miles distant from Gaza: unless we suppose that the original is to be understood of the road leading to Hebron; he carried all to the top of that hill which was on the road leading to Hebron.

Verse 4. He loved a woman in the valley of Sorek] Some think Samson took this woman for his wife; others that he had her as a concubine. It appears she was a Philistine; and however strong his love was for her, she seems to have had none for him. He always matched improperly, and he was cursed in all his matches. Where the valley or brook of Sorek was, is not easy to be ascertained. Eusebius and Jerome say it lay southward of Eleutheropolis; but where was Eleutheropolis? Ancient writers take all their measurements from this city; but as it is nowhere mentioned in the Scriptures, it is impossible to fix its situation, for we know not its ancient name.

Verse 5. See wherein his great strength lieth] They saw that his stature was not remarkable; and that, nevertheless, he had most extraordinary strength; therefore they supposed that it was the effect of some charm or amulet. The lords of the Philistines were the five following: Gaza, Gath, Askalon, Ekron, and Ashdod. All these considered Samson as a public enemy; and they promised this bad woman a large sum of money if she would obtain from him the important secret wherein his strength lay, that depriving him of this supernatural power, they might be able to reduce him to bondage.

Verse 7. Seven green withs] That is, any kind of pliant tough wood twisted in the form of a cord or rope. Such are used in many countries formed out of osiers, hazel, &c. And in Ireland, very long and strong ropes are made of the fibres of bog wood, or the larger roots of the fir, which is often dug up in the bogs or mosses of that country. [The cords were probably catgut or animal sinew.]

12 Delilah therefore took new ropes, and bound him therewith, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And there were liers in wait abiding in the chamber. And he brake them from off his arms like a thread.

13 And Delilah said unto Samson, Hitherto thou hast mocked me, and told me lies: tell me wherewith thou mightest be bound. And he said unto her, If thou weavest the seven locks of my head with the web.

14 And she fastened <sup>i</sup>it with the pin, and said unto him, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awaked out of his sleep, and went away with the pin of the beam, and with the web.

15 And she said unto him, <sup>j</sup>How canst thou say, I love thee, when thine heart is not with me? thou hast mocked me these three times, and hast not told me wherein thy great strength lieth.

16 And it came to pass, when she pressed him daily with her words, and urged him, so that his soul was <sup>k</sup>vexed unto death;

17 That he <sup>l</sup>told her all his heart, and said unto her, <sup>m</sup>There hath not come a razor upon mine head; for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb: if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man.

18 And when Delilah saw that he had told her all his heart, she sent and called for the lords of the Philistines, saying, Come up this once, for he hath shewed me all his heart. Then the lords of the Philistines came up unto her, and brought <sup>n</sup>money in their hand.

Verse 9. Men lying in wait] They probably did not appear, as Samson immediately broke his bonds when this bad woman said, The Philistines be upon thee.

Verse 11. If they bind me fast with new ropes] Samson wishes to keep up the opinion which the Philistines held; viz.: that his mighty strength was the effect of some charm; the green withs, the new ropes, and the number seven, are such matters as would naturally be expected in a charm or spell.

Verse 13. The seven locks of my head] Probably Samson had his long hair plaited into seven divisions, and as his vow of a Nazarite obliged him to wear his hair, so, seven being a number of perfection among the Hebrews, his hair being divided into seven locks might more particularly point out the perfection designed by his Nazarite state.

Every person must see that this verse ends abruptly, and does not contain a full sense. The Septuagint read, "If thou shalt weave the seven locks of my head with the web, and shalt fasten them with the pin in the wall, I shall become weak, like other men: And so it was that, when he slept, Dalida took the seven locks of his head, and wove them with the web, and fastened it with the pin to the wall, and said unto him," &c. All the words printed here in italic, are wanting in the present Hebrew copies; but are obviously necessary to complete the sense; else Delilah appears to do something that she is not ordered to do, and to omit what she was commanded.

Verse 16. His soul was vexed unto death] What a consummate fool was this strong man! Might he not have seen, from what already took place, that Delilah intended his ruin? After trifling with her, and lying thrice, he at last commits to her his fatal secret, and thus becomes a traitor to himself and to his God.

Verse 17. If I be shaven, then my strength will go from me] The miraculous strength of Samson must not be supposed to reside either in his hair or in his muscles, but in that relation in which he stood to God as a Nazarite, such a person being bound by a solemn vow to walk in strict conformity to the laws of his Maker. It was a part of the Nazarite's vow 19 *And she made him sleep upon her knees; and she called for a man, and caused him to shave off the seven locks of his head; and she began to afflict him, and his strength went from him.

20 And she said, The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. And he awoke out of his sleep, and said, I will go out as at other times before, and shake myself. And he wist not that the Lord<sup>b</sup> was departed from him.

21 But the Philistines took him, and *put out his eyes, and brought him down to Gaza, and bound him with fetters of brass: and he did grind in the prison-house.

22 Howbeit the hair of his head began to grow again, *after he was shaven.

23 Then the lords of the Philistines gathered them together for to offer a great sacrifice unto Dagon their god, and to rejoice: for they said, Our god hath delivered Samson our enemy into our hand.

24 And when the people saw him, they *praised their god: for they said, Our god hath delivered into our hands our enemy, and the destroyer of our country, *which slew many of us.

25 And it came to pass, when their hearts were *merry, that they said, Call for Samson, that he may make us sport. And they called for Samson out of the prison-house; and he<sup>b</sup> made them sport: and they set him between the pillars.

to permit no razor to pass on his head; and his long hair was the mark of his Nazirite, and of his vow to God. When Samson permitted his hair to be shorn off, he renounced and broke his Nazir vow; in consequence of which God abandoned him; and therefore we are told, in ver. 20, that the Lord was departed from him.

Verse 19. She began to afflict him] She had probably tied his hands slyly while he was asleep, and after having cut off his hair, she began to insult him before she called the Philistines, to try whether he were really reduced to a state of weakness. Finding he could not disengage himself, she called the Philistines, and he, being alarmed, rose up, thinking he could exert himself as before, and shake himself, i.e. disengage himself from his bonds and his enemies: but he wist not that the Lord was departed from him; for as Delilah had cut off his locks while he was asleep, he had not yet perceived that they were gone.

Verse 21. Put out his eyes] Thus was the last of the eye, in looking after and gazing on strange women, punished. As the Philistines did not know that his strength might not return, they put out his eyes, that he might never be able to plan any enterprise against them.

He did grind in the prison-house.] Before the invention of wind and water-mills, the grain was at first bruised between two stones, afterwards ground in hand-mills.

Verse 22. The hair of his head began to grow again] And may we not suppose that, sensible of his sin and folly, he renewed his Nazir vow to the Lord, in consequence of which his supernatural strength was again restored?

Verse 23. Unto Dagon their god] "It had the head of a woman, but all the rest of the body resembled a fish." Dagon was called Derceto among the heathens.

Verse 25. Call for Samson, that he may make us sport] What the sport was we cannot tell; probably it was an exhibition of his prodigious strength. This seems to be intimated by what is said, ver. 22, of the restoration of his hair; and the exertions he was obliged to make will account for the weariness which gave him the pretence to ask for leave to lean against the pillars. Some think he was brought out to be a laughing stock, and that he was variously insulted by the Philistines; hence the version of the Septuagint: and they buffeted him.

Verse 27. Now the house was full of men] It was either the prison-house, house of assembly, or a temple of Dagon, 26 And Samson said unto the lad that held him by the hand, Suffer me that I may feel the pillars whereupon the house standeth, that I may lean upon them.

27 Now the house was full of men and women; and all the lords of the Philistines were there; and there were upon the roof about three thousand men and women, that beheld while Samson made sport.

28 And Samson called unto the Lord, and said, O Lord God, I remember me, I pray thee, and strengthen me, I pray thee, only this once, O God, that I may be at once avenged of the Philistines for my two eyes.

29 And Samson took hold of the two middle pillars upon which the house stood, and *on which it was borne up, of the one with his right hand, and of the other with his left.

30 And Samson said, Let *me die with the Philistines. And he bowed himself with all his might; and the house fell upon the lords, and upon all the people that were therein. So the dead which he slew at his death were more than they which he slew in his life.

31 Then his brethren and all the house of his father came down, and took him, and brought him up, and *buried him between Zorah and Eshtaol in the burying-place of Manoah his father. And he judged Israel twenty years.

raised on pillars, open on all sides, and flat-roofed, so that it could accommodate a multitude of people on the top.

Verse 28. Samson called unto the Lord] It was in consequence of his faith in God that he should be strengthened to overthrow his enemies and the enemies of his country, that he is mentioned, Heb. xi., among those who were remarkable for their faith.

Verse 29. The two middle pillars upon which the house stood] Much learned labour has been lost on the attempt to prove that a building like this might stand on two pillars. But what need of this? There might have been as many pillars here as were in the temple of Diana at Ephesus, and yet the two centre pillars be the key of the building; these being once pulled down, the whole house would necessarily fall.

Verse 30. So the dead which he slew] We are informed that the house was full of men and women, with about three thousand of both sexes on the top; now as the whole house was pulled down, consequently the principal part of all those were slain; and among them we find there were the lords of the Philistines. The death of these, with so many of the inferior chiefs of the people, was such a crush to the Philistine ascendancy, that they troubled Israel no more for several years, and did not even attempt to hinder Samson's relatives from taking away and burying his dead body.

Verse 31. He judged Israel twenty years.] It is difficult to ascertain the time<sup>a</sup> of Samson's magistracy, and the extent of country over which he presided. His jurisdiction seems to have been very limited, and to have extended no farther than over those parts of the tribe of Dan contiguous to the land of the Philistines. Many suppose that he and Eli were contemporaries, Samson being rather an executor of the divine justice upon the enemies of his people, than an administrator of the civil and religious laws of the Hebrews. Allowing Eli and Samson to have been contemporaries, this latter part might have been entirely committed to the care of Eli.

1. Samson does not appear to have left any posterity. His amours with the different women mentioned in the history were unproductive as to issue. Had he married according to the laws of his country, he would have been both a more useful and more happy man, and not have come to a violent death.

2. We seldom find much mental energy dwelling in a body that in size and bulk greatly surpasses the ordinary pitch of man; and wherever there are great physical powers, we seldom find proportionate moral faculties. Samson was a man of a little mind, a slave to his passions, and the wretched dupe of his mistresses. He was not a great, though he was a strong man; and even his muscular force would have been lost, or spent in beating the air, had he not been frequently under the impulse of the Divine Spirit. He often got himself into broils and difficulties, from which nothing but supernatural interposition could have saved him. His attacks upon the Philistines were never well planned, as he does not appear to have asked counsel from God; indeed, he seems to have consulted nothing but his own passions, particularly those of inordinate love and revenge; and the last effort of his extraordinary strength was, not to avenge his people for the oppressions which they had suffered under the Philistinian yoke, nor to avenge the quarrel of God's covenant against the enemies of his truth, but to be avenged of the Philistines for the loss of his two eyes.

3. Samson is a solemn proof how little corporeal power avails where judgment and prudence are wanting, and how dangerous all such gifts are in the hands of any man who has not his passions under proper discipline, and the fear of God continually before his eyes.

4. A parallel has been often drawn between Samson and our blessed Lord, of whom he was supposed to be a most illustrious type. By a fruitful imagination, and the torture of words and facts, we may force resemblances every where; but that not one will naturally result from a cool comparison between Jesus Christ and Samson is most demonstrable. A more exceptionable character is not to be found in the sacred oracles. It is no small dishonour to Christ to be thus compared. There is no resemblance in the qualities of Samson's mind, there is none in his moral conduct, that can entitle him even to the most distant comparison with the chaste, holy, benevolent, and immaculate Jesus. That man dishonours the law of unchangeable righteousness, who endeavours to make Samson a type of any thing or person that can be called holy, just, and pure.

CHAPTER XVII.

Micah, an Ephraimite, restores to his mother eleven hundred shekels of silver, which he had taken from her, 1, 2. She dedicates this to God; and out of a part of it makes a graven image and a molten image, and sets them up in the house of Micah, 3, 4; who consecrates one of his sons to be his priest, 5. He afterwards finds a Levite, whom he consecrates for a priest, and gives him annually ten shekels of silver, with his food and clothing, 6-13.

AND there was a man of Mount Ephraim, whose name was Micah.

2 And he said unto his mother, The eleven hundred shekels of silver that were taken from thee, about which thou cursedst, and spakest of also in mine ears, behold, the silver is with me: I took it. And his mother said, Blessed be thou of the Lord, my son.

3 And when he had restored the eleven hundred shekels of silver to his mother, his mother said, I had wholly dedicated the silver unto the Lord from my hand for my son, to make a graven image and a molten image: now therefore I will restore it unto thee.

4 Yet he restored the money unto his mother; and his mother took two hundred shekels of silver, and gave them to the founder, who made thereof a graven image and a molten image: and they were in the house of Micah.

5 And the man Micah had an house of gods, and made an ephod, and teraphim, and consecrated one of his sons, who became his priest.

6 In those days there was no king in Israel, but every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

7 And there was a young man out of Beth-lehem-judah, of the family of Judah, who was a Levite, and he sojourned there.

Verse 1. And there was a man of Mount Ephraim] It is extremely difficult to fix the chronology of this and the following transactions. Some think them to be here in their natural order; others, that they happened in the time of Joshua, or immediately after the ancients who outlived Joshua. All that can be said with certainty is this, that they happened when there was no king in Israel; i.e. about the time of the Judges, or in some time of the anarchy, ver. 6.

Verse 2. About which thou cursedst] It is likely that, when the mother of Micah missed the money, she poured imprecations on the thief; and that Micah, who had secreted it, hearing this, was alarmed, and restored the money, lest the curses should fall on him.

Verse 3. I had wholly dedicated] From this it appears that Micah's mother, though she made a superstitious use of the money, had no idolatrous design, for she expressly says she had dedicated it to Jehovah; and this appears to have been the reason why she poured imprecations on him who had taken it.

Verse 4. A graven image and a molten image] What these images were, we cannot positively say; they were most probably some resemblances of matters belonging to the tabernacle.

Verse 5. The man Micah had an house of gods] This should, I think, be translated house or temple of God; for it is very likely that both the mother and the son intended no more than a private or domestic chapel, in which they proposed to set up the worship of the true God.

Made an ephod] Perhaps the whole of this case may be stated thus: Micah built a house of God—a chapel, in imitation of the sanctuary; he made a graven image representing the ark, a molten image to represent the mercy-seat, teraphim to represent the cherubim above the mercy-seat, and an ephod in imitation of the sacerdotal garments; and he consecrated one of his sons to be priest. Thus gross idolatry was not the crime of Micah; he only set up in his own house an epitome of the divine worship as performed at Shiloh.

Who became his priest] The word cohen is the common name in Hebrew for a priest of the true God; but sometimes it is applied to idolatrous priests. But that this was not a case of idolatry, and that the true God was worshipped here, is evident from the word Jehovah being used, ver. 4, and oracular answers being given at this house, as we see from chap. xviii.

Verse 6. There was no king in Israel] The word melech, which generally means king, is sometimes taken for a supreme governor, judge, magistrate, or ruler of any kind; and it is likely it should be so understood here.

Every man did that which was right in his own eyes] He was his own governor, and what he did he said was right;

8 And the man departed out of the city from Beth-lehem-judah to sojourn where he could find a place: and he came to Mount Ephraim to the house of Micah, * as he journeyed, 9 And Micah said unto him, Whence comest thou? And he said unto him, I am a Levite of Beth-lehem-judah, and I go to sojourn where I may find a place.

10 And Micah said unto him, Dwell with me, <sup>b</sup> and be<sup>c</sup> unto me a father and a priest, and I will give thee ten shekels of silver by the year, and <sup>d</sup> a and, by his cunning and strength, defended his conduct. When a man's own will, passions, and caprice, are to be made the rule of law, society is in a most perilous and ruinous state. Civil government is of God; and without it the earth must soon be desolated.

Verse 7. Of the family of Judah] The word family may be taken here for tribe; or the young man might have been of the tribe of Judah by his mother, and of the tribe of Levi by his father, for he is called here a Levite; and it is probable that he might have officiated at Shiloh, in the Levitical office. A Levite might marry into any other tribe, providing the woman was not an *heir*ess.

Verse 8. To sojourn where he could find] He went about the country seeking for some employment, for the Levites had no inheritance: besides, no secure residence could be found where there was no civil government.

Verse 10. Be unto me a father and a priest] Thou shalt be master of my house, as if thou wert my father; and, as priest, thou shalt appear in the presence of God for me. The term father is often used to express honour and reverence.

Ten shekels of silver] About thirty shillings per annum, with board, lodgings, and clothes. Very good wages in those early times.

Verse 11. The Levite was content] He thought the place a good one, and the wages respectable.

Verse 12. Micah consecrated the Levite] He filled his hands; i.e. he gave him an offering to present before the * suit of apparel, and thy victuals. So the Levite went in.

11 And the Levite was content to dwell with the man; and the young man was unto him as one of his sons.

12 And Micah 'consecrated the Levite; and the young man 'became his priest, and was in the house of Micah.

13 Then said Micah, Now know I that the LORD will do me good, seeing I have a Levite to my priest.

LORD, that he might be accepted by him. He appointed him to be priest; God was to accept and consecrate him; and for this purpose he filled his hands; i.e. furnished him with the proper offering which he was to present on his inauguration.

Verse 13. Now know I that the LORD will do me good] As he had already provided an epitome of the tabernacle, a model of the ark, mercy-seat, and cherubim; and had got proper sacerdotal vestments, and a Levite to officiate; he took for granted that all was right, and that he should now have the benediction of God. Some think that he expected great gain from the concourse of the people to his temple; but of this there is no evidence in the text. Micah appears to have been perfectly sincere in all that he did.

I have already remarked that there is no positive evidence that Micah or his mother intended to establish any idolatrous worship. It is true, he had not a divine warrant for what he did; but the state of the land, the profligacy of his countrymen, his distance from Shiloh, &c., considered, he appears to deserve more praise than blame, though of the latter he has received a most liberal share from every quarter. This proceeds from that often-noticed propensity in man, to take everything which concerns the character of another by the worst handle. It cannot be considered any particular crime, should these notes be found at any time leaning to the other side.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Some Danites, seeking an inheritance, send five men to search the land, who arrive at the house of Micah, 1, 2. They employ the Levite, who served in his house as priest, to ask counsel for them of God, 3-5. He inquires, and promises them success, 6. They depart, and go to Laish, and find the inhabitants secure, 7. They return to their brethren, and encourage them to attempt the conquest of the place, 8-10. They send six hundred men, who, coming to the place where Micah dwelt, enter the house, and carry off the priest and his consecrated things, 11-21. Micah and his friends pursue them; but, being threatened, are obliged to return, 22-26. The Danites come to Laish, and smite it, and build a city there, which they call Dan, 27-29. They make the Levite their priest, and set up the images at this new city, 30, 31.

IN 'those days there was no king in Israel: and in those days <sup>b</sup> the tribe of the Danites sought them an inheritance to dwell in; for * Ch. xvii. 6. xxi. 25.

Verse 1. There was no king in Israel] The circumstances related here show that this must have happened about the time of the preceding transactions.

The tribe of the Danites] That is, a part of this tribe; some families of it.

All their inheritance] That is, they had not got an extent of country sufficient for them. Some families were still unprovided for, or had not sufficient territory; for we find from Josh. xix. 40, &c., that, although the tribe of Dan did unto that day all their inheritance had not fallen unto them among the tribes of Israel.

2 And the children of Dan sent of their family receive their inheritance with the rest of the tribes of Israel, yet their coast went out too little for them, and they went and fought against LESHEM (called here Laish), and took it, &c.

Verse 2. Five men—men of valour] The Hebrew word chayil has been applied to personal prowess, to mental energy, and to earthly possessions. They sent those in whose courage, judgment, and prudence they could safely confide.

five men from their coasts, <sup>a</sup> men of valour, from <sup>b</sup> Zorah, and from Eshtaol, <sup>c</sup> to spy out the land, and to search it; and they said unto them, Go, search the land: who when they came to Mount Ephraim, to the <sup>d</sup> house of Micah, they lodged there.

3 When they were by the house of Micah, they knew the voice of the young man the Levite: and they turned in thither, and said unto him, Who brought thee hither? and what makest thou in this place? and what hast thou here?

4 And he said unto them, Thus and thus dealeth Micah with me, and hath <sup>e</sup> hired me, and I am his priest.

5 And they said unto him, <sup>f</sup> Ask counsel, we pray thee, <sup>g</sup> of God, that we may know whether our way which we go shall be prosperous.

6 And the priest said unto them, <sup>h</sup> Go in peace: before the Lord is your way wherein ye go.

7 Then the five men departed, and came to <sup>i</sup> Laish, and saw the people that were therein, <sup>j</sup> how they dwelt careless, after the manner of the Zidonians, quiet and secure: and there was no <sup>k</sup> magistrate in the land, that might put them to shame in any thing; and they were far from the Zidonians, and had no business with any man.

8 And they came unto their brethren to <sup>l</sup> Zorah and Eshtaol: and their brethren said unto them, What say ye?

9 And they said, <sup>m</sup> Arise, that we may go up against them: for we have seen the land, and behold, it is very good: and are ye <sup>n</sup> still? be not slothful to go, and to enter to possess the land.

10 When ye go, ye shall come unto a people <sup>o</sup> secure, and to a large land: for God hath given it into your hands; <sup>p</sup> a place where there is no want of any thing that is in the earth.

11 And there went from thence of the family of the Danites, out of Zorah and out of Eshtaol, six hundred men <sup>q</sup> appointed with weapons of war.

12 And they went up, and pitched in <sup>r</sup> Kirjathyearim, in Judah; wherefore they called that place <sup>s</sup> Mahaneh-dan unto this day: behold, it is behind Kirjath-yearim:

13 And they passed thence unto Mount Ephraim, and came unto <sup>t</sup> the house of Micah.

14 <sup>u</sup> Then answered the five men that went to spy out the country of Laish, and said unto their brethren, Do ye know that <sup>v</sup> there is in these houses an ephod, and teraphim, and a graven image, and a molten image? now therefore consider what ye have to do.

15 And they turned thitherward, and came to the house of the young man the Levite, even unto the house of Micah, and <sup>w</sup> saluted him.

16 And the <sup>x</sup> six hundred men appointed with their weapons of war, which were of the children of Dan, stood by the entering of the gate.

17 And <sup>y</sup> the five men that went to spy out the land went up, and came in thither, and took <sup>z</sup> the graven image, and the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image: and the priest stood in the entering of the gate with the six hundred men that were appointed with weapons of war.

18 And these went into Micah's house, and fetched the carved image, the ephod, and the teraphim, and the molten image. Then said the priest unto them, What do ye?

19 And they said unto him, Hold thy peace, <sup>aa</sup> lay thine hand upon thy mouth, and go with us, <sup>bb</sup> and be to us a father and a priest: is it better for thee to be a priest unto the house of one man, or that thou be a priest unto a tribe and a family in Israel?

20 And the priest's heart was glad, and he took the ephod, and the teraphim, and the graven image, and went in the midst of the people.

21 So they turned and departed, and put the little ones and the cattle and the carriage before them.

Verse 3. They knew the voice of the young man] They knew by his dialect, or mode of pronunciation, that he was not an Ephraimite.

Verse 5. Ask counsel—of God] As the Danites use the word Elohim here for God, we are necessarily led to believe that they meant the true God; especially as the Levite answers, ver. 6, Before the Lord (Yehovah) is your way. Though the former word may be sometimes applied to idols, whom their votaries clothed with the attributes of God; yet the latter is never applied but to the true God alone. As the Danites succeeded according to the oracle delivered by the Levite, it is a strong presumption that the worship established by Micah was not of an idolatrous kind. It is really begging the question to assert, as many commentators have done, that the answer was either a trick of the Levite, or suggested by the Devil: and that the success of the Danites was merely accidental.

Verse 7. After the manner of the Zidonians] Probably the people of Laish or Leshem were originally a colony of the Sidonians, who, it appears, were an opulent people; and, being in possession of a strong city, lived in a state of security, not being afraid of their neighbours.

They were far from the Zidonians] Being, as above supposed, a Sidonian colony, they might naturally expect help from their countrymen; but, as they dwelt a considerable distance from Sidon, the Danites saw that they could strike the blow before the news of invasion could reach Sidon: and, consequently, before the people of Laish could receive any succours from that city.

And had no business with any man] It may be proper to observe, that Laish was on the frontiers of Syria; but as they had no intercourse with the Syrians, from whom they might have received the promptest assistance, this was an additional reason why the Danites might expect success.

Verse 9. Arise, &c.] This is a very plain and nervous address; full of good sense, and well adapted to the purpose. It seems to have produced an instantaneous effect.

Verse 11. Six hundred men] These were not the whole, for we find they had children, &c., ver. 21; but these appear to have been six hundred armed men.

Verse 12. Mahaneh-dan] "The camp of Dan;" so called from the circumstance of this armament encamping there. See chap. xii. 25, which affords some proof that this transaction was previous to the days of Samson.

Verse 14. Consider what ye have to do] They probably had formed the design to carry off the priest and his sacred utensils.

Verse 18. These went into Micah's house] The five men went in, while the six hundred armed men stood at the gate.

Verse 19. Lay thine hand upon thy mouth] This was the token of silence. The god of silence, Harpocrates, is represented on ancient statues with his finger pressed on his lips.

Verse 20. Went in the midst of the people] He was glad to be employed by the Danites; and went into the crowd, that he might not be discovered by Micah or his family.

Verse 21. The little ones and the cattle, &c.] These men near to Micah's house were gathered together, and overtook the children of Dan.

23 And they cried unto the children of Dan. And they turned their faces, and said unto Micah, What aileth thee, *that thou comest with such a company?

24 And he said, Ye have taken away my gods which I made, and the priest, and ye are gone away: and what have I more? and what is this that ye say unto me, What aileth thee?

25 And the children of Dan said unto him, Let not thy voice be heard among us, lest <sup>b</sup>angry fellows run upon thee, and thou lose thy life, with the lives of thy household.

26 And the children of Dan went their way: and when Micah saw that they were too strong for him, he turned and went back unto his house.

27 And they took the things which Micah had made, and the priest which he had, and <sup>c</sup>came unto were so confident of success that they removed their whole families, household goods, cattle, and all.

And the carriage] Or rather the luggage or baggage; we are not to suppose that any wheel carriage is meant.

Verse 24. Ye have taken away my gods] As Micah was a worshipper of the true God, as we have seen, he cannot mean any kind of idols by the word elohai here used. He undoubtedly means those representations of divine things, and symbols of the Divine Presence; such as the teraphim, ephod, &c.; for they are all evidently included under the word elohai, which we translate my gods.

Verse 25. And thou lose thy life] This was argumentum ad hominem; he must put up with the loss of his substance, or else lose his life!

Verse 27. Unto a people—at quiet and secure] They found the report given by the spies to be correct. The people were apprehensive of no danger, and were unprepared for resistance; hence they were all put to the sword, and their city burnt up.

Verse 28. There was no deliverer] They had no succour; because the Sidonians, from whom they might have expected it, were at too great a distance.

Verse 29. Called the name of the city Dan] This city was afterwards very remarkable as one of the extremities of the promised land. The extent of the Jewish territories was generally expressed by the phrase, From DAN to BEER-SHEBA; that is, From the most northern to the southern extremity.

Laish, unto a people that were at quiet and secure: <sup>a</sup>and they smote them with the edge of the sword, and burnt the city with fire.

28 And there was no deliverer, because it was <sup>a</sup>far from Zidon, and they had no business with any man; and it was in the valley that lieth <sup>f</sup>by Beth-rehob. And they built a city, and dwelt therein.

29 And <sup>g</sup>they called the name of the city <sup>b</sup>Dan, after the name of Dan their father, who was born unto Israel: howbeit the name of the city was Laish at the first.

30 And the children of Dan set up the graven image: and Jonathan the son of Gershom, the son of Manasseh, he and his sons were priests to the tribe of Dan <sup>i</sup>until the day of the captivity of the land.

31 And they set them up Micah's graven image, which he made, <sup>j</sup>all the time that the house of God was in Shiloh.

Verse 30. The children of Dan set up the graven image] They erected a chapel, or temple, among themselves, as Micah had done before; having the same implements and the same priest.

And Jonathan the son of Gershom] Either this was the name of the young Levite; or they had turned him off and got this Jonathan in his place.

The son of Manasseh] Instead of Manasseh, the word should be read Mosheh, MOSES, as it is found in some MSS. in the Vulgate, and in the concessions of the most intelligent Jews.

The Danites were properly the first dissenters from the public established worship of the Jews: but they seem to have departed as little as possible from the Jewish forms, their worship being conducted in the same way, but not in the same place. Surely it was better to have had this, allowing it to be unconstitutional worship, than to have been wholly destitute of the ordinances of God.

I think we have not sufficient ground from the text to call these persons idolaters; I believe they worshipped the true God, according to their light and circumstances, from a conviction that they could not prosper without his approbation, and that they could not expect that approbation if they did not offer to him a religious worship. They endeavoured to please him, though the means they adopted were not the most proper.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Levite and his concubine disagree; and she leaves him, and goes to her father's house, 1, 2. He follows to bring her back, and is kindly entertained by her father five days, 3-8. He returns; and lodges the first night at Gibeah, in the tribe of Benjamin, 9-21. The men of Gibeah attack the house, and insist on abusing the body of the Levite; who, to save himself, delivers to them his concubine, whose life falls a victim to their brutality, 22-27. The Levite divides her dead body into twelve pieces, and sends one to each of the twelve tribes; they are struck with horror, and call a council on the subject, 28-30.

3 And her husband arose, and went after her, to speak <sup>c</sup>friendly unto her, and to bring her again, having his servant with him, and a couple of asses: and she brought him into her father's house: and when the father of the damsel saw him, he rejoiced to meet him.

4 And his father in law, the damsel's father, retained him; and he abode with him three days: so they did eat and drink, and lodged there.

5 And it came to pass on the fourth day, when they arose early in the morning, that he rose up to depart: and the damsel's father said unto his son in law, <sup>d</sup>Comfort <sup>e</sup>thine heart with a morsel of bread, and afterward go your way.

6 And they sat down, and did eat and drink both of them together: for the damsel's father had said unto the man, Be content, I pray thee, and tarry all night, and let thine heart be merry.

7 And when the man rose up to depart, his father in law urged him: therefore he lodged there again.

8 And he arose early in the morning on the fifth day to depart: and the damsel's father said, Comfort thine heart, I pray thee. And they tarried <sup>f</sup>until afternoon, and they did eat both of them.

9 And when the man rose up to depart, he, and his concubine, and his servant, his father in law, the damsel's father, said unto him, Behold, now the day <sup>g</sup>draweth toward evening, I pray you tarry all night: behold, <sup>h</sup>the day groweth to an end, lodge here, that thine heart may be merry; and to morrow get you early on your way, that thou mayest go <sup>i</sup>home.

10 But the man would not tarry that night, but he rose up and departed, and came <sup>j</sup>over against <sup>k</sup>Jebus, which is Jerusalem; and there were with him two asses saddled, his concubine also was with him.

11 And when they were by Jebus, the day was far spent; and the servant said unto his master, Come, I pray thee, and let us turn in to this city <sup>l</sup>of the Jebusites, and lodge in it.

12 And his master said unto him, We will not turn aside hither into the city of a stranger that is not of the children of Israel; we will pass over <sup>m</sup>to Gibeah.

13 And he said unto his servant, Come, and let us draw near to one of these places to lodge all night, in Gibeah, or in <sup>n</sup>Ramah.

14 And they passed on and went their way; and the sun went down upon them when they were by Gibeah, which belongeth to Benjamin.

15 And they turned aside thither, to go in and to lodge in Gibeah: and when he went in, he sat him down in a street of the city: for there was no man that <sup>o</sup>took them into his house to lodging.

16 And, behold, there came an old man from <sup>p</sup>his work out of the field at even, which was also out of Mount Ephraim; and he sojourned in Gibeah: but the men of the place were Benjamites.

17 And when he had lifted up his eyes, he saw a wayfaring man in the street of the city: and the old man said, Whither goest thou? and whence comest thou?

18 And he said unto him, We are passing from Beth-lehem-judah toward the side of Mount Ephraim; from thence am I: and I went to Beth-lehem-judah, but I am now going to <sup>q</sup>the house of the Lord; and there is no man that <sup>r</sup>receiveth me to house.

19 Yet there is both straw and provender for our asses; and there is bread and wine also for me and for thy handmaid, and for the young man which is with thy servants: there is no want of any thing.

20 And the old man said, <sup>s</sup>Peace be with thee; howsoever let all thy wants lie upon me; <sup>t</sup>only lodge not in the street.

21 <sup>u</sup>So he brought him into his house, and gave provender unto the asses: <sup>v</sup>and they washed their feet, and did eat and drink.

22 Now as they were making their hearts merry, behold, <sup>w</sup>the men of the city, certain <sup>x</sup>sons of Belial, beset the house round about, and beat at the door, and spake to the master of the house, the old man, saying, <sup>y</sup>Bring forth the man that came into thine house, that we may know him.

tuagint, Targum, nor Josephus understand this word as implying any act of conjugal infidelity on the woman's part. They merely state that the parties disagreed, and the woman returned to her father's house. Indeed, all the circumstances of the case vindicate this view of the subject. If she had been a whore, or adulteress, it is not very likely that her husband would have gone after her to speak friendly, literally, to speak to her heart, and entreat her to return. I think the true meaning to be the above interpretation. They had contentions; she ceased to love him, her affections were alienated from him; and she left his house, and went home to her father.

Verse 3. He rejoiced to meet him.] He hoped to be able completely to reconcile his daughter and her husband.

Verse 8. And they tarried until afternoon.] Merely that they might avoid the heat of the day, which would have been very inconvenient in travelling.

Verse 9. The day groweth to an end.] "The day is about to pitch its tent;" that is, it was near the time in which travellers ordinarily pitched their tents, to take up their lodging for the night.

Verse 11. When they were by Jebus.] This was Jerusalem, in which, though after the death of Joshua it appears to have been partly conquered by the tribe of Judah, yet the Jebusites kept the stronghold of Zion till the days of David, by whom they were finally expelled.

Verse 15. No man—took them into his house to lodging.] There was probably no inn or house of public entertainment in this place, and therefore they could not have a lodging unless furnished by mere hospitality. To say that there were no inns in those primitive times, is not true; there were such places, though not very frequent. Joseph's brethren found their money in their sacks when they loused them at an inn, Gen. xlii. 27. The house of Rahab was an inn, Josh. ii. 1. And the woman whose house Samson frequented at Gaza was a hostess, or one who kept a place of public entertainment.

Verse 19. There is both straw and provender for our asses.] In the countries principally devoted to pasturage, there was no hay; but as they raised some corn, they took great care of their straw, chopped it very small, and having mixed it with barley, beans, or the pounded kernels of dates, made it into balls, and fed their cattle with it. Straw, cut into what is called chaff, is not unfrequently used in England for the same purpose.

Verse 20. All thy wants lie upon me.] Here was genuine hospitality: "Keep your bread and wine for yourselves, and your straw and provender for your asses; you may need Verse 22. Sons of Belial] Profligate fellows.

That we may know him.] These were genuine Sodomites as to their practice; sons of Belial, rascals and miscreants of the deepest dye; worse than brutes, being a compound of beast and devil inseparably blended.

Verse 24. Here is my daughter a maiden] That the rights of hospitality were sacred in the East, and most highly regarded, we know; and that a man would defend, at the expense of his life, the stranger whom he had admitted under his roof, is true; but how a father could make such a proposal relative to his virgin daughter, must remain among those things which are incomprehensible.

Verse 25. So the man took his concubine] The word yachazek, which we here translate simply took, signifies rather to take or seize by violence. The woman would not go out to them; but her graceless husband forced her to go, in order that he might save his own body. He could have but little love for her, and this was the cause of their separation before.

The men of Gibeah who wished to abuse the body of the Levite; the Levite who wished to save his body at the expense of the modesty, reputation, and life of his wife; and the old man who wished to save his guest at the expense

27 And her lord rose up in the morning, and opened the doors of the house, and went out to go his way: and, behold, the woman his concubine was fallen down at the door of the house, and her hands were upon the threshold.

28 And he said unto her, Up, and let us be going. But <sup>a</sup>none answered. Then the man took her up upon an ass, and the man rose up, and gat him unto his place.

29 And when he was come into his house, he took a knife, and laid hold on his concubine, and <sup>b</sup>divided her, together with her bones, into twelve pieces, and sent her into all the coasts of Israel.

30 And it was so, that all that saw it said, There was no such deed done nor seen from the day that the children of Israel came up out of the land of Egypt unto this day: consider of it, <sup>c</sup>take advice, and speak your minds.

of the violation of his daughter; are all characters that humanity and modesty wish to be buried in everlasting oblivion.

When the day began to spring] Their turpitude could not bear the full light of the day; and they dismissed the poor woman when the day began to break.

Verse 26. Fell down at the door] She had strength to reach the door, but not to knock for admittance: when she reached the door she fell down dead! The reason of this abominable and horrid catastrophe is strongly signified by the original words, ver. 25.

Verse 29. Divided her—into twelve pieces] There is no doubt that with the pieces he sent to each tribe a circumstantial account of the barbarity of the men of Gibeah; and it is very likely that they considered each of the pieces as expressing an execration, "If ye will not come and avenge my wrongs, may ye be hewn in pieces like this abused and murdered woman."

Verse 30. There was no such deed done nor seen] They were all struck with the enormity of the crime; and considered it a sovereign disgrace to all the tribes of Israel.

Consider of it] Literally, Put it to yourselves; take counsel upon it; and speak. This was the prelude to the council held, and the subsequent operations, which are mentioned in the following chapter.

CHAPTER XX.

The heads of the eleven tribes come before the Lord in Mizpeh, and examine the Levite relative to the murder of his wife, who gives a simple narrative of the whole affair, 1-7. They unanimously resolve to avenge the wrong, and make provision for a campaign against the Benjamites, 8-11. They desire the Benjamites to deliver up the murderers; they refuse, and prepare for battle, having assembled an army of twenty-six thousand seven hundred men, 12-16. The rest of the Israelites amount to four hundred thousand, who, taking counsel of God, agree to send the tribe of Judah against the Benjamites, 17, 18. They attack the Benjamites, and are routed with the loss of twenty-two thousand men, 19-21. They renew the battle next day, and are discomfited, with the loss of eighteen thousand men, 22-25. They weep, fast, and pray, and offer sacrifices; and again inquire of the Lord, who promises to deliver Benjamin into their hands, 26-28. They concert plans, attack the Benjamites, and rout them, killing twenty-five thousand one hundred men, and destroy the city of Gibeah, 29-37. A recapitulation of the different actions in which they were killed, 38-46. Six hundred men escape to the rock Rimmon, 47. The Israelites destroy all the cities of the Benjamites, 48.

THEN <sup>a</sup>all the children of Israel went out, and the congregation was gathered together as one man, from <sup>b</sup>Dan even to Beer-

Verse 1. Unto the Lord in Mizpeh.] This city was situated on the confines of Judah and Benjamin, and is sometimes attributed to the one, sometimes to the other. It seems that there was a place here in which the Lord was consulted, as tribes of Israel, presented themselves in the assembly of the people of God, four hundred thousand footmen <sup>a</sup> that drew sword.

3 (Now the children of Benjamin heard that the children of Israel were gone up to Mizpah.) Then said the children of Israel, Tell us, how was this wickedness?

4 And <sup>b</sup>the Levite, the husband of the woman that was slain, answered and said, <sup>c</sup>I came into Gibeah that belongeth to Benjamin, I and my concubine, to lodge.

5 <sup>d</sup>And the men of Gibeah rose against me, and beset the house round about upon me by night, and thought to have slain me; <sup>e</sup>and my concubine have they <sup>f</sup>forced, that she is dead.

6 And <sup>g</sup>I took my concubine, and cut her in pieces, and sent her throughout all the country of the inheritance of Israel: for they <sup>h</sup>have committed lewdness and folly in Israel.

7 Behold, ye are all children of Israel; <sup>i</sup>give here your advice and counsel.

8 And all the people arose as one man, saying, We will not any of us go to his tent, neither will we any of us turn into his house.

9 But now this shall be the thing which we will do to Gibeah; we will go up by lot against it;

10 And we will take ten men of an hundred throughout all the tribes of Israel, and an hundred of a thousand, and a thousand out of ten thousand, to fetch victual for the people, that they may do, when they come to Gibeah of Benjamin, according to all the folly that they have wrought in Israel.

11 So all the men of Israel were gathered against the city, <sup>j</sup>knit together as one man.

12 <sup>k</sup>And the tribes of Israel sent men through all the tribe of Benjamin, saying, What wickedness is this that is done among you?

well as at Shiloh; in 1 Mac. iii. 46 we read, In Maspha was the place where they prayed aforetime in Israel. These two passages cast light on each other.

Some think that Shiloh is meant, because the ark was there; but the phrase before the Lord may signify no more than meeting in the name of God to consult him, and make prayer and supplication. Wherever God's people are, there is God himself; and it ever was true, that whosoever two or three were assembled in his name, he was in the midst of them.

Verse 2. The chief of all the people] The corners, pinnoth; for as the corner-stones are the strength of the walls, so are the chiefs the strength of the people. Hence Christ is called the chief corner-stone.

Verse 3. Tell us, how was this wickedness?] They had heard before, by the messengers he sent with the fragments of his wife's body; but they wish to hear it, in full council, from himself.

Verse 8. We will not any of us go to his tent] We will have satisfaction for this wickedness before we return home.

Verse 10. Ten men of an hundred] Expecting that they might have a long contest, they provide outlers for the camp; and it is probable that they chose these tenths by lot.

Verse 13. Deliver us the men] Nothing could be fairer than this. They wish only to make the murderers answerable for their guilt.

Benjamin would not hearken] Thus making their whole tribe partakers of the guilt of the men of Gibeah. This proves that the whole tribe was excessively depraved.

Verse 15. Twenty and six thousand] Some copies of the Septuagint have twenty-three thousand, others twenty-five thousand.

Verse 16. Left-handed] They were ambidexters—could use the right hand and the left with equal ease and effect.

dren of Belial, which are in Gibeah, that we may put them to death, and <sup>m</sup>put away evil from Israel. But the children of Benjamin would not hearken to the voice of their brethren the children of Israel:

14 But the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together out of the cities unto Gibeah, to go out to battle against the children of Israel.

15 And the children of Benjamin were numbered at that time out of the cities twenty and six thousand men that drew sword, beside the inhabitants of Gibeah, which were numbered seven hundred chosen men.

16 Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men <sup>n</sup>left-handed; every one could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss.

17 And the men of Israel, beside Benjamin, were numbered four hundred thousand men that drew sword: all these were men of war.

18 And the children of Israel arose, and <sup>o</sup>went up to the house of God, and <sup>p</sup>asked counsel of God, and said, Which of us shall go up first to the battle against the children of Benjamin? And the Lord said, Judah shall go up first.

19 And the children of Israel rose up in the morning, and encamped against Gibeah.

20 And the men of Israel went out to battle against Benjamin; and the men of Israel put themselves in array to fight against them at Gibeah.

21 And <sup>q</sup>the children of Benjamin came forth out of Gibeah, and destroyed down to the ground of the Israelites that day twenty and two thousand men.

22 And the people the men of Israel encouraged themselves, and set their battle again in array in the place where they put themselves in array the first day.

23 (<sup>r</sup>And the children of Israel went up and wept before the Lord until even, and asked counsel of

Could sling stones at an hair—and not miss] And not sin. Here we have the true import of the term sin; it signifies simply to miss the mark. Men miss the mark of true happiness in aiming at sensual gratifications; which happiness is to be found only in the possession and enjoyment of the favour of God, from whom their passions continually lead them. He alone hits the mark, and ceases from sin, who attains to God through Christ Jesus.

The sling was a very ancient warlike instrument; and, in the hands of those who were skilled in the use of it, it produced astonishing effects. The inhabitants of the isles called Baleares, now Majorca and Minorca, were the most celebrated slingers of antiquity. They did not permit their children to break their fast till they had struck down the bread they were to eat from the top of a pole, or some distant eminence.

Concerning the velocity of the ball out of the sling, there are strange and almost incredible things told by the ancients. The leaden ball, when thus projected, is said to have melted in its course.

Verse 18. Went up to the house of God] Some think that a deputation was sent from Shiloh, where Phinehas the high-priest was to inquire, not concerning the expediency of the war, nor of its success, but which of the tribes should begin the attack. Having so much right on their side, they had no doubt of the justice of their cause. Having such a superiority of numbers, they had no doubt of success.

And the Lord said, Judah] But he did not say that they should conquer.

Verse 21. Destroyed down to the ground—twenty-two thousand men] That is, so many were left dead on the field of battle.

Verse 23. Go up against him] It appears most evident that the Israelites did not seek the protection of God.

the LORD, saying, Shall I go up again to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother? And the LORD said, Go up against him.)

24 And the children of Israel came near against the children of Benjamin the second day,

25 And * Benjamin came forth against them out of Gibeah the second day, and destroyed down to the ground of the children of Israel again eighteen thousand men; all these drew the sword.

26 Then all the children of Israel, and all the people, <sup>b</sup> went up, and came unto the house of God, and wept, and sat there before the LORD, and fasted that day until even, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings before the LORD,

27 And the children of Israel enquired of the LORD (for <sup>c</sup> the ark of the covenant of God was there in those days, 28 <sup>d</sup> And Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron, <sup>e</sup> stood before it in those days,) saying, Shall I yet again go out to battle against the children of Benjamin my brother, or shall I cease? And the LORD said, Go up; for to-morrow I will deliver them into thine hand.

29 And Israel <sup>f</sup> set liers in wait round about Gibeah.

30 And the children of Israel went up against the children of Benjamin on the third day, and put themselves in array against Gibeah, as at other times.

31 And the children of Benjamin went out against the people, and were drawn away from the city; and they began <sup>g</sup> to smite of the people, and kill, as at other times, in the highways, of which one goeth up to <sup>h</sup> the house of God, and the other to Gibeah in the field about thirty men of Israel.

32 And the children of Benjamin said, They are smitten down before us as at the first. But the children of Israel said, Let us flee, and draw them from the city unto the highways.

33 And all the men of Israel rose up out of their place, and put themselves in array at Baal-tamar: and the liers in wait of Israel came forth out of their places, even out of the meadows of Gibeah.

34 And there came against Gibeah ten thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and the battle was sore: <sup>i</sup> but they know not that the evil was near them.

35 And the LORD smote Benjamin before Israel: and the children of Israel destroyed of the Benjamites that day twenty and five thousand and an hundred men: all these drew the sword.

They trusted in the goodness of their cause and in the multitude of their army. God humbled them, and delivered them into the hands of their enemies, and showed them that the race was not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong.

Verse 26. And wept] Had they humbled themselves, fasted, and prayed, and offered sacrifices at first, they had not been discomfited.

And fasted that day until even] This is the first place where fasting is mentioned as a religious ceremony, or as a means of obtaining help from God. And in this case, and many since, it has been powerfully effectual. At present it is but little used, a strong proof that self-denial is wearing out of fashion.

Verse 28. Phinehas, the son of Eleazar] This is the same Phinehas who is mentioned, Num. xxv., and consequently these transactions must have taken place shortly after the death of Joshua.

Verse 29. Israel set liers in wait] Though God had promised them success, they knew they could expect it only in 36 So the children of Benjamin saw that they were smitten: <sup>1</sup> for the men of Israel gave place to the Benjamites, because they trusted unto the liers in wait which they had set beside Gibeah.

37 <sup>2</sup> And the liers in wait hastened, and rushed upon Gibeah: and the liers in wait <sup>3</sup> drew themselves along, and smote all the city with the edge of the sword.

38 Now there was an appointed <sup>4</sup> sign between the men of Israel <sup>5</sup> and the liers in wait, that they should make a great <sup>6</sup> flame with smoke rise up out of the city.

39 And when the men of Israel retired in the battle, Benjamin began <sup>7</sup> to smite and kill of the men of Israel about thirty persons: for they said, Surely they are smitten down before us, as in the first battle.

40 But when the flame began to arise up out of the city with a pillar of smoke; the Benjamites <sup>8</sup> looked behind them, and, behold, <sup>9</sup> the flame of the city ascended up to heaven.

41 And when the men of Israel turned again, the men of Benjamin were amazed; for they saw that evil <sup>10</sup> was come upon them.

42 Therefore they turned their backs before the men of Israel unto the way of the wilderness; but the battle overtook them; and them which came out of the cities they destroyed in the midst of them.

43 Thus they inclosed the Benjamites round about, and chased them, and trode them down <sup>11</sup> with ease <sup>12</sup> over against Gibeah toward the sun-rising.

44 And there fell of Benjamin eighteen thousand men; all those were men of valour.

45 And these turned and fled toward the wilderness unto the rock of <sup>13</sup> Rimmon: and they gleaned of them in the highways five thousand men, and pursued hard after them unto Gidom, and slew two thousand men of them.

46 So that all which fell that day of Benjamin were twenty and five thousand men that drew the sword; all these were men of valour.

47 <sup>14</sup> But six hundred men turned and fled to the wilderness unto the rock Rimmon, and abode in the rock Rimmon four months.

48 And the men of Israel turned again upon the children of Benjamin, and smote them with the edge of the sword, as well the men of every city, as the beast, and all that <sup>15</sup> came to hand: also they set on fire all the cities that <sup>16</sup> they came to.

the use of the proper means. They used all prudent precaution, and employed all their military skill.

Verse 32. Let us—draw them from the city] They had two reasons for this: 1. They had placed an ambuscade behind Gibeah, which was to enter and burn the city as soon as the Benjamites had left it. 2. It would seem that the slingers, by being within the city and its fortifications, had great advantage against the Israelites by their slings, whom they could not annoy with their swords, unless they got them to the plain country.

Verse 33. Put themselves in array at Baal-tamar] The Israelites seem to have divided their army into three divisions; one was at Baal-tamar, a second behind the city in ambush, and the third skirmished with the Benjamites before Gibeah.

Verse 35. Twenty and five thousand and an hundred] As the Benjamites consisted only of twenty-six thousand and seven hundred slingers; or, as the Vulgate, Septuagint, and others read, twenty-five thousand, which is most probably the true reading; then the whole of the Benjamites were cut to pieces, except six hundred men, who, we are informed, fled to the rock Rimmon, where they fortified themselves.

Verse 38. Now there was an appointed sign] From this verse to the end of the chapter we have the details of the same operations which are mentioned, in a general way, in the preceding part of the chapter.

Verse 45. Unto the rock of Rimmon] This was some strong place, but where situated is not known. Here they maintained themselves four months, and it was by these alone that the tribe of Benjamin was preserved from utter extermination.

It is scarcely possible to imagine anything more horrid than the indiscriminate and relentless slaughter of both innocent and guilty mentioned in this chapter. The crime of the men of Gibeah was great, but there was no adequate cause for this relentless extermination of a whole tribe. There was neither justice nor judgment in this case; they were on all sides brutal, cruel, and ferocious; and no wonder; there was no king in Israel—no effective civil government, and every man did what was right in his own eyes. There was no proper leader; no man that had authority and influence to repress the disorderly workings of the pell-mell mob.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Israelites mourn because of the desolation of Benjamin, and consult the Lord, 1-4. They inquire who of Israel had not come to this war, as they had vowed that those who would not make this a common cause should be put to death, 5, 6. They consult how they shall procure wives for the six hundred men who had fled to the rock Rimmon, 7. Finding that the men of Jabesh-gilead had not come to the war, they send twelve thousand men against them, smite them, and bring off four hundred virgins, which they give for wives to those who had taken refuge in Rimmon, 8-14. To provide for the two hundred which remained, they propose to carry off two hundred virgins of the daughters of Shiloh, who might come to the annual feast of the Lord, held at that place, 15-22. They take this counsel, and each carries away a virgin from the feast, 23-25.

NOW <sup>a</sup>the men of Israel had sworn in Mizpeh, saying, There shall not any of us give his daughter unto Benjamin to wife.

2 And the people came <sup>b</sup>to the house of God, and abode there till even before God, and lifted up their voices, and wept sore;

3 And said, O LORD God of Israel, why is this come to pass in Israel, that there should be to day one tribe lacking in Israel?

4 And it came to pass on the morrow, that the people rose early, and <sup>c</sup>built there an altar, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings.

5 And the children of Israel said, Who is there among all the tribes of Israel that came not up with the congregation unto the LORD? <sup>d</sup>For they had made a great oath concerning him that came not up to the LORD to Mizpeh, saying, He shall surely be put to death.

6 And the children of Israel repented them for Benjamin their brother, and said, There is one tribe cut off from Israel this day.

7 How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing we have sworn by the LORD that we will not give them of our daughters to wives?

8 And they said, What one is there of the tribes of Israel that came not up to Mizpeh to the LORD? And, behold, there came none to the camp from <sup>e</sup>Jabesh-gilead to the assembly.

9 For the people were numbered, and, behold, there were none of the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead there.

10 And the congregation sent thither twelve thousand men of the valiantest, and commanded them, saying, Go and smite the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead with the edge of the sword, with the women and the children.

11 And this is the thing that ye shall do, <sup>f</sup>Ye shall utterly destroy every male, and every woman that hath <sup>g</sup>lain by man.

12 And they found among the inhabitants of Jabesh-gilead four hundred <sup>h</sup>young virgins, that had known no man by lying with any male: and Verse 1. Now the men of Israel had sworn] Of this oath we have not heard before; but it appears they had commenced this war with a determination to destroy the Benjamites utterly, and that if any of them escaped the sword, no man should be permitted to give him his daughter to wife. By these means the remnant of the tribe must soon have been annihilated.

Verse 2. The people came to the house of God] Literally, the people came to Bethel; this is considered as the name of a place by the Chaldees, Syriac, Arabic, and Septuagint.

And wept sore] Their revenge was satisfied, and now reflection brings them to contrition for what they had done.

Verse 3. Why is this come to pass] This was a very impertinent question. They knew well enough how it came to pass. It was right that the men of Gibeah should be punished, and it was right that they who vindicated them should share in that punishment; but they carried their revenge too far, they endeavoured to exterminate both man and beast, chap. xx. 48.

Verse 4. Built there an altar] This affords some evidence that this was not a regular place of worship, else an altar

would have been found in the place; and their act was not according to the law, as may be seen in several places of the Pentateuch. But there was neither king nor law among them, and they did whatever appeared right in their own eyes.

Verse 7. How shall we do for wives for them] From this it appears that they had destroyed all the Benjamitish women and children! They had set out with the purpose of exterminating the whole tribe, and therefore they massacred the women, that if any of the men escaped, they might neither find wife nor daughter; and they bound themselves under an oath not to give any of their females to any of the remnant of this tribe, that thus the whole tribe might utterly perish.

Verse 8. There came none to the camp from Jabesh-gilead] The whole account is dreadful; and none could have been guilty of all these enormities but those who were abandoned of God. The crime of the men of Gibeah was of the deepest dye; the punishment, involving both the guilty and innocent, was extended to the most criminal excess; and their mode of redressing the evil which they had occasioned, was equally abominable.

they brought them unto the camp to <sup>a</sup> Shiloh, which is in the land of Canaan.

13 And the whole congregation sent some <sup>b</sup> to speak to the children of Benjamin <sup>c</sup> that were in the rock Rimmon, and to <sup>d</sup> call peaceably unto them.

14 And Benjamin came again at that time; and they gave them wives which they had saved alive of the women of Jabesh-gilead: and yet so they sufficed them not.

15 And the people <sup>e</sup> repented them for Benjamin, because that the Lord had made a breach in the tribes of Israel.

16 Then the elders of the congregation said, How shall we do for wives for them that remain, seeing the women are destroyed out of Benjamin?

17 And they said, There must be an inheritance for them that be escaped of Benjamin, that a tribe be not destroyed out of Israel.

18 Howbeit we may not give them wives of our daughters: <sup>f</sup> for the children of Israel have sworn, saying, Cursed be he that giveth a wife to Benjamin.

19 Then they said, Behold, there is a feast of the Lord in Shiloh <sup>g</sup> yearly in a place which is on the north side of Beth-el, <sup>h</sup> on the east side <sup>i</sup> of the high-way that goeth up from Beth-el to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah.

Verse 13. And to call peaceably unto them.] To proclaim peace to them; to assure them that the enmity was all over, and that they might with safety leave their stronghold.

Verse 14. Yet so they sufficed them not.] There were six hundred men at Rimmon, and all the young women they saved from Jabesh were only four hundred; therefore there were two hundred still wanting.

Verse 19. There is a feast of the Lord.] What this feast was, is not known: it might be either the passover, pentecost, or the feast of tabernacles, or indeed some other peculiar to this place. All the above feasts were celebrated at that time of the year when the vines were in full leaf; therefore the Benjamites might easily conceal themselves in the vineyards; and the circumstances will answer to any of those feasts.

On the east side of the high-way, &c.] I can see no reason for this minute description, unless it intimates that this feast was to be held this year in rather a different place to that which was usual: and as the Benjamites had been shut up in their stronghold in Rimmon, they might not have heard of this alteration; and it was necessary, in such a case, to give them the most circumstantial information, that they might succeed in their enterprise without being discovered.

Verse 21. And catch you every man his wife.] That is, Let each man of the two hundred Benjamites seize and carry off a woman, whom he is, from that hour, to consider as his wife.

Verse 22. Be favourable unto them.] The promise to use their influence with the men of Shiloh to induce them to consent to a connexion thus fraudulently obtained, and which the necessity of the case appeared to them to justify.

Our translation seems to give as a reason to the men of 20 Therefore they commanded the children of Benjamin, saying, Go and lie in wait in the vineyards;

21 And see, and, behold, if the daughters of Shiloh come out <sup>j</sup> to dance in dances, then come ye out of the vineyards, and catch you every man his wife of the daughters of Shiloh, and go to the land of Benjamin.

22 And it shall be, when their fathers or their brethren come unto us to complain, that we will say unto them, <sup>k</sup> Be favourable unto them for our sakes: because we reserved not to each man his wife in the war: for ye did not give unto them at this time, that ye should be guilty.

23 And the children of Benjamin did so, and took them wives, according to their number, of them that danced, whom they caught: and they went and returned unto their inheritance, and <sup>l</sup> repaired the cities, and dwelt in them.

24 And the children of Israel departed thence at that time, every man to his tribe and to his family, and they went out from thence every man to his inheritance.

25 <sup>m</sup> In those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

Shiloh why they should pardon this rape, that as they had not permitted the women to live in their war with Benjamin, therefore these men are now destitute; and the concession which they wish them to make may be considered as more of an obligation to the Israelites than to the Benjamites.

Verse 23. They went and returned unto their inheritance.] It appears that the Benjamites acted in the most honourable way by the women whom they had thus violently carried off; and we may rest assured they took them to an inheritance at least equal to their own, for it does not appear that any part of the lands of the Benjamites was alienated from them, and the six hundred men in question shared, for the present, the inheritance of many thousands.

Verse 24. Every man to his tribe.] Though this must have been four months after the war with Benjamin, chap. xx. 47; yet it appears the armies did not disband till they had got the remnant of Benjamin settled, as is here related.

Verse 25. In those days there was no king in Israel.] Let no one suppose that the sacred writer, by relating the atrocities in this and the preceding chapters, justifies the actions themselves; by no means. Indeed, they cannot be justified; and the writer by relating them gives the strongest proof of the authenticity of the whole, by such an impartial relation of facts that were highly to the discredit of his country.

Thus ends the Book of Judges; a work which, while it introduces the history of Samuel and that of the kings of Judah and Israel, forms in some sort a supplement to the Book of Joshua, and furnishes the only account we have of those times of anarchy and confusion, which extended nearly from the times of the elders who survived Joshua, to the establishment of the Jewish monarchy under Saul, David, and their successors.

PREFACE TO THE BOOK

OF

R U T H.

WHEN and by whom the Book of Ruth was written, are points not agreed on among critics and commentators.

As to the transactions recorded in it, they are variously placed. In the Book itself there is no other notation of time than merely this, that the things came to pass in the days when the Judges ruled; therefore some have placed these transactions under Ehud; others, under Gideon; others under Barak; others, under Abimelech; and others, under Shamgar. This last is the opinion of Archbishop Usher; and most chronologers adopt it. The Book is evidently an Appendix to the Book of Judges, and contains a perfect history in itself; and therefore should not be inserted in any part of that Book. It also seems to be an Introduction to the Books of Samuel, in which the history of David is contained, as it gives the genealogy of this prince. It is also not without its use in matters which respect the Gospel, as it ascertains the line by which Jesus Christ came.

As to the author, he is as uncertain as the time. It has been attributed to Heczekiah, to Ezra, and to Samuel; and it is most likely that the author of the two Books of Samuel was also the writer of this little Book, as it seems necessary to complete his plan of the history of David.

CHAPTER I.

Elimelech, his wife Naomi, and their two sons, Mahlon and Chilion, flee from a famine in the land of Israel, and go to sojourn in Moab, 1, 2. Here his two sons marry; and, in the space of ten years, both their father and they die, 3-6. Naomi sets out on her return to her own country, accompanied by her daughters in law Orpah and Ruth; whom she endeavours to persuade to return to their own people, 7-13. Orpah returns, but Ruth accompanies her mother in law, 14-18. They arrive at Beth-lehem in the time of the barley harvest, 19-22.

NOW it came to pass in the days when <sup>a</sup> the judges <sup>b</sup> ruled, that there was <sup>c</sup> a famine in the land. And a certain man of <sup>d</sup> Beth-lehem-Judah went to sojourn in the country of Moab, he, and his wife, and his two sons.

2 And the name of the man was Elimelech, and the name of his wife Naomi, and the name of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion, <sup>e</sup> Ephrathites of Beth-lehem-Judah. And they came <sup>f</sup> into the country of Moab, and <sup>g</sup> continued there.

3 And Elimelech Naomi's husband died, and she was left, and her two sons.

4 And they took them wives of the women of Moab; the name of the one was Orpah, and the name of the other Ruth: and they dwelled there about ten years.

5 And Mahlon and Chilion died also both of them; and the woman was left of her two sons and her husband.

6 Then she arose with her daughters in law, that she might return from the country of Moab: for she had heard in the country of Moab, how that <sup>h</sup> the Lord had <sup>i</sup> visited his people in <sup>j</sup> giving them bread.

7 Wherefore she went forth out of the place where she was, and her two daughters in law with her;

and they went on the way to return unto the land of Judah.

8 And Naomi said unto her two daughters in law, <sup>k</sup> Go, return each to her mother's house: <sup>l</sup> the Lord deal kindly with you, as ye have dealt with <sup>m</sup> the dead, and with me.

9 The Lord grant you that ye may find <sup>n</sup> rest, each of you in the house of her husband. Then she kissed them; and they lifted up their voice, and wept.

10 And they said unto her, Surely we will return with thee unto thy people.

11 And Naomi said, Turn again, my daughters: why will ye go with me? are there yet <sup>o</sup> any more sons in my womb, <sup>p</sup> that they may be your husbands.

12 Turn again, my daughters, go <sup>q</sup> your way; for I am too old to have an husband. If I should say, I have hope, <sup>r</sup> if I should have an husband also to night, and should also bear sons;

13 Would ye <sup>s</sup> tarry for them till they were grown? would ye stay for them from having husbands? nay, my daughters; for <sup>t</sup> it grieveth me much for your sakes, that <sup>u</sup> the hand of the Lord is gone out against me.

14 And they lifted up their voice, and wept again:

Verse 1. When the judges ruled] We know not under what judge this happened; some say under Ehud, others under Shamgar.

There was a famine] Probably occasioned by the depredations of the Philistines, Ammonites, &c., carrying off the corn as soon as it was ripe, or destroying it in the field.

Verse 2. Elimelech] That is, God is my king.

Naomi] Beautiful or amiable.

Mahlon] Infirmity.

Chilion] Finished, completed. [Or, pining.]

Verse 3. Elimelech—died] Probably a short time after his arrival in Moab.

Verse 11. Are there yet any more sons] This was spoken in allusion to the custom, that when a married brother died without leaving posterity, his brother should take his widow; and the children of such a marriage were accounted the children of the deceased brother. There is something very persuasive and affecting in the address of Naomi to her daughters-in-law.

She intimates that she had no other sons to give them; that she was not with child, so there could be no expectation; that she was too old to have a husband; that though she should marry that night, and have children, yet they could not wait till such sons were marriageable; she therefore begs them to return to their own country, where they might be comfortably settled among their own kindred.

and Orpah *kissed her mother in law; but Ruth<sup>b</sup> clave unto her.

15 And she said, Behold, thy sister in law is gone back unto her people, and unto<sup>c</sup> her gods: <sup>d</sup>return thou after thy sister in law.

16 And Ruth said, <sup>e</sup>Entreat<sup>f</sup> me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: <sup>g</sup>thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God:

17 Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: <sup>h</sup>the LORD do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me.

18 <sup>i</sup>When she saw that she<sup>j</sup> was stedfastly minded to go with her, then she left speaking unto her.

Verse 15. Gone back—unto her gods] They were probably both idolaters; their having been proselytes is an unfounded conjecture. Chemosh was the grand idol of the Moabites. The conversion of Ruth probably commenced at this time.

Verse 16. And Ruth said] A more perfect surrender was never made of friendly feelings to a friend; I will not leave thee—I will follow thee; I will lodge where thou lodgest—take the same fare with which thou meetest; thy people shall be my people—I must cheerfully abandon my own country, and determine to end my days in thine. I will also henceforth have no god but thy God, and be joined with thee in worship, as I am in affection and consanguinity. I will cleave unto thee even unto death; die where thou diest; and be buried, if possible, in the same grave. This was a most extraordinary attachment, and evidently without any secular motive.

Verse 17. The Lord do so to me, and more] May he inflict any of those punishments on me, and any worse punishment, if I part from thee till death. And it appears that she was true to her engagement; for Naomi was nourished in the house of Boaz in her old age, and became the fosterer and nurse of their son Obed, chap. iv. 15, 16.

Verse 19. All the city was moved about them] It appears that Naomi was not only well known, but highly respected also at Bethlehem; a proof that Elimelech was of high consideration in that place.

19 So they two went until they came to Bethlehem. And it came to pass, when they were come to Bethlehem, that <sup>k</sup>all the city was moved about them, and they said, <sup>l</sup>Is this Naomi?

20 And she said unto them, Call me not <sup>m</sup>Naomi, call me <sup>n</sup>Mara: for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me.

21 I went out full, <sup>o</sup>and the LORD hath brought me home again empty: why then call ye me Naomi, seeing the LORD hath testified against me, and the Almighty hath afflicted me?

22 So Naomi returned, and Ruth the Moabitess, her daughter in law, with her, which returned out of the country of Moab: and they came to Bethlehem<sup>p</sup> in the beginning of barley harvest.

Verse 20. Call me not Naomi] That is, beautiful or pleasant.

Call me Mara] That is, bitter; one whose life is grievous to her.

The Almighty] He who is self-sufficient, has taken away the props and supports of my life.

Verse 21. I went out full] Having a husband and two sons. The Lord hath brought me home again empty] Having lost all three by death. It is also likely that Elimelech took considerable property with him into the land of Moab; for as he fled from the face of the famine, he would naturally take his property with him; and on this Naomi subsisted till her return to Bethlehem, which she might not have thought of till all was spent.

Verse 22. In the beginning of barley harvest.] This was in the beginning of spring, for the barley harvest began immediately after the passover, and that feast was held on the 15th of the month Nisan, which corresponds nearly with our March.

This circumstance is the more distinctly marked, because of Ruth's gleaning, mentioned in the succeeding chapter.

The native, the amiable simplicity in which the story of the preceding chapter is told, is a proof of its genuineness. There are several sympathetic circumstances recorded here which no forger could have invented. There is too much of nature to admit anything of art.

CHAPTER II.

Ruth goes to glean in the field of Boaz, 1-3. Boaz finds her, and inquires who she is, 4-7. He speaks kindly to her, gives her permission to follow his reapers, and orders them to use her well, 8-16. She returns in the evening to Naomi, and tells her of her fare; from whom she receives encouragement and advice, 17-23.

AND Naomi had a <sup>a</sup>kinsman of her husband's, a mighty man of wealth, of the family of Elimelech; and his name was <sup>b</sup>Boaz.<sup>c</sup>

2 And Ruth the Moabitess said unto Naomi,

Let me now go to the field, and <sup>d</sup>glean ears of corn after him in whose sight I shall find grace. And she said unto her, Go, my daughter.

3 And she went, and came, and gleaned in the

Verse 1. A mighty man of wealth] We have already seen that some suppose Boaz to have been one of the judges of Israel; he was no doubt a man of considerable property.

Verse 2. Glean ears of corn] The word glean comes from the French glaner, to gather ears or grains of corn. This was formerly a general custom in England and Ireland; the poor went into the fields and collected the straggling ears of corn after the reapers; and it was long supposed that this was their right, and that the law recognized it.

After him in whose sight I shall find grace.] She did not mean Boaz; but she purposed to go out where they were now reaping, and glean after any person who might permit her, or use her in a friendly manner. The words seem to intimate that, notwithstanding the law of Moses, the gleaners might be prevented by the owner of the field.

Verse 3. And her hap was] So she was accidentally or providentially led to that part of the cultivated country which belonged to Boaz.

field after the reapers : and her *hap was to light on a part of the field belonging unto Boaz, who was of the kindred of Elimelech.

4 And, behold, Boaz came from Beth-lehem, and said unto the reapers, <sup>b</sup> The Lord be with you. And they answered him, The Lord bless thee.

5 Then said Boaz unto his servant that was set over the reapers, Whose damsel is this ?

6 And the servant that was set over the reapers answered and said, It is the Moabitish damsel <sup>c</sup> that came back with Naomi out of the country of Moab :

7 And she said, I pray you, let me glean and gather after the reapers among the sheaves : so she came, and hath continued even from the morning until now, that she tarried a little in the house.

8 Then said Boaz unto Ruth, Heardest thou not, my daughter ? Go not to glean in another field, neither go from hence, but abide here fast by my maidens :

9 Let thine eyes be on the field that they do reap, and go thou after them : have I not charged the young men that they shall not touch thee ? and when thou art athirst, go unto the vessels, and drink of that which the young men have drawn.

10 Then she <sup>d</sup> fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said unto him, Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldest take knowledge of me, seeing I am a stranger.

11 And Boaz answered and said unto her, It hath fully been shewed me, <sup>e</sup> all that thou hast done unto thy mother in law since the death of thine husband : and how thou hast left thy father and thy mother, and the land of thy nativity, and art come unto a people which thou knewest not heretofore.

12 The Lord recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, <sup>f</sup> under whose wings thou art come to trust.

13 Then said she, <sup>g</sup> Let <sup>h</sup> me find favour in thy sight, my lord ; for that thou hast comforted me, and for that thou hast spoken <sup>i</sup> friendly unto thine handmaid, <sup>j</sup> though I be not like unto one of thine handmaidens.

14 And Boaz said unto her, At mealtime come thou hither, and eat of the bread, and dip thy morsel in the vinegar. And she sat beside the reapers : and he reached her parched corn, and she did eat, and <sup>k</sup> was sufficed, and left.

15 And when she was risen up to glean, Boaz commanded his young men, saying, Let her glean even among the sheaves, and <sup>l</sup> reproach her not :

16 And let fall also some of the handfuls of purpose for her, and leave them, that she may glean them, and rebuke her not :

17 So she gleaned in the field until even, and beat out that she had gleaned : and it was about an ephah of barley.

18 And she took it up, and went into the city : and her mother in law saw what she had gleaned : and she brought forth, and gave to her <sup>m</sup> that she had reserved after she was sufficed.

19 And her mother in law said unto her, Where hast thou gleaned to day ? and where wroughtest thou ? blessed be he that did <sup>n</sup> take knowledge <sup>o</sup> of thee. And she shewed her mother in law with whom she had wrought, and said, The man's name with whom I wrought to day is Boaz.

20 And Naomi said unto her daughter in law,

Verse 4. Boaz came from Beth-lehem.] This salutation between Boaz and his reapers is worthy of particular regard ; he said, " Jehovah be with you ! " They said, " May Jehovah bless thee ! " Can a pious mind read these godly salutations without wishing for a return of those simple primitive times ?

Verse 5. His servant that was set over the reapers.] This was a kind of steward or hind who had the under management of the estate.

Verse 7. That she tarried a little in the house.] It seems as if the reapers were now resting in their tent, and that Ruth had just gone in with them to take her rest also.

Verse 8. Abide here fast by my maidens.] These were probably employed in making bands, and laying on them enough to form a sheaf, which the binders would tie and form into shocks or thraves. When the maidens had gathered up the scattered handfuls thrown down by the reapers, Ruth picked up any straggling heads or ears which they had left.

Verse 9. The young men that they shall not touch thee.] This was peculiarly necessary, as she was a stranger and unprotected.

Verse 10. Then she fell on her face.] Prostrated herself, as was the custom in the East, when inferiors approached those of superior rank.

Verse 12. The Lord recompense thy work.] The dutiful respect which thou hast paid to thy husband, and thy tender and affectionate attachment to thy aged mother-in-law.

And a full reward be given thee.] This is spoken with great modesty and piety : The kindness I show thee is little in comparison of thy desert ; God alone can give thee a full reward for thy kindness to thy husband and mother-in-law ; and he will do it, because thou art come to trust under his wings—to become a proselyte to his religion. The metaphor is taken from the young of fowls, who, seeing a bird of prey, run to their mother to be covered by her wings from danger, and also to take shelter from storms, tempests, cold, &c. It is evident from this that Ruth had already attached herself to the Jewish religion.

Verse 13. Not like unto one of thine handmaidens.] I am as unworthy of thy regards as any of thine own maid-servants, and yet thou showest me distinguished kindness.

Verse 14. Dip thy morsel in the vinegar.] The chomets, which we here translate vinegar, seems to have been some refreshing kind of acid sauce used by the reapers to dip their bread in, which both cooled and refreshed them.

Parched corn.] This was a frequent repast among the ancients in almost all countries ; see the notes on Lev. ii. 1-14.

Verse 15. Let her glean even among the sheaves.] This was a privilege ; for no person should glean till the sheaves were all bound, and the shocks set up.

Verse 17. An ephah of barley.] Not less than seven gallons and a half ; a good day's work.

Verse 18. And gave to her that she had reserved.] As Ruth had received a distinct portion at dinner-time, of which she had more than she could eat, ver. 14 ; it appears she brought the rest home to her mother-in-law, as is here related.

Verse 20. To the living and to the dead.] Naomi and Ruth were the living ; and they were also the representatives of Elimelech and Mahlon, who were dead. Naomi was of the family ; and Ruth, though not of the family, was a representative of one of its deceased branches, being the widow of Mahlon.

One of our next kinsmen.] Of our redeemers ; one who has the right to redeem the forfeited inheritance of the family. The word goel signifies a near kinsman—one who by the Mosaic law had a right to redeem an inheritance, and also was permitted to vindicate or revenge the death of his relation by killing the slayer, if he found him out of the cities of refuge.

In order to prevent families from running to decay, if a brother died childless the next unmarried brother took his widow ; and the children from that marriage were reputed the children of the deceased brother. The office of the next * Blessed be he of the LORD, who hath not left off his kindness to the living and to the dead. And Naomi said unto her, The man is near of kin unto us, one of our next kinsmen.

21 And Ruth the Moabitess said, He said unto me also, Thou shalt keep fast by my young men, until they have ended all my harvest.

akin was threefold: 1. It belonged to him to buy back the forfeited inheritance, or the liberty of him who had been obliged to sell himself for a servant. 2. It was his right to avenge the blood of any of the family who had been killed, by killing the murderer. 3. It belonged to him to take the widow of a deceased brother or relative if he died childless. If the nearest akin in any case refused, he was treated with indignity, lost his right to the inheritance, and the next of kin to him might come forward and take the widow, &c., as in the case of Boaz.

Verse 21. Keep fast by my young men] The word should be translated servants, both the male and female being included in it; the latter especially, as we see in ver. 22, 23.

Verse 23. And of wheat harvest] That is, she was to continue gleaning in the farm of Boaz to the end of the barley harvest; and then, when the wheat harvest began, to continue to its conclusion in the same way. In the interim, as well as each night, she lodged with her mother-in-law.

1. Ruth seems to have been a woman of a very amiable

22 And Naomi said unto Ruth her daughter in law, It is good, my daughter, that thou go out with his maidens, that they meet thee not in any other field.

23 So she kept fast by the maidens of Boaz to glean unto the end of barley harvest and of wheat harvest; and dwelt with her mother in law.

mind: she was modest, and she was industrious, and most probably a comely woman; and all these things served to attract the attention of Boaz, and to engage his affection. Her attachment also to her mother-in-law could not fail to secure his esteem. All these things worked together in the course of Providence to bring about a matrimonial connexion, which in its issue was intimately connected with the salvation of a lost world; for, from this very line, Jesus Christ, according to the flesh, sprang; and Ruth showed herself as worthy to be one of His progenitors as the Virgin Mary was to be His mother.

2. We should carefully attend to the leadings and to the workings of God's providence; it is our duty and our interest to do both, for the path of duty is ever the way of safety. Had not Ruth acted thus, how dreary and uncomfortable must her life have been! but she followed God fully, and in a path apparently dangerous, and yet not only sustained no injury, but succeeded well in all things. Whoever follows God in simplicity of heart will most assuredly be guided into all truth.

CHAPTER III.

Naomi's advice to Ruth, how to procure herself a marriage with Boaz, 1-5. She acts according to her mother in law's direction, and is kindly received by Boaz, who promises to marry her, should her nearer kinsman refuse, 6-13. He gives her six measures of barley, and sends her away privately to her mother in law, who augurs favourably of the issue of the plan she had laid, 14-18.

THEN Naomi her mother in law said unto her, My daughter, * shall I not seek <sup>b</sup> rest for thee, that it may be well with thee?

2 And now is not Boaz of our kindred, * with whose maidens thou wast? Behold, he winnoweth barley to night in the threshing-floor.

3 Wash thyself therefore, <sup>c</sup> and anoint thee, and put thy raiment upon thee, and get thee down to the floor: but make not thyself known unto the man; until he shall have done eating and drinking.

4 And it shall be, when he lieth down, that thou shalt mark the place where he shall lie, and thou shalt go in, and * uncover his feet, and lay thee down; and he will tell thee what thou shalt do.

5 And she said unto her, All that thou sayest unto me I will do.

6 And she went down unto the floor, and did according to all that her mother in law bade her.

7 And when Boaz had eaten and drunk, and <sup>f</sup> his heart was merry, he went to lie down at the end of the heap of corn; and she came softly, and uncovered his feet, and laid her down.

8 And it came to pass at midnight, that the man was afraid, and * turned himself: and, behold, a woman lay at his feet.

* 1 Cor. vii. 36. 1 Tim. v. 8.—<sup>b</sup> Ch. i. 9.—<sup>c</sup> Ch. ii. 8.—

Verse 1. Shall I not seek rest for thee] That is, Shall I not endeavour to procure thee a proper husband?

Verse 2. He winnoweth barley to night] It is very likely that the winnowing of grain was effected by taking up, in a broad thin vessel or sieve, a portion of the corn, and letting it down slowly in the wind; thus the grain would, by its own weight, fall in one place, while the chaff, &c., would be carried to a distance by the wind. It is said here that this was done at night; probably what was threshed out in the day was winnowed in the evening, when the sea breeze set in, which was common in Palestine; and as this took place in the evening only, that was the time in which they would naturally winnow their corn.

Verse 3. Wash thyself therefore] She made Ruth put on her best dress, that Boaz might, in the course of the day, be the more attracted by her person, and be the better disposed to receive her as Naomi wished.

Verse 4. Uncover his feet, and lay thee down] It is said that women in the East, when going to the bed of their lawful husbands, through modesty, and in token of subjection, go to the bed's foot, and gently raising the clothes, creep under them up to their proper place.

On the whole, we must say, had not Boaz been a person of extraordinary piety, prudence, and continence, this experiment might have been fatal to Ruth. We cannot easily account for this transaction; probably Naomi knew more than she revealed to her daughter-in-law. The experiment however was dangerous, and should in no sense be imitated.

Verse 7. Went to lie down] As the threshing-floors of the 11 And now, my daughter, fear not; I will do to thee all that thou requirest: for all the <sup>e</sup>city of my people doth know that thou art <sup>a</sup>a virtuous woman.

12 And now it is true that I am thy <sup>b</sup>near kinsman: howbeit <sup>f</sup>there is a kinsman nearer than I.

eastern nations are in general in the open air, it is very likely that the owner or some confidential person continued in the fields till the grain was secured, having a tent in the place where the corn was threshed and winnowed. Boaz seems to have acted thus.

Verse 8. The man was afraid, and turned himself] It is fully evident Boaz had no intimation of the present proceedings.

Verse 9. Spread therefore thy skirt over thine handmaid] Hebrew, Spread thy wing. The wing is the emblem of protection, and is a metaphor taken from the young of fowls, which run under the wings of their mothers, that they may be saved from birds of prey. The meaning here is, Take me to thee for wife; and so the Targum has translated it, Let thy name be called on thy handmaid to take me for wife, because thou art the redeemer; i.e., thou art the goel, the kinsman, to whom the right of redemption belongs. Even to the present day, when a Jew marries a woman, he throws the skirt or end of his talith over her, to signify that he has taken her under his protection.

Verse 10. In the latter end than at the beginning] It is not easy to find out what Boaz means. Perhaps chesed, which we translate kindness, means piety; as if he had said: Thou hast given great proof of thy piety in this latter instance, when thou hast avoided the young, and those of thy own age, to associate thyself with an elderly man, merely for the purpose of having the divine injunction fulfilled.

thee, <sup>k</sup>as the Lord liveth: lie down until the morning.

14 And she lay at his feet until the morning: and she rose up before one could know another. And he said, <sup>l</sup>Let it not be known that a woman came into the floor.

15 Also he said, Bring the <sup>m</sup>veil that thou hast upon thee, and hold it. And when she held it, he measured six measures of barley, and laid it on her: and she went into the city.

16 And when she came to her mother in law, she said, Who art thou, my daughter? And she told her all that the man had done to her.

17 And she said, These six measures of barley gave he me; for he said to me, Go not empty unto thy mother in law.

18 Then said she, <sup>n</sup>Sit still, my daughter, until thou know how the matter will fall: for the man will not be in rest, <sup>o</sup>until he have finished the thing this day.

Whether poor or rich.] So it appears from this that it was not to mend her condition in life that Ruth endeavoured to get Boaz for her husband, for she might have had a rich young man, but she preferred the building up the house of her deceased husband.

Verse 12. There is a kinsman nearer than I.] It is very likely that Naomi was not acquainted with this circumstance. Some have supposed that there was a brother of Elimelech remaining, who was nearer than Boaz, who is supposed to have been only a nephew; the former, therefore, must have a prior right.

Verse 13. As the Lord liveth] Thus he bound himself by an oath to take her to wife if the other should refuse.

Verse 15. Bring the veil] This seems to have been a cloak, plaid, or what the Arabs call hayk, which has been largely explained elsewhere.

Six measures of barley] We supply the word measures, for the Hebrew mentions no quantity. If the omer be meant, which is about six pints, the load would not be great, as this would amount to but about four gallons and a half; a very goodly present.

Verse 18. Until thou know how the matter will fall] That is, whether he who is nearer of kin than Boaz will take thee to wife; do not return again till this thing is determined. Boaz lost no time to bring this to an issue, as we shall see in the following chapter.

CHAPTER IV.

Boaz gathers a council of the elders at the city gate, states the case, and proposes to the nearest kinsman to redeem the inheritance of Elimelech, and take Ruth to wife, 1-5. The kinsman refuses, and relinquishes his right to Boaz, 6. The manner of redemption in such cases, 7, 8. Boaz redeems the inheritance in the presence of the elders, and of the people, who witness the contract, and pray for God's blessing upon the marriage, 9-12. Boaz takes Ruth for wife, and she bears a son, 13. The people's observations on the birth of the child, 14, 15. It is given to Naomi to nurse, 16. The neighbouring women name the child, and the book concludes with the genealogy of David, 17-22.

THEN went Boaz up to the gate, and sat him down there: and, behold, <sup>a</sup>the kinsman of whom Boaz spake came by; unto * Ch. iii. 12.

Verse 1. Then went Boaz up to the gate] We have often had occasion to remark that the gate or entrance to any city or town was the place where the court of justice was ordinarily kept. Ho, such a one!—sit down here] This familiar mode of whom he said, Ho, such a one! turn aside, sit down here. And he turned aside, and sat down.

2 And he took ten men of <sup>b</sup>the elders of the city, compellation is first used here. This is used when the person of the individual is known, and his name and residence unknown. Modes of compellation of this kind are common in all languages.

and said, Sit ye down here. And they sat down.

3 And he said unto the kinsman, Naomi, that is come again out of the country of Moab, selleth a parcel of land, which was our brother Elimelech's;

4 And * I thought to advertise thee, saying, * Buy it * before the inhabitants, and before the elders of my people. If thou wilt redeem it, redeem it: but if thou wilt not redeem it, then tell me, that I may know: * for there is none to redeem it beside thee: and I am after thee. And he said, I will redeem it.

5 Then said Boaz, What day thou buyest the field of the hand of Naomi, thou must buy it also of Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of the dead, * to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance.

6 * And the kinsman said, I cannot redeem it for myself, lest I mar mine own inheritance; redeem thou my right to thyself; for I cannot redeem it.

7 * Now this was the manner in former time in Israel concerning redeeming and concerning changing, for to confirm all things; a man plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour: and this was a testimony in Israel.

8 Therefore the kinsman said unto Boaz, Buy it for thee. So he drew off his shoe.

9 And Boaz said unto the elders, and unto all the people, Ye are witnesses this day, that I have bought all that was Elimelech's, and all that was Chilion's and Mahlon's, of the hand of Naomi.

10 Moreover Ruth the Moabitess, the wife of Mahlon, have I purchased to be my wife, to raise up the name of the dead upon his inheritance, * that the name of the dead be not cut off from among his brethren, and from the gate of his place: ye are witnesses this day.

11 And all the people that were in the gate, and the elders, said, We are witnesses. * The Lord make the woman that is come into thine house like Rachel and like Leah, which two did * build the house of Israel: and * do thou worthily in * Ephrath, and * be famous in Beth-lehem:

12 And let thy house be like the house of Pharez, * whom Tamar bare unto Judah, of * the seed which the Lord shall give thee of this young woman.

13 So Boaz * took Ruth, and she was his wife: and when he went in unto her, * the Lord gave her conception, and she bare a son.

14 And * the women said unto Naomi, Blessed be the Lord, which hath not * left thee this day without a * kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel.

15 And he shall be unto thee a restorer of thy life, and * a nourisher * of thine old age; for thy daughter in law, which loveth thee, which is * better to thee than seven sons, hath born him.

16 And Naomi took the child, and laid it in her bosom, and became nurse unto it.

17 * And the women her neighbours gave it a name, saying, There is a son born to Naomi; and they called his name Obed: he is the father of Jesse, the father of David.

Verse 2. He took ten men] Probably it required this number to constitute a court. How simple and how rational was this proceeding! 1. The man who had a suit went to the city gates. 2. Here he stopped till the person with whom he had the suit came to the gate on his way to his work. 3. He called him by name, and he stopped and sat down. 4. Then ten elders were called, and they came and sat down. 5. When all this was done, the appellant preferred his suit. 6. Then the appellee returned his answer. 7. When the elders heard the case, and the response of the appellee, they pronounced judgment, which judgment was always according to the custom of the place. 8. When this was done, the people who happened to be present witnessed the issue. And thus the business was settled without lawyers or legal casuistry.

Verse 3. Naomi—selleth a parcel of land] She was reduced to want; the immediate inheritors were extinct; and it was now open for the next heir to purchase the land, and thus preserve the inheritance in the family according to the custom of Israel.

Verse 4. I thought to advertise thee] This is Boaz's statement of the case before the kinsman, and before the people and the elders.

I will redeem it.] I will pay down the money which it is worth. He knew not of the following condition.

Verse 5. Thou must buy it also of Ruth] More properly Thou wilt also acquire Ruth. Thou canst not get the land without taking the wife of the deceased; and then the children which thou mayest have shall be reputed the children of Mahlon, thy deceased kinsman.

Verse 7. A man plucked off his shoe] The law of such a case is given at large in Deut. xxv. 5-9. It was simply this: If a brother, who had married a wife, died without children, the eldest brother was to take the widow, and raise up a family to the brother deceased; and he had a right to redeem the inheritance, if it had been alienated. But if the person who had the right of redemption would not take the woman, she was to pull off his shoe and spit in his face; and he was ever after considered as a disgraced man. In the present case the shoe only is taken off, probably because the circumstances of the man were such as to render it improper for him to redeem the ground and take Ruth to his wife; and because of this reasonable excuse, the contemptuous part of the ceremony is omitted.

Verse 11. We are witnesses.] It is not very likely that any writing was drawn up. There was an appeal made to the people then present, whether they had seen and understood the transaction; who answered, We have witnessed it.

The Lord make this woman—like Rachel and like Leah] May thy family be increased by her means, as the tribes were formed by means of Rachel and Leah, wives of the patriarch Jacob!

Which two did build the house of Israel] We have already seen that ben, a son, comes from the root banah, he built; and hence eben, a stone, because as a house is built of stones, so is a family of children.

Verse 12. Like the house of Pharez] This was very appropriate; for from Pharez, the son of Judah, by Tamar, came the family of the Beth-lehemites, and that of Elimelech.

Verse 13. So Boaz took Ruth] The law of Moses had prohibited the Moabites, even to the tenth generation, from entering into the congregation of the Lord; but this law, the Jews think, did not extend to women; and even if it had, Ruth's might be considered an exempt case, as she had been already incorporated into the family by marriage; and left her own country, people, and gods, to become a proselyte to the true God in the land of Israel.

Verse 15. Better to thee than seven sons] If Naomi had had even a numerous family of sons, it is most likely that they would have been scattered to different quarters from her, and settled in life; whereas Ruth cleaved to her, and it was by her affectionate services that Naomi was preserved alive.

Verse 16. Naomi took the child] This might do for Naomi, but it was bad for the child. A child, unless remarkably healthy and robust, will suffer considerably by being nursed by an old woman, especially if the child sleep with her. The aged gain refreshment and energy by sleeping with the young; and from the same means the young derive premature decrepitude. And it was on this principle that the physicians of David recommended a young healthy girl to sleep with David in his old age. They well knew that the aged infirm body of the king would absorb a considerable portion of healthy energy from the young woman.

18 Now these are the generations of Pharez;

Verse 17. The neighbours gave it a name] That is, they recommended a name suitable to the circumstances of the case; and the parents and grandmother adopted it.

They called his name Obed] Serving, from abad, he served. Why was this name given? Because he was to be the nourisher of her old age, ver. 15. And so he must be by lying in her bosom, even if services in future life were wholly left out of the question. These neighbours of Naomi were skilful people.

He is the father of Jesse, the father of David.] And for the sake of this conclusion, to ascertain the line of David, and in the counsel of God to fix and ascertain the line of the Messiah, was this instructive little book written.

Verse 19. Hezron begat Ram] He is called Aram here by the Septuagint, and also by St. Matthew, chap. i. 3.

Verse 20. Nahshon begat Salmon] In the Hebrew it is Salmah, which Houbigant thinks was an error of an ancient scribe, before any final letters were acknowledged in the Hebrew alphabet: for then the word would be written Salmon, which a scribe, after final letters were admitted, might mistake for Salmah, and so write it, instead of Salmon.

Verse 22. And Obed begat Jesse] The ten persons whose genealogy is recorded in the five last verses, may be found, with a trifling change of name, in the genealogical list in Mat. i. 3-6, as forming important links in the line of the Messiah. To introduce this appears to have been the principal object of the writer, as introductory to the following books, where the history of David, the regal progenitor and type of the Messiah, is so particularly detailed.

For the account of the birth of Pharez and his brother Zarah, the reader is requested to refer to Gen. xxviii. 12-30, and to the notes there; and for several particulars in the genealogy itself, to the notes on Mat. i. and Luke iii., where the wisdom, goodness, and providence of God, in the preservation of this line, are particularly noticed.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST BOOK

OF

SAMUEL,

OTHERWISE CALLED THE FIRST BOOK OF THE KINGS.

THIS and the three following books were formerly termed the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Books of Kings, and the two Books of Samuel made in ancient times but one; the separation which has taken place seems to have been done without reason or necessity. These books are, properly speaking, a continuation of the Book of Judges, as they give us an account of the remaining judges of Israel, down to the election of Saul; and of all the kings of Israel and Judah to the Babylonish captivity.

Concerning the author of these books there have been various conjectures. Because, in most of the Hebrew copies, they bear the name of Samuel as a running title, it has been generally supposed that he was the author. But his name does not appear to have been anciently prefixed to these books, at least in those copies used by the Greek interpreters, commonly called the Septuagint, as they simply term each, The History or Book of Kingdoms. The Chaldee has no inscription. The Syriac and Arabic call each The Book of Samuel the Prophet; and the Vulgate, The Book of Samuel, simply. The Jews in general believe that Samuel is the author of the first twenty-seven chapters of this book, which contain the history of his own life and government, and what respects Saul and David during that time. The remaining four chapters they suppose were added by the prophets Gad and Nathan. This opinion is founded on what is said 1 Chron. xxix. 29: Now the acts of David the king, first and last, behold they are written in the Book of Samuel the seer, and in the Book of Nathan the prophet, and in the Book of Gad the seer. Others suppose the books to be more recent than the persons already named, but that they were compiled out of their memoirs.

But who was the compiler? Some of the most learned among the Jews suppose it to have been Jeremiah the prophet, and that the style bears a near resemblance to his prophecies. That they were the work of a more recent author than Samuel, &c., Grotius thinks evident from this circumstance, that the names of the months are comparatively modern, and were not known among the ancient Jews. Others have attributed them to David; others, to Hezekiah; and others, to Ezra the scribe, on his return from the Babylonish captivity.

Calmet's opinion is as probable as any, viz., "That these books were written by the same hand, though composed out of the memoirs left by persons of that time; and that the compiler has generally used the same terms he found in those memoirs, adding here and there something of his own by way of illustration." The equality of the style, the frequent eulogiums on the character of Samuel, the connexion of the materials, particular quotations, and remarks on certain events, are, he thinks, proofs sufficiently clear of what he assumes. These books contain remarks or expressions which could only proceed from a contemporary author, and others which are evidences of a much later age.

We may rest satisfied with these three things: 1. That the Books of Samuel were constructed out of original and authentic documents. 2. That the compiler was not contemporary with the facts he narrates. And, 3. That both the author and time in which he compiled his history, though comparatively more recent than the facts themselves, are nevertheless uncertain.

THE FIRST BOOK

SAMUEL.

CHAPTER I.

Some account of Elkanah and his two wives, Peninnah and Hannah, 1, 2. His annual worship at Shiloh, and the portions he gave at such times to his wives, 3-5. Hannah, being barren, is reproached by Peninnah, especially in their going up to Shiloh; at which she is sorely grieved, 6, 7. Elkanah comforts her, 8. Her prayer and vow in the temple, that if God would give her a son, she would consecrate him to his service, 9-11. Eli, the high-priest, indistinctly hearing her pray, charges her with being drunk, 12-14. Her defence of her conduct, 15, 16. Eli, undeceived, blesses her; on which she takes courage, 17, 18. Hannah and Elkanah return home; she conceives, bears a son, and calls him Samuel, 19, 20. Elkanah and his family go again to Shiloh to worship; but Hannah stays at home to nurse her child, purposing, as soon as he is weaned, to go and offer him to the Lord, according to her vow, 21-23. When weaned, she takes him to Shiloh, presents her child to Eli to be consecrated to the Lord, and offers three bullocks, an ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine, for his consecration, 24-28.

NOW there was a certain man of Ramathaim-zophim, of Mount Ephraim, and his name was <sup>a</sup> Elkanah, the son of Jeroham, the son of Elihu, the son of Tohu, the son of Zuph, <sup>b</sup> an Ephrathite:

2 And he had two wives; the name of the one was Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah: and Peninnah had children, but Hannah had no children.

3 And this man went up out of his city <sup>c</sup> yearly <sup>d</sup> to worship and to sacrifice unto the LORD of hosts

Verse 1. Ramathaim-zophim] Literally, the two high places of the watchmen; these were, no doubt two contiguous hills, on which watch-towers were built, and in which watchmen kept continual guard for the safety of the country.

Verse 2. He had two wives] The custom of those times permitted polygamy; but wherever there was more than one wife, we find the peace of the family greatly disturbed by it.

The name of the one was Hannah] Hannah, which signifies fixed or settled; and the other Peninnah, which signifies a jewel or pearl. [Hannah means "grace" and Peninnah "coral."]

Verse 3. Went up out of his city yearly to worship] As the ark was at Shiloh, there was the temple of God, and thither all the males were bound by the law to go once a year, on each of the great national festivals.

The Lord of hosts] As all the heavenly bodies were called the hosts of heaven, tseba hashshamayim, Jehovah being called Lord of this host showed that he was their Maker and Governor; and consequently he, not they, was the proper object of religious worship. The sun, moon, planets, and stars were the highest objects of religious worship to the heathens in general. The Jewish religion, teaching the knowledge of a Being who was the Lord of all these, showed at once its superiority to all that heathenism could boast. This is the first place where Lord of hosts is mentioned in the Bible; and this is so much in the style of the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah, &c., that it gives some weight to the supposition that this book was written by a person who lived in or after the times of these prophets.

4 And when the time was that Elkanah <sup>e</sup> offered, he gave to Peninnah his wife, and to all her sons and her daughters portions:

5 But unto Hannah he gave <sup>f</sup> a worthy portion; for he loved Hannah: <sup>g</sup> but the LORD had shut up her womb.

6 And her adversary also <sup>h</sup> provoked <sup>k</sup> her sore, for to make her fret, because the LORD had shut up her womb.

position that this book was written by a person who lived in or after the times of these prophets.

Verse 4. He gave—portions] The sacrifices which were made were probably peace-offerings, of which the blood was poured out at the foot of the altar; the fat was burnt on the fire; the breast and right shoulder were the portion of the priest; and the rest belonged to him who made the offering; on it he and his family feasted, each receiving his portion; and to these feasts God commands them to invite the Levite, the poor, the widow, and the orphan, Deut. xvi. 11.

Verse 5. Unto Hannah he gave a worthy portion] The Hebrew here is very obscure, he gave her one portion of two faces; which the Syriac readers, he gave her one DOUBLE PART; and the Chaldee, he gave her one CHOSEN part; the Arabic is nearly the same; the Vulgate, but to Anna he being sorrowful gave one part. As the shew-bread that was presented to the Lord was called the bread of faces, because it was placed before the face or appearance of the Lord; probably this was called manah appayim, because it was the portion that belonged to, or was placed before, the person who had offered the sacrifice. On this ground it might be said that Elkanah gave Hannah his own portion, or a part of that which was placed before himself. Whatever it was, it was intended as a proof of his especial love to her; for, it is added, he loved Hannah. [A better translation is: He gave her one portion for two faces, or persons.]

Verse 6. And her adversary] That is, Peninnah.

7 And as he did so year by year, "when <sup>b</sup>she went up to the house of the Lord, so she provoked her; therefore she wept, and did not eat.

8 Then said Elkanah her husband to her, Hannah, why weepest thou? and why eatest thou not? and why is thy heart grieved? am not I <sup>c</sup>better to thee than ten sons?

9 So Hannah rose up after they had eaten in Shiloh, and after they had drunk. Now Eli the priest sat upon a seat by a post of "the temple of the Lord.

10 "And she was 'in bitterness of soul, and prayed unto the Lord, and wept sore.

11 And she "vowed a vow, and said, O Lord of hosts, if thou wilt indeed <sup>b</sup>look on the affliction of thine handmaid, and <sup>c</sup>remember me, and not forget thine handmaid, but wilt give unto thine handmaid <sup>d</sup>a man child, then I will give him unto the Lord all the days of his life, and <sup>e</sup>there shall no razor come upon his head.

12 And it came to pass, as she <sup>1</sup>continued praying before the Lord, that Eli marked her mouth.

13 Now Hannah, she spake in her heart; only her lips moved, but her voice was not heard: therefore Eli thought she had been drunken.

14 And Eli said unto her, How long wilt thou be drunken? put away thy wine from thee.

15 And Hannah answered and said, No, my lord, I am a woman <sup>m</sup>of a sorrowful spirit: I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have "poured out my soul before the Lord.

Provoked her sore] Was constantly striving to irritate and vex her, to make her fret—to make her discontented with her lot, because the Lord had denied her children.

Verse 7. And as he did so year by year] As the whole family went up to Shiloh to the annual festivals, Peninnah had both sons and daughters to accompany her, ver. 4, but Hannah had none; and Peninnah took this opportunity particularly to twit Hannah with her barrenness, by making an ostentatious exhibition of her children.

Therefore she wept] She was greatly distressed, because it was a great reproach to a woman among the Jews to be barren; because, say some, every one hoped that the Messiah should spring from her line.

Verse 8. Am not I better to thee than ten sons?] TEN, a certain for an uncertain number. Is not my special affection to thee better than all the comfort thou couldst gain, even from a numerous family?

Verse 9. Eli—sat upon a seat] Upon the throne, i.e., of judgment; for he was then judge of Israel.

By a post of the temple of the Lord.] I think this is the first place where "temple of Jehovah" is mentioned. This gives room for a strong suspicion that the Books of Samuel were not compiled till the first temple was built, or after the days of Solomon.

Verse 11. I will give him unto the Lord.] Samuel, as a descendant of the house of Levi, was the Lord's property from twenty-five years of age till fifty; but the vow here implies that he should be consecrated to the Lord from his infancy to his death, and that he should not only act as a Levite, but as a Nazarite on whose head no razor should pass.

Verse 13. Spake in her heart; only her lips moved] She prayed; her whole heart was engaged; and though she spake not with an audible voice, yet her lips formed themselves according to the pronunciation of the words which her heart uttered.

Verse 15. I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink] Neither wine nor inebriating drink has been poured out unto me; but I have poured out my soul unto the Lord. There is a great deal of delicacy and point in this vindication.

16 Count not thine handmaid for a daughter of <sup>a</sup>Belial: for out of the abundance of my <sup>b</sup>complaint and grief have I spoken hitherto.

17 Then Eli answered and said, <sup>c</sup>Go in peace: and <sup>d</sup>the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of him.

18 And she said, "Let thine handmaid find grace in thy sight. So the woman <sup>e</sup>went her way, and did eat, and her countenance was no more sad.

19 And they rose up in the morning early, and worshipped before the Lord, and returned, and came to their house in Ramah: and Elkanah <sup>f</sup>knew Hannah his wife; and <sup>g</sup>the Lord remembered her.

20 Wherefore it came to pass, "when the time was come about after Hannah had conceived, that she bare a son, and called his name <sup>h</sup>Samuel, saying, Because I have asked him of the Lord.

21 And the man Elkanah, and all his house, <sup>i</sup>went up to offer unto the Lord the yearly sacrifice, and his vow.

22 But Hannah went not up; for she said unto her husband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will <sup>j</sup>bring him, that he may appear before the Lord, and there <sup>k</sup>abide <sup>l</sup>for ever.

23 And <sup>m</sup>Elkanah her husband said unto her, Do what seemeth thee good; tarry until thou have weaned him; <sup>n</sup>only the Lord establish his word. So the woman abode, and gave her son suck until she weaned him.

24 And when she had weaned him, she <sup>o</sup>took Verse 16. Count not thine handmaid for a daughter of Belial] "Put not thy handmaiden before the faces of a daughter of Belial." "If I am a drunkard, and strive by the most execrable hypocrisy (praying in the house of God) to cover my iniquity, then I am the chief of the daughters of Belial." Or, "Give not thy handmaid (to reproach) before the faces of the daughters of Belial." [The version of the text is perfectly correct.] Several of these probably attended there for the purposes of prostitution and gain; for it is said, chap. ii. 22, that Eli's sons lay with the women at the door of the tabernacle, though this may refer to the women who kept the door.

Verse 17. Grant thee thy petition] He was satisfied he had formed a wrong judgment, and by it had added to the distress of one already sufficiently distressed.

The fact that Eli supposed her to be drunken, and the conduct of Eli's sons already mentioned, prove that religion was at this time at a very low ebb in Shiloh; for it seems drunken women did come to the place, and lewd women were to be found there.

Verse 18. Let thine handmaid find grace] Continue to think favourably of me, and to pray for me.

Verse 20. Called his name Samuel] As she gave this name to her son because she had asked him of the Lord, the word Shemuel must be here considerably contracted. This name would put both the mother and the son in continual remembrance of the divine interposition at his birth.

Verse 21. The man Elkanah and all his house] He and the whole of his family, Hannah and her child excepted, who purposed not to go up to Shiloh till her son was old enough to be employed in the divine service.

And his vow.] Probably he had also made some vow to the Lord on the occasion of his wife's prayer and vow; in which, from his love to her, he could not be less interested than herself.

Verse 24. With three bullocks] The Septuagint, the Syriac, and the Arabic read a bullock of three years old; and this is probably correct, because we read, ver. 25, that they slew happur, THE bullock. We hear of no more, and we know him up with her, with three bullocks, and one ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine, and brought him unto <sup>a</sup> the house of the Lord in Shiloh: and the child was young.

25 And they slew a bullock, and <sup>b</sup> brought the child to Eli.

that a bullock or heifer of three years old was ordinarily used; see Gen. xv. 9. [This view cannot be sustained. The one bullock mentioned in ver. 25 was that by the offering of which Samuel was consecrated to the Lord. The other two served as the yearly festal offering.]

One ephah of flour] Seven gallons and a half. [Only three-tenths of an ephah were required when one ox was offered.]

A bottle of wine] A skin full of wine. Their bottles for wine and fluids in general were made out of skins of goats, stripped off without being cut up; the places whence the legs were extracted sewed up, as also the lower part; and the top tied. These three things, the ox, the flour, and the wine, probably constituted the consecration-offering.

Verse 26. As thy soul liveth] As sure as thou art a living soul, so surely am I the person who stood by thee here praying.

my lord; I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the Lord.

27 <sup>a</sup> For this child I prayed; and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him.

obtained by petition, to the Lord.—<sup>f</sup> Or, he whom I have obtained by petition shall be returned.—<sup>g</sup> Gen. xxiv. 24, 52.

Verse 28. Therefore also I have lent him to the Lord] There is here a continual reference to her vow, and to the words which she used in making that vow.

The word Samuel is a contraction of the words Shaul me El, that is, asked or lent of God. In ver. 28 she says: hu shaul layhovah, he shall be lent unto the Lord: here we find the verb is the same; and it is remarked by grammarians that shaul, he asked, in the conjugation hiphil, signifies to lend; therefore says his mother, ver. 28, hishiltihu layhovah, I have lent him to the Lord. This twofold meaning of the Hebrew root is not only followed by our translators, but also by the Vulgate, Septuagint, and Syriac.

It is very likely that the whole passage, from the beginning of ver. 26 to the end of ver. 10 of the ensuing chapter, contains the words of Hannah alone; and that even the clause, He worshipped the Lord there, should be, And she worshipped the Lord there, and prayed, and said, &c.

Hannah's prophetic hymn, 1-10. Samuel ministers to the Lord, 11. The abominable conduct of Eli's sons, 12-17. Farther account of Samuel, and of the divine blessing on Elkanah and Hannah, 18-21. Eli's reprehensible remissness towards his sons in not restraining them in their great profligacy, 22-26. Verse 1. And Hannah prayed, and said] The Chaldee very properly says, And Hannah prayed in the spirit of prophecy; for indeed the whole of this prayer, or as it may be properly called, oracular declaration, is a piece of regular prophecy, every part of it having respect to the future, and perhaps not a little of it declaratory of the Messiah's kingdom.

In the best MSS. this hymn is written in hemistich or poetic lines.

It is not particularly stated here when Hannah composed or delivered it; it appears from the connexion to have been at the very time in which she dedicated her son to God at the tabernacle, though some think that she composed it immediately on the birth of Samuel. The former sentiment is probably the most correct.

Mine horn is exalted in the Lord] Horn signifies power, might, and dominion. It is thus constantly used in the Bible, and was so used among the heathens.

My mouth is enlarged] My faculty of speech is incited, stirred up to express God's disapprobation against my adversaries.

Verse 2. None holy] HOLINESS is peculiar to the God of Israel; no false god ever pretended to holiness; it was no attribute of heathenism, nor of any religion ever professed in the world before or since the true revelation of the true God.

There is none beside thee] There can be but one unoriginated, infinite, and eternal Being; that Being is Jehovah.

Any rock like our God] Rabbi Maimon has observed that the word tsur, which we translate rock, signifies, when applied to Jehovah, fountain, source, spring. There is no source whence continual help and salvation can arise but our God.

Verse 3. A God of knowledge] He is the most wise, teaching all good, and knowing all things.

Actions are weighed] Nithkenu, they are directed; it is by his counsel alone that we can successfully begin, continue, or end, any work. [Or, "to Him actions are weighed," i.e. His actions are just.]

Verse 5. They that were full] All the things mentioned in these verses frequently happen in the course of the divine providence; and indeed it is the particular providence of God that Hannah seems more especially to celebrate through the whole of this simple yet sublime ode.

Verse 6. The Lord killeth] God is the arbiter of life and death; he only can give life, and he only has a right to take it away.

He bringeth down to the grave] The Hebrew word sheol, which we translate grave, seems to have the same meaning in the Old Testament with hades in the New, which is the word generally used by the Septuagint for the other. It means the grave, the state of the dead, and the invisible place, or place of separate spirits. Sometimes we translate it hell, which now means the state of perdition, or place of eternal torments; but as this comes from the Saxon to cover or conceal, it means only the covered place.

Verse 7. The LORD maketh poor] For many cannot bear affluence, and if God should continue to trust them with riches, they would be their ruin.

Maketh rich] Some he can trust, and therefore makes them stewards of his secular bounty.

Verse 8. To set them among princes] There have been many cases where, in the course of God's providence, a person has been raised from the lowest and most abject estate to the highest; from the plough to the imperial dignity; from the dungeon to the throne; from the dunghill to nobility.

For the pillars of the earth are the Lord's] He is almighty, and upholds all things by the word of his power.

Verse 9. He will keep the feet of his saints] He will order and direct all their goings, and keep them from every evil way.

The wicked shall be silent in darkness] The Targum understands this of their being sent to the darkness of hell; they shall be slain.

By strength shall no man prevail] Because God is omnipotent, and no power can be successfully exerted against him.

Verse 10. The adversaries of the Lord shall be broken] Those who contend with him, by sinning against his laws, opposing the progress of his word, or persecuting his people.

Shall judge the ends of the earth] His empire shall be extended over all mankind by the preaching of the everlasting gospel. Here the horn means spiritual as well as secular dominion.

Verse 11. And Elkanah went to Ramah] Immediately after the tenth verse, the Septuagint add, And she left him there before the Lord, and went unto Arimathea. Thus the Septuagint suppose that the song of Hannah was composed when she brought Samuel to present him to the Lord; and Shiloh unto all the Israelites that came thither.

15 Also before they 'burnt the fat, the priest's servant came, and said to the man that sacrificed, Give flesh to roast for the priest; for he will not have sodden flesh of thee, but raw.

16 And if any man said unto him, Let them not fail to burn the fat 'presently, and then take as much as thy soul desireth; then he would answer him, Nay; but thou shalt give it me now; and if not, I will take it by force.

17 Wherefore the sin of the young men was very great 'before the LORD: for men 'abhorred the offering of the LORD.

18 'But Samuel ministered before the LORD, being a child, 'girded with a linen ephod.

19 Moreover his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when she 'came up with her husband to offer the yearly sacrifice.

20 And Eli 'blessed Elkanah and his wife, and said, The LORD give thee seed of this woman for the 'loan which is 'lent to the LORD. And they went unto their own home.

as soon as she had completed this fine ode she delivered him into the hands of Eli the high-priest, and the child entered immediately on his ministration, under the direction and instructions of Eli.

Verse 12. The sons of Eli were sons of Belial] They were perverse, wicked, profligate men; devil's children.

These men were the principal cause of all the ungodliness of Israel. Their most execrable conduct, described from ver. 13 to 17, caused the people to abhor the Lord's offering. An impious priesthood is the grand cause of the transgressions and ruin of any nation.

Verse 13. When any man offered sacrifice] That is, when a peace-offering was brought, the right shoulder and the breast belonged to the priest, the fat was burnt upon the altar, and the blood was poured at the bottom of the altar: the rest of the flesh belonged to the offerer. Under pretence of taking only their own part, they took the best of all they chose, and as much as they chose.

Verse 14. Kettle, caldron or pot] We know not what these were, nor of what capacity; nor is it of any consequence.

Verse 15. Before they burnt the fat] They would serve themselves before God was served! This was iniquity and arrogance of the first magnitude.

He will not have sodden flesh] He chooses roast meat, not boiled; and if they had it in the pot before the servant came, he took it out that it might be roasted.

Verse 17. Wherefore the sin of the young men was very great] That is, Hophni and Phinehas, the sons of Eli.

Men abhorred the offering] As the people saw that the priests had no piety, and that they acted as if there was no God, they despised God's service, and became infidels.

Verse 19. Made him a little coat] Probably intended to keep him from the cold, and to save his other clothes from being abused in his meaner services. It is probable that she furnished him with a new one each year, when she came up to one of the annual sacrifices.

Verse 20. Eli blessed Elkanah] The natural place of this verse seems to be before the 11th; after which the 21st should come in; after the 21st perhaps the 26th should come in. The subjects in this chapter seem very much entangled and confused by the wrong position of the verses.

Verse 22. They lay with the women that assembled] It is sons did unto all Israel; and how they lay with <sup>a</sup>the women that <sup>b</sup>assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

23 And he said unto them, Why do ye such things? for <sup>c</sup>I hear of your evil dealings by all this people.

24 Nay, my sons; for it is no good report that I hear; ye make the LORD's people <sup>d</sup>to transgress.

25 If one man sin against another, the judge shall judge him: but if a man <sup>e</sup>sin against the LORD, who shall entreat for him? Notwithstanding they hearkened not unto the voice of their father, <sup>f</sup>because the LORD would slay them.

26 And the child Samuel <sup>g</sup>grew on, and was <sup>h</sup>in favour both with the LORD, and also with men.

27 <sup>i</sup>And there came a man of God unto Eli, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, <sup>j</sup>'Did I plainly appear unto the house of thy father, when they were in Egypt in Pharaoh's house?

28 And did I <sup>k</sup>choose him out of all the tribes of Israel to be my priest, to offer upon mine altar, to burn incense, to wear an ephod before me? and <sup>l</sup>did I give unto the house of thy father all the offerings made by fire of the children of Israel?

probable that these were persons who had some employment about the tabernacle.

Verse 23. Why do ye such things? Eli appears to have been a fondly affectionate, easy father, who wished his sons to do well, but did not bring them under proper discipline, and did not use his authority to restrain them. As judge, he had power to cast them immediately out of the vineyard as wicked and unprofitable servants; this he did not, and his and their ruin was the consequence.

Verse 25. If one man sin against another] All differences between man and man may be settled by the proper judge; but if a man sin against the Supreme Judge, God himself, who shall reconcile him to his Maker? Your sin is immediately against God himself, and is the highest insult that can be offered, because it is in the matter of his own worship; therefore ye may expect his heaviest judgments.

But if a man sin against the Lord, who shall entreat for him?] This was a question of the most solemn importance under the old covenant, especially after the death of Moses, the mediator. The law had determined what sins should be punished with death; and it was supposed that there was not any appeal from the decision there pronounced. 1 John ii. 1 is an answer to this question; but it is an answer which the gospel alone can give.

Because the Lord would slay them.] The particle ki, which we translate because, and thus make their continuance in sin the effect of God's determination to destroy them, should be translated therefore, as it means in many parts of the sacred writings. It was their not hearkening that induced the Lord to will their destruction.

Verse 27. There came a man of God] Who this was we know not.

Unto the house of thy father] That is, to Aaron; he was the first high-priest: the priesthood descended from him to his eldest son Eleazar, then to Phinehas. It became afterwards established in the younger branch of the family of Aaron; for Eli was a descendant of Ithamar, Aaron's youngest son. From Eli it was transferred back again to the family of Eleazar, because of the profligacy of Eli's sons.

Verse 28. And did I choose him] The high-priesthood was a place of the greatest honour that could be conferred 30 Wherefore the LORD God of Israel saith, <sup>a</sup>'I said indeed that thy house, and the house of thy father, should walk before me for ever: but now the LORD saith, <sup>b</sup>'Be it far from me; for them that honour me <sup>c</sup>'I will honour, and <sup>d</sup>'they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed.

31 Behold, <sup>e</sup>'the days come, that I will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thine house.

32 And thou shalt see <sup>f</sup>'an enemy in my habitation, in all the wealth which God shall give Israel; and there shall not be <sup>g</sup>'an old man in thine house for ever.

on man, and a place of considerable emoluments; for from their part of the sacrifices they derived a most comfortable livelihood.

Verse 29. Wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice] They disdained to take the part allowed by law; and would take for themselves what part they pleased, and as much as they pleased, ver. 13-16: thus they kicked at the sacrifices.

Honourest thy sons above me] Permitting them to deal, as above, with the offerings and sacrifices, and take their part before the fat, &c., was burnt unto the Lord: thus they were first served. At this Eli connived, and thus honoured his sons above God.

Verse 30. Should walk before me for ever] Although this promise appears to be absolute, yet we plainly see that, like all other apparently absolute promises of God, it is conditional, i.e. a condition is implied though not expressed.

But now—Be it far from me] You have walked unworthily; I shall annul my promise, and reverse my ordinance.

For them that honour me] This is a plan from which God will never depart; this can have no alteration; every promise is made in reference to it.

Verse 31. I will cut off thine arm] I will destroy the strength, power, and influence of thy family.

Verse 32. Thou shalt see an enemy in my habitation] Every Version and almost every commentator understands this clause differently. The word tsar, which we translate an enemy, and the Vulgate, a rival, signifies calamity; and this is the best sense to understand it in here. The calamity which he saw was the defeat of the Israelites, the capture of the ark, the death of his wicked sons, and the triumph of the Philistines.

In all the wealth which God shall give Israel] This also is dark. The meaning may be this: God has spoken good concerning Israel; he will, in the end, make the triumph of the Philistines their own confusion: and the capture of the ark shall be the desolation of their gods; but the Israelites shall first be sorely pressed with calamity. See the margin.

There shall not be an old man] This is repeated from the preceding verse; all the family shall die in the flower of their years, as is said in the following verse.

Verse 34. They shall die both of them.] Hophni and Phinehas were both killed very shortly after, in that great battle with the Philistines in which the Israelites were completely routed, and the ark taken. See chap. iv.

Verse 35. A faithful priest] This seems to have been spoken of Zadok, who was anointed high-priest in the room of Abiathar, the last descendant of the house of Eli, see 1 Kings ii. 26, 27. Abiathar was removed because he had joined with Adonijah, who had got himself proclaimed king; see 1 Kings i. 7.

I will build him a sure house] I will continue the priesthood in his family.

He shall walk before mine Anointed] He shall minister before Solomon, and the kings which shall reign in the land.

Verse 36. Shall come and crouch to him] Shall prostrate himself before him in the most abject manner, begging to be employed even in the meanest offices about the tabernacle, in order to get even the most scanty means of support.

A morsel of bread] A mouthful; what might be sufficient to keep body and soul together. See the sin and its punishment. They formerly pampered themselves, and fed to the full on the Lord's sacrifices; and now they are reduced to a morsel of bread. They fed themselves without fear; and now they have cleanness of teeth in all their dwellings. They wasted the Lord's heritage, and now they beg their bread!

In religious establishments, vile persons, who have no higher motive, may and do get into the priest's office, that they may clothe themselves with the wool, and feed themselves with the fat, while they starve the flock. But where there is no law to back the claims of the worthless and the wicked, men of piety and solid merit only can find support; for they must live on the free-will-offerings of the people. Where religion is established by law, the strictest ecclesiastical discipline should be kept up, and all hireling priests and ecclesiastical drones should be expelled from the Lord's vineyard. An established religion, where the foundation is good, as is ours, I consider a great blessing; but it is liable to this continual abuse, which nothing but careful and rigid ecclesiastical discipline can either cure or prevent. If our high-priests, our archbishops and bishops, do not their duty, the whole body of the clergy may become corrupt or inefficient. If they be faithful, the establishment will be an honour to the kingdom, and a praise in the earth.

CHAPTER III.

Samuel ministers to the Lord before Eli, 1. He is thrice called by the Lord; who informs him of the evils which shall be brought on the house of Eli, 2-15. Eli inquires of Samuel what the Lord had said, 16, 17. He gives a faithful relation of the whole, which Eli receives with great submission, 18. Samuel prospers; is established as a prophet in Israel; and the Lord reveals himself to him in Shiloh, 19-21.

AND <sup>a</sup>the child Samuel ministered unto the LORD before Eli. And <sup>b</sup>the word of the LORD was precious in those days; there was no open vision.

2 And it came to pass at that time, when Eli was laid down in his place, <sup>c</sup>and his eyes began to wax dim, that he could not see;

3 And ere <sup>d</sup>the lamp of God went out <sup>e</sup>in the temple of the LORD, where the ark of God was and Samuel was laid down to sleep;

4 That the LORD called Samuel: and he answered, Here am I.

5 And he ran unto Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou calledst me. And he said, I called not; lie down again. And he went and lay down.

6 And the LORD called yet again, Samuel. And Samuel arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am

I; for thou didst call me. And he answered, I called not, my son; lie down again.

7 'Now Samuel <sup>f</sup>did not yet know the LORD, neither was the word of the LORD yet revealed unto him.

8 And the LORD called Samuel again the third time. And he arose and went to Eli, and said, Here am I; for thou didst call me. And Eli perceived that the LORD had called the child.

9 Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down: and it shall be, if he call thee, that thou shalt say, Speak, LORD; for thy servant heareth. So Samuel went and lay down in his place.

10 And the LORD came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, Speak; for thy servant heareth.

11 And the LORD said to Samuel, Behold, I will he knew the LORD, and before the word of the LORD was revealed unto him.—<sup>g</sup>See Acts xix. 2.

Verse 1. Samuel ministered unto the Lord.] He performed minor services in the tabernacle, under the direction of Eli, such as opening the doors, &c. See ver. 15.

The word of the Lord was precious] There were but few revelations from God; and because the word was scarce therefore it was valuable. The author of this book probably lived at a time when prophecy was frequent.

There was no open vision.] There was no public accredited prophet; one with whom the secret of the Lord was known to dwell, and to whom all might have recourse in cases of doubt or public emergency.

Verse 2. Eli was laid down in his place.] It is very likely that as the ark was a long time at Shiloh, they had built near to it certain apartments for the high-priest and others more immediately employed about the tabernacle. In one of these, near to that of Eli, perhaps under the same roof, Samuel lay when he was called by the Lord.

Verse 3. Ere the lamp of God went out.] Before sunrise; for it is likely that the lamps were extinguished before the rising of the sun.

Verse 4. The Lord called Samuel.] The voice probably came from the holy place, near to which Eli and Samuel were both lying.

Verse 7. Samuel did not yet know the Lord.] He had not been accustomed to receive any revelation from Him. He knew and worshipped the God of Israel: but he did not know Him as communicating especial revelations of His will.

Verse 9. Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth.] This was the usual way in which the prophets spoke, when they had intimations that the Lord was about to make some especial revelation.

Verse 10. The Lord came, and stood.] He heard the voice as if it was approaching nearer and nearer; till at last, from the sameness of the tone, he could imagine that it ceased to approach: and this is what appears to be represented under the notion of God standing and calling.

Verse 11. The Lord said to Samuel.] He probably saw nothing, and only heard the voice; for it was not likely that any extraordinary representation could have been made to the eyes of a person so young.

do a thing in Israel, * at which both the ears of every one that heareth it shall tingle.

13 * For * I have told him that I will 'judge his house for ever for the iniquity which he knoweth; because * his sons made themselves <sup>b</sup> vile, and he 'restrained <sup>b</sup> them not.

14 And therefore I have sworn unto the house of Eli, that the iniquity of Eli's house * shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offering for ever.

15 And Samuel lay until the morning, and opened the doors of the house of the LORD. And Samuel feared to shew Eli the vision.

16 Then Eli called Samuel, and said, Samuel, my son. And he answered, Here am I.

Isa.

The ears—shall tingle.] It shall be a piercing word to all Israel; it shall astound them all; and, after having heard it, it will still continue to resound in their ears.

Verse 12. I will perform—all things which I have spoken.] That is, what he had declared by the prophet, whose message is related chap. ii. 27, &c.

When I begin, I will also make an end.] I will not delay the execution of my purpose: when I begin, nothing shall deter me from bringing all my judgments to a conclusion.

Verse 13. I will judge his house for ever.] I will continue to execute judgments upon it till it is destroyed.

He restrained them not.] He did not use his parental and juridical authority to curb them, and prevent the disorders which they committed.

Verse 14. Shall not be purged with sacrifice nor offering.] That is, God was determined that they should be removed by a violent death. They had committed the sin unto death; and no offering or sacrifice could prevent this. What is spoken here relates to their temporal death only.

Verse 15. Samuel feared to shew Eli.] He feared to distress him by showing what the Lord had purposed to do. It does not appear that God had commanded Samuel to deliver this message; he, therefore, did not attempt it till adjured by Eli, ver. 17.

Verse 17. God do so to thee, and more also.] The words imply thus much: If thou do not tell me fully what God has threatened, may the same and greater curses fall on thyself.

Verse 18. Samuel told him every whit.] Our word whit comes from the Anglo-Saxon; every whit is every thing. The Hebrew is "all these words."

It is the Lord.] He is Sovereign, and will do what he pleases; he is righteous, and will do nothing but what is just.

Let him do what seemeth him good.] There is much of a godly submission, as well as a deep sense of his own unworthiness, found in these words. He also had sinned, so as to be punished with temporal death; but surely there is no evidence that the displeasure of the Lord against him was extended to a future state.

Verse 19. Samuel grew.] Increased to manhood. The Lord was with him.] Teaching him, and filling him with grace and holiness.

None of his words fall.] Whatever prediction he uttered, God fulfilled it; and his counsels were received as coming from the Lord.

Verse 20. All Israel from Dan even to Beer-sheba.] Through the whole extent of Palestine; Dan being at the northern, Beer-sheba at the southern extremity.

Was established to be a prophet.] The word neeman, which we translate established, signifies faithful: The faithful Samuel was a prophet of the Lord.

17 And he said, What is the thing that the LORD hath said unto thee? I pray thee hide it not from me: <sup>b</sup> God do so to thee, and <sup>c</sup> more also, if thou hide any <sup>d</sup> thing from me of all the things that he said unto thee.

18 And Samuel told him <sup>e</sup> every whit, and hid nothing from him. And he said, <sup>f</sup> It is the LORD: let him do what seemeth him good.

19 And Samuel <sup>g</sup> grew, and <sup>h</sup> the LORD was with him, <sup>i</sup> and did let none of his words fall to the ground.

20 And all Israel <sup>j</sup> from Dan even to Beer-sheba knew that Samuel <sup>k</sup> was <sup>l</sup> established to be a prophet of the LORD.

21 And the LORD <sup>m</sup> appeared again in Shiloh: for the LORD revealed himself to Samuel in Shiloh by <sup>n</sup> the word of the LORD.

Verse 21. The Lord appeared again.] "And Jehovah added to appear;" that is, he continued to reveal himself to Samuel at Shiloh.

By the word of the Lord.] By the spirit and word of prophecy.

In this chapter we read of the fearful consequences of a neglected religious education. Eli's sons were wicked: their father knew the Lord; but he neither taught his children, nor restrained them by his parental authority. The neglect of early religious education, connected with a wholesome and affectionate restraint, is the ruin of millions. Many parents, to excuse their indolence and most criminal neglect, say, "We cannot give our children grace." What do they mean by this? That God, not themselves, is the author of the irregularities and viciousness of their children. They may shudder at this imputation: but when they reflect that they have not given them right precepts, have not brought them under firm and affectionate restraint; have not showed them, by their own spirit, temper, and conduct, how they should be regulated in theirs; they will find that, speaking after the manner of men, it would have been a very extraordinary miracle indeed if the children had been found preferring a path in which they did not see their parents conscientiously tread. Let those parents who continue to excuse themselves by saying, "We cannot give grace to our children," lay their hand on their conscience, and say whether they ever knew an instance where God withheld his grace, while they were, in humble subservience to him, performing their duty? The real state of the case is this: parents cannot do God's work, and God will not do theirs; but if they use the means, and train up the child in the way he should go, God will not withhold his blessing.

It is not parental fondness, nor parental authority, taken separately, that can produce this beneficial effect. But let parental authority be tempered with fatherly affection; and let the rein of discipline be steadily held by this powerful but affectionate hand; and there shall the pleasure of God prosper; there will he give his blessing, even life for evermore. Many fine families have been spoiled, and many ruined, by the separate exercise of these two principles.

Education is generally defined as that series of means by which the human understanding is gradually enlightened, and the dispositions of the heart are corrected, formed, and brought forth between early infancy and the period when a young person is considered as qualified to take a part in active life. Whole nations have been corrupted, enfeebled, and destroyed through the want of proper education: through this multitudes of families have degenerated; and a countless number of individuals have come to an untimely end. Parents who neglect this, neglect the present and eternal interests of their offspring.

CHAPTER IV.

A battle between Israel and the Philistines, in which the former are defeated, with the loss of four thousand men, 1, 2. They resolve to give the Philistines battle once more, and bring the ark of the Lord, with Hophni and Phinehas the priests, unto the camp, 3, 4. They do so, and become vainly confident, 5. At this the Philistines are dismayed, 6-9. The battle commences; the Israelites are again defeated, with the loss of thirty thousand men; Hophni and Phinehas are among the slain; and the ark of the Lord is taken, 10, 11. A Benjamite runs with the news to Eli; who, hearing of the capture of the ark, falls from his seat, and breaks his neck. 12-18. The wife of Phinehas, hearing of the death of her husband and father in law, and of the capture of the ark, is taken in untimely travail, brings forth a son, calls him I-chabod, and expires, 19-22.

AND the word of Samuel <sup>a</sup>came <sup>b</sup>to all Israel. Now Israel went out against the Philistines to battle, and pitched beside <sup>c</sup>Eben-ezer: and the Philistines pitched in Aphek.

2 And the Philistines put themselves in array against Israel: and when <sup>d</sup>they joined battle, Israel was smitten before the Philistines: and they slew of <sup>e</sup>the army in the field about four thousand men.

3 And when the people were come into the camp, the elders of Israel said, Wherefore hath the Lord smitten us to day before the Philistines? Let us <sup>f</sup>fetch the ark of the covenant of the Lord out of Shiloh unto us, that, when it cometh among us, it may save us out of the hand of our enemies.

4 So the people sent to Shiloh, that they might bring from thence the ark of the covenant of the Lord of hosts, <sup>g</sup>which dwelleth between <sup>h</sup>the cherubims: and the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, were there with the ark of the covenant of God.

5 And when the ark of the covenant of the Lord came into the camp, all Israel shouted with a great shout, so that the earth rang again.

6 And when the Philistines heard the noise of the shout, they said, What meaneth the noise of this great shout in the camp of the Hebrews? And they understood that the ark of the Lord was come into the camp.

7 And the Philistines were afraid, for they said, God is come into the camp. And they said, Woe unto us! for there hath not been such a thing <sup>i</sup>heretofore.

8 Woe unto us! who shall deliver us out of the hand of these mighty Gods? these are the Gods that smote the Egyptians with all the plagues in the wilderness, 9 <sup>j</sup>Be strong, and quit yourselves like men, O ye Philistines, that ye be not servants unto the Hebrews, <sup>k</sup>as they have been to you: <sup>l</sup>quit yourselves like men, and fight.

10 And the Philistines fought, and <sup>m</sup>Israel was smitten, and they fled every man into his tent: and there was a very great slaughter; for there fell of Israel thirty thousand footmen.

11 And <sup>n</sup>the ark of God was taken; and <sup>o</sup>the two sons of Eli, Hophni and Phinehas, <sup>p</sup>were slain.

12 And there ran a man of Benjamin out of the army, and <sup>q</sup>came to Shiloh the same day with his clothes rent, and <sup>r</sup>with earth upon his head.

Verse 1. The word of Samuel came to all Israel] This clause certainly belongs to the preceding chapter, and is so placed by the Vulgate, Septuagint, Syriac, and Arabic. [There is no proof of this.]

Pitched beside Eben-ezer] This name was not given to this place till more than twenty years after this battle, see chap. vii. 12; for the monument called haeben haezer, the "Stone of Help," was erected by Samuel in the place which was afterwards, from this circumstance, called Eben-ezer, when the Lord had given the Israelites a signal victory over the Philistines. It was situated in the tribe of Judah, between Mizpeh and Shen, and not far from the Aphék here mentioned.

Verse 2. Put themselves in array] There is no doubt that both the Philistines and Israelites had what might be called the art of war, according to which they marshalled their troops in the field, constructed their camps, and conducted their retreats, sieges, &c.; but we know not the principles on which they acted.

They slew of the army in the field about four thousand men.] This must have been a severe conflict, as four thousand were left dead on the field of battle. The contest also must have lasted some considerable time, as these were all slain hand to hand; swords and spears being in all probability the only weapons then used.

Verse 3. Let us fetch the ark] They knew that in former times their fathers had been beaten by their enemies when they took not the ark with them to battle: Num. xiv. 44, 45; and that they had conquered when they took this with them: Josh. vi. 4. From the latter clause they took confidence; but the cause of their miscarriage in the former they laid not to heart. It was customary with all the nations of the earth to take their gods and sacred ensigns with them to war.

Verse 4. Dwelleth between the cherubims] Of what shape the cherubims were we know not; but there was one of these representative figures placed at each end of the ark of the covenant; and between them, on the lid or cover of that ark, which was called the propitiatory or mercy-seat, the shechinah, or symbol of the Divine Presence, was said to dwell. They thought, therefore, if they had the ark, they must necessarily have the presence and influence of Jehovah.

Verse 5. All Israel shouted] Had they humbled themselves, and prayed devoutly and fervently for success, they would have been heard and saved. Their shouting proved both their vanity and irreligion.

Verse 7. God is come into the camp.] They took for granted, as did the Israelites, that his presence was inseparable from his ark or shrine.

Verse 8. These mighty Gods] Probably this should be translated in the singular, and not in the plural: Who shall deliver us from the hand of this illustrious god?

Verse 9. Be strong, &c.] This was the address to the whole army, and very forcible it was. "If ye do not fight, and quit yourselves like men, ye will be servants to the Hebrews, as they have been to you; and you may expect that they will avenge themselves of you for all the cruelty you have exercised towards them."

Verse 11. Hophni and Phinehas were slain.] They probably attempted to defend the ark, and lost their lives in the attempt.

Verse 12. Came to Shiloh the same day] The field of battle could not have been at any great distance, for this young man reached Shiloh the same evening after the defeat.

With his clothes rent, and with earth upon his head.] These were signs of sorrow and distress among all nations.

It is not unusual even in Europe, and in the most civilised

13 And when he came, lo, Eli sat upon a <sup>a</sup>seat by the wayside watching: for his heart trembled for the ark of God. And when the man came into the city, and told it, all the city cried out.

14 And when Eli heard the noise of the crying, he said, What meaneth the noise of this tumult? And the man came in hastily, and told Eli.

15 Now Eli was ninety and eight years old; and <sup>b</sup>his eyes <sup>c</sup>were dim, that he could not see.

16 And the man said unto Eli, I am he that came out of the army, and I fled to day out of the army. And he said, <sup>d</sup>What <sup>e</sup>is there done, my son?

17 And the messenger answered and said, Israel is fled before the Philistines, and there hath been also a great slaughter among the people, and thy two sons also, Hophni and Phinehas, are dead, and the ark of God is taken.

18 And it came to pass, when he made mention of the ark of God, that he fell from off the seat back-parts of it, to see grief expressed by tearing the hair, beating the breasts, and rending the garments; all these are natural signs, or expressions of deep and excessive grief, and are common to all the nations of the world.

Verse 13. His heart trembled for the ark of God] He was a most mild and affectionate father, and yet the safety of the ark lay nearer to his heart than the safety of his two sons. Who can help feeling for this aged, venerable man?

Verse 17. And the messenger answered] Never was a more afflictive message, containing such a variety of woes, each rising above the preceding, delivered in so few words.

Verse 18. When he made mention of the ark of God] Behold the judgments of God! But shall we say that this man, however remiss in the education of his children, and criminal in his indulgence towards his profligate sons, which arose more from the easiness of his disposition than from a desire to encourage vice, is gone to perdition? God forbid! No man ever died with such benevolent and religious feelings, and yet perished.

He had judged Israel forty years.] Instead of forty years, the Septuagint has here twenty years. All the other Versions, as well as the Hebrew text, have forty years. [The reading in the text must be correct.]

Verse 19. And his daughter in law] This is another very affecting story; the defeat of Israel, the capture of the ark, the death of her father-in-law, and the slaughter of her husband, were more than a woman in her circumstances, near the time of her delivery, could bear. She bowed, travailed, was delivered of a son, gave the child a name indicative of the ruined state of Israel, and expired!

Verse 20. But she answered not] She paid no attention to what the women had said concerning her having born a son; that information she regarded not.

Verse 21. She named the child I-chabod] The Versions are various on the original words. But none of them give us much light on the subject. It is pretty evident they did not know well what signification to give the name; and we are left to collect its meaning from what she says afterwards, The glory is departed from Israel; the words literally mean, Where is the glory? And indeed where was it, when the armies of Israel were defeated by the Philistines, the priests slain, the supreme magistrate dead, and the ark of the Lord taken? [The original words may be translated "no glory."]

CHAPTER V.

The Philistines set up the ark in the temple of Dagon at Ashdod; whose image is found next morning prostrate before it, broken in pieces, 1-5. The Philistines are also smitten with a sore disease, 6. The people of Ashdod refuse to let the ark stay with them; and the lords of the Philistines, with whom they consulted, order it to be carried to Gath, 7, 8. They do so; and God smites the inhabitants of that city, young and old, with the same disease, 9. They send the ark to Ekron, and a heavy destruction falls upon that city, and they resolve to send it back to Shiloh, 10-12.

AND the Philistines took the ark of God, and brought it <sup>a</sup>from Eben-ezer unto Ashdod.

Verse 1. Brought it from Eben-ezer unto Ashdod.] Ashdod or Azotus was one of the five satrapies or lordships of the Philistines.

Verse 2. The house of Dagon] On this idol, which was supposed to be partly in a human form, and partly in that of a fish, see the note on Judg. xvi. 23. Some think that this idol was the same with the Venus of Askalon and the Moon.

The motive which induced the Philistines to set up the ark in the temple of Dagon may be easily ascertained. It

2 When the Philistines took the ark of God, they brought it into the house of <sup>b</sup>Dagon, and set it by Dagon.

was customary in all nations to dedicate the spoils taken from an enemy to their gods: 1. As a gratitude-offering for the help which they supposed them to have furnished; and 2. As a proof that their gods, i.e. the gods of the conquerors, were more powerful than those of the conquered. It was, no doubt, to insult the god of Israel, and to insult and terrify his people, that they placed his ark in the temple of Dagon. When the Philistines had conquered Saul they hung up his armour in the temple of Ashteroth, chap. xxxi. 10. And when David slew Goliath, he laid up his sword in the taber-

3 And when they of Ashdod arose early on the morrow, behold, Dagon was <sup>a</sup>fallen upon his face to the earth before the ark of the Lord. And they took Dagon, and <sup>b</sup>set him in his place again.

4 And when they arose early on the morrow morning, behold, Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the ark of the Lord; and <sup>c</sup>the head of Dagon and both the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threshold; only <sup>d</sup>the stump of Dagon was left to him.

5 Therefore neither the priests of Dagon, nor any that come into Dagon's house, <sup>e</sup>tread on the threshold of Dagon in Ashdod unto this day.

6 But <sup>f</sup>the hand of the Lord was heavy upon them of Ashdod, and he <sup>g</sup>destroyed them, and smote them with <sup>h</sup>emerods, even Ashdod and the coasts thereof.

7 And when the men of Ashdod saw that it was so, they said, The ark of the God of Israel shall not abide with us: for his hand is sore upon us, and upon Dagon our god.

8 They sent therefore and gathered all the lords of the Philistines unto them, and said, What shall we do with the ark of the God of Israel? And they answered, Let the ark of the God of Israel be carried about unto Gath. And they carried the ark of the God of Israel about thither.

9 And it was so, that, after they had carried it about, <sup>i</sup>the hand of the Lord was against the city <sup>j</sup>with a very great destruction: and <sup>k</sup>he smote the men of the city, both small and great, and they had emerods in their secret parts.

10 Therefore they sent the ark of God to Ekron. And it came to pass, as the ark of God came to Ekron, that the Ekronites cried out, saying, They have brought about the ark of the God of Israel to <sup>l</sup>us, to slay us and our people.

11 So they sent and gathered together all the lords of the Philistines, and said, Send away the ark of the God of Israel, and let it go again to his own place, that it slay <sup>m</sup>us not, and our people: for there was a deadly destruction throughout all the city; <sup>n</sup>the hand of God was very heavy there.

12 And the men that died not were smitten with the emerods: and the cry of the city went up to heaven.

nacle of the Lord, chap. xxi. 8, 9. We have the remains of this custom in the depositing of colours, standards, &c., taken from an enemy, in our churches; but whether this may be called superstition or a religious act, is hard to say. If the battle were the Lord's, which few battles are, the dedication might be right.

Verse 3. They of Ashdod arose early on the morrow] Probably to perform some act of their superstition in the temple of their idol.

Dagon was fallen upon his face] This was one proof, which they little expected, of the superiority of the God of Israel.

Set him in his place again.] Supposing his fall might have been merely accidental.

Verse 4. Only the stump of Dagon was left] Literally, Only dagon (i.e. the little fish) was left.

All that was human in his form was broken off from what resembled a fish. Here was a proof that the affair was not accidental; and these proofs of God's power and authority prepared the way for his judgments.

Verse 5. Tread on the threshold] Because the arms, &c., of Dagon were broken off by his fall on the threshold, the threshold became sacred, and neither his priests nor worshippers ever tread on the threshold. Thus it was ordered in the divine providence that, by a religious custom of their own, they should perpetuate their disgrace, the insufficiency of their worship, and the superiority of the God of Israel.

Verse 6. Smote them with emerods] The word apholim, from aphal, to be elevated, probably means the disease called the bleeding piles; which appears to have been accompanied with dysentery, bloody flux, and ulcerated anus.

<sup>a</sup> The Septuagint and Vulgate make a very material addition to this verse: "And the cities and fields of all that region burst up, and mice were produced, and there was the confusion of a great death in the city." This addition Houbigant contends was originally in the Hebrew text; and this gives us the reason why golden mice were sent, as well as the images of the emerods (chap. vi. 4), when the ark was restored.

Verse 7. His hand is sore upon us, and upon Dagon our god.] Here the end was completely answered: they now saw that they had not prevailed against Israel, on account of their god being more powerful than Jehovah; and they now feel how easily this God can confound and destroy their whole nation.

Verse 8. The lords of the Philistines] Palestine was divided into five satrapies: Ashdod, Ekron, Askelon, Gath, and Gaza. But these all were federates, and acted under one general government, for which they assembled in council.

Let the ark—be carried about] They probably thought that their affliction rose from some natural cause; and therefore they wished the ark to be carried about from place to place, to see what the effects might be. If they found the same evil produced wherever it came, then they must conclude that it was a judgment from the God of Israel.

Verse 9. The hand of the Lord was against the city] As it was at Ashdod, so it was at Gath.

Verse 11. Send away the ark] It appears that it had been received at Ekron, for there was a deadly destruction through the whole city. They therefore concluded that the ark should be sent back to Shiloh.

Verse 12. The men that died not] Some it seems were smitten with instant death; others, with the hemorrhoids; and there was a universal consternation; and the cry of the city went up to heaven—it was an exceeding great cry.

It does not appear that the Philistines had any correct knowledge of the nature of Jehovah, though they seemed to acknowledge his supremacy. They imagined that every country, district, mountain, and valley, had its peculiar deity; who, in its place, was supreme over all others. They thought therefore to appease Jehovah by sending him back his ark or shrine; and, in order to be redeemed from their plagues, they send golden mice and emerods as telesms, probably made under some particular configurations of the planets.

CHAPTER VI.

After the ark had been seven months in the land of the Philistines, they consult their priests and diviners about sending it to Shiloh, 1, 2. They advise that it be sent back with a trespass-offering of five golden emerods, and five golden mice, 3-6. They advise also that it be sent back on a new cart, drawn by two milch kine, from whom their calves shall be tied up; and then conclude that if these cows shall take the way of Beth-shemesh, as going to the Israelitish border, then the Lord had afflicted them; if not, then their evils were accidental, 7-9. They do as directed; and the kine take the way of Beth-shemesh, 10-13. They stop in the field of Joshua, and the men of Beth-shemesh take them, and offer them to the Lord for a burnt-offering, and cleave the wood of the cart to burn them; and make sundry other offerings, 14, 15. The offerings of the five lords of the Philistines, 16-18. For too curiously looking into the ark, the men of Beth-shemesh are smitten of the Lord, 19, 20. They send to the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim, that they may take away the ark, 21.

AND the ark of the LORD was in the country of the Philistines seven months.

2 And the Philistines *called for the priests and the diviners, saying, What shall we do to the ark of the LORD? tell us wherewith we shall send it to his place.

3 And they said, If ye send away the ark of the God of Israel, send it not <sup>b</sup>empty; but in any wise return him <sup>c</sup>a trespass-offering: then ye shall be healed, and it shall <sup>d</sup>be known to you why his hand is not removed from you.

4 Then said they, What shall be the trespass-offering which we shall return to him? They answered, Five golden emerods, and five golden mice, *according to the number of the lords of the Philistines: for one plague was on <sup>e</sup>you all, and on your lords.

5 Wherefore ye shall make images of your emerods, and images of your mice that <sup>f</sup>mar the land; and ye shall <sup>g</sup>give glory unto the God of Israel: peradventure he will <sup>h</sup>lighten his hand from off you, and from off <sup>i</sup>your gods, and from off your land.

6 Wherefore then do ye harden your hearts, <sup>k</sup>as Verse 2. The diviners] In what their pretended art consisted, we know not.

Verse 3. Send it not empty] As it appears ye have trespass-passed against him, send him an offering for this trespass.

Why his hand is not removed] The sense is, If you send him a trespass-offering, and ye be cured, then ye shall know why his judgments have not been taken away from you previously to this offering.

Verse 4. Five golden emerods, and five golden mice] One for each satrapy. The emerods had afflicted their bodies; the mice had marred their land. Both they considered as sent by God; and, by making an image of each, and sending them as a trespass-offering, they acknowledged this.

Verse 5. He will lighten his hand from off you] The whole land was afflicted; the ground was marred by the mice, the common people and the lords afflicted by the hemorrhoids, and their gods broken in pieces.

Verse 6. Wherefore then do ye harden your hearts] They had heard how God punished the Egyptians, and they are afraid of similar plagues. It appears that they had kept the ark long enough.

Did they not let the people go] And has he not wrought wonderfully among us? And should we not send back his ark?

Verse 7. Make a new cart] It was indecent and improper to employ in any part of the worship of God any thing that had before served for a common purpose. Every thing in the worship of God is said to be sanctified: now the general meaning of that word is, to separate a thing from all earthly and common uses, and devote it solely to the service of God.

the Egyptians and Pharaoh hardened their hearts? when he had wrought <sup>l</sup>wonderfully among them, <sup>m</sup>did they not let <sup>n</sup>the people go, and they departed?

7 Now therefore make <sup>o</sup>a new cart, and take two milch kine, <sup>p</sup>on which there hath come no yoke, and tie the kine to the cart, and bring their calves home from them.

8 And take the ark of the LORD and lay it upon the cart; and put <sup>q</sup>the jewels of gold, which ye return him for a trespass-offering, in a coffer by the side thereof; and send it away, that it may go.

9 And see, if it goeth up by the way of his own coast to <sup>r</sup>Beth-shemesh, then <sup>s</sup>he hath done us this great evil: but if not, then <sup>t</sup>we shall know that it is not his hand that smote us; it was a chance that happened to us.

10 And the men did so: and took two milch kine, and tied them to the cart, and shut up their calves at home:

11 And they laid the ark of the LORD upon the cart, and the coffer with the mice of gold and the images of their emerods.

12 And the kine took the straight way to the way of Beth-shemesh, and went along the highway

When David removed the ark from the house of Abinadab, he put it on a new cart, 2 Sam. vi. 3.

Bring their calves home from them] So it appears that their calves had been with them in the fields. This was a complete trial: unless they were supernaturally influenced, they would not leave their calves; unless supernaturally directed, they would not leave their home, and take a way, unguided, which they had never gone before.

Verse 8. The jewels of gold] The word keley, which our translators so often render jewels, signifies vessels, implements, ornaments, &c. A jewel of gold has an odd sound to those who always attach the idea of a precious stone to the term.

Verse 9. A chance that happened to us] The word mikreh, from karah, to meet or coalesce, signifies an event that naturally arises from such concurring causes as, in the order and nature of things, must produce it.

The word chance, though often improperly used to signify such an occurrence as is not under the divine government, is of itself not only simple, but expressive: and has nearly the meaning of the Hebrew word: it comes from the French cheoir, or eschéoir, to fall out, to occur, to fall to. Hence our law term escheat, any lands that fall to the lord of the manor by forfeiture or for want of heirs: i.e. these are the occurrences which naturally throw the lands into the hands of the lord.

Verse 12. Lowing as they went] Calling for their calves. To the right hand or to the left? Some think they were placed where two roads met; one going to Ekron, the other to Beth-shemesh. It is possible that they were put in such lowing as they went, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left; and the lords of the Philistines went after them unto the border of Beth-shemesh.

13 And they of Beth-shemesh were reaping their wheat harvest in the valley: and they lifted up their eyes, and saw the ark, and rejoiced to see it.

14 And the cart came into the field of Joshua a Beth-shemite, and stood there, where there was a great stone: and they clave the wood of the cart, and offered the kine a burnt offering unto the LORD.

15 And the Levites took down the ark of the LORD, and the coffer that was with it, wherein the jewels of gold were, and put them on the great stone; and the men of Beth-shemesh offered burnt-offerings and sacrificed sacrifices the same day unto the LORD.

16 And when the five lords of the Philistines had seen it, they returned to Ekron the same day.

17 And these are the golden emerods which the Philistines returned for a trespass-offering unto the circumstances as these for the greater certainty of the affair; to have turned from their own home, from their calves and known pasture, and to have taken the road to a strange country, must argue supernatural influence.

The lords of the Philistines went after] They were so jealous in this business that they would trust no eyes but their own. All this was wisely ordered, that there might be the fullest conviction of the being and interposition of God.

Verse 14. They clave the wood of the cart] Both the cart and the cattle having been thus employed, could no longer be devoted to any secular services; therefore the cattle were sacrificed, and the cart was broken up for fuel to consume the sacrifice.

Verse 15. The Levites took down] It appears there were some of the tribe of Levi among the people of Beth-shemesh: to them appertained the service of the tabernacle.

Verse 17. These are the golden emerods] Each of these cities, in what may be called its corporate capacity, sent a golden emerod.

Verse 18. And the golden mice] The desolation that had been made through the land by these animals had excited a general concern; and it appears from the text, that all the cities of the Philistines, as well fenced as without walls, sent a golden mouse as a trespass-offering.

Remaineth unto this day] It is the stone of Abel which is here intended, and not the ark; and so our translators have understood the place, and have used supplementary words to express this sentiment: "Which stone remaineth unto this day."

Verse 19. He smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men] From the manner in which the text stands, and from the great improbability of the thing, it is most likely that there is a corruption in this text, or that some explanatory word is lost, or that the number fifty thousand has been added by ignorance or design, it being very improbable that such a small village as Beth-shemesh should contain or be capable of employing fifty thousand and seventy men in the fields at wheat harvest, much less that they could all peep into the ark on the stone of Abel in the corn field of Joshua.

With a great slaughter.] Seventy men slain, out of an inconsiderable village in a harvest day, was certainly a great slaughter.

Verse 20. Who is able to stand] Why this exclamation?

LORD; for Ashdod one, for Gaza one, for Askelon one, for Gath one, for Ekron one;

18 And the golden mice, according to the number of all the cities of the Philistines belonging to the five lords, both of fenced cities and of country villages, even unto the great stone of Abel, whereon they set down the ark of the LORD: which stone remaineth unto this day in the field of Joshua, the Beth-shemite.

19 And he smote the men of Beth-shemesh because they had looked into the ark of the LORD, even he smote of the people fifty thousand and threescore and ten men; and the people lamented because the LORD had smitten many of the people with a great slaughter.

20 And the men of Beth-shemesh said, "Who is able to stand before this holy LORD God? and to whom shall he go up from us?"

21 And they sent messengers to the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim, saying, "The Philistines have brought again the ark of the LORD; come ye down, and fetch it up to you."

* 2 Sam. vi. 9. Mal. iii. 2.—<sup>c</sup> Josh. xviii. 14. Judg. xviii. 12. 1 Chron. xiii. 5, 6.

They knew that God had forbidden any to touch his ark but the priests and Levites; but they endeavoured to throw that blame on God, as a Being hard to be pleased, which belonged solely to themselves.

Verse 21. To the inhabitants of Kirjath-jearim] They wished the ark away out of their village, but why they sent to this city instead of sending to Shiloh does not appear: probably Shiloh had been destroyed by the Philistines after the late defeat of Israel. This is most likely, as the ark was never more taken back to that place.

It was a very ancient usage, when a plague or other calamity infested a country, city, &c., for the magicians to form an image of the destroyer, or of the things on which the plague particularly rested, in gold, silver, ivory, wax, clay, &c., under certain configurations of the heavens; and to set this up in some proper place, that the evils thus represented might be driven away. These consecrated images were the same that are called talismans, or rather telesms, among the Asiatics.
